Q. Those papers which you circulated contain the signatures, the real signatures of the workers there in the plant?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And of the office force so far as those who signed, [if] there is any distinction between workers and office workers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are still working there?

A. I am.

[fol. 5369] MRS. MARY SPROFERA

p. 294 Q. What is your name?

A. Mary Sprofera.

Q. Are you married? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where do you live, you and your husband?

A. 5013 Troost.

Q. How long have you resided in Kansas City?

A. All my life.

Q. How long have you worked for the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Fifteen years.

Q. On March 2, 1937, what was your work?

A. Order filling in the shipping department.

Q. Order filling in the shipping department?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to March 2, 1937, had you known of charges having been filed against the Donnelly Garment Company before the NRA

Labor Board and of some hearings having been held? Had you learned of that fact. That is in 1934? A. No, sir.

Q. Three years before March 3rd? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you heard of those things? I don't mean details—but do you remember having heard in 1934 that there were some hearings at that time? A. No, sir.

Q. You don't remember?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. I hand you a paper here that is marked Exhibit 29 and which contains a purported newspaper account of certain statements that have been made with reference to the company, and the employees down there, and I will ask you if, at about that time, you saw or knew of these articles. I will thank you to look at it. That was published, I believe, February 26th, 1937? A. Yes.

Objection—Immaterial

Q. Have you refreshed your recollection from this so that you can remember what is in it?

A. No, not exactly.

Objection—Immaterial

Q. When that article appeared in the papers, was there some discussion between you and other employees of the plant in regard to it?

A. Yes, sir.

Objection—Immaterial

Q. Now, you may state what occurred between you and any of the members of the plant with reference to what ought to be done. Who did you talk with particularly about doing something about it?

A. Mrs. Inez Warren, a girl that helped me to pass those petitions.

[fol. 5370] Q. What was her job at that plant?

A. An order filler in the shipping department also.

Q. What did you girls conclude to do?

A. Pass these petitions around and have people pledge their loyalty and find out how they felt about working conditions and salaries, and everything pertaining to the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Who wrote the petition?

A. I did and Miss Warren.

Q. In whose handwriting are these documents which I hold in my hand. That is the caption of them, the heading? A. Who wrote these?

Q. Yes.

A. I did and Miss Warren, and Miss Shartzer. She came down and copied them by more or less what we had wrote.

Q. Who was with you when you composed the first one? A. Miss Warren.

Q. You and she composed it together, and you did the writing? A. Yes, sir.

Senator Reed: I read the caption on sheet 1, and a similar caption appears on each of these other sheets: "We, the undersigned, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company wish to make if known we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with the organization and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed."

Q. When you had written the headings, what was done with the papers?

A. We took them up. Mrs. Warren and I took them up. We went up on the 8th floor where the operators were first. We would tell the operators to read these cards and petitions, and sign if they wanted to. They positively were under no obligations to sign,—and in a way, to show they did not want to join any particular union, which at that time was the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and if they were satisfied with the working conditions there, and did not want to make a change, and they signed of their own free will.

[fol. 5371] Q. When they were passed around, to whom were they passed? Were they passed to anybody except the workers at the plant?

A. No one but the workers themselves. No one else.

Q. Did anybody tell you to do this?

A. No, sir.

Q. No boss, no person in authority in the plant told you to do this?

A. No one knew about it.

Q. Look at the signatures that appear on—one moment. Did you even present them to the instructors for signatures?

A. No, sir. I did not. I did not take it up with my department heads or officials, or anyone.

Q. Are the signatures on sheet 1 signatures which you secured, if you can look at them and see if you could tell?

A. They are signatures of the operators and inspectors, I imagine. But that is all, and of operators.

Q. Of operators? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those are the genuine signatures?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Look at sheet 2. I am asking you if you got the signatures that are on sheet 2, or somebody else got them. Perhaps you can tell.

A. I got these.

Q. Look at sheet 3 and see if you secured the signatures on that sheet. Is it marked 3, Mr. Ingraham?

(Mr. Ingraham) Yes.

A. I couldn't tell about these, Mr. Reed, because Miss Warren had some of these sheets. I had some. But I am trying to read the names by seeing the girls themselves but I can't say I [pssed] this one particular one.

Q. You either got them or Miss Warren got them?

Q. Examine No. 4. That has the same caption as the other, doesn't it? A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5372] Q. What do you say now as to whether you circulated page 4?

A. Yes, I did pass page four.

Q. Are the signatures there all genuine signatures? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of the parties. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Secured in the same manner as you have already described. A. Yes.

Q. Examine sheet 5. Look at the names and see if you secured the signatures to 5, and if not who did?

A. I don't know who got them—I did.

Q. You got them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Under the same circumstances and conditions that you have already described?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that right? A. Right.

Q. Examine 6. Did you write the caption to that or is it in someone else's handwriting?

A. No, that is my own.

Q. Did you secure the signatures to 6?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And under the circumstances and conditions that you have already described as to the others? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, you passed it and it was signed voluntarily? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And these are genuine signatures?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Look at 7 and see if you passed that around; or if not who did?

A. No, I don't believe I can—

Q. (interrupting) If it was not by you, it was by Mrs. Warren, wasn't it?

A. Either by her or by me. That is the way we did that.

Q. Look at page 8 and see if you passed that around and if you can tell me in what department the signers of that worked. I have called attention to page 8 in my question.

A. It seems like it is some of the operators and some of the porters.

Q. Porters? A. Yes.

Q. They were all workers? A. Oh, yes.
Q. The signatures there are the genuine signatures? A. Yes.
Q. Look at page 9. What are the employments of the four or five people who signed, and I am handing you page 9 of Exhibit 30.
A. There's a porter's name here and also one of the inspectors.
[fol. 5373] Q. But the rest of them are employees?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Those are genuine signatures?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Look at page 10 of this exhibit and see if you can tell us who circulated that petition?
A. I did.
Q. You did? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And under the same circumstances you have already described? A. Yes.
Q. Are these genuine signatures?
A. Yes, sir. The girls signed them themselves.
Q. Look at page 11 and see whether you circulated that petition or paper?
A. No, I did not pass this one.
Q. Who did pass it?
A. I believe Miss Pauline Shartzer.
Q. What is Pauline Shartzer's position?
A. She works up in the cost accounting department, I believe, up in the office.
Q. Up in the office. So you can't say that you saw those signatures made? A. No.
Q. Look at No. 12 and see whether you circulated that petition?
A. No, I didn't pass this one.
Q. That was done by whom?
A. I imagine, Pauline Shartzer, on the 10th floor, there are names on there that are on the 10th floor, and we didn't go up to the 10th floor.
Q. Look at 13 and see if you circulated 13. If not, say if you know who did circulate it?
A. Yes, I passed this one.
Q. You circulated that? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Under the same conditions as the others that you testified about. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And these are genuine signatures?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is, these that I have called attention to were all circulated in one day on March 2. The ones I have called attention to?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, I call your attention to No. 14 which bears the date of March 5th. Who circulated that?
A. I think Inez Warren and I did, and these are the names of the instructors that wanted to sign after Mrs. Reed made the statement [fol. 5374] she would like to have all the signatures to put in the corner stone of her new building. That is the only reason why the instructors wanted to sign.
Q. When you ladies circulated these petitions on the 2nd, did you do it of your own free will without any interference or suggestion?
A. Yes sir.
Q. Very well. When you got these papers signed, now, with the exception of one of March 5th, what did you do with them?
A. The day that I got these?
Q. Yes.
A. After we were finished work that day, Mrs. Warren and I went downstairs and my husband met me. We went out to Mrs. Reed and presented her with these petitions, and she was very much pleased, and she didn't know we was coming, because she was out in the garden.

A. Yes, I did.
Q. A letter?
A. Yes.
Q. Please produce it.

p. 2198 Mr. Walsh: I will now read this Defendants' Exhibit A-36:

[fol. 5397] (Defendants' Exhibit A-36.)

"Stenographers, Typists, Bookkeepers and Assistants Union No. 14268 of the American Federation of Labor.

Affiliated with Central Labor Union and Missouri State Federation of Labor.

Kansas City, Mo.
June 21, 1933.

"David Dubinsky, International Secretary International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 3 West Sixteenth St., New York City, N. Y.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"April 16 The Womens' Trade Union League of this city started a campaign against sweatshop conditions here, a vigorous protest against the low wages, unsanitary conditions, overtime, etc., principally in the garment industry.

p. 2199

"The Chamber of Commerce, true to form, was highly insulted, emphatically denied that these conditions existed, and at that time told me the needle trades industry covered between ten and fifteen thousand workers, in seventy-six factories, with Kansas City ranking second in the house dress industry.

"I wrote Miss Elizabeth Christman, National Secretary of the League, around the first of May, asking her what we should do about organizing these women. Miss Christman replied she would write you, telling you of conditions here, and suggested I also write you. About that time the club women, several thousand strong, endorsed our sweatshop campaign one hundred per cent and sent dozens of wires to Mary Anderson asking the Womens' Bureau to send investigators here to make a wage survey. Miss Anderson sent her crew of workers for a survey of the garment industry about the middle of May. Their survey, wages only, was completed ten days ago, covering 39 factories, 3759 workers; 1752 of them in factories making cotton dresses for women and children; 844 of them in factories making women's coats; 844 workers in the overall and work clothes factories (practically all of these belong to the United Garment Workers, the only ones in the garment industry organized here);—"

You may explain that, if you will Mr. Dubinsky. That is not your organization, it is another organization in the garment trade?

[fol. 5398]

A. Yes.

Q. I will continue reading:

"180 in the millinery houses; 95 making lingerie, robes and silk dresses; 411 in factories where gloves, underwear and miscellaneous garments are made. 51% of the 3759 made less than $10 per week, practically all of these being in the cotton dress group.

"My object in writing you, Mr. Dubinsky, is to ask if your Organization will be able to send an organizer here to institute a local union of women workers under your jurisdiction. The Women's Trade Union League and Local Labor Movement, with which I am also identified as secretary of the Stenographers' Union and delegate to the Central Labor Union, will cooperate one hundred per cent with your representative, I can assure you.

p. 2200

"We know that organization is the only salvation for these workers.

"I shall appreciate an early reply advising what your organization will be able to do.

"Thanking you for giving this your prompt attention, I am,

"Cordially yours,

(Signed) MARION BURNS,
"President, Women's
Trade Union League.

Q. What was your designation then?
A. My designation was to help—
Q. (Interrupting) July, 1934? A. Yes.

p. 1861 A. My duties in this city were first to help those local union that were already established here, to help the members improve their conditions and also direct the activities for the organization of those that were not organized yet.
Q. How many were organized when you came here?
A. We had several hundred organized.
Q. And were they in separate locals or all in one local?
A. We had three different locals.
Q. What were they?
[fol. 5400] A. One local consisted of cloak makers, another local consisted of cutters and another local of dressmakers.

p. 1867 Q. Have you visited the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I visited the Donnelly Garment Company recently, during this trial.

p. 1869 Q. Did you observe the workings of the machines? Were the sections apparently all at work in operation upon the machines at the time we were there?

A. I have visited—

Q. (Interrupting) Were they all working?

A. I did observe.

Q. You did observe? A. Yes.

Q. And you went through the aisles did you?

A. I went through the aisles; I stopped at almost every section, I observed the speed.

Q. I was going to ask you that. How does the speed, from your experience, compare with the speed in other manufacturing establishments that you know of?

A. It was, according to my opinion, it is the speediest shop that I ever had visited. I have

p. 1870 never seen people work as hard as they do in that particular shop, particularly in certain sections of that shop.

Q. Mention the sections?

A. The special machine operators, the pressers,

[fol. 5401] I have never seen pressers working as hard and as fast and as speedy as the pressers and special machine operators in that shop have worked.

Q. We will come back, if we may, to your first coming to Kansas City. When did you communicate, after you came here, with the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I sent them a letter in connection with complaints that a number of girls brought to me, girls that were working for the Donnelly Garment Company and who claimed that they were discharged because of union activities.

Q. Do you remember the date of that letter?

A. I don't remember the exact date.
Q. Have you made a search for a copy of that letter?
A. I have made a search for the original copy but I could not find it.

Mr. Walsh: Have you gentlemen a copy of that, Mr. Hogsett?

Mr. Hogsett: You have not identified any letter up to now.

Q. What was the date that you wrote that letter?
p. 1871 A. I don't remember exactly the date.
Q. Can you approximate the date?

Senator Reed: Mr. Walsh, any letter that we have from this gentleman, if you can in some way tell us what it is we will produce it.

Mr. Walsh: Very good, I will try to. Pardon me, I spoke without giving the description, it was my fault.

A. It was either at the end of July or sometime in the early part of August, 1934.
Q. And to whom was the letter addressed?
[fol. 5402] A. To the Donnelly Garment Company.
p. 1872 Q. This letter of July 18th, 1934, will you please state the contents of it?
A. The contents of the letter was that I am advising them that a number of girls complained to me that they were discharged because of their union activities and I asked them for a conference to take up and try to adjust this complaint.
Q. Did you receive any reply to that letter?
A. I received a telephone call.
p. 1873 Q. And from whom did you receive the telephone call? Who was the person that said he or she was at the other end of the 'phone?
A. When I came into my office there was a call for me from Mrs. Reeves.
Q. And what did you do in response to that call?

A. I called back and I made an appointment for eleven o'clock the same morning. Later on when I found that I cannot keep that appointment I called back and wanted to delay it for a later hour. Then Mrs. Reeves asked me "What do you intend to take up, what do you intend to discuss".

Q. Pardon me. Did you tell her who you were and who you represented?

A. I told her my name and that I am the one that wrote the letter and she asked me, "What is the appointment for, what do you intend to discuss." I told her that I intend to discuss the complaint filed with me by the several girls that claimed they were discharged because of their union activities, claimed they were discriminated against. Then Mrs. Reeves told me "We don't discriminate and these girls were not discharged because of their union activities but because of the seasonal lay-off." I told Mrs. Reeves that these girls were working there for several years and never during that period were they laid off for such a long period and they insist they [fol. 5403] were discharged because of their union activities.

p. 1874 Q. And what was Mrs. Reeves' reply?

A. Mrs. Reeves' reply was "There is no use wasting time, we don't discriminate."

Q. Did you make any other offer to call upon her? Did you make an offer at that time to call upon her?

A. No. If you will pardon me to qualify my remarks, I advised some of the girls to call her up personally and possibly try to get their positions back individually.

p. 1878 Q. Now, I will show you a letter addressed to the Donnelly Garment Company of date, January 25, 1935, and state whether that is a copy of the letter that you sent to the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. Yes, it is.

Mr. Walsh: I want to put this in evidence.

(Mr. Walsh read Defendants' Exhibit C into the record.)

(Defendants' Exhibit C.)

"Kansas City, Missouri, January 25, 1935.

"Donnelly Garment Company,
1828 Walnut Street,

Kansas City, Missouri

Gentlemen:

As the accredited representative of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, which represents 225,000 workers and is the third largest union in the American Federation of Labor and as the accredited representative of the Donnelly Garment Workers Local No. 124 of that union, we take the privilege of addressing this letter to you.

Last year, with the birth of the new deal, a number of the workers in your shop began to apply for membership in the above men[fol. 5404] tioned organization. Various groups of your workers constantly applied for membership and finally our International granted them a charter.

"Following their organization, these members have experienced a decided change in the attitude and action of your executives toward them. They complain that they have been unfairly propagandized to abandon their union; given veiled threats of discharge should they fail to do so; discriminated against; isolated from other workers by transfer to a separate building and transferred to other than their usual type of work; so that their earning power has been materially reduced; and workers of proved efficiency and long experience in your employ have been discharged without cause. That these complaints are not vague and imagined is evidenced by the fact that they have taken

p. 1879 definite form in cases pending before the Regional Labor Board. That they are not without merit is evidenced by the fact that your executives have interposed every artifice and technicality to delay a full and fair hearing and that the cases still pend.

"There is voiced feeling among these workers that the special concessions made to your firm by certain administrators of the National Recovery Administration have resulted in great benefit to you at the expense of and without corresponding benefit to the workers. The Administration undoubtedly, in permitting you to manufacture a higher priced garment, acted upon a belief that the workers would benefit by this concession proportionately; but the contrary has proved to be the fact.

"Let us at this point assure you that it is not the purpose of our union either to disrupt or run business. Our activities are predicated upon the principle of co-operation between employer and employee for the fair and mutual benefit and profit of all. All we ask is for an opportunity, through our organization, to present and submit labor's views, and to work out peaceable and equitably the problems of uniform and adequate wage scales, protection for the experienced workers, the determination of piece-work rates and all other problems jointly affecting your organization and our members.

"We desire to accomplish these ends peaceable. There should be no need to resort to methods resulting in cessation of work and economic loss in order that the workers may [fol. 5405] in 1935 gain that equality in his inalienable rights in the economy of the nation which he in 1776 obtained politically.

"Surely the founders of your firm are fair enough to concede that we have reached a state in our civilization where the workers, through his labor union, must be recognized as having a voice in industry and the conditions of his employment.

p. 1880 "We address this letter to you in the sincere hope that it will form the basis for co-operation between the members of our union in your employ and your firm. The success of industry depends upon such co-operation. We stand ready to do our part toward creating the machinery for a mutually co-operative relationship.

"Through your prompt response to this communication there can be averted the necessity for a more direct drawing of the issues and the possible precipitation of industrial turmoil. The power for peaceful action is in your hands and we trust you will pursue this course.

[fol. 5412] p. 1509 Extracts From Testimony of LILLIAN WALES, called as a witness on behalf of Defendants.

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Walsh:

Q. Please state your name to the Court?
A. Lillian Wales.
Q. And where do you reside, Miss Wales?
A. 711 Cleveland.
Q. Is that in Kansas City, Missouri?
A. Kansas City, Missouri.
Q. How long have you lived in Kansas City?

Q. How long have you worked there?
A. It will be a year in June.
Q. Did you ever work for the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.
Q. I believe I will have you state here what your experience has been as a garment operator, from the time you started up until the present time?
A. Before I went to the Donnelly Garment Company I was a special operator at the Kansas City Custom Garment Company; I worked
p. 1510 there approximately two years and then I went to the Donnelly Garment Company, as well as I can remember in the fall of 1931.
Q. And how long did you work there?
A. I worked there until June, 1935.
Q. And what part of the work did you do at the Donnelly Garment Company, what operation?
A. I was a straight needle girl. When I first went there I was given a little bit of everything to do and later became a joiner.
Q. How long did you work there as a joiner?
[fol. 5413] A. Well I could not say exactly; approximately two years.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not you had a conversation with Mrs. Allison in the winter of 1934 respecting the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, sir; she spoke to our group in our section. At that time I was working on the 8th floor.

Q. Had you received or had you not received one of the circulars or bulletins sent out about meetings? A. Yes.

Q. What was the occasion of your conversation with Mrs. Allison at that time?

A. There were some girls carrying educational signs and Clara Finnell was a thread girl on that floor at that time and she came up to the section and said something to Mrs. Allison about it and she said that what we should do was go down those elevators and tramp those people down.

p. 1511 Q. What people were they talking about?

A. The girls that were carrying those educational banners.

Q. What did it say on these banners?

A. I couldn't remember, I don't remember and Mrs. Allison said if anybody joined the union that we would not be working for the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Were these presumably union girls that were down there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would give me all of their conversation, and pitch your voice so we can all hear you; give me the whole conversation that you had with Mrs. Allison?

A. Mrs. Allison said at that time, she spoke to the group of us and she said that anybody that joined the union would not be working for Mrs. Donnelly.

[fol. 5414] Q. When was that?

A. Well, I could not rightfully say when that was; it was before I joined the union however; it was in the month of December.

Q. December of what year?

A. Of 1934.

Q. Did you have a conversation in the early part of January or I will ask you first did you join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. I did.

* * * *

p. 1512 Q. Do you recall the date on which you had a conversation subsequently with Mrs. Hyde?

A. Yes; I joined the union the 8th of January and before that they had been at this building at 26th and Walnut and it was on the 21st day of January as near as I can remember the instructor that had charge of the section at that time, Mrs. Allison being transferred during that period of time—came to me and she said that Mrs. Hyde wanted to see me downstairs and I told her, I said "What? I have been expecting that" and she said that she hated to lose me.

Q. Who said that? A. The instructor.

Q. Who was the instructor? What was her name?

A. I know but I cannot remember, right now I cannot remember.

Q. Was she an instructor at the time?

A. Lola was her name; I cannot remember her last name; she had just been there a small period of time.

p. 1513 Q. She had what?

[fol. 5415] A. She had just been there from the time that Mrs. Allison had been transferred to the 26th and Walnut Building.

Q. What was it she said?

A. Well, she told me Mrs. Hyde wanted to see me, she said she certainly hated to lose me because I was a good operator and I told her I had been expecting it so I took my scissors and thread and things and went down to the employment office on 7.

Q. And who did you meet down there?

A. Mrs. Hyde and she told me Mrs. Allison needed another girl over at the other building.

Q. Where was that building?
A. The building at 26th and Walnut.
Q. And whom did you meet after you got over there?
A. Mrs. Allison.
Q. What was Mrs. Allison's position?
A. She was an instructor.
Q. And did she give you a machine to work on when you got over there?
A. Well, she was talking to someone else and she told me to wait and she would give me a machine, which she did.
Q. Now, at the time she did that did she say anything to you or not about joining the union?
A. She told me when I first went over there the first day I went over there that I could not expect to come over from the big building and
p. 1514 get joining because she already had her joiners and Mary Copowycz talked to me, too; she was a thread girl at that time and she said, she came over and she asked me what made me ever join the union. I told her because I wanted to and she said that Frances and I was the only ones in the union that she cared anything about and she asked me [fol. 5416] what I thought I could get out of the union, what I expected out of it; that there were not any unions any more and the first time I did something they didn't like they would kick me out and that is all she said to me at that time and Mrs. Allison talked to me later.
Q. How much later?
A. I cannot rightfully remember; it seems to me it was the following Monday.
Q. And what did she say to you?
A. Well, she said she would like to give me a whipping and I asked her for why and she said because I joined the union. She said she thought it was terrible we had joined the union, to take our money and give it to the dirty foreigners to sit around when they could not offer us anything. She asked me if I had not always been treated fair with the Donnelly Company and she told me as long as I would continue to behave myself I would have had a job with the Donnelly Company, as long as there was such a firm but she said that I could not expect to get the same kind of work and all that I had had. She said—

p. 1515 she also told me there was not any unions any more and that if I lost my job there that I could not get a job any place else in town.

Q. State whether or not she said anything about Frances Riedel joining the union?

A. Yes, she said that Frances and I—she was surprised that we had but she was not surprised at Virginia Stroup; that she was the type and she said that the reason that Flossie and I had stayed there like we had was because she liked us and felt sorry for Flossie—Flossie Walton, I don't know why.

p. 1523 Q. Where do you work now.

A. Carl Mann Coat Shop.

Q. Is that a union shop?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5417] Q. Is there or is there not, in that shop, a price committee appointed among the employees themselves who do the work?

p. 1526 Q. I wish you would answer that, please, Miss Wales.

A. Yes. There is a price committee elected by the girls. When prices are settled among the workers, there has to be present the head of the union, the shop Chair Lady, the price committee and the employer himself, and the prices have to be settled in accordance with what the girls think are right for them.

Q. Is there or is there not, usually if not always, an agreement as to what the prices shall be on the particular class of garments?

A. You mean between the price committee—?
Q. Between the price committee and the employer, is it usually agreed upon?
A. Yes, sir.

* * * *

p. 1527 Q. Well, all right. You left in what period of 1935?

Q. You joined the union on what date?
A. January 8, 1935.
Q. You continued to work at the Donnelly Company until June, 1935?
[fol. 5418] p. 1528 A. Yes, sir.
Q. I believe you said. And at that time, there was a general lay-off, wasn't there?
A. I was sent to the 2609 Walnut Building. I don't remember the date when that was laid off, that building was laid off. We talked to Miss Hyde. She said she would have to do us like she did the others. She would have to lay us off. We asked her when she thought she would have work for us. She said she didn't know, maybe next season. We called her up. She said, no, she didn't have anything just then, that she would call us when they did.
Q. Did you get the question that I asked you?
A. I think so.
Q. What is the answer to it?
A. That building was laid off, yes.
Q. You were laid off at the same time as how many other employees, both union and non-union?
A. Well, I couldn't say, because I don't know how many girls there was in that section. It consisted of one section. I can't remember if it was just a few or not.

Q. A normal section is 40 people plus the instructors, is that right?
A. That is right.

Q. Did you at one time join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 5420] Q. And when did you join that union?

A. In October, 1934.

p. 1469 Q. Subsequent to joining that union did you have a talk with Mrs. Reeves about joining the union?

A. Yes. I was called up to Mrs. Reeves' office.

Q. And how long was it after you joined the union?

A. Well, I was called up to Mrs. Reeves' Office December 12th; right around December 12th.

p. 1470 Q. Around December 12, 1934?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you said anything to anyone up to that time at the shop about having joined the union?

A. Yes; Grace Gnotta asked me if I had joined the union.

Q. And what did you say to her?

A. Grace Gnotta asked me if I belonged to the union and I told her yes, I did.

Q. Was it subsequent to that that you had this conversation with Mrs. Reeves?

A. Yes, it was the same day.

Q. I will get you to state that conversation, what Mrs. Reeves said to you and what you said to her?

A. Mrs. Reeves asked me if I belonged to the Union and I told her yes.

[fol. 5421] Q. Now I will ask you one question before I go any further. Was this Grace Gnotta present at the time when you talked to Mrs. Reeves?

A. Yes; Grace Gnotta took me up to Mrs. Reeves' office.

p. 1472 Q. Was there any other girl called up at the same time you were there?

A. Virginia was called just a few seconds before I went up.

Q. Virginia who? A. Virginia Stroup.

Q. Was Virginia Stroup there at the same time they had this talk with you?

A. Yes, sir, she was.

Q. Did you hear what Mrs. Reeves said to Miss Stroup, if anything?

A. Yes; she told Virginia that Grace Gnotta had kept her through sympathy, because she felt sorry for her.

Q. And what did Miss Stroup say in answer to that, if anything?

A. I don't remember what answer Virginia Stroup did say.

Q. Did you hear any conversation right after that between Mrs. Reeves and Ella Mae Hyde?

A. Yes. Mrs. Reeves told Ella Mae Hyde that her job was to watch Virginia Stroup and Frances Riedel—myself—the times that we [sent] to the wash room and how long we spent there.

p. 1473 Q. That was the retiring room for the girls?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5422] Q. Did she say anything else about the union while you were there and any relationship that Mrs. Gnotta had to anyone belonging to the union?

A. Yes; she said that Mrs. Gnotta had been listening to us talk union and she wasn't going to listen to it any more because if we girls didn't make our $15.00 we would get laid off.

Q. Did she say anything else to you with reference to what you should do, if you had difficulties and to whom you should go?
A. I believe Mr. Dewey Atchison did.
Q. What did he say?
A. He asked us why we didn't bring our difficulties to him instead of taking them to a bunch of foreigners.
Q. What was your answer to that?
A. We told him that we had took our difficulties to our instructor many a time about our prices on certain garments that we made but that it didn't do any good.

p. 1474 Q. Did you subsequently, a day or two afterwards, after that, have a talk with this same Mrs. Gnotta that took you up there?
A. Yes; the following day, I believe, Mrs. Gnotta came and talked to me.
Q. What did she say?
A. She tried to persuade me not to join.
Q. What did she say? Just give us the substance of what she said as you recollect it?
A. Well, she asked me not to go to any more union meetings; she referred to the girls in our union as the scum from Donnellys; she said it was nothing but the scum from Donnellys that had started this union and that [fol. 5423] she did not [thini] I belonged to them and she asked me—it was around Christmas time and we were exchanging Christmas gifts and she asked me if I wouldn't consider giving her a Christmas present and tell her that I didn't belong to the union any more; that I wouldn't go to any more of their meetings.

p. 1476 Q. Did you have a talk with any of your other instructors after you got over to that place?
A. Yes, I had a talk with Mrs. Allison.
Q. Who was Mrs. Allison?
A. She was my instructor at 26th and Walnut.

Q. Will you please state the substance of the [conservation] that you had with Mrs. Allison? A. Yes.

p. 1477 Q. What was it? First, what Mrs. Allison said to you and what you said to her?

A. Mrs. Allison came to me and asked me if I would tell her something she would like to know and I told her I sure would, I would tell her anything about myself that she would care to know and she told me it wasn't about myself, that she wanted to know if Lillian Wales belonged to the union.

The Court: What?

The Witness: If Lillian Wales had joined our union.

Q. And what did you say in answer to that question that was asked you by Mrs. Allison?

A. I asked Miss Allison why she didn't ask Lillian if she belonged to the union.

Q. And what did she say?

A. She said that she would but she never seen Lillian; she was over on 18th and Walnut.

[fol. 5424] Q. Did she say anything further to you in that conversation about your joining—first, did you say anything to her when she asked you about Lillian Wales joining the union?

A. Yes; she said that she didn't think I would be ashamed to tell her of any girl that belonged to our organization.

Q. By your organization she meant what?

A. The union, and I told her that we were not ashamed but very proud to have Lillian Wales in our union.

Q. Then what did she say to you, if anything, with respect to that?

p. 1478 A. She said that she didn't think that I would have joined the Union if it hadn't been for Virginia Stroup and I told her that I thought I had a mind of my own; I didn't ask Virginia, and I felt if I belonged to the union it was because I, myself, had wanted to join it.

Q. Did she say anything further to you?

A. Yes; Lillian Wales and I had started in a beauty course, taking a beauty course and she told me that we needed our jobs to go ahead with our beauty course and that if we joined it that we would lose our job and would not be able to continue with our beauty course.

p. 1480 Q. What happened to you subsequent to that? How long did you remain working at that place at 26th and Walnut?

A. Well, they closed down the building and laid us all off.

Q. How soon after this talk which you had with Mrs. Allison?

A. Well, it was—I had that talk with Mrs. Allison, I believe in January and in June we were laid off.

Q. Did you remain at that other shop during all the time down to June when you were laid off?

[fol. 5425] A. I was at 26th and Walnut when I was laid off, and up until I joined the union and had the talk with Mrs. Reeves I worked at 18th and Walnut.

Q. Did you remain at 26th and Walnut all the time up to the time that you were laid off?

A. Yes, sir.

p. 1481 Q. How long were you laid off?

A. I never got back.

Q. Did you ever try to get back?

A. Yes. For three months I called Miss Hyde,—Ella Mae Hyde,—she was the one we always called in for employment or when we went back to work.

Q. When you were laid off was there anything said to you about coming back again and working for the company or not?

A. Yes; when we were laid off they closed down that whole building.
Q. And how many people were in that building?
A. I really couldn't say.
Q. Could you approximate the number? Was there as many as 100 or 50 or how many?
A. Well, I really couldn't say.
Q. You couldn't estimate it?
A. No, I am afraid I couldn't.
Q. What floor were you on in that building?
A. I don't remember whether it was the third—the third, I believe.
Q. How many sections were there in the building?
A. There was one section in the building.
[fol. 5426] Q. How many machines in the section?
A. I couldn't say that either.
Q. Could you approximate the number? Could you estimate it?
A. I am afraid I couldn't.
p. 1842 Q. Who did you first talk to about coming back to work there?
A. To Mrs. Allison when we were laid off. No, I believe I went to Miss Hyde and got my check and I asked her when I should come back to work and she said that I could call in, in two weeks; that is when we usually took our two weeks vacation.
Q. Did this include your vacation time,—this lay-off?
A. Yes, I believe so.
Q. Did you call Miss Hyde afterwards?
A. After my two weeks was up I called in to Miss Hyde.
Q. Yes, and did you talk to her over the telephone or talk to her personally?
A. Well, I called her on the telephone because I didn't have the car fare to go down there.
Q. And what did she say to you?
A. She said that they didn't have any work for me.

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Hogsett:

p. 1496 Q. In this group that was laid off when you were laid off, how many were in that group?

A. I can't say altogether; I think about twelve or fifteen.

Q. And the whole group was laid off at one time?

A. Yes.

[fol. 5427] Q. It was a whole section, as a matter of fact, was it not?

A. Yes.

p. 1497 Q. It wasn't a picking out of you or just one or two girls; it was a laying off of the whole section?

A. Yes, but they replaced a lot of girls over at the other building when they closed down this building, too.

Q. Would you just as soon answer the question. It was a lay off of a whole section, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that section included how many people?

A. I couldn't say.

Q. Roughly? A section is at least forty, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, then, it was at least forty people that were laid off at the same time?

A. Yes.

Q. And most of those were non-union employes?

A. Yes, but that is what I am trying to tell you.

Q. You see you are arguing with me again and all I asked you was the simple question, whether most of them were non-union employes.

A. I am sorry.

Q. How many non-union employes were there in that group?

A. I couldn't say that either, because I don't remember.

[fol. 5428] Q. How many union employes were in that forty group?

A. I just got through saying I think there were twelve; I couldn't say for sure, twelve or fifteen.

(Witness excused).

Objection and motion to strike of respondent and intervenor to the testimony of David Dubinsky, et al., offered by the board from the "Judge Miller Case."

Respondent and intervenor severally object to all and every part of the testimony offered herein by the Board, referred to as the "Judge Miller Case" testimony, being portions of the testimony taken before Judge Miller in the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, in the case entitled Donnelly Garment Company, et al., vs. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, No. 2924, to wit: all the testimony of David Dubinsky, Meyer Perlstein, Thelma Owen, Lillian Wales, Frances Riedel, and contained in N.R.A. and J.M.C. Exhibit 5-A to GG, at pages 1 to 33 inclusive, and object to each and every question and answer therein set forth, and move that the testimony of each of said witnesses and that each and every of said questions and the answers thereto be excluded and stricken and not considered as evidence in this proceeding (this objection and motion going to each question and answer separately as well as to the testimony of each of said witnesses as a whole) for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

That said testimony deals with and refers to matters which purport to have existed or occurred prior to July 5, 1935, and said testimony and each and every question and answer thereof is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this proceeding and deals with matters purporting to have existed or occurred prior to the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act; that the conditions, acts and conversations testified to by said witnesses, if they existed or oc-

[fol. 5430] curred, were lawful at the time they existed or occurred, and the fact, if it is a fact, that such things existed or occurred or that respondent or any of its representatives may have done or said or authorized any of such things, at the times referred to, or when same were lawful, carries no imputation and does not tend to prove that the respondent (or intervenor), or any one representing either of them, would violate or has violated the National Labor Relations Act after its enactment, or that they would or did commit, authorize, or do, after the enactment of said Act, any of the acts or unfair labor practices alleged in the complaint herein, and such testimony is therefore conjectural, speculative and irrelevant as to any issue in this proceeding; and for the further reason that there is no showing that the persons testifying or referred to in said testimony had authority to bind or speak for respondent (or intervenor) at said times, or if they had such authority at said times, there is no showing that such authority continued after the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act or that respondent handled or managed its business or the various departments thereof in the same way or by the same division of authority after the enactment of said Act as it did at the times said testimony was given or that what was said by said witnesses applies to conditions in respondent's business or the methods of handling same since the enactment of said Act and hence said testimony is too remote, is not binding upon respondent or intervenor, is immaterial, irrelevant, conjectural, and without probative value as to any of the matters here in issue; that there is no charge in the complaint of any discrimination by respondent against said witnesses or the persons referred to [fol. 5431] in said testimony; that said testimony is hearsay and states conclusions; that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was not then in existence or even contemplated and said testimony can have no bearing on the question of whether said union was formed, dominated or maintained by respondent or whether it represents the free will and choice of respondent's employees as their bargaining agency; that said testimony does not tend to prove or disprove any issue in this proceeding, and, if received, would require extended testimony on the part of respondent and intervener to refute such irrelevant and immaterial testimony, all of which would needlessly encumber the record; that for each and all of said reasons, the reception or consideration of said testimony in this proceeding would be improper, illegal and prejudicial to respondent and intervenor.

Objection is overruled and the motion to strike is denied.

FRED B. BROWN, called as a witness on behalf of the Intervener, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 1087 Q. Will you state your name, please?
A. Fred B. Brown.
Q. You are connected with the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.
Q. In what capacity? A. Cutter.
Q. How long have you been with them, Mr. Brown?
A. Nineteen years and eight months.
Q. Did you have any personal knowledge of a labor situation existing involving some violations at the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri Garment Companies in Kansas City in March 1937?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir, I saw some of it.
Q. Did you see any of the events that happened at that place?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did you happen to see them?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. On my way to work one or two mornings—I had read about it in the paper and I had seen pictures of the girls having mix-ups over there, so I was naturally curious, so I stopped by two mornings.

Q. Tell the Court what you saw the first morning down there?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. I was standing across the street. There seemed to be picket lines, twenty-five or thirty girls walking around in a circle around in front of the opening to this door. Once in a while two or three girls would come down the street and try to gain entrance to the building, and just as they would start in the building these pickets would all rush towards her and all it seemed to me like pull in different directions on her clothes, pull her hair; they would pull her coat off her, and throw her hat out in the street, and after she was down on the pavement they would kick her.

p. 1088

Q. Was anybody with you on either of these occasions?

Objection—Immaterial.

[fol. 5436] p. 1088 A. No, sir, I was alone.

Q. Did you or did you not see anyone in the crowd of pickets around the plant whom you knew to be connected with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Who was it?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. A fellow by the name of William Shannon.

Q. How do you know he was connected with the International?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. Because previously he had called on some of the boys to try to get them to join the Union.

The Court: The International Union?

The Witness: Yes.

Q. Did you hear Bill Shannon say anything about the present difficulties in connection with the Donnelly plant?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. What was it?
A. I was across the street standing there looking at the mix-up across the street, and he came back across the street and he saw me standing
p. 1089 there. He knew me personally because he had previously worked at the Donnelly Garment Company. He said, "We are coming down to organize you cutters next, down at the Donnelly."
Q. Did you hear any further statement by any of the pickets of that general nature?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. No, I don't think I did.
Q. Did you see any instance in which the police would pick up any of these people causing disturbances?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What would happen that you saw?

Objection—Immaterial.

[fol. 5437] p. 1089 A. Well, when they would have a fight or anything like that, the police would gather up certain girls that were doing most of the fighting and they would put them in the patrol wagon. They would stand there until they would get some in the patrol wagon and then drive down the street. While I was standing there I could see the girls they had taken away walk back up. They had taken them two or three blocks away and let them out of the patrol wagon.
Q. Did you see that happen more than once?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. Yes, sir, I saw it both mornings I was there.
Q. Do you remember any newspaper advertisement that was generall talked about at the Donnelly plant about that time?

Objection—Immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did it say in substance?

Objection—Immaterial, incompetent, hearsay, not best evidence.

A. It said they were organizing the smaller places in order to get ready for Donnellys, they were coming down and get Donnellys and show them the same way that they did p.1090 these smaller ones.
Q. What effect, if any, did those police and those newspaper advertisements have on the employees at the Donnelly plant?

Objection—Immaterial and incompetent.

A. Naturally it upset the whole plant.
Q. Did they take any action as the result of that?

Objection—Immaterial and incompetent.

A. I think they did, yes.
Q. What was it?

Objection—Immaterial and incompetent.

A. A committee of three persons, they went down to talk to attorneys to see if there was any way they could get an injunction to prevent them from harming us.
Q. Do you remember the publication in the newspapers of the Supreme Court's action on the United States Labor Relations Act?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Before that time had anybody so far as you know ever had any idea of forming a labor union of their own there?
A. No, sir.
Q. When was the first time that idea was suggested, to the best of your knowledge?

[fol. 5438] p. 1090 A. After the Supreme Court had declared the Wagner Act constitutional.

Q. Do you recall any statement in the newspaper about Sylvia Hull going to Atlantic City to represent the Donnelly employees at a convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, sir, I read it in the newspaper.

Q. Did you ever attend or hear of any meeting at which Sylvia Hull was selected or author-

p. 1091 ized to represent the Donnelly employees in an International Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did that have any effect on the employees, to the best of your knowledge and belief?

Objection—Immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, it excited them because they had never authorized anyone to act in their behalf, and they didn't know what had happened.

Q. Do you recall the occasion of the meeting of employees at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give the date of that meeting?

A. It was the 23rd of April, 1937.

Q. Where was the meeting held?

A. On the second floor of the Corrigan Building.

Q. Was that second floor at that time leased or rented or controlled by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who did control it or lease it, do you know?

[fol. 5439] p. 1091 A. The Corrigan estate.

Q. Do you know whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union made any arrangements with the Corrigan estate for the right to use the building for this meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Who made those arrangements?

A. Hobart Atherton.

Q. Tell the court what happened at that meeting you have referred to.

A. A notice came around that there was going to be a meeting after work, after four-thirty, on the second floor, and everybody, of course, was excited at that time and they were naturally anxious to attend, so they had most of the factory there—probably some in the office that weren't there as they don't quit work until five o'clock. Miss Todd presided at this meeting. When the meeting was called to order she told them that Mr. Tyler was there to explain different things about organizing a union. She first took a vote as to whether this union should be formed. Of course, it was passed unanimously.

Q. You say "Of course, it was passed unanimously." What do you mean by that?

A. Because everybody was anxious to form their own union; they were eager to vote for this union because it—

Objection and move to strike—not responsive.

Q. Well, isn't it a fact that a lot of them had not yet heard that a union was being considered?

A. No, that is right.

Q. What were they anxious about?

A. To get protection.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Mr. Tyler got up and talked to the whole organization and he read some by-laws.

Q. Were there any votes taken?

[fol. 5440] p. 1092 A. Yes, there were votes taken as to whether the union should be formed, and that also was by unanimous vote. After they voted to form the union she was authorized to appoint a nominating committee that would go out and present to the people for

p. 1093 nomination—I mean, to appoint a nominating committee and this nominating committee was to go out and pick several people from the organization to represent different departments and to be official representatives of their union. And when they were out Miss Todd passed around cards that had on them, "We hereby wish to be the charter members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union." She asked them to sign these cards and to take their time and think about it and not to hurry about it. While they were out Mr. Tyler read the by-laws that he had prepared for this meeting.

Q. Do you remember whether I said anything about whether you should adopt these by-laws or not?

A. No, you didn't say we should; you said we should think about it and consider it before adopting them.

Q. Did I say to the people in that meeting, "I am telling you to organize this union and you better organize it?" or did I say to them, "This is your own problem and you should use your own judgment about it?"

A. You said it was our own problem, that we weren't forced to do that.

Q. Do you remember whether I read any part of the Wagner Act to the meeting down there?

A. Yes, I think I remember that.

Q. Mr. Brown, were you selected for any special duty at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. I was on one of the first committees; I was
p. 1094 chairman of one of the first groups.

Q. What do you mean by "chairman"?

[fol. 5441] p. 1094 A. They have group chai nen they call them of the union, of our union.

Q. Why is that term applied to them?

A. Well, because they were chosen from each department and there was a kind of a chairman, and there were nine of them chosen. We tried to choose them to represent each department in the building.

Q. Thereafter were you selected for any additional duty in connection with the union?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was it?
A. A week later we had a meeting of the chairmen and I was appointed treasurer of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.
Q. How long did you act as treasurer?
A. One year.
Q. What sources of income or money did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have?
A. We had our dues and we would give parties and dances and carnivals and we raised money that way. We also had one assessment of One Dollar during the time I was treasurer.
Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have any other source of income to your knowledge?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Did they ever get a cent directly or indirectly from their employers?
A. Not one cent.
Q. How much were the dues?
A. Twenty-five cents a month.
Q. How much was the assessment?
[fol. 5442] p. 1095 A. One Dollar.
Q. How much did it cost an employee to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the first year.

Objection—immaterial.

A. It cost them $4.00 the first year.
Q. Did you hear the testimony of Velma Dowdy from this stand concerning what she paid as dues to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in Memphis, Tennessee?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you figured out how much the employees of the Donnelly plant saved by having their own union over the minimum they would have to spend as a member of the International?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I have.
Q. How much?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Close to $31,000.00 the first year.
Q. Is there any reason to think they might have saved more than that?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes.
Q. What is it?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Our rate of pay is much higher than the rate of pay in these other factories, and naturally they would force us to pay more dues; and also we are not reequired to pay a fine when we miss a meeting, and they were.
Q. State to the Court in general what the items of expense of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were while you were treasurer? I don't mean the exact amounts, but tell what you spent money for?
A. We paid our attorney; we paid for the printing of the briefs of these trials; we paid the rent on our hall where we held our meetings; we paid the rent when we would have to use it [fol. 5443] for a party, we would pay the hall rent there, and we paid our chairman her salary, and also the salary of the secretary, and also the
p. 1096 salary of the treasurer.
Q. Did you mention any printing expense?
A. The printing of the briefs; we paid for the printing of the briefs for all the trials.
Q. You mean the briefs of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
A. Yes.
Q. How often does the union hold its meetings?
A. We are scheduled to hold a meeting once a month, the second Tuesday in the month.
Q. How often do you hold them?

A. We hold them every month. It isn't often we miss a month.
Q. Are they well attended?
A. Yes.
Q. Generally have people standing up at them?
A. Yes.
Q. How often does the executive committee of these group chairmen hold meetings?
A. When I was included in the group chairmen we held meetings twice a month. Sometimes if the occasion arose we held meetings oftener.
Q. What do you do at those meetings?
A. We take up the complaints that have been given to us during the time since the last meeting we had; we decide what to do to raise our expense money, and also to arrange for all the parties we have, and things like that.

[fol. 5444] p. 1097 Q. Do you or do you not have suggestions from members of the union to that committee?
A. Yes.
Q. Frequently or seldom?
A. Well, very frequently.
Q. Were you present when the working agreement between Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the employers was entered into?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember the date of that?
A. Well, I think it was April 27—I don't know the exact date on it.
Q. Do you remember about how long after the union was organized that working agreement was presented to the employers?
A. It was about a month after.
Q. Where was that presented and that working agreement made?
A. In Mrs. Reed's office.
Q. Who were present?
A. The entire first committee and Mrs. Reed, Mr. Green, Mr. Baty, Mr. Keyes, Mr. Ingraham, Miss Todd, Mamie Riddle, Jack Mc-

Conaughey, Hobart Atherton, Charlotte Casey.

Q. Was I present?

A. Yes, sir, Mr. Tyler was present.

Q. Tell the Court what was done at that meeting.

[fol. 5445] p. 1097 A. They gave this working agreement to Mrs. Reed and her associates and she asked to read it over and would let us know later on what they would do about it.

Q. What did they do about it?

A. They took it and took it into consideration, and at two o'clock they called us together again, and that is when the agreement was signed.

The Court: We will recess now until two o'clock.

(Whereupon, the court stood at recess until 2:00 p. m.)

Thursday, April 6, 1939.
2 p. m.

(Pursuant to recess, Court reconvened and the trial resumed.)

Fred V. Brown resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mr. Brown, state whether you saw any pickets in the entry way of the building at the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri plants.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they doing?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, I drove by there one night or several nights and I saw them; they had cots and they were lying in the lobby of the building, right in front of the door; they were sleeping there at nights.

Q. I believe you testified that you were present when the working agreement was presented by the committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to Mrs. Reed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you or were you not present when the wage agreement was presented to Mrs. Reed?

[fol. 5446] A. I was.

Q. Can you remember what date that was?

A. June 22nd.

Q. And where was that?

A. That was in Mr. Tyler's office.

Q. Who was present at that time?

p. 1100 A. Well, there was Mrs. Reed, Miss Francis, that is Mrs. Reed's secretary, and Mr. Baty and then the members from the committee was Miss Todd, Miss Green, Mr. Hobart Atherton and myself.

Q. Was any substantial amount of work done on that wage agreement before it was presented?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. How much discussion was had before it was signed, if you remember?

A. Well, it seems to me as well as I can remember that there was quite a bit that afternoon and beforehand, too, before we went up there.

Q. Did the employees of Donnelly Garment Company get any benefits from the working agreement and the wage agreement executed with Mrs. Reed, that they did not have before that?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. State some of them?

A. Well, there was a substantial rise in the absolute minimum all over the plant. In several different departments—well, there was just a lot of wages raised right after the agreement was signed.

[fol. 5447] p. 1100 Q. Do you think of any other benefits?

A. Well, I cannot think.

Q. Anything done about vacations or holidays?

A. Yes, we were given five days of holiday vacation, that is we were allowed Decoration Day, Fourth of July, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas and those holidays that were allowed in the contract.

Q. Do you mean that you got paid for those holidays?

A. Paid for those holidays, yes sir.

Q. What about vacations? Any change made about vacations?

A. Yes. Before the operators were allowed one week's vacation with pay and after the agreement was signed two weeks with pay.

Q. Do you know any individuals whose pay was actually increased as a result of that contract and wage agreement?

A. Yes, my own.

Q. Has your work on that committee been in good faith in an effort to protect and increase the advantages of the employees or has it been a mere sham and make-shift?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir, it has been to protect and to benefit the employees as well as I could.

Q. If Mrs. Reed or anybody connected with the ownership of that plant should urge or ask you to endeavor to dissolve the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union would you do so?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I would not.

Q. Why not?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5448] A. Although I respect Mrs. Reed very much, I do not feel that we could do the employees that way; we feel obligated for all the employees in the building and also for my own position.

Mr. Tyler: That is all.

Mr. Walsh: No questions.

(Witness excused).

[fol. 5449] p. 1171 Exhibit (b)

At 10 a. m. Friday, April 7, 1939.

(Pursuant to recess Court reconvened and the trial resumed.)

Mrs. Effie Weigand called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. State your name please.
A. Mrs. Effie Weigand.
Q. You are a widow?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. You have four children?
A. I do.
Q. And you have been the support of that family for how long?
A. For a period of a little over six years.
Q. By whom are you employed?
A. I am employed by the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. How long have you been employed by that Company?
A. A little over two years.
Q. Tell the Court for whom you worked before you worked for the Donnelly Company?
A. Before I worked for the Donnelly Company, I worked for Morris-Caplan at 9th and Broadway, maker of coats and dresses, and the Burlington Overall Company.
Q. How long, about, did you work for Morris Caplan?
A. About two years.

Q. Who did you work for before you worked for Morris Caplan?

[fol. 5450] p. 1171 A. For the Burlington Overall Company.

p. 1172 Q. About how long did you work for them?

A. Approximately one year.

Q. And who did you work for before that.

A. For a Miller Company in St. Joseph, Missouri.

Q. About how long?

A. Well, I was there just off and on. Working steady, I was there about a year.

Q. What did they manufacture.

A. They manufactured overalls and jackets, and suede jackets, suede cloth, men's garments.

Q. And who did you work for before that, Mrs. Weigand?

A. Well, there was a period of seven years that I was at home. The only outside work I did, I was a substitute rural letter carrier in northwestern Iowa.

Q. Before that, had you worked for anyone in the clothing industry?

A. Yes, I have worked there. I began working about 26 years ago. Well, no, 27 years ago; I worked for Smith McCord in Kansas City; for the Donnelly Company; John S. Brittain Company in St. Joseph; The Richardon Company, the Tootle-Campbell.

Q. Mrs. Weigand, tell the Court how working conditions in the Donnelly Plant compare with working conditions generally in these other places in which you have been employed.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Working conditons in the Donnelly Garment Company are far superior to any conditions I have ever known anywhere that I have ever worked.

p. 1173 Q. Do you know about what you could earn in other Garment factories, from your past experience, over a number of years?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes.

Q. Just tell the Court what difference it makes to you personally to work for the Donnelly Company rather than other garment companies?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5451] p. 1173 A. Well—other companies, the work has been so uncertain. My wages—I never have received a guarantee at any of these places. Even though I did at different times belong to a union, I was never given a guarantee. I never could average over $13.00 a week, the year round. I never have been able to.

Since being with the Donnelly Garment Company, I have averaged $22.50. My guarantee is $22.50, and I have received from that up to, I believe $39.78. And the difference has provided all of the necessary things. It's provided me a home with a higher standard of living for my children; made it possible for me, since I have been with the Donnelly Garment Company, it has made it possible for me to regain ground I lost while out of work. The difference in my guarantee with the Donnelly Garment Company and what I would ordinarily receive at $13.00 a week, I believe will pay my entire monthly budget for my home, the note on my home, my coal, my lights, my bus fare, the insurance on my household goods on my home. And I believe I mentioned my coal for the winter; in fact in my interpretation, everything except the clothing and food necessary for my children, my family.

p. 1174 Q. And your past experience leads you to believe, based on that experience, what you would actually get, in fact, if you worked for other garment companies, would have been either $13.00 or less. Is that correct?

Objection—immaterial.

A. My past experience makes me feel very sure of that, that I would receive no more.

Q. What are you receiving at the Donnelly Company?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I am receiving a guarantee for $22.50 for 40 hours' work.

Q. What are you actually making?

Objection—immaterial.

A. When we have plenty of work, where there is given all we can do, I average around $25.00 a week; and overtime gives me at the rate, approximately, at the Donnelly Garment Company, around up as high as $39.78.

Q. Dropping out of consideration any differences in the pay you get at the Donnelly Plant, and that you would get elsewhere, I want you to turn your attention to the matter of membership in unions. Do you know about what you would have to pay if you were a member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes. I am judging—from the statements made in this Court by Velma Dowdy.

Q. Tell the Court what difference it means to you personally to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, rather than the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5452] p. 1175 A. The first year, the difference, of course, is the fees, which is very important to me since I am the sole support of my family—the dues that I would have to pay the International. I would have to pay a difference of $30.00 for the first year. There would be that much difference in what I would pay the International and what I paid the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Tell the Court how you figure out that difference.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, I judged by Velma Dowdy's testimony, and I took from what I actually paid to the Donnelly Garment Company, figured it up for the year; and the difference in that pays my hospitalization for myself.

Q. You said the difference in what I paid the Donnelly Garment Company. Do you mean the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. The Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. All right.

Objection—immaterial.

A. The difference pays the hospitalization for one year for myself and two children; and pays for one year my sick benefit, which I have used two years, needed to use on two different occasions. It pays my death benefit for $1,000.00 for one year. I receive all that protection for that $30.00, I would ordinarily pay the International Union.

Q. Did you ever have sick benefit protection before you were with the Donnelly Company.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Never in my life before.

p. 1176 Q. Did you ever see any spy system at the Donnelly Company's?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Did you ever see any caste system down there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever see any evidence of any pressure put upon employees as to whether they should join any union or stay out of any union?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5453] p. 1176 A. Never been discussed that I ever heard by the company, or anyone concerning the company.

Q. What is your personal preference as to whether you would prefer to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. My preference is that I would rather belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. You have told us, I think, what difference it makes to you financially. Have you any other reason for that preference?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, a woman in my position, there is hardly time in a week, hardly enough evenings in a week to take care of all the needs of the family, after spending your day making a living. I am only required to attend meetings one evening a month, and that is immediately after working hours, very convenient for us. I ordinarily would have to miss one meeting which the International has, for they have two meetings a month. For that meeting I missed, I would have to pay a fine of fifty cents.

And I would never be called on strike. My time is taken all up by my family, and neces-
p. 1177 sarily, it's a big problem, and it requires all of the strength and nervous energy I have; and I have no fear whatever of being called out on strike.

Q. What about your feeling of satisfaction with the methods of one organization as against the methods of another?

A. Well, I am not in the least in sympathy with the International methods.

Q. What have you to say of their methods?

Objection—immaterial.

A. While working at the Caplan plant, I have sat in the window during lunch hour and seen a great number of women attacked, knocked to the ground, to be picked up and put in an ambulance and attended by an intern. I have also seen several women attack a man, seen them rolling and fighting in the street, and I feel that is not right for a woman that is trying to set an example to a family.

Q. Have you ever seen the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union use any such methods?

Objection—immaterial.

A. There would be no such methods permitted.

(Witness excused.)

Mrs. Eleanor Swigart called as a witness on behalf of the interveners, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 1178 Q. State your name. A. Eleanor Swigart.

Q. You are the same person as Eleanor Duett, are you not? A. That is right.

Q. That used to be your name? A. Yes.

Q. Where are you employed, Mrs. Swigart?

A. The Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been with that company?

A. Well, I have been there approximately seven years. I was working at Gernes two years out of that time, however.

Q. I think you better talk louder.
A. I worked at Donnelly's for about seven years, and out of that seven years, I spent about two years at the Gernes Garment Company.
Q. In Kansas City, Missouri? A. Yes.
Q. About what were the dates of your employment at the Gernes Garment Company?
A. Well, I left Gernes the 26th of April, or the 25th of April.
Q. What year?
A. 1937. I was there two years prior to that date.
p. 1179 Q. During your time at the Gernes Garment Company, were there any labor troubles in connection with that company?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, there was.
Q. Did you have any personal experience with strikers or people who were endeavoring to disrupt the freedom of walking to and from employment of the employees there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I did.
Q. Tell the Court what it was.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union called a strike at the Missouri, Gernes and Gordon companies, and they were all situated in the same building at 26th and Grand. The fighting was so terrific, girls were knocked down, hats torn off heads, purses snatched. It was so bad, I got in the habit of waiting on the corner of 27th and Walnut before going in. If I waited up there until about nine o'clock, by that time a number of pickets would have been taken away in patrol wagons. One particular morning, I was up there, and it was around, I would say, quarter of nine, and three girls [fol. 5455] approached me from the rear. I didn't know they were there. I heard someone say: "Get that girl. She is from Donnelly's". About that time, someone grabbed me, whirled me around, hit me in the face, and told me "to get the hell home, and stay there, if I knew what was good for me". I was kicked. I was hurt pretty badly. I would have liked to hit back, but I didn't. The girls were not allowed to hit pickets back. If they did, they were taken to the patrol wagon in the streets, the same as the pickets were.

p. 1180 The reason we used the rear entrance, the pickets had taken their position in the lobby on Grand Avenue. They were in there two or three days and nights, took cots in there, and stayed there all the time. If they went out, they had to stay out, so they stayed in. They didn't have access to rest rooms, so they were finally asked to move out by the Board of Health.

If the girls were successful in getting in, they had to worry about how they were going to get out. It was really pathetic to see girls go all to pieces after they had gained entrance. Some would become completely hysterical and have to be put to bed, and others were so nervous, some weren't even allowed to come to work.

About the time for us to leave, there was usually a large group of pickets and sympathizers standing outside. It was always said they were going to have enforcements from the Chevrolet plant, and other plants, and there would be a large group of men out there. My knees used to buckle when I started home, because I was afraid I might collapse on the street when I was going home. I was hurt pretty bad, it was my leg that was hurt pretty bad when I was kicked. I had to go to a doctor, and after

I had seen him, to take a cab to the factory. I couldn't find a taxicab driver that would take me to 26th and Grant. The pickets had been sprinkling tacks on the street, breaking taxicab windows, so that they were not al-
p. 1181 lowed to take us up there.

Q. How long did that injury bother you that you spoke of?

Objection—immaterial.

A. It bothered me for about six weeks, the bruise was infected on the inside. Mr. Gernes asked all of us girls to be sure and come to work every morning, that it was really necessary if we intended to win this battle with the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union. The girls would come in. They were risking their lives, I would say, because they could have had permanent injuries. After they had all had clothes torn off them, been hit and hurt, some had hair pulled out in pieces as large as a nickel; after they had gone all through that, and stood by their employer, he signed with the International without even consulting the girls.

We came in one morning and were allowed to come in the front entrance. One of the pickets said to me, "You might just as well have signed up with me anyway, because we'll be working with you soon." And I went upstairs and cried because I didn't want to belong to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Q. How about the employees as a whole, did they want to join the International?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

[fol. 5456] A. No. Women don't usually work unless they feel they need the money, and if they don't have another job in view, naturally p.1182 they have to take those things, but I don't believe the majority of the girls wanted to join the union.

Q. Do you now belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you belong to that union of your own free will and accord or in some way was any pressure exerted on you to join?

Objection—immaterial.

A. It was not. I was very eager to join the union.

Q. Tell the Court what Mr. Gernes said to his employees when he finally signed up?

Objection—immaterial.

A. He stated he had signed up with them, but we didn't have to picket, we were exempt from that; we didn't have to meet with the same group of girls; we could have our own private meetings—in fact, it was a special charter for the Gernes Garment Company.

Q. What had he said before that about whether he was going to sign with the International?

Objection—immaterial.

A. He said he would not sign with them if the girls would stick by him and come to work every morning. He said possibly we could beat them and we wouldn't have to sign.

Q. In other words he said, if you will stick by us, I will stick by you.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, he did. If any of us were hurt, if we were injured, we got medical attention.

Q. Did you see any movement among the employees who wanted to join the International before Mr. Gernes signed up?

Objection—immaterial.

p. 1183 A. No, I really didn't.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, it was against the wishes of substantially, or actually, all of them?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, it was, because when I was going back over to Donnelly's, there was girl after girl that asked me to please mention what they did in the way of working on machines, and so on, to see if they could be used at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Is it a fact that practically all the girls there would like to get in the Donnelly plant if they could?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I believe they would because they could make much more money, and it is a much cleaner plant.

[fol. 5457] Exhibit (d)

Mrs. Maud Fisher called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 1184 Q. State your name, Miss Fisher?

Q. Do you remember any conversation that you had with Thelma Owen in the spring of 1937, about labor disputes and the Donnelly plant?

A. Along about the first of April, as well as I can remember.
p. 1185 Q. Of what year?
A. 1937.
Q. Was it or was it not during the time that the trouble was going on at the Gernes plant?
A. During that time.
Q. Who was with you? Were any of them in the company?
[fol. 5458] A. Velma Woolley.
Q. Where did that conversation take place?
A. 13th and Troost.
Q. Kansas City, Missouri? A. Yes.
Q. Tell the Court what Thelma Owen said in that conversation:

Objection—immaterial.

A. She said: "We have always been good friends. I am going to give you a little tip. You better not drive your car Monday morning, because we will all be there, Fords, Cheviies, all be there, and we are going to upset all the cars, cut the tires off, and beat you up. And we are going to give Mrs. Donnelly one big 'go-around'. We are going to take Mrs. Wherry for a one way ride, and also Ella May Hyde. Mrs. White, she is my meat alone. I am taking her alone. You get good salaries, but you will have to sign up with us anyway. We are going to sign up the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Did she say whether she and employees of The Donnelly Company at the time said they wanted to join the International, whether the situation was different in other plants?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Better. She agreed it was.

p. 1186 Q. Who were these people she mentioned? She mentioned Mrs. Donnelly?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes.

Q. Who is that? A. Our employer.

Q. Mrs. Reed? A. Yes, Mrs. Reed.

Q. Who is Mrs. White?

Objection—immaterial.

A. She was our instructor.

Objection—immaterial.

A. She is over the employment office.

Q. At the Donnelly Garment Company?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes.

Q. Did she say anything else in that conversation or have you repeated substantially the entire conversation?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, I believe that is the best of my knowledge.

Q. Did she say whether wages and working conditions were all right at the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5459] A. Yes, she said they were.

Q. Mrs. Fisher, you have worked down at that plant a good many years?

A. I was taught to sew there, and I have never worked nowhere else.

Q. What about health conditions down there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. 100%.

Q. Did you ever have a breakdown from working there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, I never have had. I have worked there in such ease and enjoyment. I didn't realize like our troubles were outside. It told the girls last night, I just really relaxed and enjoyed myself.

p. 1187 I never dreamed of any trouble.

Q. Did you ever see any signs there of nervous breakdowns from overwork?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I didn't, no. We have one round of pleasure with our work all the time.

Q. Did you ever see any caste system down there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see any speed up system?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you or did you not join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will and accord?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I did.

Q. Do you know of anyone or any instance in which anyone was put under any pressure about that union in any way?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir.

[fol. 5460] Exhibit (e).

MRS. VELMA WOOLLEY called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 1188 Q. Will you state your name please, so the Court and everybody can hear it?
A. Velma Wooley.
Q. Miss or Mrs. A. Mrs.
Q. Where are you employed, Mrs. Wooley?
A. At the Bonnelly Garment Company.
Q. How long have you been employed there?
A. About ten years.
Q. In what capacity?
A. I am an operator.
Q. How long have you been an operator?
A. Ever since I have been there.
Q. Do you know Thelma Owens?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Do you know whether she is a member of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union? A. She is.
Q How do you know that?
A. She told us she was.
Q. Did you ever know of her doing any work for that union, picketing? A. Yes.
Q. Did you have any conversation with her in the spring of 1937? A. Yes.

p. 1189 Q. About what was the date of that conversation?
A. Well, it was in April. I am not positive of the date.
Q. And where was it?
A. 13th and Troost.
Q. Was it or was it not during the time that violence was occurring down around the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri Garment factories?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5461] A. No, sir.

Q. Who was with you at the time of that conversation? A. Miss Fisher.
Q. The lady who has just finished testifying?
A. Yes.
Q. Was anyone else present except Mrs. Fisher, Thelma Owen, and yourself?
A. No.
Q. Will you tell the Court what Thelma Owen said in that conversation in connection with the Donnelly plant or in reference to the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, Miss Owen said she was going to give us a little warning. The following morning they were going to be down at the Donnelly plant, they were going to treat us worse than they had treated the other garment companies. She stated the busses would not do us any good. She also stated the busses would not do us any good. They would be upset. There would not be a car left on the the lot, that the tires would be cut. And she also stated that they were going to take Mrs. Donnelly, Mrs. Reed, "for a ride"; she said they were going to take Miss Hyde, Ella May Hyde—and Mrs. Wherry for a one way ride. And she said Miss White was her meat, she wanted to have her all to herself. That is about all the conversation.

p. 1190

Q. Who is Mrs. White?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Miss White is an instructor at the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. Who is Ella May Hyde?

Objection—immaterial.

A. She is in the employment office at the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. And was at that time?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes.
Q. Who is Mrs. Wherry?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Mrs. Wherry, at that time, was employed at the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. Have you repeated substantially all of that conversation you can remember?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5462] A. Yes.
Q. Did you hear any statements or rumors about boycotting the Donnelly product, what they manufacture?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes. Just talk is all.
Q. What was said?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, I really just overheard conversations is all. I don't remember them well enough to repeat them.
Q. Would you remember who said them?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, I wouldn't. It was just general conversation I heard.
Q. What was the general attitude of mind of the employees at the Donnelly plant during the disturbances down at the Gordon and Gernes plants?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, they really were frightened and didn't
p. 1191 want that to happen to us.
Q. Did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
A. Yes.
Q. What was your reason for joining?
A. Well, to afford ourselves protection from an outside union.
Q. What outside union?

A. The International Ladies Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Was that your actual genuine choice for yourself, or were you influenced by some pressure from somewhere to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. It was my own choice. There was no pressure whatsoever from anyone.

Q. Did you ever hear of any speed up system at the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Any caste system?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5463] A. No.

Q. Has your health ever broken down from working down there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, it hasn't.

Q. Have you ever seen any of the girls fainting and breaking down from being driven by hard and rapid work down there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, I haven't.

Q. What is the general condition as to working conditions in that plant?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Very good.

[fol. 5464] Exhibit (f)

WALTER HIGGINS called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 1192 Q. State your name, please.
A. Walter Higgins.
Q. Where are you employed?
A. Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. Kansas City, Missouri? A. That is right.
Q. In what connection? A. Mechanic.
Q. How long have you been employed there?
A. Well, a little over five years now.
Q. Always as a mechanic, during that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where were you employed before you were employed at the Donnelly plant?
A. Well, I was employed for a good many years by the McKee Manufacturing Company, Fort Scott.
Q. Fort Scott, Kansas? A. Yes.
Q. In what capacity there?
A. Just as I left there, I had been superintendent of the factory for about fifteen years. Previous to that time, I was a mechanic.
Q. Can you compare working conditions in that factory with working conditions in the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Please do so.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Conditions in the McKee factory were pretty good, I thought; but conditions in the Donnelly factory are much better than that.
p. 1193 Q. Did you see any incident connected with the picketing around the Gordon and Gernes plants in the spring of 1937?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell the Court what it was.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, I live south of the factory, and it is necessary for me to ride the street car within a block of the Gordon, Garnes factories. From the street car every morning, I could see a crowd of people around the entrance there, and two or three police cars. But as that line was a block away from the street car line entrance, I couldn't see exactly what was going on. But every day there was some disturbance going on or the police wouldn't be there.

Q. Did you ever get over closer to the door than that?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5465] A. No, sir.

Q. Tell the Court about how long they were used.

A. I don't remember the exact date the bus service was put in operation at Donnelly's, but it was about the middle of March during the time this disturbance was going on. I think that continued up until May some time. I don't remember just what the dates were.

Q. For what purpose were they used?

Objection—immaterial.

A. These busses were picking up our employees
p. 1194 at outlying points, and bringing them into the factory and unloading at the rear entrance. That was to protect our employees from any attack, about which we were getting threats daily.

Q. Did a great number of employees use them or only very few?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir. They were nearly always loaded when they came in.

Q. What was the general reaction among the employees out there at the plant to the news of these difficulties down at the Gernes-Gordon Plants?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Naturally, they were very much disturbed, and greatly excited over those affairs; and as we had been getting reports that that was going to be done to us only in a much greater manner, we began to feel that we should have some protection of some kind. So we began to cast around to see what could be done, and I don't know who suggested the injunction, but the Gernes people were getting an injunction or had gotten an injunction. Naturally, that was brought up, so a number of people from our organization called on an attorney to see if we couldn't get an injunction. And that was done.

Q. Do you know whether any particular choice was made of people who would go to see the attorneys, or what just happened?

p. 1195 A. No, I don't think so. Objection and motion to strike the following: "As I say, they were all excited and grasping at any suggestion that might be made for self-protection,"—not responsive. (As I say, they were all excited and grasping at any suggestion that might be made for self-protection,) and the ones who were more popular naturally would be the ones that would take the responsibility. So I had not been there very long, but these others who had been there a number of years and were acquainted with more people, carried that suggestion.

Q. What else did the Donnelly employees do, if anything, as a result of the stories they were hearing?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, as I say, they consulted this attorney, or some attorneys about an injunction for their protection, and along about that time, the Wagner Act was being talked of, and along in April, the Supreme Court declared the Wagner Act valid. Then, these attorneys [fol. 5466] that our people had talked to, talked to us in regard to the Wagner Act, and thought it would be a good idea if we organized our own union under the Wagner Act, and they thought that would put us in a much stronger position, as we would be under the Federal law then.

Q. Did you see any item in the paper in reference to Sylvia Hull, shortly before or about that time?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, about that time.

Q. What was the substance of that article?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. As I remember it, that Sylvia Hull was elected or appointed by somebody or some organization to represent the Donnelly Garment
p. 1196 Company at a convention to be held at Atlantic City. We didn't have any organization. I couldn't figure out just who elected her, and I don't think anybody else did.

Q. Did you ever hear of any meeting of any group of employees of the Donnelly plant, where they elected Sylvia Hull?

A. Never did.

Q. What effect did that news item have on the employees?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. That just set it all off.

Q. Why?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Everybody was up in arms about it, wanted to know who was giving orders for our representation by the International. Naturally, that brought everything to a head, that we must do something to protect ourselves in these jobs that we had.

Q. Why protect these jobs? Did you have any reason to believe you might lose your jobs?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. No, not necessarily that, but the jobs at the Donnelly Garment Company are jobs everybody tries to get, due to the wages and working conditions and congeniality of the people you work with there. No, we didn't want to lose those jobs, and we didn't want those conditions changed by any outside force.

Q. Had you or had you not heard any threats of boycotting the Donnelly product?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, I had heard that talked some.

Q. Would or would not a successful boycott of the Donnelly product, in your mind, have any
p. 1197 effect on the employees holding their jobs?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

[fol. 5467] A. Absolutely.

Q. What explanation have you of that?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I think it would boycott our product to such an extent, it would cut down our distribution, cut down our production, and some of us or all of us would be out of work.

Q. Do you know of any group of employees going to the police department about that time?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I have heard that.

Q. You were not a member of that group?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I don't know who they were. I knew it was done.

Q. Do you remember the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the date of that?
A. April 27, 1937.
Q. Where was it held?
A. On the second floor of the Corrigan Building, 1828 Walnut.
Q. The same building the Donnelly Garment Company uses?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did or did not the Donnelly Garment Company at that time lease the room in which the organization meeting was held?
A. No, sir.
Q. What day did that meeting occur?
A. That was some time after 4:30; after our working hours anyway. Of course, our working hours are staggered a few minutes at a time.

p. 1198 Q. What?

[fol. 5468] p. 1198 A. Staggered. Some get off at four o'clock. In ten minutes, another bunch comes off. At 4:30, they are all off.

Q. Tell the Court the actual incidents that happened at that meeting.
A. We were notified this meeting was to be held. Naturally, excitement was running pretty high. We were going to be there and see if something could be done. We all went down to this meeting. Miss Todd presided. She talked a few minutes to us, told us one of those attorneys was there and would talk to us. Then she introduced Mr. Tyler. Mr. Tyler talked to us some, I believe he mentioned the injunction. Then he brought up the subject of the Wagner Act which had been declared valid, that is the time he said he thought we could organize our own union, under the Wagner Act, and be in a much stronger position. So, following that talk, the union was organized in an orderly manner, as it should be, and that, I would say, was the birth of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

1336pp

Q. What else happened at that meeting? Were any votes taken?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. What were they?

A. As I say, it was organized in an orderly manner. The first vote taken was should we have a union or should we not have a union. The
p. 1199 vote was unanimous that we should have a union. Then we voted on the name of it. That was unanimous.

Q. Do you remember who suggested that name?

A. No, sir, I don't Mr. Tyler. I don't know whether it was Mr. Tyler or whether it was suggested from the floor. It might have been.

Q. Were any cards passed around?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were those cards about?

A. The cards stated that "I desire to become a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union"—something to that effect, and there was a line at the bottom where you could sign. When the cards were passed out, we were told not to sign them right at that time; Mr. Tyler was going to read some by-laws on the subject of a union, and then we could make up our minds whether we desired to become a member of this union, or whether we did not want to. That was left up to our own free will.

[fol. 5469] Q. Were the cards collected?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom?

A. A number of the boys from the cutting room.

Q. Was the result announced.

A. I think it was in the next two or three days, I have forgotten how much time elapsed.

Q. What was that result?

A. I would say it was unanimous. There was 1,300 and some signatures there.

Q. How many employees were there at the plant at that time?

A. About 1335 or 1340.

p. 1200 Q. What about the balance who did not sign cards at the first meeting?

A. Some of them were out sick. Some of the men were out sick, and some of the men were on the road, or some other reason. In an organization that size, somebody might be out.

Q. Was Mrs. Reed present at that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has Mrs. Reed ever been present at a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union to your knowledge?

A. No, sir.

Q. She probably addressed the employees at other times, is that correct?

A. Oh, yes. She has talked to us.

Q. But you never saw her at any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

A. No, sir, that is right.

[fol. 5470] Q. Was anybody there with the right to employ or discharge employees, so far as you saw? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear of any effort to force people to join that union? A. No, sir.

Q. Was the question of whether they wanted to form a union or not left up to their judgment, was that the understanding you got?

A. I think that was clear to everybody, Mr. Tyler.

Q. Do you remember who were elected as a committee of employees to represent the members of the union at that meeting?

p. 1201 A. Well, I could probably name some of them. There was Hobart Atherton, Rose Todd, Miss Casey, Marjorie Green. I believe that is about all I can remember now.

Q. You were not elected were you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever held an office in connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I do now.

Q. What office?

A. I represent the mechanical department.

Q. On what?

A. Just as—we call them a "chairman".

Q. You are a member of the Executive Committee as representing that department?
A. That is right.
Q. And when did you take that office?
A. Last May, I believe.

[fol. 5471] Q. Have you or have you not endeavored to exercise your best judgment in endeavoring to secure for the employees such benefits as you feel they are entitled to in that office?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Tell the Court what you have done in connection with the membership on that board?
A. We have our executive committee meetings twice a month on the first and third Tuesday. At those meetings which are not so very long, sometimes, anything that comes up in the factory that should be attended to, that should be straightened out by our union is taken up, talked about, and taken through those chan-

p. 1202 nels; and party that is supposed to be talked to is taken up with, and those differences are straightened out.

We also have parties and dances. Those things come up at those meetings, just as a regular executive meeting, the business of any organization body.

Q. Have you paid any attention to the financial condition of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What are their sources of income?
A. Dues, 25c a month per person; and early in the organization we had an assessment, and we had one the other day; we give parties and dances, carnivals, such things as that. Anything that can be made a profit on legally or in the right manner.
Q. Did you ever get as much as a dime from any of your employers by way of contribution?
A. No, sir.
Q. What are the principal items of expense?

A. The officers—I mean by that, the chairman and secretary and treasurer get a nominal sum. We pay our hall rent. We have to hire chairs to take care of our meetings. We pay that, and expenses of these parties and dances and such items as that.

Q. Legal expenses?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Printing expense? A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5472] Q. Rent for the room?

A. Yes, sir.

p. 1203 Q. Who fixes the piece prices in the Donnelly plant?

A. We have a department where Mrs. Nichols and Mrs. Spallito, or is it Miss Spallito, I don't know which is correct, go over these garments and fix the piece work rates. Then they are handed to Miss Todd, who is familiar with that kind of work from past ex-

p. 1204 perience and she passes on it. If there is any difference afterwards, it is taken up with our committee, and the affair straightened out, and everybody is satisfied.

Q. Has your committee given actual consideration to that situation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would you say as to whether the rights of the employees were being protected by these people who handle this work?

A. I think all parties were satisfied with the result.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of an affidavit circulated at the plant during the last two weeks? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you sign it? A. I did.

Q. Did you sign it as an expression of your actual belief, or did you sign it under any pressure of any kind?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No. It was my own free will, to sign or not to sign, which I chose to do.

Q. Did you see anybody put under any pressure or inducement to sign it?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir.

Q. State to the Court what your experience indicates as to the general conditions at the Donnelly plant as to health?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5473] A. I don't believe the conditions at the Donnelly plant as to health could be improved. We have good light. The building is situated so we have good air. That is, there are no large buildings around us. We have maid and
p. 1205 porter service continuously. That is, they take care of the wash rooms, keep the floors clean. We have, of course, medical service right there. Two nurses are on duty all the time with the necessary hospital equipment. So I don't believe that they could be improved upon.

Q. How about hot water?

Objection—immaterial.

A. At all times.

Q. What kind of mechanical equipment do you have with which to work down there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. We have sewing machines of various types, on various operations—I mean the operations—as most people know a sewing machine is a machine with one needle, sewing a straight row of stitching. We have special machines also that do special kind of work.

Q. What is the condition of the equipment you have to work with as to whether it is good or bad?

Objection—immaterial.

A. It must be in first class shape at all times.

Q. What kind of material is furnished you with which to work?

Objection—immaterial.

A. The best we can buy.

Q. Did you ever hear of anybody being put under any pressure or inducement from the employers, or anybody representing the employers, to take any part in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever know of anybody being discriminated against down there by reason of any union connection?

A. No, sir.

p. 1206 Q. If Mrs. Reed or somebody representing the employer were to try to bring any pressure on you to dissolve that union, what would your response be?

Objection—immaterial.

A. In all due respect to Mrs. Reed, I couldn't do that. I have an obligation with my fellow workers that I have to observe too.

Q. Did you read anything in the papers about labor trouble at those plants?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did you read?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, just the fight they were having over there; there were pictures and pieces in the [fol. 5475] paper about the fight they were having over there, and the patrol wagon, and such things as that going on.

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Nothing was agreed on? A. No.

Q. You remember that she said that?
A. She did.
Q. How long before the union was organized did this meeting take place?
A. About six weeks.
Q. Now, you say that the meeting came to no agreement as to what could be or should be done?
A. No, I don't think so.

Objection—immaterial.

A. I heard talk of it; I didn't know anything about it myself.
Q. Did you see anything in the paper about it?
A. Yes, I read the piece in the paper.
Q. Did you learn anything from the newspapers about Mr. Perlstein or in any other way?
A. Just this piece in the paper that he was coming to Kansas City to establish his office and organize the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. Did you see that in the paper?
A. I did.
p. 1210 Q. Do you know about what time that appeared in the paper?
A. Well, that was along the last of April or the first of March; I mean the last of March or the first of April. I beg your pardon.

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, a whole lot.
Q. Do you recall whether they held a meeting sometime after that?
A. Yes, there was a meeting.
Q. How long after that?

Q. How many employees would you say were there, roughly?
A. Well, I should say we were all there.
Q. And did you see anybody representing the management of either the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Sales Company there? A. No, I did not.
p. 1211 Q. You did not see Mrs. Reed there?
A. No, sir.
Q. Tell us now in your own words what happened at that meeting?
[fol. 5478] A. Well, a group or committee had been to the lawyers and had the lawyer come talk to us that day. Miss Todd, she was in charge of the meeting and she got up and talked and explained to us that she had the lawyer there to tell us what we could do. The lawyer got up and talked to us and explained to us the Wagner Act which had become a law, and told us we could have our own employees' union under the Wagner Act, and then we voted that we have a union. Everybody voted yes. There was no "Nos". And then there was a nominating committee appointed by Miss Todd and instructed to select a chairman for each division in the factory, and they were voted and elected.
Q. What was said, if anything, with reference to a name for your organization?
A. I don't know who suggested the name but it was suggested and voted.
Q. And how was the vote on that, if you recall?

A. Everybody voted yes.

Q. Do you remember whether they were any cards passed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall what was on the cards?

A. Something to the effect that we agreed to become charter members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and abide by its by-laws.

Q. Do you recall anything that was said in connection with handing out those cards?

A. Well, we were instructed to take our time and make up our minds, to make up our minds as we pleased on that; to wait until the next day and take them home and talk to anyone we wanted to talk to about it, and take our time, to make up our minds before we signed that card.

Q. Was anything said one way or the other to the effect that you were free to join or not join, just as you saw fit?

A. Sir, sir, there was.

Q. Just tell what was said.

[fol. 5479] p. 1212 A. Just said there was no one forcing us to do this; it was of our own free will, if we wanted to sign that cards we could do that of our own free will.

Q. Did Mr. Tyler say anything about whether or not you were at liberty to do as you pleased about forming a union or joining it?

A. He did; he said he was there to explain the law to us.

Q. Did he make it clear that you were at liberty to do just as you pleased on his recommendation? A. Yes.

Q. Were you named as a member of the executive committee? A. No, I was not.

Q. Have you ever been a member of the executive committee? A. No.

Q. What is your minimum wage, for the employees in your group?

Objection—immaterial.

A. When I work on the floor I receive $30.00 a week.

Q. Is that the minimum or is that the average earnings that you make.

Objection—immaterial.

A. That is my wage.

Q. You sometimes do time work, do you?

Objection—immaterial.

p. 1213 A. Well, that is time work; that is my time work wage.

Q. You sometimes work as an operator, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what wage group are you in? What is the minimum wage for operators?

A. $25.60.

Q. Do you average more than that?

A. Very often, yes.

[fol. 5480] Q. Did you talk with anybody who was interested in the picketing at the other plants?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you talk with any member of the ILGWU, that is the International Union, at any time?

A. Yes, they called me.

Objection and motion to strike—no identification as to person or time.

Q. Do you remember whether anything was ever said to you about a closed shop at the Donnelly plant by anybody in the International Union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes.

Q. Just tell what was said.

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, they called on me and told me that they were going to organize Donnelly's and everyone would have to belong to the union, the International Union.

Objection and motion to strike—no identification as to person or time.

Q. What does ur husband do, Mrs. Wachtel?

Objection—immaterial.

A. At that time my husband was running a store, a grocery.

Q. What kind of a store?

Objection—immaterial.

A. A grocery store.

Q. Whereabouts?

Objection—immaterial.

A. In Fairmount.

Q. That is a suburban town to Kansas City, Missouri?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was anything said about your husband's business in any way?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent and no identification as to person or time.

p. 1214 A. Yes, they asked me if we did not have quite a few Ford and Chevrolet employees trading with us in our store, and I told we did and they wanted to know if I knew that they could boycott our store through those employees.

Objection and motion to strike—no identification as to person or time.

[fol. 5481] Q. What was the object in telling you those things, as you understood it?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent and no identification as to person or time.

A. Well, I presume they wanted to scare me.

Q. Scare you into doing what?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent and no identification as to person or time.

A. Joining their union.
Q. Now, Mrs. Wachtel, how long have you been in the Donnelly plant?
A. Eleven years.
Q. In all the time you have been there do you know of or have you heard of any act or word by Mrs. Reed or anybody in managerial position down there tending to discourage anybody from joining a union or encouraging them to join any union? A. No, sir.
Q. You never heard of any pressure being put upon anybody with respect to union matters, have you? A. No, sir.
Q. Do you ever know of anybody being discriminated against because they were a member of a union? A. Never.
Q. You joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, did you? A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. And you did that freely and voluntarily?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Freely and voluntarily.
Q. Have you had any occasion to regret that act?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. I have not.
Q. Do you prefer that union over the International?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Well, yes; I do.
Q. What reasons have you?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Well, I can make more money with Donnelly's than I can with the International shop; the [fol. 5482] conditions are good and we are satisfied,—I am satisfied.
Q. I don't recall, did you say whether you had worked at any other shop?
A. No, I have not.

Q. What is the general condition as to the health of the women that work at the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I should say good.
Q. Are they happy?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. They appear to be, yes sir.
Q. Do you know of any of them having nervous breakdowns?
A. I do not.

Objection—immaterial.

Q. Have you ever heard of any woman there having a nervous breakdown?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I never did.
Q. Do you know what the speed up system is?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes.
Q. Is there any speedup system at the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial.

A. There is not.
Q. Have you ever heard of a caste system down there?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Never.

[fol. 5483] Exhibit (h)

ANNA REECE, called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Patten:
Q. Your name is Anna Reece? A. Yes.
Q. You live where?

A. 2616 East 9th, Kansas City, Missouri.
Q. And what do you do?
A. I am an operator at the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. How long have you been there?
A. Almost 12 years.
Q. Have you ever worked at any other garment plant?
A. No, I never worked at any other garment place.
Q. Do you recall the labor trouble involving garment plants in Kansas City in March, 1937?

p. 1225 Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, I do.
Q. Did you see any of it yourself?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. No, I was never over there.
Q. What all did you learn about it?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, just through newspaper items and from the talk around the plant that there was fights, and riding the buses with girls who were in the picket line over there, and hearing them talk.

[fol. 5484] p. 1225 Q. What, for instance, did you hear said?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, there was one little girl that was working over there that I had known before she went over there to work, and she was forced to go in the picket line, I knew, against her own will. She told me that she was frightened to death but she was getting $1.00 a day for doing that and she had to do it, she had two little children and she had no way to get anything else to do.

Objection and motion to strike—no identification of person or time.

Q. She was actually in the picket line?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did you hear that anything had been said with reference to the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Did you hear any threats or talk among the workers at the Donnelly plant?

A. Yes, that was common talk. No one ever threatened me, Objection and motion to strike the following: "but we went down there each morning expecting to be molested,"—not responsive. (but we went down there each morning expecting to be molested.)

Q. Did you know the name of the organization that was sponsoring or conducting these strikes of these other plants?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, the International.

Q. Do you know the rest of the name?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

p. 1226 A. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Did you read the papers at that time?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you learn the name of any man in authority in that union there from reading the papers?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Mr. Perlstein.

Q. What did you see in the papers about Mr. Perlstein?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, along in the early part of the year, that was about the first, when we first became uneasy, we saw that he had to come to Kansas City and set up an office I believe here with

[fol. 5485] p. 1226 the idea that he was going to organize the Donnelly Garment Company, and later after he had them organized he was going to call a strike.

Q. What effect did the newspaper items and the talk about what was happening at the other plants have upon the other employes?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Naturally, it upset them greatly; nothing else was talked about morning, noon and night, and even when we were trying to work it kept the girls very uneasy.

Q. Was there any spirit of fear?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I was afraid; I don't know whether anyone else was. Yes, we were afraid of being molested.

Q. Did you hear any talk about whether or not you could protect yourselves?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I don't think I know just what you mean.

Q. Did you hear any talk as to whether or not the Donnelly Garment workers could attempt to protect themselves?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, we were asked not to fight; they tried to protect us by getting the buses. Is that what you mean?

p. 1227 Q. No, I mean among the employes, did they talk about what they might do to protect themselves from similar trouble?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, we knew that some people in the factory had gone to interview the police to see whether or not we could get protection. In fact I went to see some of them myself. I believe it was along in April we went down and interviewed the Chief of Police and told him just how we were trying to get back and forth to work and get in and out of our place of business, and I will admit we were rather skeptical whether we would get some protection or not, although he did promise us that he would give us protection.

Objection, motion to strike—not responsive.

Q. Did you know of any number of people in the Donnelly plant who were in sympathy with the cause of the International.

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You did not hear of any?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether any meetings were held among the Donnelly employes?

[fol. 5486] p. 1227 A. Yes, there were meetings held; I cannot remember just exactly where, but I think probably around the middle of March I think is the first meeting that we had.

Q. And what was discussed at that meeting?

A. Protection was the big idea among all the employes, how we were going to be able to go back and forth to work, like we had always done, and also an injunction, I think; there was some talk of an injunction I think, but there was really nothing done at the meeting.

p. 1228 It was an open meeting of employes and employes were all asked to talk and express there views about what they thought they would like to have done and what could be done, but as I remember there was nothing definite done at that meeting.

Q. Was there any leadership from that meeting, leadership of the employes that you know of?

A. No.

Q. Did anybody act as a leader at that meeting?

A. Miss Todd was chairman of the meeting, yes.

Q. Did she tell you anything she was going to do?

A. Well, I don't remember exactly at that meeting that she did, but I do know that she with some other people had gone down to interview some law firm; I didn't know just who.

Q. Did you read that Sylvia Hull news item in the newspaper?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What effect did that have with respect to the excitement in the plant?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. It sort of came out of a clear sky, we read it in the paper one morning and I think everyone was rather as I was, they didn't even suspect such a thing.

Q. Was there another meeting held either before or after that time.

A. Yes, there was another meeting the 27th of April when we organized our union.

Q. That was the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

[fol. 5487] p. 1228 A. Yes, it was.

Q. Now, tell us briefly what you remember of that meeting.

A. Well, I remember that Miss Todd was in charge of the meeting and that Mr. Tyler, p. 1229 who was a member of the firm that had been engaged was there, and he explained the Wagner Act to us and told us that now we could go ahead and form our employes' union which would be probably a safe thing if we cared to do it, but it was left entirely up to the employes to do as they chose and after him explaining that Miss Todd outlined a form so we could have our representatives for the union. I think she appointed five people who left the room and were to bring back the names of nine people who were to act as group chairmen to represent the whole factory after our union was formed and while they were out Mr. Tyler read a set of by-laws which had been drawn up for the approval, if the union was formed.

Q. Did you join the union? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Are you still a member? A. I am.

Q. Would you like to join any other union?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. I certainly would not.

Q. Did you hear any talk among the employes of the possibility that the Donnelly products might be boycotted by the International?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, I heard that (and it disturbed the people greatly because we knew that if that was done it could hurt our production and naturally that is what we look forward to, the more production we have the more work we have or better work we have, and we were very anxious that that not take place, because it was bound to hurt production.)

Objection and motion to strike—not responsive.

Q. Did you ever hear or know of anything or anyone in authority at the Donnelly plant
p. 1230 ever saying or doing anything that would indicate that they objected to labor unions?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear of anybody being discriminated against because they were a member of a labor union?

A. No, I did not.

Q. What are the working conditions at the plant [fol. 5488] with respect to the comfort of the women?

p. 1230 Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, I think that they could not be better. We have a clean, sanitary place to work; we have good wash rooms, we have maid service, janitor service, two registered nurses in charge, we have lighting and ventilation, and the chairs,—we have adjustable chairs to sit on at our machines; we have Venetian blinds at the windows.

Q. Plenty of air at all times?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Plenty of air; we have fans in the summer, and the heat in the winter is always good, and hot and cold water.

Q. Could you suggest any way it could be improved?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I think I could not. I do not know of anything; it is almost as comfortable as home.

Q. Has it been that way as long as you can recall?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, the 12 years I have been there.

Q. You know nothing about any speed-up system, do you, or do you not?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I do not; our work is brought to us and left in a box by the side of us and we do it as we come to it, and lay it behind us when we are
p. 1231 through and it is taken away; wherever it goes, we pay no attention to that either, and there is no set amount to be there for us at any time.

Mr. Patten: That is all.

(Witness excused).

Q. You are a cutter now for the Donnelly Garment Company. A. I am.
Q. Did you see anything of the labor troubles at other garment plants in the spring of 1937?

Objection—immaterial.

p. 1233 A. I did not.
Q. You were at the Donnelly plant during that time or a portion of it, were you?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I was.
Q. Did you read the newspapers?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I did.
Q. Did you hear the talk among the employes of the Donnelly Company?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Regarding the labor trouble?
Q. Yes.

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, I did.
[fol. 5490] Q. Tell in your own words what you read and what you heard and what the state of mind was among the employees in the plant?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, we read of the strike down there and the picketing and rioting and what protection they might be getting down there and it just naturally threw the whole plant into a frame of mind down there that they just didn't know what to expect from the reports we got and naturally we wanted to get some way, some protection.

Q. Do you know what was done looking towards getting protection?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, they had that meeting down there, although I was not there at the time; I was on my vacation.

Objection, move to strike—not responsive.

Q. What meeting was that?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. When they formed this employes union.

Q. Let us go back before that a little bit. Did you hear any threats made against the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

p. 1234 A. Just hearsay.

Q. Did you read anything in the paper about the Donnelly plant in connection with this labor disturbance?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Well, there was an article that Mr. Perlstein was starting an office here, that he was going to organize them and all that; that is as far as it got.

Q. Did you know anything about a committee going to see Director Higgins?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I remember when they went, although I didn't go.

Q. What was the general opinion among the Donnelly workers with respect to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. They did not want them in there.
Q. You say you were not there at the time of organization meeting?
A. No, I was on my vacation.
Q. Did you see an article in the paper that concerned Sylvia Hull?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

[fol. 5491] p. 1234 A. I did.
Q. About when was that?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. That was in the spring of 1937, along around the middle of April, the 22nd I believe.
Q. Was that before you had gone on your vacation?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Just before, the week before.
Q. What did that article say?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. It stated she had been chosen as a delegate
p. 1235 to the National Convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to represent the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. Did that article have any effect on the employes at the plant?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. It created quite a bit of unrest down there.
Q. Did you see in connection with this excitement any reports that the International might contemplate a boycott of the Donnelly product?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Just hearsay is all; I heard no direct comment on it.

Q. But you heard the employes talking about it, did you?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I did.

Q. Now, Mr. Boyd, did you join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did when I came back from my vacation.

Q. Did you join as your voluntary act?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Of my own accord.

Q. If you had it to do over again would you join any other union.

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. If the plant was that way that would just depend but as far as Donnellys are concerned I would not.

[fol. 5492] Q. Have you any belief or have you heard anything said that would indicate to your mind that Mrs. Reed or any of the Donnelly management is opposed to any labor union?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Have you at all times understood while you were there, if you have thought about it at all, that you were free to join or not join any labor union as you wished?

p. 1236

A. That's right.

Q. You said you had been in a number of other garment plants as a garment cutter over a period of thirty years, I think?

A. Yes.

Q. How does the wage scale in the Donnelly plant compare with other plants in which you have worked?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Considerably higher.

Mr. Patten: That is all, Mr. Boyd.

Mr. Walsh: That is all.

(Witness Excused).

[fol. 5493] Exhibit (j)

EMILY F. MILES, called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners, having been duly sworn, was examined, testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 1257 Q. Will you state your name, please, Miss Miles?

A. Emily Miles.

Q. You are a public stenographer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been in Kansas City for a number of years.

A. That is correct.

Q. Were you the official stenographer on the occasion of the trial of the case of Donnelly Garment Company versus International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in which the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was intervener in the United States District Court on the occasion of the three judge trial?

A. I do not know as you can call it official reporter; Judge Otis, before whom the case originally appeared, appointed me under Rule 30 to act as his official. Then when the matter came up before the three-judge court I continued to act under that appointment.

Q. And did you take a stenographic record of the opening addresses made at that trial?

A. I did.

Q. Do you have that record with you?

A. I have my office copy.

p. 1258 Q. This document is your office copy of the stenographic notes taken at that trial?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will show you page 57 and the first part of page 58 between the small red check marks. Is that a correct copy of a part of the opening address of Mr. Tyler at that trial?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you read that to the Court, Miss Miles?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. This is the paragraph: "If this Court should deem it proper, I am going to make an offer on behalf of this union, if there is any doubt that this union represents the overwhelming, genuine desire of these employees to be left alone by these outside unions and to make their own bargains through their own committee with their employer, we will agree that this Court name a Master today or tomorrow who will go down there and hold an election just as promptly as he can under such circumstances as to make it certain that each employee can express his true opinion without any fear that it will ever be known, or without any fear of any reprisal, and if that election does not overwhelmingly establish their desire to operate their own union, then I know nothing about understanding the people I deal with."

[fol. 5494]

p. 1259

Objection and motion to strike—immaterial and self-serving.

[fol. 5495] Exhibit (k)

Eunice Corum, called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners' having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 1263 Q. State you name please?
A. Eunice Corum.
Q. It is Miss or Mrs.? A. Mrs.
Q. Where are you employed?
A. At the Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. Kansas City, Missouri? A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you been employed there?
A. I have been employed there six years altogether; I was out four years and back to now.

Q. What other garment plants in Kansas City, if any, have you been employed at?

A. At the Gernes Garment Company.

Q. At what time was your employment at the Gernes Garment Company?

A. Well, I have been back here two years which was 1937; from 1933 to 1937.

Q. Were you or were you not employed at the Gernes Garment Company during the spring of 1937 when the labor troubles were going on at that plant?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I was.

Q. Did you have any personal experiences in connection with that labor trouble?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

p. 1264 Q. Tell the Court what they were?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, we went down on the 17th day of March, 1937 as usual to go to work; when we got there we could not get in the front door, there were pickets around there; we stood around in the cold; we tried to get Mr. Gernes down there and he did finally come and some way by persuasion or somehow he got us in the building that day and then when we went out that night there were pickets out there and they let us go on without harming us in any way and the next morning when we came back it was the same thing only worse; it continued that way and we drove cars there, —I drove my own car but I was warned that I better not drive it, that I would not have any tires left and the windows would be broken and I quit driving my car, and Mr.

we would call a taxi, get in there, get up to the building; we had to go in then at the back entrance through the freight elevator and when we would drive up there of course there would be more than one in the car; we would try to go together and the police would get out there and they would open the door and they would just let one come out at a time so we might be able to run through and when they would say "Jump" we would jump and start to run and I have seen the girls
p. 1265 caught and knocked down, their hats lost and their purses thrown over in the street and kicked and go in upstairs and when they would finally get in they were bleeding and just so nervous it would be hours before they could go to work. I got by fairly well for three or four days and then they caught me one morning and when they grabbed me the police grabbed me and in such a way he held my hands down to my body and they got me by the hair of my head and my hat and they beat me over the shoulders and over the head and stepped on my feet and I never did get my hat and the next day I wasn't able to go to work, I was black and blue all over my shoulders, and my head and I was a nervous wreck. I went down the next day and got in. As I say he asked us to come in if we didn't get in before two or three o'clock it would be all right, just so we got in. We got in and he was trying to keep his plant open; it seemed as though he was uptown negotiating with these other folks, signing us up in this union so we went on like that for a day or two and every evening he would be back before going out time and he would say "well, I talked with Mrs. Tobin today and Mrs. Perlstein and I think it is going to be all right, they are not so much interested in us as they are these other two; however, I think we are going to come out all right;" and that went on for a day or two more. On the next day

I went into work and the last morning it was so bad I don't believe any of the girls got
p. 1266 in the building at all; there were girls had big nuts and bolts in their hands—I saw this, I saw one woman knocked completely out on the sidewalk and they had to take her to the hospital and I didn't try to get in any more; I just felt that I would wait until it was over for I did not feel I could take any more of it. I went to the country for a day or two while this was on and when I came back I saw in the paper that he had signed up so when I went back to work they told me that I belonged to the union. Well, I knew that I had not signed up and I did not feel like I belonged to it so I went to Mr. Gernes and I told him that I did not want to belong to it and how had he done that; that I felt like I was capable of joining or staying out of the union if I didn't want to go into it but he joined us in so I told him I was going to quit, gave him notice that I was quitting that Friday. Well, he insisted that I stay. He said "Now, we are going to have more business, times will be better, we are not going to have to do this; we have got some sort of a special session that we won't have to strike, go out on the street and carry on;" but I quit and he said "Well, there is no use of your going to the Donnelly Garment [fol. 5497] Company because I was just up to their office with Mr. Perlstein and the lawyer and we have got"—I think he said $250,000.00 to fight Donnellys "and we are going to organize them." So I quit. I quit there the 17th day of April and came to work at Donnellys
p. 1267 on the 19th day of April.

Q. About how many pickets were there around the plant during the days of the trouble you have spoken of?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Of a morning I could not just judge when they were so thick that we could not get through and then they would get away a little bit around noon time and after and then in the evening they would be reenforced and in the evening there were lots of men there from these other plants.

Q. So you know anything about whether taxi drivers would or would not refuse to carry people down to that place of business?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I stopped two taxi cabs one morning to take me up there; they wanted to know where I was going and I said to 2617 Grand Avenue and they said "We are not going up there."

Q. What is your preference, Mrs. Corum, as to whether you belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, I prefer this union because I—

Q. (Interrupting) What union do you mean by this union?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I mean the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Tell the Court why?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Because of the peace of mind, the satisfaction of knowing that if I have any complaint or anything to make it is taken care of right there in the building; there is no question about whether they raise my wages; they
p. 1268 have raised them twice without asking and I prefer it because if I cannot get a raise in wages I would not have to go out on the street and fight or join up and come uptown and somebody fix my wages for me up here that does not know anything about it. We have women down there that have been operators that fixes our wages and I am perfectly content in that and happy in it.

Q. I think I forgot to ask you whether or not the pickets around the Gernes plant during this disturbance made any statement as to their intentions in regard to the Donnelly plant?

[fol. 5498] A. We heard it as we came in and out all the time; "When we get these smaller places organized then we are all going over to the Donnelly Garment Company and organize them, put pickets around there."

Q. That was the pickets that you heard make those statements?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do I understand that they were made frequently and many times?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. It was the talk, sure, all the talk.

Q. Did these pickets make that statement or statements like it many times?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5499] Exhibit (l)

ALMA MURPHY, called as a witness on behalf of the Interveners, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

p. 1269 Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. My name is Mrs. Alma Murphy.

Q. Where are you employed Mrs. Murphy?

A. A little over three years.

Q. And what capacity are you employed there?

A. Not personally but I know her by sight.
Q. Do you know Miss Palmer?
A. I know her by sight; I saw her once.
Q. Did they ever call on you?

Objection—no identification as to time.

A. Yes, they called on me one evening.
Q. If they said anything about boycotting of the Donnelly plant tell the Court what they said?

Objection—immaterial and no time fixed.

A. They said that if—

The Court: (Interrupting) Who are they?

Q. Do you know whether Fern Sigler and Miss Palmer have any connection with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

p. 1270 A. Well, the evening that Miss Palmer and Mrs. Sigler called I did not let them in the first evening and the second time they called about a week later Fern Sigler and her husband, Mrs. Palmer was not with her the second time, and they told me that if I did not join their union that the Donnelly Garment goods, dresses, would be boycotted.

Objection and motion to strike—not responsive.

Mr. Tyler: Both of those ladies are defendants in this case, if the Court please.

The Court: That is what I wanted to know.

[fol. 5500] Q. What did they say about picketing, if anything?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent and no time fixed.

A. They asked me what I would do when I was pointed out as one of the girls that had boohed Sylvia Hull, what I would do when I walked out of the factory with about 500 pickets around me.
Q. What did they say about the possibility of you losing your job?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent and no time fixed.

A. They said if I didn't join their union I would be out of work and that if I really loved Nelly Don I would join their union.

Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you join it of your own free will?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you prefer for yourself to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Absolutely.

p. 1271 Q. Wait until I finish,—or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. I do.

Q. You prefer to belong to which one?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. I prefer the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Tell the Court why?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Well, we have good working conditions, we have good prices and privileges that they don't have at the other factories.

Mr. Tyler: That is all, thank you.

Mr. Walsh: That is all.

(Witness excused).

[fol. 5501] Exhibit (m)

Q. Did you pass the plant where the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes Garment Companies were located on your way to and from your work?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Several mornings.
Q. And what did you see?

Objection—immaterial.

A. On the Oak Street entrance there were several pickets and there were a line of officers, two lines of officers that formed an aisle leading from the back door of the garment com-
p. 1276 panies there and girls would drive up in cabs or cars and one would run up at a time and try and get through and the girls would start kicking and shoving the officers and they acted like, well, they weren't civilized the way they acted. They would tear on their hair and they would kick them and they would pull them and then on one morning there were about 150 or 200 pickets in front of the Grand Avenue entrance; they had closed up the back entrance and I was standing across the street; (there were about 25 girls there that said that they worked in the company, Gernes and Gordon and they said that the policemen had told them that they could not guarantee them any protection if they crossed the street and tried to get in.)

Objection, motion to strike—not responsive.

Q. Did you report what you had seen down at the Donnelly plant to the other employees?
A. I did, yes, sir.

Objection—immaterial and incompetent and no identification of person or time.

A. Yes.
Q. Did you read the newspapers during this period that the strike trouble was on?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I did.
Q. Did you see anything in the newspaper that was of interest to the Donnelly employees?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. I saw an article, I don't know what date it was, stating that the union at their meeting in Atlantic City had appropriated so many hundred thousand dollars to organize the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Do you remember any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union?

A. I do.

Q. Describe that meeting? How many meetings were there during this period that you can recall?

A. The first meeting was about the middle of March.

Q. And what was the subject of discussion at that meeting, if you recall?

[fol. 5503] A. Well, the general topic down at the Donnelly Garment Company was how and what they would do if they came down there and the people wanted to get together and find out or try to make some arrangement so they could do something and they went down to the meeting on the second floor.

spect to a newspaper report that you had a representative in the International organization?

A. I heard of it, I didn't read it.

Q. Did you know the sentiment of the employees at the Donnelly plant with respect to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did.

Q. What was that sentiment?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

A. Not very high.

Q. Did you know anybody down there that wanted to become a member of that union?

Objection—immaterial and incompetent.

[fol. 5504] A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attend the organization meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did.

Q. And that was held I believe it has already been testified several times, about the 27th of April?

A. The 27th of April.

p. 1279 Q. Tell in your own words what happened there?

A. Mr. Tyler was introduced and by that time a committee had gone to him or some people asking him if they could get an injunction or for any way that they could be protected. Well, Mr. Tyler told us that the Wagner Act had been declared valid and his suggestion was we form a union of our own; that if we had 51 or over 51 percent of the employees that wanted to become members that the union would be valid under the law.

Q. Did you take any votes?

A. We voted on the name by standing vote.

Q. Was that vote all in favor or who suggested the name, do you recall?

[fol. 5505 Q. Was anything said to the meeting with respect of signing those cards, and if so what was it?
A. They signed them if they wanted to, if they wanted to become a member.

p. 1280 Q. Did you hear that said? A. I did.
Q. Did you sign one? A. I did.
Q. Was that your free and voluntary act?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are you still a member?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you ever been a member of the executive committee? A. No, sir.
Q. In all the time that you have been at the Donnelly plant did you ever hear or see or know of any act or word by the employers, Mrs. Reed or any of the officers of the company or anybody with authority to hire and discharge which would indicate that they did not approve of employees joining unions?
A. No.
Q. As between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union would you have any preference as to which one you would care to belong to?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What would be your reason for that preference?

Objection—immaterial and self-serving.

A. I would most certainly take the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. The International, their ways of trying to induce members into the union are unAmerican and I would not join it.

Mr. Tyler: That is all.

Mr. Walsh: That is all.

(Witness excused).

Senator Reed: (Interrupting) That is not responsive to any question.

The Court: I cannot tell.

Q. Was there any comment, did you have any experience at the Donnelly plant prior to going to Atlantic City? A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what that experience was?

A. Well, I was called down to the Muehlebach Hotel and I talked to Mr. Perlstein there; he asked me if I would like to go as a delegate to the convention to represent our girls in the union and at that time I had not thought much about it and I did not decide that night but the next day my husband called Mr. Perlstein and told him I had decided that I would go. Then that night in the Journal-Post there was an announcement that I would go to the convention as a delegate.

Q. Did you meet with the girls of any other union before you went down there or did you first meet with them when you went down there?

A. I don't understand what you mean.

Q. Were there other ladies that belonged to the union at that time, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

p. 1742 A. I only knew one girl at that time that was a member.

Q. From Donnelly's?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But were there other girls belonging to the union that attended the meeting at Atlantic City?

[fol. 5509] A. Yes, sir.

Senator Reed: Does Mr. Walsh mean that belonged to this union that this lady belonged to or belonged to other unions?

Mr. Walsh: Belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, were there other ladies outside of the Donnelly shop?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did you meet with them?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you to look at Interveners' Exhibit No. 8 and state whether or not that is the article that you saw in the Journal-Post?
A. I believe it is.
Q. Now, how long prior to the meeting at Atlantic City did this notice appear in the Journal-Post?
A. Well, I think the notice was in the paper the 22nd of April, the best I remember but I did not think there was as much in it as there is in that.
Q. This seems to be March 24, 1937.
A. Then that could not be the one because as I remember it, in this note it stated that I had been selected to go to the convention.

p. 1743 Mr. Hogsett: Didn't you inadvertently misstate that Mr. Walsh? Wasn't it April?

Mr. Walsh: 4-22. That would be April.

Q. Now, after that announcement was made was there anything said to you at the shop about it?

Respondent objects to question as calling for hearsay.—Denied J.C.B.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. How soon was it after the announcement was made?

Respondent objects to question and moves to strike answer as hearsay, immaterial, not binding on respondent.—Denied J.C.B.

[fol. 5610] A. The announcement was made, as I remember on the 22nd of April. Then the next morning I went into work, and when I got to the shop I showed my pass at the door; we had to have a pass to get in and I showed that to the man at the door and he didn't ask me any questions or anything, just let me go on in. Then I went up on the elevator to the 7th floor and I changed my clothes there on the 7th floor and I could hear girls talking around in the shop at that time and there was one girl—she came up and she said "What is this I see in the paper about you", so I didn't say anything, I just laughed about it and she said well, that she was afraid for me to go in there because she didn't know what the girls would do to me.

Q. To go in where?

Respondent makes same objection — Denied— J. C. B.

A. On to my floor to work.

Q. Did you go in anyway?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you go to work?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you work there that day before there was anything further said about your membership in the union?

Respondent makes same objection. — Denied— J. C. B.

p. 1744 A. Well, they turned the power on and I started working in my section; then just a little while after that there was a group of girls came over and they started talking about the union.

Q. Were you running your machine at the time?

Respondent makes same objection. — Denied— J. C. B.

A. Yes, sir.

57, Tabulation relative to Comparative Earnings of Piece Work Operators—First Six Months—1937 and 1938	7131	4321

Q. And who was in charge of your section as instructress?

Respondent makes same objection and motion and for further reason that it calls for conclusion of the witness. Denied—J. C. B.

A. Mrs. Allison and Pearl; I think her name was Hendricks.

Q. Were they or were they not in there at the time these girls came up?

Respondent makes same objection. — Denied— J. C. B.

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5511] Q. Just state what occurred when these girls came up, when these parties that you mentioned were there?

A. May I correct one of those names there. Her name was Rose; I always had those names mixed; it was Rose instead of Pearl.

Senator Reed: Rose Hendricks?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would detail in your own way what took place there at that time, how many girls were in the group?

Respondent objects as calling for hearsay, and immaterial, and not binding on respondent what the employees may have done. Denied J. C. B.

A. After I started working these girls came over there and there was some from the special section and I don't know just where all they came from but I do remember that Mary Pointer from the special section was in the group and they came and started talking to me.

Q. First I wish you would let us know how many girls were in that group, Mrs. Hull, would you say?

Respondent makes the same objection.—Denied J. C. B.

p. 1745 A. Of course I could not give the exact amount but I would say probably fifteen girls.

Q. Was the power on at the time and were you working at your machine?

Respondent objects as immaterial.—Denied J.C.B.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You may proceed and just tell what was said?

Respondent objects to the question as calling for hearsay, not binding on respondent what the employees said or did, immaterial, self-serving.—Denied J. C. B.

A. Well, they started talking about me joining the union.

Q. Try to give the names as well as you can please; who started to talk to you about joining the union?

Respondent makes the same objection.—Denied J. C. B.

A. As well as I can remember Mary Poynter started talking about it.

Mr. Hogsett: Was she an operator may I ask?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q. What did she say?

Respondent makes the same objection, and moves that the answer be stricken.—Denied J.C.B.

[fol. 5512] Respondent objects to each of the questions on this page for the same reasons and moves that the answers be stricken for said reasons. —Denied J.C.B.

A. She said "They say that you don't have to work but," she said, "We do" and she said, "They say that under the Wagner Act you can belong to the union but we say that you can't" and I don't remember the other things that was said. Then that group went on away.

Q. Have you detailed all that was said at that time?
A. Well, there were so many things I could not remember everything.
Q. Was there more than one of the girls that said anything?
A. Yes, sir, I think there was.
Q. Well, how many would you say had something to say?
p. 1746 A. Well, there were several of the girls that were talking and all talking at the same time more or less.
Q. How long were they there?
A. I don't know just exactly how long they were there but I went ahead with my work and after they had talked about the union then they went on off.
Q. I wish you would state if you can anything else that they said about the union?
A. Well, they said that if I wanted to work for $13.00 a week to go over to Gordon's and work.
Q. Anything else?
A. I don't remember anything right at that time.
Q. After that group left did any others come?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was the power still on?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What time did the others come?

[fol. 5513] Respondent objects to each of the questions on this page and moves that they be stricken as calling for hearsay, not binding on respondent, immaterial and irrelevant, self-serving. —Denied J.C.B.

A. Well, just shortly after that.
Q. How many were in that group?
A. I would say approximately the same amount; there were a group of girls, I don't know just how many but several girls.
Q. Was your instructor there?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same one or somebody else?
A. Mrs. Allison was there.
Q. State all you remember that those girls said to you on the second visit?
A. Well, after they came back they asked me for my Loyalty League button.
p. 1747 Q. What was your Loyalty League Pin?

Respondent moves that that part of answer "as well as I can remember to keep the girls from joining the union" be stricken because it was stricken out by the court (see p. 1747).—Denied J.C.B.

A. The Loyalty League was an organization that was organized in there about the time of the hearing of the NRA as well as I can remember to keep the girls from joining the union.
Q. What time was it with reference to the time that a number of girls had joined the union and there was a proceeding going on before the NRA?
A. As near as I can remember it was along about that time.
Q. They formed then a group, do I understand in the shop and called it what?
A. The Loyalty League.
Q. The Nelly Don Loyalty League?
[fol. 5514] A. I don't remember anything other than the Loyalty League; that is what we referred to.
Q. Was there or was there not a document passed through at that time for the girls to sign to join this Loyalty League? Were you a member of this Loyalty League?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Just describe the circumstances under which you joined?
A. Well, I remember at that time that there were some girls talked to us during the lunch hour and then they passed out cards and we joined the Loyalty League.

p. 1748 Q. Did anyone make a speech at that time, anyone of the girls or anyone of the management at the time you joined the Loyalty League?

A. The girls talked at that time but I don't remember the conversation.

Q. Now, on the occasion of the second visit of these girls—first state whether or not they were the same girls or other girls?

Respondent objects to question and moves to strike answer as calling for hearsay, not binding on respondent what the employees did or said, immaterial and irrelevant, self-serving, conclusion. —Denied J.C.B.

A. Some were the same girls and some were other girls.

Q. Were the girls who called upon you first members of your own section?

Respondent makes same objection and motion. —Denied J.C.B.

A. No, sir.

Q. Or in your group?

Respondent makes same objection and motion. —Denied J.C.B.

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where they came from?

Respondent makes same objection and motion. —Denied J.C.B.

A. Part of those girls were from the special section and I don't know where the others were from.

Respondent makes same objection and motion. —Denied J.C.B.

[fol. 5515] Respondent objects to each question on this page and moves to strike the answers thereto as calling for hearsay, not binding on respondent what the employees did or said, immaterial and irrelevant, self-serving and as calling for conclusions.—Denied J.C.B.

Q. On the occasion of the second visit please state what took place. First, who was there on the occasion of the second visit?

A. As near as I can remember Mary Poynter was in that group and Jenny Brown and then there was other girls there that I don't remember their names.

Q. Just describe their conduct when they came the second time?

A. Well, they would come over and they were talking very loud and singing and when they came back one of the girls, I believe it was Mary Jamison asked me for my Loyalty League pin.

Q. Did you have your pin on?

p. 1749 A. No, I had it in my purse.

Q. Just go ahead and tell the whole story; what did you do about it?

A. I told the girls they could have it if they gave me back my thirty-five cents.

Q. Did they charge you thirty-five cents for the Loyalty League pin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give them the Loyalty pin?

A. They went away and then they came back with the thirty-five cents and I told the girls I had decided to keep my pin.

Q. And did you or did you not give it to them?

A. I did not give it to them then.

Q. Were there other girls working in your immediate neighborhood at that time?

[fol. 5516] Respondent makes the same objection and motion to each question and answer on this page as is set forth at the top of the preceding page. —Denied J.C.B.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would describe the conduct of the girls; did they sit still or did they walk around or did they talk softly or did they talk loudly; give us a good description?

A. The girls were walking around in groups, even in the other sections and I saw some girls standing on the inspector's tables and they were talking loud. Of course I could not understand what was said in the other sections but I could hear the voices.

Q. During this second visit was your instructor there during all of the time that these girls were milling around and doing this talking?

A. As far as I know she was.

p. 1750 Q. Did any of the girls or did anyone there have the notice that was in the paper with reference to your action?

A. Yes, sir; some of the girls, I don't remember just who it was but I think it was Hazel was one girl came over to my machine and she had this clipping and she asked me what it meant and I said well, it just didn't mean anything, so I went ahead with my work and then after that these girls that had been there before, after my Loyalty League pin, they came back and they had the pin and they had it wrapped in toilet paper, put it on my machine and demanded that I give them the pin and I did.

Q. Was it the pin they had wrapped in the toilet paper or the money?

A. The money.

Q. At that time I will get you to state whether or not your instructor was present?

A. I think Mrs. Allison was present all the time.

Q. Did she say anything to the crowd or order them to go back to work or anything of that kind?

[fol. 5517] Respondent objects to each question on this page and moves to strike the answers thereto as calling for hearsay, not binding on respondent what the employees did or said, immaterial and irrelevant, calls for and states conclusions, the answers are self-serving and not responsive to the questions.—Denied J.C.B.

A. Not that I know of.

Q. After this demonstration did you ask to see anyone, any officer of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you ask for?
A. I asked the girls where Mrs. Wherry was.
Q. What position did she hold at that time?
A. I think her position was—she was next in charge over all the instructors, fore lady.

p. 1751 Q. Did Mrs. Wherry come?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did any person appear in answer to your call?
A. Yes, sir; these girls came back and I believe it was Hazel and a girl named Pearl, I think was her name, they came back and told me that Mrs. Wherry said she could not come because she was not a member of the Loyalty League.
Q. Did she say anything about anyone else coming?
A. Yes, she said that Miss Todd would come.
Q. That was Miss Rose Todd?
A. Miss Rose Todd.
Q. What was Rose Todd's position with the company at that time?
A. I don't know what Miss Todd did then.
Q. Did Miss Todd appear?

[fol. 5518] Respondent makes the same objections and motions as to each of the questions and answers on this page as [it] set forth at the top of the preceding page and because the answers are speculative.—Denied J.C.B.

A. No, sir.
Q. Was there anything said to you after these people came back, that you asked to go and ask Mrs. Wherry to come?
A. Yes, sir, they asked me to get up and make a speech.
Q. Who asked you to get up and make a speech?
A. I don't remember just who.
Q. Was there more than one?
A. I don't remember that; I just remember someone asked me to get up and make a speech.
Q. At any time during the demonstration was the power shut off?
A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Did you see who shut it off?
A. I believe it was Hazel that shut the power off.
p. 1752 Q. State whether or not they continued to urge you to make a speech after the power was shut off?
A. I don't remember.
Q. How long was the power shut off?
A. After the power was shut off I told these girls that I would not make a speech but I would go to the office.
Q. How long was the power shut off? If you remember?
A. I don't know; I left.
Q. Were there any threats made against you at that time?
Q. I will ask you whether or not there were any threats made?
A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5519] Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as is set forth at the top of the preceding page.—Denied J.C.B.

Q. Please state what was said?
A. Well, the girls told me that if they caught me—when I first refused to give the girls my Loyalty pin they told me that if they caught me with the pin on they would tear my clothes off. They also threatened to throw me out of the window and I was seated with my back to the window and it was only about two or two and a half feet and someone came along and opened the window and they threatened to throw me out.
Q. Did any groups come back after the second group left?
p. 1753 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there any person with them other than the operators at that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who came with them?
A. Mrs. Bogard was with the group.

Q. What was her position?

A. Well, I think she was head over the dividing section; I am not certain what she did.

Q. How many times did she come to your machine that day?

A. I saw her twice in the aisle across from my machine.

Q. State whether or not there were any persons with her, any other girls with her on the two occasions?

A. Yes, sir, there was other girls with Mrs. Bogard and she pointed me out and said "That's her".

Q. Were there any other girls came there during the day from any other department?

A. There was girls from the 9th floor, from the sample or designing room, I don't know just what they have there.

[fol. 5520] Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as are set forth and referred to at the top of the preceding page.—Denied J.C.B.

Q. Was there or was there not an instructor present at the time they came?

A. As far as I remember Mrs. Allison was there all the time.

Q. With all these disturbances?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At any time did Mrs. Allison or anyone else that was present ask those girls to go back to their work and leave you alone?

A. Not that I heard.

p. 1754 Q. Now, when the power was shut off you say, did you or did you not go back to the office floor?

A. I did.

Q. What floor was that on?

A. The 7th floor.

Q. Did you go alone or did any of the crowd accompany you?

A. No, sir, I was not alone and when I said I would go to the office some of the girls said they would go along to see what I had to say and there was a large group of girls that followed me down on the 7th floor.

Q. Describe first what sort of an office is on the 7th floor?

A. That is the employment office.

Q. And what was present at that time?

A. Mrs. Hyde was not in her office at that time; there was another girl there who assists her.

[fol. 5521]. Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as are set forth and referred to at the top of the preceding page.—Denied J.C.B.

Q. And what position did she hold there?

A. She was then assistant or stenographer for Mrs. Hyde.

Q. Sometime afterwards did or did not Mrs. Hyde come on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anyone with her?

A. Yes, I think Miss Todd was with Mrs. Hyde when she came in at that time; there were several came in about the same time.

Q. And what did Mrs. Hyde say to you, if anything?

A. She said "Remember, now, that you are making the statement because you want to".

p. 1755 Q. And what did you say, if anything?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What did Mrs. Hyde say then? Just proceed and tell what was done.

A. Well, Mrs. Hyde asked me about the article in the paper and asked me if that was true and I told her yes, that I was going to the convention but that I did not know about a strike that was mentioned.

Q. And what did she say, if anything?

A. She said "Well, you might have known that that would go along with the other".

Q. Would go along with what?

A. With the other. I don't know what she meant.

Q. Did you make any further statement to her, that is about any other persons that were going to the convention or anything of that sort?

[fol. 5522] Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as are set forth and referred to at the top of the preceding page.—Denied J.C.B.

A. Yes, sir. I told her that there was other representatives going from this territory to the convention.

Q. Did Miss Todd say anything about that convention?

A. Yes, Miss Todd, she asked me what was the number of my local.

Q. And what did you say?

A. I told her that I could not say. Then I was asked how many members we had.

Q. And what did you say?

A. I told her that I could not be exact but I was told there was a good number of members in the shop.

p. 1756 Q. Was there anybody else there at that time that you recall at the office that took part in this proceeding?

A. Yes, Miss Strickland was there and she said that she would just like to ask a question.

Q. Who was Miss Strickland? What position did she hold?

A. I don't know just what position Miss Strickland does hold.

Q. Was Mrs. Hyde or Miss Todd there at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please state just what Miss Strickland said and what you said?

A. Well, Miss Strickland said that she would just like to know what union promised that they didn't promise and I told her that they promised shorter hours and more wages.

Q. More wages for what?
A. For the work we were doing.

[fol. 5523] Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as are set forth and referred to at the top of the preceding page.—Denied J.C.B.

Q. Did she say anything other than that?
A. She said well us girls make more than $13.00 a week in here and I told her that the cotton dresses did not determine the wages but the price the dresses sold for.
Q. And where did you get that information?
A. Well, after I had joined the union I was told then that that was the way they settled prices,—
p. 1757 Q. I will follow that, who told you that?
A. I think Miss Palmer told me that that was the way they settled prices in the union shops.
Q. And what if anything did Miss Strickland say with respect to that?
A. I don't remember just what she said but I told her at the time that one thing that our girls worked so hard in there and after a few years that we were worn out.
Q. Did Mrs. Hyde have anything to say in that discussion?
A. She said, well, she said, "You have been here eight years, do you feel like you are worn out", and I told her well, that she knew that I had been sick and I said that last fall I had to take three months off and take a rest; then after I came back I told her that I felt good and I thought I could do the work all right but they started working us 45 and 53 hours a week and that was too long.
Q. Did Mrs. Hyde make any answer to that?
A. She said that they had the right to work longer hours in their busy season.
Q. Was there anything said about any difference in your pay checks after you came back?

[fol. 5524] Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as are set forth and referred to at the top of the preceding page.—Denied J.C.B.

p. 1758 A. Yes. I told her that at the time when they had passed a petition through the section they asked us to sign this petition that we were perfectly satisfied with wages and hours in the company and happy to be an employee there, then I did not want to sign that and after that—

Q. (Interrupting) Did you finally sign it?

A. I finally signed it.

Q. Who presented it to you?

A. A girl; I think her name is Mary Spofero.

Q. Just state what she said when she handed the paper to you about being happy and satisfied and so on?

A. Well, she came down through the section and had this petition and she asked us to read it over and then she said it was not compulsory that we sign the petition and I read it over and it said that we were satisfied with hours and conditions in the factory and I was not satisfied with the hours and I told her that I did not think that I would sign the petition.

Q. And what did the lady say to you?

Respondent further moves to strike that portion of the following answer reading, "So, we had talked among the other employees that if we did not sign this petition we would lose our jobs" because stricken by court.—Denied J.C.B.

A. She didn't say anything then but a few mornings after that she called—there was one other girl that did not sign it in our section and she called us down on the 7th floor to the nurse's room and she told us then, she said "Now, I will take you girls' name off this list because" [said] said, "we just want girls there that are perfectly loyal to Mrs. Reed" and she said "You girls are not entirely satisfied". So, we had talked among the other

p. 1759 employees that if we did not sign this petition we would lose our jobs.

Q. Just state what you said and what the other girl said in conversation with reference to signing this document that was handed to you?

p. 1760 A. Well, after she came through the first time and we did not sign, this other girl and I, then we decided that if we did not sign that that we—

[fol. 5525] Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as are set forth and referred to at the top of the preceding page.—Denied J.C.B.

Q. (Interrupting) What was said; don't say "we decided"; just say what was said?

A. We just talked to each other.

Q. What did you say?

A. I don't remember the exact words but the substance—

Q. (Interrupting) Not exact words but the substance of what you said?

A. The substance of it was if we did not sign the petition we would lose our jobs. Then this same girl came back through the section a few days later and she said "I think I missed you girls when I came through the other day" and I told her no, that she didn't miss me but I said that I would sign the petition then and I told her that the reason I did not sign it was because we were working 53 hours a week and that I thought that was too much but I signed it at that time. Then she called us down to the nurse's room.

Q. How did she call you?

A. Well, as near as I remember the instructor—they have a telephone in each section and the instructor told us to go down. Anyway we were called down.

Q. Do you recall any further conversation upon this occasion when Mrs. Hyde was present? Did anything else happen in this conversation in the nurse's room?

p. 1761

A. Yes; she called us down there and told us that she intended to take our names off and we insisted that she leave the names on in order to hold our jobs and she said no, that she would not do that, so she did take our names off and I told her then that that was too long to work and she said well, that she didn't have any say as to the hours they worked and she said well, we would just forget about that.

Q. I will take you now back to the conversation that was had. Did you find any difference in the work after this conversation which you had about signing this document?

[fol. 5526] Respondent makes the same objection and motion as to each of the questions and answers on this page as are set forth and referred to at the top of the preceding page—Denied J.C.B.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What happened, if anything?

A. Well, my check just about that had been $31.00, then the next week it was $25.00 and the next week it was $17.00 because I didn't have enough work.

Q. Did you do all the work that was offered you to do? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you do it with the same swiftness?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then coming back to the conversation with Mrs. Hyde and the others that you have spoken of, what did Mrs. Hyde say, if anything to you about leaving or coming back or anything of that sort? After the conversation what did Mrs. Hyde say to you, if anything?

p. 1762

A. Well, she told me that I would have to go home and I told her that I did not want to quit but that I would go home for that day and so she said well, that I would have to go home and then she took my identification pass and I asked her how would I get back in the factory without that and she said well, that she would come down and let me in if I still had a job.

Q. Have you ever been called back to go to work there?

A. No, sir. I gave her my telephone number, the telephone next door and I have never been called.

Q. I will ask you to state to the Court whether or not during the entire eight years of your employment there was ever any complaint about the character of your work or anything else while you were in that factory?

A. They never complained to me about it.

Q. Were you laid off or were you not laid off during the seasonal lay-offs during those years?

[fol. 5527] A. No, sir; just a few days at a time when the section would be off.

Mr. Walsh: You may take the witness.

(Thereupon Court stood at recess until two o'clock P. M.)

[fol. 5528] Monday, April 17, 1939
2:00 P. M.

(Pursuant to recess, Court reconvened and the trial resumed.)

p. 1763 SYLVIA HULL resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination

By Mr. Hogsett:

* * *

p. 1767 Q. That forty cents is not important enough to spend any time on. Now, you named about three or maybe four weeks that you worked 53 hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it three or four?

A. I named four weeks.

Q. And the rest of the time you worked at what?

A. From 40 to 45 hours.

Q. You spoke this morning of a drop in your pay check on some occasion from $31.29 down to some lower figure. Do you remember that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that drop and what was the significance of it; I don't recall?

A. At that time that was when they had circulated this petition through the factory.

Q. Oh, yes. Now, I remember. And you gave the Court or sought to give the Court the impression that because you asked to have your name taken off—

A. (Interrupting) I didn't ask to have my name taken off.

[fol. 5529] Q. Well, because your name was taken off, the fact is it was taken off?

p. 1768 A. It was taken off.

Q. You sought to give the Court the impression that there was an immediate drop in your wages, didn't you; that was the plain implication? A. That was the fact.

Q. And yet immediately following that drop to $17.34 your wages ran as follows: $21.71; $22.39; $25.85; $25.61; $29.92; $22.62. Now, why didn't you tell the Court that?

A. I think I can explain that.

Q. The question is, why didn't you tell the Court that instead of leaving the implication that the Company was taking revenge on you?

A. I simply gave the facts, as I made those checks.

Q. You gave part of the facts, yes, but have you any reason why you didn't just tell the Court frankly why your wages dropped?

A. May I explain?

Q. I say have you any reason why you didn't tell the Court that there was just one week that your wages dropped?

A. No, sir. May I explain that?

Q. Yes, ma'am.

A. After this had occurred about the signing of the petition and our names had been taken off then Mrs. Hyde called me down to the office and she talked to me about the hours, so I told her then that I did not belong to the union and at that time I did not and so she told me that I was to go back to work after
p. 1769 I had assured her that I did not belong to the union, that I was to go back to work and she said that that would be forgotten. Then [fol. 5530] my work was given to me and my checks came back up.

Q. How many hours did you work when you got $17.34?

A. I think 45 hours.

Q. How many hours did you work when you got $21.71 the next week? A. 45.

Q. And the next week $22.39? A. 45.

Q. And the next week $25.85? A. 45.

Q. And the next week $25.61? A. 45.

Q. And the next week $29.92? A. 53 hours.

Q. And the next week $26.62?

A. I only had four days; that was 36 hours.

Q. What was the day you went to see Mrs. Hyde?

A. I don't remember that date. It was a few days after the episode of the petition and she called me down there but it was before I joined the union.

Q. Was anyone else there?

A. There was not anyone else in the office at the time.

Q. This petition of March 2nd that you signed and you have told the details about why your name was eliminated, and the only objection [fol. 5531] that you voiced was to the hours, is that right?

A. That is all I voiced but I did not feel as that petition read.

p. 1770 Q. Well, at least you voiced but one objection?

A. I did.

Q. And that was to the hours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you ever complained to any superior about the hours and if so to whom?

A. I don't remember that I complained to the instructor.

Q. Please give me again the date when you joined the International?

A. The 23rd of March, 1937.

p. 1789 A. I don't know what the others make.

Q. Now, when you left here on April 23rd, did you want to come back to the Donnelly Company and work there?

A. I had worked there eight years, naturally I wanted to keep my job.

p. 1790 Q. The answer is then you wanted to go back and work at that same place, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5532] p. 1791 Q. Anything else?

Denied J. C. B. Respondent objects to this question and moves that the answer be stricken as hearsay, not binding on respondent, what was said or done by the employees, immaterial and irrelevant, self-serving.

A Well, at this meeting that I spoke of they asked the girls to report to them any one whom they knew joined the union.

Q. Who told you that?

p. 1792 A. It was said in this meeting when—

Q. (Interrupting) What meeting?

A. When they read the letter from the I. L. G. W. U. demanding that their members be put back to work.

Q. Who said that?

Respondent moves to strike the following answer and all the preceding answers on this page for the reasons above given and because it does not appear who made the statements referred to and the answers are speculative and of no probative value.

Denied J. C. B.

A. I don't remember exactly who said that; there was different speakers and I can't remember just who said some of the things.

p. 1797 Q. Now, you told this convention down at Atlantic City that a majority—pardon me, I don't want to misstate this,—a majority of the girls in the factory must quit working. That would mean at least 650 wouldn't it would have to quit working after a few years, fading out before the gruelling task of that job. Now, I want you to name one that ever did?

A. Well, I had a nervous-breakdown myself and had to stay off for seven months.

Q. All right, that's one. Now, name anybody else?

A. I can't just name the girls who were off but during the time I heard frequent reports of girls who had had nervous breakdowns.

Q. Name any of them?

[fol. 5533] A. I can't recall their names right now.

Q. Can you name one?

A. Just myself.

Q. You came right back to work and did the same job again after your rest, didn't you?

A. I was off seven months.

Q. When was that, by the way?

A. It was from June I believe 1933 to January, 1934.

Q. You came right back and did the same job again?

A. Yes, sir.

p. 1798 Q. And stayed there four years more?

A. No, I wasn't there four years more, I don't think.

Q. Three: Senator Reed suggested four; I did not follow it in my mind. You stayed three years more?

A. I had to stay off another time for three months for the same reason.

Q. Is your case the only one you can name to support this statement that half, or I believe you say a majority of the workers have to quit and never can come back?

A. I know other girls who have had nervous breakdowns but I can't recall their names.

Q. You can't recall even the name of one, can you?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 5534] Redirect Examination.

By Mr. Walsh:

Q. You spoke of a meeting, that you were called downstairs to attend after the receipt of a letter from Mr. Perlstein in March, 1937, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked who spoke at that meeting and you gave some things that were said. As a matter of fact, who spoke to the management at that meeting?

p. 1810 A. Well, the letter was read from the International Union to the Donnelly Garment Company and they asked that their members be put back to work.

Q. Who?

A. I don't remember exactly who read that letter but it was read in the meeting.

Q. Who all attended that meeting, how many employees attended that meeting?

A. Well, I couldn't say as to everybody but I think everyone was there.

Q. Was it held in a large room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a large number present, of the employees? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will confine you to anything that Mrs. Reed said at that meeting; did she make a speech?

A. Yes, sir, after they read this letter then Mrs. Reed made a speech and I remember one thing that she said about the union, she said that there would not be any union in the Donnelly plant and that neither Dubinsky nor any other "sky" could come in and tell her how to run her business.

Mr. Walsh: That is all.

[fol. 5538] Extracts From Testimony of MARJORY GREEN, called as a witness on behalf of Interveners.

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 745 Q. Will you state your name, Miss Green, please?
A. Marjory Green.
Q. Where are you employed?
A. Donnelly Garment Company.
Q. Kansas City, Missouri?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In what capacity?
A. I am a stenographer.
Q. How long have you been with that company?
A. About six years.
Q. Miss Green, I show you a document marked intervener's Exhibit No. 2 and ask you if you had anything to do with the obtaining of the affidavit, the signatures to the affidavit, to that document?

A. Of all of them, yes, sir.
Q. Were they actually sworn to before the notary publics whose names appear?
A. Yes, sir.

p. 746 Q. Describe to the Court the circumstances under which those affidavits were taken, Miss Green?

A. The employees or members of the union rather, were asked to come to the first floor on their lunch hours, and I believe it was stated in the notice, explained a little bit what this affidavit was, and after they had assembled there it was either read to them if it was a large group or if it was just a small group they read it themselves, and they were told very plainly and it was made very clear to them that it was an affidavit and that only members of the union could sign it, and if they wished to sign it after reading it they could, but if they did not care to they were not to be forced to.

p. 748 Q. Were you present at the meeting at which [fol. 5539] the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What date was that held.

A. That was April 27, 1937.

p. 749 Q. Tell the Court what happened at that meeting.

A. Well, Miss Todd acted as chairman of that meeting and she explained a little bit to us about what it was about, and Mr. Tyler, who we had previously hired as our attorney was there and he would explain to us what we could do in the way of protection, and Mr. Tyler did talk to us and he explained that since the Wagner Act had become constitutional that we were legally entitled to form our own employees' union; that it was just as legal and just as valid as any other labor union and he was not trying to force us to do anything against our wishes but he believed we would get the protection we needed in this way, and he thought we could handle our own collective bargaining for ourselves through our representative and it would give us the protection that we wanted.

p. 750 Q. Was any vote taken?

A. Yes; the first vote taken was as to whether or not we should form our own plant union. That vote was made in the form of a motion and was seconded and carried, that we do form our own employees' union. Then the next vote, the name Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was voted on and that was carried and at that time or after that a motion was made that Miss Todd appoint a nominating committee of five people who would retire from the room of nine people who would act as officers of the executive committee, and that motion was made and carried and they retired from the room, and they were reminded of the different departments, to be sure to remember in making their selection,—the operators and the mechanics and the various departments, and while they were out of the room a card—well, first the card was read to them as a group and then these cards were later passed out among the employees, and this card read, as I remember, "I hereby agree to become a charter member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union", and the point was stressed very emphatically that they did not have to sign these cards; [fol. 5540] if they wanted to read it and think it over, and take all the time they needed, and in the meantime while they were thinking it over we would ask Mr. Tyler to read a set of by-laws which he had drawn up for our use, and if they wanted longer than that to think it over, that was all right, and in the meantime then Mr. Tyler read the set of by-laws which he had drawn up and had all ready at this meeting, and he suggested that if these by-laws p. 751 would do at all that we adopt them and later they could be amended at our leisure, by a majority vote, and these by-laws the motion was made and carried that they be accepted as read. By that time the nominating committee had come back into the room and they submitted this group of nine people who were to act as officers of our union, and Miss Todd asked if there were any other names from the floor, or any objections to the names submitted, and there were none, and these people were voted on and carried. They were voted on as a group and carried, that they would act as our officers of our union, and just before the close of the meeting the cards which we had passed out were collected.

Q. Who counted those cards, if they were counted?

A. Miss Todd and I counted them the following morning.

Q. How many people had signed cards indicating a desire to become charter members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. 1303, I believe.

Q. How many employees did the companies have at that time?

A. About 1333 or 1335.

Q. Were those who did not sign cards at the original meeting later taken into the union, or not?

A. Yes, sir, they were given an opportunity when they returned to work; some were out on account of illness and then our salesmen were out on the road and when they returned they were given the opportunity of signing.

A. He did; he said he was there to explain the law to us.

Q. Did he make it clear that you were at liberty to do just as you pleased on his recommendation?

A. Yes.

p. 757 Q. Will you state your name?
A. Mabel Riggs.
Q. Are you employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?
A. I am.
Q. How long have you been employed by them, Mrs. Riggs?
A. A little more than nine and one-half years.
Q. In what capacity?
A. I work in the pattern department; that is a part of the designing department.

• • •

p. 761 Q. Do you recall the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?
A. I do.
Q. What was the date of it?
A. You mean the organization meeting?
Q. The organization, the date the union was organized.
A. That was April 27, 1937.

p. 763 Q. Who presided at that meeting?
A. Miss Todd.
Q. Tell the Court what happened at that meeting, just as you remember it.
A. Miss Todd called the meeting to order and said, "I know that you are anxious to know what progress we have been making", or something to that effect, "in taking measures to defend ourselves against this calamity which has been happening to our friends down in the other part of town," or something to that effect, and I think she told us at that meeting again, or probably she had told us before but I just knew it before, that we had [fol. 5553] employed an attorney and he would speak to us later in the meeting. There was other things—I mean there was a continued conversation, I mean continued statement of various things. People were—

Q. A little louder, please.

A. People were assembling. I am trying to think and I am not thinking out loud, either. Something was said I think in the course of the meeting, about our being able to form our own union because it was now the Wagner Act had passed the Supreme Court and they declared it valid and we could form a union of our own; this would give us a little more protection, or rather do more things for us than the injunction which we had been trying
p. 764 to obtain. A motion I think was made at this time that—I was not in the room all the time; a motion was made that we form our own independent union. It was seconded and carried. Then a name was proposed, I mean we must have a name for it of course, and I think the name Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was proposed. It was voted upon and carried unanimously. Then I believe Miss Todd asked that she be given the power to appoint a committee—a nominating committee to propose the names of chairmen for certain or all departments and she did, that was voted on, I think, and she was given that privilege and she appointed a committee.

Q. Do you remember who that committee was, Mrs. Riggs?

A. The committee was Lyle Jeters, Cordelia Porter, Mrs. Moore, Carl Crawford and I.

p. 770 Q. Did you remember the circulation of a petition on or about March 2nd, 1937, in which the employers assured Mrs. Reed they did not want any outside domination?

A. I do remember that.

Q. Did you sign it?

A. I did.

[fol. 5554] p. 771—Q. Do you have any knowledge of an affidavit circulated in the plant or which employees at the plant were given an opportunity to make about two weeks ago?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. Did you make that affidavit?

A. I did.

• • •

Q. Describe to the Court the way in which that affidavit was made in your presence, how was it done?

A. It was, to begin at the beginning, I read an I. D. M. that was sent to our department.

Q. What does I. D. M. mean?

A. That is the notice sent around; I think it was typewritten on pink paper, regular I. D. M. paper, and signed—I don't think it was signed, just saying we would be given an opportunity to sign the affidavit that day at noon.

Q. Did you know what affidavit it meant?

A. I did. I don't think—I don't know how I knew, but I did.

Objection Of Respondent To Testimony Of Gertrude Gassert, Et Al., Offered By The Board From The "Judge Miller Testimony."

Respondent objects to the testimony offered by the Board of extracts from the testimony of Gertrude Gassert, Marjory Green, Mrs. Lynn Davis, Ora Wachtel, Mrs. Velma Woolley, Jack McConaughey, Fred B. Brown, Hobart Atherton and Mabel Riggs, taken before Judge Miller in the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, in the case entitled Donnelly Garment Company, et al., vs. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, et al., No. 2924, which testimony is contained in N. R. A. & J. M. C. Exhibit 11-A to R at pages 1 to 18 inclusive, and to each and every question and answer thereof, as immaterial, irrelevant and not binding on respondent as to any of the issues herein for the reason that respondent had nothing to do with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or with its meetings and under the National Labor Relations Act, respondent's employees had a right to form their own union and choose representatives for purposes of collective bargaining, and respondent should not be held responsible for what the employees did in those respects, and said testimony relates to those matters and does not tend to prove any charge against respondent contained in the Complaint herein. Respondent further objects on the ground that said testimony is hearsay.

Objection is overruled and acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings.

Dated: July 5, 1939. James C. Batten, Trial Examiner.

Further: It is not the purpose in accepting the testimony to reverse any rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects.

A. About 2½ months after I was laid off.
Q. During the month of December 1934?

The Witness. And I asked her if they had anything against me or if I had done anything wrong as to why I wasn't called back to work; and she said, "Positively no", they hadn't nothing against me at all. And I asked her if my work had been satisfactory and all, and she said it had, that it had been very satisfactory. And she promised me she would call me back, and asked me if I changed my address to let her know, but up to this day I haven't heard from her.

A. I started there in the spring of 1925.

p. 117 Q. (By Mr. Rucker) Now, when you went back to work in March 1931, for what period of time were you employed?
A. Well, up until I was laid off in July.
Q. July when?
A. Well, around the 10th, I think it was.
Q. 1934? A. Yes, sir.

p. 119 Q. Now, who was your instructor?
A. Mrs. White.
Q. Did you have any talk with Mrs. White about your average and as to whether or not your work was satisfactory a short while before you were laid off?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did she make any complaint of any kind to you with reference to the character of your work? A. No, sir.
Q. Now, did you ever make over what is known as the code price there? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, was there any policy of the company with reference to making a change in price if the operators generally made over the code price? A. Yes, sir.
p. 122 Q. Now, what I want to know is when you became interested in the formation of a union among the Donnelly employees.
p. 122 A. Well, I have always been in favor of it, and when I heard of it, why, I was more in favor of it because I was in hopes that we would have a union shop.
[fol. 5563 p. 122 Q. Now, when was that? That's what I want to know.
A. Last spring.
Q. That's the spring of 1934? A. Yes, sir.
Q. In other words, the spring before you were laid off in July? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, during the time after you became interested in the spring of 1934 in forming a union among the employees of the Donnelly Company and until the time you were laid off, did you talk unionism during the noon hour and among your coemployees?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you ever sign an application card to become a member of the union? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember when you signed that card?
A. In November.
p. 123 Q. You didn't sign the card until you actually joined, then?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you know the fact that they were talking about forming a union? A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did it happen that you didn't sign a card prior to that time?
A. Well, we were just waiting to get our charter.
Q. How many did it take? Do you know?

A. No, I don't.
Q. You don't know that. Did you have to have a certain number before you could get a charter? A. Well, I think so.
Q. Is that what you were told? A. Yes, sir.
Q. But you don't remember the number? A. No.
Q. Now, were you ever complimented by any of your instructors on the character of your work?

[fol. 5564] p. 123 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, after you were laid off, did you go back to the factory to talk to anybody about your reemployment?
A. I went back to be employed.
Q. What's that? A. Yes, sir.

p. 124 Q. To whom did you talk?
A. To Mrs. Wherry and to Ella Mae.
Q. Ella Mae whom? A. Hyde.
Q. Was her name Guerrant at one time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What conversation did you have with either of these ladies?
A. Well, I asked for work, and they said that they was shutting down the section and they couldn't take any on, but said they would later, that it wouldn't be very long. And then I went back, and Ella Mae Guerrant tried to place me, and I was there an hour, waiting for her to place me, and she couldn't find a machine, so she told me to call in Wednesday. And I called in, and she tried to place me then, and she couldn't, and she said, "Call in Thursday."

And I called in, and I also asked them if they had anything against me; if they intended to hire me back or if they didn't intend to hire me back, because I didn't want to be bothering them in calling them up; and they said nothing at all. So then I called in Thursday, and Ella Mae said she would advise me to get employment some place else. And I said, "Well, that's kind of hard to do. When you tell them you have been to a place 9 years, they will wonder why you are not there."

[fol. 5565] N. R. A. Hearing MRS. REEVES' testimony

p. 285 Q. Now, Virginia Stroup did call upon you to take up the question of Pauline Lutz's discharge, didn't she?

A. Yes, she did, on company time.

Q. She called on you on company time?

A. Yes.

p. 288 A. When she left here, we have a rule of the Donnelly Garment Company that we ask all of our girls to wear white uniforms. Monday morning when she came to work after the Labor meeting she came down here, the hearing was set for ten o'clock Monday morning and it was postponed and she came in at noon and she refused to change her suit. She had on a brown suit and she would not change her suit. That is just one thing. She had repair work brought back to her and her instructor reported to me that she had to insist upon Virginia fixing her own repair work.

I have been over there and Virginia has talked to me repeatedly about this Pauline Lutz and I have refused to discuss it with her and she has not been very nice in her attitude at all.

Q. You expect to discharge her on account of it?

A. Well, if Virginia continues her present actions I am afraid that the Donnelly Garment Company will be forced to discharge her on account of her insubordination.

Q. But you said her work was satisfactory?

A. I have not. I said that Virginia was not a very good operator. I think that Virginia can do good work if she wants to and if she keeps her mind on her work, which she has not been doing recently.

[fol. 5566] N. R. A. Hearing LOU PERKINS witness

p. 713 Q. (By Mr. Rucker) State your name, please.
A. Lou Perkins.
Q. How old are you?
A. 50.
Q. How long did you work for the Donnelly Garment Company?
A. Well, I worked for the Donnelly Garment Company about 18 months steady, is the longest I worked there steady.

p. 715 Q. (By Mr. Rucker) Now, did you become interested in union activities down there?
A. Yes, sir; I talked union.
Q. When?
A. Well, last spring when I was working there.
Q. Did you go out to some of these meetings they have been talking about?
A. I didn't go to any of the meetings.
Q. Did the girls talk to you about them?
A. Well, Kate Jenkins talked to me about the meetings.

p. 716 Q. Who else talked union to you?
A. Well, Thelma.
Q. Thelma Owen?
A. Yes.
Q. Anybody else that you can recall:
A. I don't recall, but there was several.
Q. There were several whose names you do not recall?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, had you ever had any trouble with any of your instructors?
A. No, sir; I never did.
Q. As I understand it, you joined the union in October after you were laid off?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you ever questioned about your union
[fol. 5567] connections by any officer of the company down there?
A. Well, last spring we had to fill out applications, and on the blank the question was asked where we had worked during our lay-off there.

And I had worked at Mary Dean's, and that was during the strike at Mary Dean's that I was called up to Mrs. Reeves' office. And I don't remember just the conversation, but she wanted to know when I had worked at Mary Dean's, and said Dean Jones had called and said they were taking all of their girls.

Q. What did she ask you about your work at Mary Dean's? Did she ask if you belonged to the union when you worked for Mary Dean's?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did she ask if you went out on strike?

A. Yes; she wanted to know if I was out on the strike at Dean's.

Q. (By Mr. Rucker) Now, you make that in your statement. Can you give the Board any more detailed information?

A. She just wanted to know if I was out on that strike, because he had called in and said they were taking their old girls, and she wanted to find out if I was one of them, but I wasn't.

Q. Now, tell the Board whether your work was made harder for you after you began talking favorably about the union.

A. Well, they didn't call me back to work, but I went back. It was either in July or August. But they took me back, but they didn't give me no steady machine. They just put me from one section to another and gave me different work all the time, you know, and that made it harder for me.

Q. Did you have difficulty making your code.

p. 718 A. Oh, yes; I couldn't make my code doing that.

Q. You couldn't make it that way?

A. No.

Q. Let me get this straight. I don't get it right. You worked for Dean's, and there was a strike. Now, when was that strike?

A. That was in last March.

Q. (By Dir. Pratt) That strike was February 7. Now, were you employed at the Mary Dean Company at the time that strike was on?

A. No.

Q. You were not there?

A. No, I wasn't there.

p. 720 [fol. 5568] Q. And you went back to work, and the only thing you have to complain about here is that you say they changed your work?

A. Yes, they did in July, and finally let me out and didn't give me any work at all.

Q. They let a lot of people out at the time you were let out?

A. I don't know about that particular time. Sometimes there was.

Q. Well, you know there was a shortage of work that summer and a great many people were let out?

A. That was in 1934?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. You knew that, didn't you?

A. Well, I know when they shut down the section that I was working in, why, there was a lot let out at that time. But when they let me out the last time, I don't know about that.

Q. There were some other sections closed at that time, weren't there?

A. No.

Q. Wasn't that the way you understood it?

A. Not in July, no.

Q. (By Dir. Pratt) Did they close your section in July, when you were let out?

A. No.

Q. The last time you were there, you were just one laid out of the section?

A. Yes. From one section to another.

Q. (By Mr. Reed) But other sections were closed down, weren't they?

A. No.

Q. You don't remember?

A. No, sir.

p. 722 Q. (By Dir. Pratt) You were the only one laid off out of your section the last time, is that right?

A. I wasn't put in any particular section. I was just changed from one section to another; not given any steady machine.

[fol. 5569] Judge Miller Testimony Rose Todd—Direct

p. 1036 Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Rose Todd, 3401 Central, Kansas City, Missouri.

Mr. Walsh: I desire to object this time to the introduction of any testimony respecting the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial in this case, and on the ground that the only forum in which this matter can be litigated or decided is before the National Labor Relations Board, and that the District Court, this Court, has no authority in a case of this character to make any finding whatsoever under the rulings of the Courts of this country.

p. 1038 Q. In what capacity did you work for the Gernes Garment Company?

A. Not in the capacity for which I was employed. I did work there part of the time for several weeks, or probably I should say a few weeks, in taking charge of their plant, and then I was a salesman on the road, representative for them following that period.

p. 1065 Q. I will give them to you and you state the departments they represent as I name them. Rose Todd?

A. Just a general person through the production department, the department I am connected with.

Q. By the way, please describe the work you were doing then for the Donnelly Garment Company; what was the nature of it?

A. I was helping in the department where we make our first models; you might say assisting the person in charge of that department, the sewing of our first models, the first dresses that are made.

p. 1084 Q. I will ask you, Miss Todd, to cast your mind back to the occasion of the first meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in which you said that the telephone was used to give notice of the meeting. In giving that notice, whom did you call to the telephone, any particular grade of instructor or assistant?

A. No. In using our house telephone system in that manner, we have what we call floor girls or thread girls in each department. It is absolutely her duty to answer the 'phone and convey any message that might be given. That was what was done. The telephone operator called and said there would be a meeting on the second floor after work for the employees.

[fol. 5570] N.R.A.

p 1113 Dir. Pratt. Mr. Rucker, the attorney for the complainant union, has requested the opportunity of offering certain rebuttal testimony at a later session.

The Board has determined, in view of the fact that this hearing has consumed many days and many pages of testimony, to permit Mr. Rucker to furnish it a statement of what testimony he desires to offer.

The Board will read the record, and if, after considering the testimony already given, it feels it desirable to have the additional rebuttal testimony proposed to be offered by Mr. Rucker, an opportunity will be given for such testimony to be offered. If it does not see fit or think desirable to have such testimony offered, there will be no further hearing, and the close of the testimony today will mark the close of this case.

Ample notice will be given to all parties if any further session is felt necessary.

Mr. Reed. Of course, it must be understood, along with that, that if Mr. Rucker offers any further testimony we will have the right to surrebuttal.

Chairman Birkhead. I think that that's agreeable, yes.

p. 1114 Mr. Rucker. I have no desire to keep out any testimony.

Chairman Birkhead. We want the record to be complete in every way.

Mr. Reed. Well, it is not complete and will not be complete until such thing as Mr. Rucker contemplates is taken up.

And we will be given notice, of course, whether the case is to go on further and what time that the Board determines that the case is closed.

And we would like to have one thing further: We would like to have a copy of this statement that has been made here.

Mr. Rucker. I expect to give you a copy of the statement.

Mr. Reed. A copy of this order that is being made now. We would like to have a copy of it.

Mr. Rucker. I expect, as a matter of course and routine, to mail it to your office.

Mr. Ingraham. I want to offer also the order of the codes of fair competition for the Donnelly Garment Company.

Mr. Reed. Both of them must go in, the original order and the modified order, because they are not clear unless they are both in.

Mr. Ingraham. I don't have the other one here now.

Mr. Rucker. It is understood both orders are in. If you haven't got them here now, bring them in later.

(The order presented by Mr. Ingraham at that time was marked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 25" and received in evidence.)

(Whereupon, at 12:20 a. m., Saturday, May 25, 1935, the hearing in the above-entitled matter was closed.)

[fol. 5571] Judge Miller testimony

MRS. REEVES—Redirect.

p. 55 Q. (By Senator Reed) Before reading formally this exhibit, I want to return to a matter I overlooked for a moment. You testified, Mrs. Reeves, the company undertook to fix the piece work prices so that an ordinary operator could make $20.00 a week; a competent operator $25.00 a week and from that up. Now, how are the prices fixed on the particular pieces of work, so that the operator can receive the compensations? How are they fixed?

p. 56 A. After a garment is designed, that particular garment is analyzed very thoroughly by Mrs. Nichols, who was a former piece work operator; Josephine Spallito, a former piece work operator; Rose Todd, a former piece work operator. Prices are then discussed with the operator, and also the instructor, and everything is taken into consideration—that some material is harder to handle and so forth; priced in such a way that an efficient operator can make from $25.00 to $50.00 a week; a less efficient operator $20.00 to $25.00.

Q. If there is any employee who thinks the price is too low, what redress does she have?

A. She discusses it with people who set prices,—Miss Todd, Mrs. Nichols, or her instructor, and the thing is gone into very thoroughly.

p. 60 Q. (By Senator Reed) Who has complete charge of the making of the piece rates after the report is made by this committee?

A. Mrs. Nichols.

p. 115 Q. Before the lay-off was made—I am speaking now of the general lay-off of this character, are these—is any investigation made outside of their record that they have made with the company?

A. Well, we consult with different people, the different instructors who have worked with the operators to see if they are adaptable, and can be changed, or if there is any possibility of using them on other machines and we have gone into it very thoroughly.

Q. When you let out this approximately 124 in July, I believe you said 115,—when you let them out did you take into consideration anything except the lack of work and the other considerations you have just mentioned?

Mr. Walsh: I would like to object to that. If my memory serves me this witness said the decisions as to who would be let out were made by a committee.

Senator Reed: She didn't say exactly that.

(Last question read by the reporter).

A. That was the only thing we could take into consideration.

p. 292 Q. Do I understand that these notices about the greater number of hours would be put on a bulletin board in writing?

A. Either that, or sent through the sections on the I. D. M.

Q. The I, D. M. What is that?

A. Inter departmental memo.

[fol. 5579] In Judge Miller's Court.

CLIF LANGSDALE—witness.

p. 2403 Q. Will you kindly point out to the Court as briefly as you can, now, what was said at that conference that is not stated in Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 112?

A. I will do my best, but the transcript is so far short of what was said at that conference that it will be difficult. You will note that this transcript is about twenty-nine pages, as I recall it. This conference lasted about three hours. Most public stenographers have told me—

Senator Reed: Wait a minute—

A. (continuing) It is my knowledge that most conferences of this character will consume forty pages an hour, at least. Here are twenty-nine pages which purport to cover three hours; so in that respect it is far short of covering the whole conference. There were many things said there that afternoon that are not recorded in this transcript and many things that purport to have been recorded that were not said as they are here set out.

Q. First let me ask you this, Mr. Langsdale, had you been advised before you went to Senator Reed's home or did you become aware after you got there during any of the three or four hours that this conference lasted that there was a stenographer seated in the breakfast room taking down a transcript or a purported transcript of what was being said?

p. 2404 A. Certainly not. I was in another lawyer's home and I did not expect that kind of a thing to be done to me.

Q. Just go ahead and detail the deficiency in that transcript.

A. I might state, generally, that I went there for the sole purpose of seeing whether or not—

Senator Reed: I object to that as not responsive to the question.

A. I stated generally in the conference that I was there for the purpose of seeing if we could arrive at the settlement of the controversy that was then pending before the Labor Board. I did not have authority to talk settlement of the injunction suit. Mr. Perlstein is the one who gave me the authority to go to the conference at all and with the specific limitation that we talk—I won't say the specific limitation, but the only thing we had in mind was to talk about settling the charges we had filed against the Donnelly Company before the Labor Board.

p. 2405 A. At any rate, when we got there I stated to the Senator and others present—in the first place, I didn't expect to find Mr. Tyler there.

Senator Reed: Who?

A. Mr. Tyler, representing the company union. I objected to his presence in the conference at the very outset. I told the Senator I did not come out there to confer with any representative of a company union, and that I did not want to take any part in a conference in which Mr. Tyler was present. I stated this was a company union and the International would not deal in any manner, shape, or form with a company union. The Senator said, "How do you know it is a company union, Clif?" I said, "Senator,"—and this is not in the transcript—"I did not come out here to argue that matter with you. I have been in this business a long time and I know a company union when I see one, just like you know a [fol. 5580] p. 2405 [Sheperd] dog when you see one." That part is left out. A number of times during the conference the Senator recalled the statement about the Shepherd dog. At no place in this transcript do I find any reference to it.

p. 2406 Here is a statement on the second page of this transcript in which I say, "Nothing in what I OK'd that said anything about any speed-up system", referring to the letter that I did OK to be used in contacting the customers. I said nothing about any speed-up system. This transcript has me saying, "Personally I wouldn't approve it." I think what I said was that personally I did not approve of their saying anything about the speed-up system in their contact with the customers. I told the Senator that I from my long experience representing labor unions and in view of Judge Collet's order did not want them saying anything to the customers that was in any way controversial, and it was controversial as to whether or not they had a speed-up system.

p. 2407 Q. Was anything said out there, Mr. Langsdale, that day about turning the matter over to Mr. Hogsett to settle, and if there was state whether or not it appears in that transcript?

A. Yes, there was something said about that and it does not appear in the transcript. Towards the end of the conference the Senator kept pressing me to tell him what facts I had from which I drew the conclusion that this was a company-dominated union. I said to the Senator, "The personal [equasion] enters into this with you, Senator. It is your wife's business and I think the personal [equasion] ought to enter into it. But I can't tell you all of the things your wife did to dominate this union, to keep them from joining the International. If you will turn this matter over to Mr. Hogsett, he and I can get together quickly on it, if you will give him carte blanche. The Senator said he would not give anybody carte blanche. Mr. Hogsett spoke up and said he wouldn't take it on that basis. There is nothing of that in here.

Q. Did that conversation last for some little time?

A. Not much longer than it has taken me to tell it here.

Q. There is nothing with reference to that matter in this transcript?

A. Not a thing. On another page, what has been marked Page 4 on my transcript here, Mr. Reed says, "But you are thinking about this from the standpoint of your case down here that you are threatening to file charges—or they have been filed. But any settlement of those matters would be an innocuous thing that would not bring peace if these other matters remained to be threshed out." That recalls to my mind the fact that at one stage of the conference the Senator said he might agree to disestablish this union and post the notices required by the Labor Board, although he did not think they had done anything that required it; he said they had not dominated this company union and it was not an illegal union under the Wagner Act, but, nevertheless, to settle the matter he might agree to that if we would agree to some settlement of this injunction suit. That came in about where this statement was made: "But any settlement of those matters would be an innocuous thing that would not bring peace if these other matters remained to be threshed out." Then the transcript continues, "Now the object in having Mr. Langsdale here", this is Senator Reed supposed to be talking, "I take it, is to cover these matters. Now if we could [fol. 5581] p. 2408 satisfy the International and satisfy ourselves at the same time so that we should wipe the slate and we could then say if we make certain concessions here which we don't think we ought to make in the interests of peace, we want peace." The transcript then has me say, "I am here to get your idea as to what you think this settlement should be." I am sure in that connection I said "this settlement of the labor controversy." I did not leave it as they have it so that it could be interpreted as though I was talking about the whole matter.

p. 2409 On what I have marked as Page 5 of the transcript they quote me as saying, "There are a lot of things they did that I advised them particularly not to do." I have no recollection of saying anything like that. If I did say it, what I meant was they had a lot of things in this letter they brought to me which they wanted to use in contacting the customers which I advised them not to put in the letter.

Q. With reference to the use of the controversial matters?

A. Yes. I advised them to leave out all statements as to wages, the health of the employees, as all of those matters were highly controversial. I did not think there [out] to be any letter which would be circulated among the customers in view not only of Judge Collet's order but in view of the possibility of an order in any other court.

On Page 10 they quote me as saying, "I say to you now that we agree with you that this company has no speed up system and we [out] to quit saying that you pay lower wages." What I said in that connection was that we ought not to put that in a letter that would be circulated among the customers. I never said this company did not have a speed-up system, and I never said they did have. I did not say anything to Senator Reed about the wages paid by the Donnelly Company except I did say to him that the union claimed they were conducting a silk shop and that their wage scale should be based upon a silk shop and not a cotton shop.

p. 2410 On Page 13 of my transcript this is what I find, "Mr. Reed: I forgot to mention that you charge us with maintaining a spy system and having a most notorious spy in the country, that is the substance of the charge." And they quote me as saying, "I have no facts in mind now that lead me to believe there is any truth in that." If I said that it was that I had no facts in mind which led me to believe that they had this notorious spy in their employ, and I meant A. A. Ahner. I have never found where they had Ahner in their employ. I did not mean to say that I had no facts which showed they had a spy system, because I had many facts which showed that.

On Page 19 they have me quoted as saying, "I don't agree to submit to what I may think a proper union is. I came out here prepared to settle all of these problems." If I said that I connected it with problems concerning the Labor Board matter, because anyone who can read the next sentence knows that is what I said. I say, "First, we are not going to deal with Mr. Tyler. Second, we have charges filed before the Board that certain people have been discharged because of union activities. If they lost wages because thereof, that ought to be settled."

p. 2411 On Page 24 they quote me as saying, "I can conceive it is very reasonable to me that a large majority wouldn't want to join the International. I'm not asking that you put them in there. I believe sincerely that a large majority of your people don't want it." I said something to that effect, but I did say the reason they didn't want it was because they had been thoroughly intimidated, and there had been such a campaign of vilification of the union that I didn't believe his people would join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Mr. Tyler is here quoted as saying, "Do you believe they want to belong to their own union?" and I follow that up by saying, "I don't think they have a darn thing to do with it." That was along the line of my conversation in connection with the other answer that is not quoted.

p. 2412

[fol. 5582] p. 2412 Further on on that page, Mr. Hogsett said, "Let me ask you, Clif, how do you suggest that if you could just move the pawn on the board of chess, how would you suggest that these employees register their choice?" Then I am quoted as saying, "I don't care about their choice." I know I did not say anything like that. I may have said I didn't care how they registered their choice, but I did not say I didn't care about their choice because it is their choice I have been fighting for for years. Then Mr. Hogsett is quoted again, "What is your position? What is your suggestion as to the machinery, the mechanics, the method as to the registration of the choice of these people." That followed my statement evidently that I did not care about the method of choice.

p. 2413

On the next page Mr. Hogsett says, "But you suggest that we must exercise some sort of coercion to force the disbandment of this employees' union," and they quote me as saying, "Without that you try this case out. Now what do you want?" Of course, I did not say that; I didn't say coercing these people out of their union. What I very likely said was that there would have to be some reasonable or legal choice; or I may have said they would have to disband this union because I was thoroughly convinced that it was a company union, a company-dominated union in violation of the Wagner Act.

They kept following up that suggestion about how I would suggest they register their desires. They have Mr. Hogsett saying, "Would you like the employees to register their choice?" and me to say, "The registration already engaged in is not permitted under the law", and Mr. Ingraham to say, "What future registration would satisfy?", and then they have me quoted: "Well, we both expect to be honest about it. We want a free and unhampered opportunity to try to organize the employees of the factory. Between you and me no free and unhampered opportunity would prevail down there," and that was the burden of my answer, "Between you and me no free and unhampered opportunity would prevail down there, but theoretically that is what we want." I recall that I told them why there would be no free and unhampered opportunity down there, because of the formation of this union and the way the organization of the other union was discouraged. Further on they quote me as saying, "Without any hampering at all or any influence at all. Speaking frankly here I don't think you have any reason to fear the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. They think they have some opportunity and they think they may succeed. I don't think they could. That's my opinion just within these four walls." I said something very much like that. That was my opinion, not that they couldn't organize them if they were free to organize them unhampered, but because of their then attitude, because of the organization of this company union, and the things that had been done to keep them out of the International, I didn't think they had a chance.

Senator Reed: I have been very patient about this. The question asked the witness was to point out the discrepancies or omissions in this document.

The Witness: That is what I am doing.

Senator Reed: Now he is indulging in saying, "if I said that, then I said something else, and if I didn't say it, I meant something else."

A. I did say I didn't think we had much chance to organize these people, and that was my opinion. I am not an organizer; I am a lawyer, and I said to Mr. Reed that Mr. Perlstein and others did not agree with me. I said,
p. 2414 "They think they have a chance and they have the right under the law to exercise that chance."

[fol. 5583] p. 2415 Those are the principal matters I find in this transcript, according to my recollection.

[fol. 5585] (Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 112.)

Meeting at Mr. Reed's home, 5236 Cherry Street, Kansas City, Mo. on January 20, 1939, at 3:00 P. M.

Mr. Reed: Now let's see, Ingraham, Mr. Hogsett and myself are here representing the Donnelly Companies, Tyler is here representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and, Cliff, you represent—

Mr. Langsdale: I represent the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Reed: How about the Joint Board?

Mr. Langsdale: I represent them all, that is, for this particular conference.

Mr. Reed: And Mr. Broderick and Mr. Watson are here representing the Labor Board.

Mr. Reed: Now suppose if we get anywhere, we want to settle this whole thing.

Mr. Langsdale: That is the way I feel about it, I want to dispose of this whole thing.

Mr. Reed: Now, Cliff, you people have made a number of charges and complaints against us and I would like to talk it over with you. Now one thing that they charge is that we have a speed up system down there.

Mr. Langsdale: That is hardly a part of this conference.

Mr. Reed: It has to be a part of this general settlement. If we get to an agreement, we don't want you to come around next week or next month and say we didn't pass on that.

Mr. Langsdale: We have certain charges filed before the Labor Board. Speed-up system has nothing to do with that. We charge that you have a company dominated union, you discharged a number of employees because they belonged to the International Ladies Garment Workers' [fol. 5586] Union. Whether you have a speed up system or not has nothing to do with it.

Mr. Reed: We might thrash that thing out and then all these charges that are being made—you people are out making a boycott—how can we accomplish anything here by just talking about one or two matters that you may have lodged with the Board?

Mr. Langsdale: Tell me, Senator, are they now charging in the campaign that you have a speed up system, or was that before you got your injunction?

Mr. Reed: They are doing it now.

Mr. Langsdale: They brought to me a letter which they wanted to send out. I deleted parts, but the letter said that you didn't employ legitimate labor union people; that your union was a company union and not an appropriate union under the Labor Act to bargain collectively. Nothing in what I OK'd that said anything about any speed up system. Personally I wouldn't approve of it.

Mr. Reed: But whether they are or not, they are the things you have charged. I think Mr. Broderick will agree with me that we ought to settle everything and wipe this slate clean and have all this trouble ended.

Mr. Broderick: I think that if we are able to reach definite conclusions on the charges now before the Board that that might be the first step in reaching a settlement of the whole picture. We are concerned only with the charges we have.

[fol. 5587] Mr. Reed: Haven't you charges outside those Mr. Langsdale mentioned?

Mr. Broderick: Now, that is all. Violations of Section 8, 13 of the Act.

Mr. Ingraham: When we had a talk the other day I thought one of you gentlemen said "Certainly, I don't blame the Donnelly Garment Company for not agreeing to a settlement of this matter unless everything is settled." My recollection is that Mr. Watson said "I am willing to ask that Mr. Perlstein and Mr. Dubinsky be present".

Mr. Broderick: We have no authority in the wide world to say anything about the injunction.

Mr. Watson: I think it would be helpful to settle everything at one time. So far as my being able to tell Mr. Perlstein or Mr. Dubinsky—I couldn't do that.

Mr. Reed: But you are thinking about this from the standpoint of your case down here that you are threatening to file charges—or they have been filed. But any settlement of those matters would be an innocuous thing that would not bring peace if these other matters remained to be thrashed out. Now the object in having Mr. Langsdale here, I take it, is to cover these matters. Now if we could satisfy the International and satisfy ourselves at the same time so that we should wipe the slate and we could then say if we make certain concessions here which we don't think we ought to make in the interests of peace, we want peace.

[fol. 5588] Mr. Langsdale: I am here to get your idea as to what you think this settlement should be.

Mr. Reed: I'm here to find out what you want.

Mr. Reed: Let's take these things up just for a moment. They have charged hundreds of times, publicly and to our customers and they are continuing to charge that we have a speed up system that breaks down the health, destroys the nervous energies of these girls. Now I don't believe, Cliff, that you would make a charge of that kind if you didn't believe it to be true.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, Senator, I said to you that I didn't approve of any literature that contained that charge. I'm not going to mention here the charges you make that the International Ladies Garment Workers Union is a bunch of racketeers, I'm not going to bring that up here. I don't consider that a part of it.

Mr. Reed: These charges that may have been made by our people in this controversy are not a matter that can be settled here. But you charge that speed up system. Now that is absolutely impossible. The way the work is done it isn't like a fresh machine, you feed the bundles in at one end, each fellow is forced to do his work. The way the work is done down there, a girl sits down to her machine and calls for her bundle, the boy brings it, she works that bundle through. Nobody is waiting for her. When she finishes, she takes her card, puts down on the card how much she has done and then she calls for another bundle. At night she fills that card out, keeps one copy and hands [fol. 5589] the other in.

Mr. Langsdale: There are a lot of things they did that I advised them particularly not to do.

Mr. Reed: Let me spend a minute on the caste system. That office is perhaps unique. There is one entrance; Mrs. Reed, the president of the company, all of the officers and all of the employees use the same entrance and elevators. They associate together, there's a club out here that Mrs. Reed set apart for the employees, they go out there and have their dances. I don't know what is meant unless you mean that the colored folks, janitors, maids, etc. They are all satisfied. I was talking to Mrs. Reed the other day, and she said you couldn't get one of them to quit. Now, that is the so called caste system. Well they say that the girls break down and have nervous prostration and that they are in hospitals, etc. Their health record down there is so good that the insurance company who sells them health insurance, one half of which is paid by the company, turned back this year $6,000 of premiums that had been paid in.

They say that we pay lower wages than are paid in the industry, thirty per cent lower.

Mr. Broderick: I have this thought to suggest before you go on. You have mentioned the caste system, and the speed up system and the wages. Do you feel that you should get the answers to those questions before we can dispose of this matter?

[fol. 5590] Mr. Reed: Yes, I think if we are going to consider the concessions which you will demand we want to know that if we do make the concessions, we can get to a ground where our difficulties will be settled.

Mr. Langsdale: So far as the speed up system charge being made, it is over my advice. I never heard of the caste system. So far as the wages are concerned, I don't need to tell you that the International classes you as a silk shop. Now that is all there is to it.

Mr. Reed: But right here in this town were made contracts for cotton workers way below our scale for years, and in what you call the silk shops their wages are way below the Donnelly Company.

Mr. Broderick: Listen will you do this Senator? If the union would stop referring to the Donnelly Company as the place where the speed up system is employed, where they pay lower wages than elsewhere, stop referring to the caste system, those items which you have mentioned, breaking down their health, would you be willing to comply with the things we are here for?

Mr. Reed: While we are on the question of health, a considerable number of employees down there have worked ever since the plant started—they have an organization of women down there who have worked there for over fifteen years—

Mr. Broderick: I'm not challenging that.

[fol. 5591] Mr. Reed: You get all this stuff—a part of a plan which has worked as great a detriment to this company as they can make it.

If we are going to talk about us making concessions I want to know that we are going to settle this thing. I am in the humor, I'm always in the humor, to get along peaceably and I have nothing against unions. Cliff here knows that for years I fought for the unions. I suppose I could dig up fifty resolutions that labor organizations have sent me thanking me for favors. I have no axe to grind with labor unions.

(Mr. Langsdale said something about speaking for Senator Reed in 1922)

Mr. Reed: Now if we can consider these charges that I can satisfy you are absolutely without foundation then we would have approached a point where we can begin to consider the things that these people are disputing about.

Mr. Broderick: What I would like to get from you, Senator, is this: I would like to have a list of all the things you complain about since they seem to be a prerequisite to any agreement. I have no authority to speak for the union. Mr. Langsdale will consider them. I do feel that we should cover something definite fast. We can't go back and forth like a football. If they would stop doing these things, would you do the things I'm asking for.

Mr. Reed: If we are going to be hailed before the Labor Board and have to go on with this litigation we might just as well give the thing up. But if there is a hope of working [fol. 5592] out a solution we are willing to sit here and talk about it. There is another party to be considered, Mr. Tyler here, representing the Donnelly Union.

Mr. Langsdale: At the outset, of course I'm here and with all due respect to your situation, Senator, I'm representing a legitimate labor union, some 300,000 members over the country. Before I agree to anything, Mr. Tyler would have to drop out of the picture because that union would have to be disbanded, because in my own mind I know that it is not an appropriate union under the Wagner Act, but we can reach no agreement that doesn't have that.

We have had certain women discharged because of union activities. Under the charges filed before the Labor Board, they should be reinstated. If there is any back pay they are entitled to, that would have to be paid.

We don't intend to deal with any company union under any conditions and I am thoroughly beyond any doubt convinced that the union Frank represents is not a union such as was contemplated by the Wagner Act.

Mr. Reed: Let me assume for this one statement that Frank's union is not a good faith union. What business is that of anybody's but the members of that union?

Mr. Langsdale: It is the business of the United States Government and the Labor Board.

Mr. Reed: Suppose they are getting along all right, they have organized and are satisfied, nobody complains?

Mr. Langsdale: It is the business of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 5593] Mr. Reed: How is it the business of the International—they want to organize these people themselves?

Mr. Langsdale: It can't exist if they are going to recognize company unions, and the Congress of the United States said—

Mr. Reed: I've read the law but I don't think anybody knows just what the law is. I thought it was unconstitutional—still do, except that the Supreme Court said it was and I have to abide by their decision.

Mr. Reed: You're speaking now for the International and here's a group of people organized and getting along. You simply want to break up that union as a preliminary to anything else?

Mr. Langsdale: When we reach a pact containing a number of conditions that must be one.

Mr. Tyler: I don't see how, without violation of my duty and stultification of myself, I could consent to any such condition. I see no ground to be denominated a company union. I would defy the facts as I know them.

Mr. Langsdale: I am thoroughly convinced in my own mind that it is a company union. I'm not casting any stones at Frank here but he is known around town as a union [bating lawer]. He has a right to be in any kind of business he wants to be. He organized the Safeway Stores union which is a company union and which we think we will disestablish. Now there is no doubt in my mind at all that Frank is a specialist when it comes to organizing company unions.

I say to you now that we agree with you that this company has no speed up system, and we ought to quit saying [fol. 5594] that you pay lower wages, but we won't agree to anything that doesn't contain in that same agreement that this union known as the Donnelly Garment Workers Union is disestablished.

Mr. Hogsett: Isn't it true, Clif, that the only Court—the three judge court—that heard the case, held it to be a valid union, wasn't that true?

Mr. Langsdale: Nevertheless, I am not going to argue that with you. I have been in a good many more of these proceedings than you have Bill and than the Senator has but I know a company union when I see it and I know that this is a company union and we won't make any agreement that hasn't that as a condition in it.

Mr. Tyler: If these employees disband and later organize the employees of the plant, you want this deal to provide that these employees will never establish a union of their own?

Clif, it should satisfy you that they are unanimous in their desire to have their own union.

Mr. Langsdale: You never organize unions for—

Mr. Tyler: Only when employees come to me and tell me they are coming to me on their own motion.

Mr. Langsdale: Frank, you can't convince me that Rose Todd came to your office simply because she looked up your name in the directory.

Mr. Reed: Your position, as I understand it, is that a plant union is to be disbanded and these people must disband and then if tomorrow, or next week, of their own motion, they organize a union you say that shouldn't be either. In any event you are going to consider it a company union.

[fol. 5595] Mr. Langsdale: It is difficult for me to think that a [lepard] can change its spots. We arrive at an agreement that the Donnelly Garment Company shouldn't sign a closed shop agreement.

Mr. Reed: While you sign them every day.

Mr. Langsdale: But we represent the International.

Mr. Hogsett: Just assume now a hypothetical case—that the employees, one hundred per cent do want to join their own union and not this international union. Do you say that that is impossible?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I don't say it's impossible but I view it with suspicion especially in view of the precedent circumstances in the organization of this union. Let me cite a case to show you my point of view. Before the old NRA, Emery Bird Thayer discharged five old wrappers they said they were discharging them for inefficiency. A fellow had been with them for 19 years. John Harding tried the case. A. Ahner, who is the chief strike breaking agent of the country, represented the company. (Here I didn't get what Mr. Langsdale said about the trial, etc. LB).

Mr. Langsdale: Now the situation isn't as bad as that, but you have got here, I am going to call a spade a spade. You have Mr. Tyler here who represents company unions. Rose Todd found his office some way or other. This International Union can exist without the Donnelly Workers Union. We are not going to go back on their principle or cast aside any of their code just to make peace with the Donnellys and one of their cardinal principles is that they will not any time or anywhere recognize what they know to be a company union.

[fol. 5596] Mr. Tyler: We don't ask—

Mr. Reed: It is a strange position for a man of your intelligence Cliff—if a man is the counsel for employees in a plant the fact that afterwards other employees in other plants come to him and ask him to represent them shows that the first one to come to him was a company union, a company dominated union.

Mr. Langsdale: They go to Mr. Tyler because he had successfully organized a company union with the Donnelly people. The Grace Company went to Mr. Tyler and Mr. Tyler steered away from them. He sent them to a friend of his.

Mr. Reed: Don't that happen every day? I remember trying a notorious patent case. I don't know why Tyler's employment by this Union is any worse curse on him than your employment by the Union.

Mr. Reed: Now I understand Clif's position perfectly.

Mr. Langsdale: I am standing on the Wagner Act. It says that workers shall have the right to bargain collectively and to select representatives of their own choosing, which I say the Donnelly Union does not.

Mr. Reed: Why do you say that?

Mr. Langsdale: I'm going to argue that before the Court.

Mr. Reed: I forgot to mention that you charge us with maintaining a spy system and having a most notorious spy in the country, that is the substance of the charge.

Mr. Langsdale: I have no facts in mind now that lead me to believe there is any truth in that.

[fol. 5597] Mr. Broderick: Mr. Tyler is convinced in his mind that that is not a company dominated union. He is ready to fight it out. These charges now pending include the charge that that is a company dominated union, and the discharge of ten or twelve people. Any disposition of this case would require that that union would have to go out.

Mr. Reed: Why?

Mr. Broderick: Because we have proof enough to warrant that.

Mr. Langsdale: You put in your own evidence an affidavit that Rose Todd said "I would expect to be fired if I joined the Union".

Mr. Ingraham: That is not what it was Clif. What Rose said was that she wouldn't feel that she could work in a place where 1300 people were against the International.

Mr. Langsdale: We do not depend on that affidavit to make our case.

Mr. Reed: What is the use of us going to trial before you?

Mr. Broderick: I am not going to try the case. I am merely telling you. I don't hear the evidence.

Mr. Langsdale: You are asking him what he thinks of this case.

Mr. Broderick: I'm telling him that is why I would ask that you withdraw your recognition of the employees union because I consider it a company union.

Mr. Ingraham: If they would reorganize?

Mr. Broderick: If after this proceeding is over, they reorganized and there was an absence of charges that it was a company dominated union, there would be nothing in the world a court could do about it. The Act expressly provides that it may have such an organization and the only requirement is that it be not company dominated.

[fol. 5598] How can we say it would be all right until we have tried it?

Mr. Ingraham: Cliff says it just wouldn't.

Mr. Langsdale: There are plant unions that are not company unions. I had a group come to me from Luzier's. There are groups that really genuinely want to organize a plant union. I think they are foolish nevertheless there are that kind of organizations, but I don't think the Donnelly Garment Company are that type.

Mr. Broderick: I don't see how we can say that six months from now. (I didn't hear the rest of that statement) (everybody talking at once but I did get the last part of it—) that there be no interference with the choice of the workers and if there is no interference

Mr. Ingraham: Would the board hold an election

Mr. Broderick: Would they

Mr. Ingraham: Yes

Mr. Broderick: The Board has always held an election—it depends on the circumstances of the petition. These charges of course contemplate no election.

Mr. Reed: Don't the board rule that an employer couldn't ask for an election.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think that is strictly correct.

Mr. Broderick: We don't accept petitions from employers only where two rival unions each claim to represent a majority.

Mr. Langsdale: In that kind of a case I think an employer should have the right to demand an election. As a member of the American Bar Association Labor Committee I recommended that change. Where the board contends [fol. 5599] that neither of [of] the unions is company dominated, they can hold an election, because the board doesn't recognize a company dominated union as an appropriate union to represent the employees.

Mr. Reed: Of course the board can't prejudge a union.

Mr. Langsdale: No the board can't.

Mr. Broderick: The board doesn't try to prejudge. On the filing of the petition, the board investigates the petition and in a few cases elections have been held for employers. In New York there were seven petitions for elections asked by employers. Four instances, elections were held and in three there weren't. All in the course of a year.

Mr. Hogsett: I thought I had read in the first annual report of the National Labor Relations Board a ruling in the nature of a regulation under which the duties of the National Labor Relations Board only to employees are defined.

Mr. Reed: About these girls. Is that part of your charges that we discharged ten or eleven girls?

Mr. Langsdale: You remember Senator that we just got about through with that case when the act was declared unconstitutional?

Mr. Reed: Yes, I remember. There were 300 people let out because of a slump in business. When business revived and at that time there may have been one that belonged to the union. Now they called back in regular reinstatement for calling back to work—they called back 120 I think of these people and in the 120 there were 7 of these people that were complaining called back—more percentage of those who belonged to the union or threatened to belong [fol. 5600] to the union, than there were of the others. The company didn't know anything about any of them belonging to the union. The evidence we took down there before the Board pretty clearly showed that those girls with the exception of one of them had joined the union after they were laid off and they were no longer in the company's employ.

Mr. Langsdale: That is your conclusion.

Mr. Reed: I have a right to draw a conclusion when I hear the evidence and know it.

Mr. Broderick: Will you grant that I have the same right? If I can show that this is a company dominated union—

Mr. Reed: That is what you charge—you'll have to prove it.

Mr. Broderick: I don't think we will ever get anywhere. Find something to hang our hats on. Now what will you do? I am interested solely in the [charged] filed by the Board, but we will have to agree to certain definite things.

Mr. Reed: How can I agree with a man who says you have to disband. We didn't have anything to do with it. I'm saying that this is a bargain made at arm's length. If it hadn't been we wouldn't have conceded $16.50 to bundle boys. We had to come to Mr. Tyler's terms.

Mr. Tyler: I don't see how the Senator can dissolve it without their consent.

Mr. Broderick: He doesn't need their consent. What I would do if I were in the Senator's position—the order doesn't run against the union, it runs against the company.

Mr. Reed: They could sue us on our good contract.

[fol. 5601] Mr. Broderick: They can if they have a good contract.

Mr. Reed: It is a good contract. If you try that in Court Mr. Tyler would sue us and we would have to go to Court. Now what kind of defense could we make. We signed a contract and we signed it on the theory that we were dealing with a legitimate organization. We couldn't go into that Court and say that that organization was an illegal and illegitimate one.

Mr. Tyler: 97, 98 and 99% of the employees want to belong to their own union and don't want to belong to any other.

Mr. Langsdale: Now Senator I am not so gullible that I believe you can not persuade Mr. Tyler to persuade his clients to disestablish this union. We have disestablished a number of them.

Mr. Ingraham: Here is the most insurmountable thing, Clif, if I understand you right. If we make an agreement we have to make an agreement with those employees down there never to organize.

Mr. Broderick: He couldn't mean that.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't agree to submit to what I may think is not a proper union. I came out here prepared to settle all of our problems.

Mr. Hogsett: What are your demands.

Mr. Langsdale: First, we are not going to deal with Mr. Tyler. Second, we have charges filed before the Board that certain people were discharged because of union activities. If they lost wages because thereof, that ought to be settled.

Mr. Hogsett: How?

[fol. 5602] Mr. Langsdale: Upon the basis of the facts we have filed. Maybe you and I Bill could settle it.

Mr. Hogsett: If you and I were settling a damage suit, I would say how much do you want?

Mr. Broderick: He wants you to disestablish the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. Offer to reinstate those employees who were discharged with no loss of seniority or any other rights they previously enjoyed.

Mr. Reed: There are no seniority rights in that plant at all.

Mr. Langsdale: In other words, reinstate them under the same circumstances they worked before.

Mr. Broderick: Also to notify all the workers down at the plant that the union has been disestablished by posting a notice that the employees have the right of self-organization, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and I think that covers it, and adjust this back pay.

Mr. Langsdale: Jane Palmer, who filed these charges, said it wouldn't amount to much. Before coming out here, I telephoned Jane about this and she said it amounted to about $5,000. I am willing to submit evidence on that. It might not be $30.00. Broderick was under the impression that Jane had told him it didn't amount to anything. So Jane now has it way beyond what Broderick understood.

Mr. Reed: Have they been unemployed all this time?

Mr. Langsdale: [Now] they have had other jobs.

Mr. Reed: Working for you, aren't they?

Mr. Langsdale: No some of them have been working on other jobs, maybe not as good as they had. I've told you [fol. 5603] what we want, you tell me what you want so far as the injunction is concerned.

Mr. Reed: We want a permanent injunction and that is what we are going to get—that is what we are going to try to get—I am never sure about such things.

Mr. Langsdale: I thought we were going to settle things today.

Mr. Reed: That is what I thought, but you laid down here what seems to me to be an impossible situation. You say we have to do that. That is a good deal like saying to a fellow you concede that I am the owner of this property as an original proposition and then we will talk about some details as to right of compensation.

Mr. Broderick: I think the Senator knows what his obligations are to a majority, but we challenge the majority.

Mr. Reed: Mr. Broderick, how can you say that in view of the fact that all of the employees on their own motion, without Mrs. Reed knowing anything about it, circulated a paper in which they said in substance they wanted nothing to do with the CIO; that they were satisfied and pleased with their employment and highly complimentary. They did that in advance on their own motion, and the Court of Appeals has said commenting on that that under those circumstances to have tried to do anything, would have amounted to nothing. I'm telling you that there will be no truthful person who can be found that will say it is not just as I told you.

Mr. Hogsett: In other words, doesn't that destroy—

Mr. Langsdale: I have always respected the Senator. I'm not going to say that I don't believe that he believes what he is saying, but I am in my own mind convinced that [fol. 5604] this is a company dominated union and I can't agree to any concession beyond that.

Mr. Reed: Now that was caused, Mr. Broderick, among these employees by the fact that Mr. Dubinsky and others said that they were going to force the unionization of these employees. That was their protest and notice—After that the Wagner Act which all of us thought unconstitutional was passed. After that the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner Act. Now the Wagner Act specifically provided that these people, as much as though they named them, had the right to organize their own union and to keep it free from interference on the outside, and they did it. Now all of this I know through Mr. Tyler as he expressed himself in Court. Naturally I've heard it in many other ways. So in order to protect themselves they go to Mr. Tyler. Now is there anything remarkable about it? Strikes were going on. Minorities of employees had sit down strikes. They had a lot of ruffians along the street to beat them up and naturally these people wanted protection.

Mr. Ingraham: Let me interrupt Senator—I think I got a telephone call from Gossett. It was Gossett, not Tyler, who I first learned was representing the employees.

Langsdale: (Goes on a tirade about Gossett)

Mr. Reed: You told me something about Gossett that I never heard. I want to say this about Al Gossett. Al Gossett is my friend—

Mr. Langsdale: He's mine too.

Mr. Reed: (continuing) Al Gossett has always been one of the fairest men I ever knew in all my life.

[fol. 5605] Mr. Langsdale: He is my friend too. He probably is as good a friend of mine as he is of yours. Just because he doesn't believe in my philosophy—

Mr. Reed: I hope he don't. I think your philosophy is wrong.

Mr. Langsdale: I'm not going to say, Senator, that I think yours is.

Mr. Broderick: Is it your position, Senator, that you couldn't propose that the Donnelly Workers Union disband.

Mr. Reed: I don't see how we can unless Mr. Tyler consents to the dissolution.

Mr. Broderick: Would you?

Tyler: Consent to the dissolution? No.

Mr. Broderick: I think that is the meat of the thing.

Mr. Ingraham: Would you if they could reorganize?

Mr. Tyler: I have offered several times to hold an election.

Mr. Langsdale: Do you think that was a genuine offer Frank?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, I made it in open Court.

Mr. Langsdale: I have been in this business quite a while.

Mr. Broderick: I don't say that this group has no right to say that this group has no right to say what the employees are going to do.

Mr. Langsdale: I can conceive it is very reasonable to me that a large majority wouldn't want to join the International. I'm not asking that you put them in there. I believe sincerely that a large majority of your people don't want it.

Mr. Tyler: Do you believe they want to belong to their own union?

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think they have a darn thing to do with it.

[fol. 5607] Mr. Langsdale: Let me ask you this Senator, I came out here to settle difficulties, but if you are going to set up an absolute obstacle that we can't control—

Mr. Reed: Would you agree, Mr. Langsdale, that these gentlemen should go down there and have a meeting and an election and determine whether or not they wanted to belong to this union.

Mr. Langsdale: Now that wouldn't mean a thing.

Mr. Hogsett: Let me ask you this, Clif, how do you suggest that if you could just move the pawn on the board of chess, how would you suggest that these employees register their choice?

Mr. Langsdale: I don't care about their choice.

Mr. Hogsett: What is your position. What is your suggestion as to the machinery, the mechanics, the method as to the registration of the choice of these people. How in hell do you suggest that they register?

Mr. Langsdale: The law provides that they shall be left alone by the employer. They shall exercise no influence over them whatever.

Mr. Hogsett: But you suggest that we must exercise some sort of coercion to force the disbandment of this employees' union.

Mr. Langsdale: Without that you try this case out. Now what do you want?

Mr. Hogsett: A permanent injunction as prayed in the bill as Point I for the plaintiffs, You want the disestablishment of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and the reinstatement of six or seven employees. Would you concede a permanent injunction as prayed in the bill?

Mr. Langsdale: Do you mean as allowed by Collett?

[fol. 5608] Mr. Hogsett: Will you concede a permanent injunction as prayed in the plaintiffs' bill?

Mr. Langsdale: You mean that our people should not do the things that the Norris-La Guardia Act says cannot be enjoined?

Mr. Hogsett: No.

Mr. Langsdale: You have an order made by Collet, you want more than that?

Mr. Hogsett: Yes. I think the Collet order is less than we want. (Reading from the prayer of the Bill)—that is what we want.

Mr. Langsdale: Now Bob it is not only unreasonable it is inconceivable. You also realize that this case comes within the Norris-La Guardia Act. If we should arrive at an agreement I probably would advise my clients that they didn't have any right—

Mr. Hogsett: To conduct secondary boycotts?

Mr. Langsdale: I'm not so sure about that.

Mr. Hogsett: Lowe v. Lawlor is authority for that.

Mr. Langsdale: That is twenty years old.

Mr. Hogsett: It is still the law.

Mr. Langsdale: Have you read the recent state decisions in New York?

Mr. Hogsett: We get the same service you do and somebody in my office reads everyone that has any connection with the Donnelly case.

Mr. Langsdale: Here is what I have in mind. If we could agree that the company union could be disestablished then maybe we could agree on something, but we will not deal with this company union at all.

[fol. 5609] Mr. Hogsett: Would you like the employees to register their choice?

Mr. Langsdale: The registration already engaged in is not permitted under the law.

Mr. Ingraham: What future registration would satisfy?

Mr. Langsdale: Well, we both expect to be honest about it. We want a free and unhampered opportunity to try to organize the employees of the factory. Between you and me no free and unhampered opportunity would prevail down there, but theoretically that is what we want.

Mr. Watson: If everybody exercised a due respect for the Act—

Mr. Broderick: What rights do you claim?

Mr. Hogsett: I was trying to boil this down to get the high points stated. I don't know how the Point could ever be brought out without violation of contract and good faith.

Mr. Watson: Do you want to try it out?

Mr. Broderick: I think it can be done.

Mr. Hogsett: Over the protest of these people?

Mr. Broderick: The members down there have the right under the law, to organize without the interference by the employers. Clif stated his position—

Mr. Langsdale: Without any hampering at all or any influence at all. Speaking frankly here, I don't think you have any reason to fear the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. They think they have some opportunity and they think they may succeed. I don't think they could. That's my opinion just within these four walls. But they have a theoretical right, whether that right means anything, I personally don't think they have a chance.

[fol. 5610] Mr. Reed: What is the sense in industrial [warefare] when you sit here frankly—and it is to your credit that you admit that you can't gain anything.

Mr. Langsdale: I said it is my opinion that they can't gain anything—not the Union's.

Mr. Langsdale: Before I start anything Frank you have to drop out of the picture.

Mr. Reed: You people are out here to bring about as much as you can industrial peace. Now you are asked to enter into a long trial. To do what? To dissolve the union that Mr. Langsdale says will never come into his union.

Mr. Langsdale: I'm merely offering an opinion.

Mr. Reed: This is his opinion. You have always conceded, I think, that you couldn't get anywhere by violence.

Mr. Langsdale: Are you insinuating that I am in favor of any violence?

Mr. Reed: I am saying your clients are.

Mr. Reed: You gentlemen are supposed to be doing something that is going to get somewhere. Now if Mr. Langsdale's position was that if this union was dissolved immediately or in the near future, these people could be incorporated in his union, then there might be some use in dissolving this union. But he says I just want you to bust up a union of people who do not want to join the International. When we are through—if we bust it up—these people can go the next day and can organize another and they are going to organize another one because they want to do it. Now isn't it an absurd thing for the employees of the Federal government to come down here and where [fol. 5611] a company has fine conditions, good working hours and wages, and have a payroll here and ask to bust up a perfectly legitimate union? Now if you came in here and you examined into that factory and you found that there were bad conditions there, that these charges were true, and then you had found a company union, then these conditions could be relieved through some sort of an organization. Now we have business to attend to, we have to keep that business running to keep these people employed and I'm saying to you that I would have gotten Mrs. Reed out of that business five years ago if it hadn't been that she said I can't turn these people out. Now if the business were seriously interfered with I would tell her to quit. That is the fact. If it wasn't for one thing, she says there have been women there for twenty years, supported families, sent their children through school. Now that it is a good place to work is shown by the facts. Now are you going to say to us we are going to go down there now and coerce these people into submitting to a breach of their contract, and the next day they can hold another meeting and organize another union.

You made a statement that you want us to put the sign up in the place. I am willing to do that—you put that thing up there to tell these people they have the right to organize.

Mr. Broderick: It may sound, the conclusions may sound, ridiculous. I can't help that. What I'm asking you is this: If we don't dispose of them this week we will have to go to trial.

[fol. 5612] Mr. Reed: Do you not remember when the question came up whether they could organize a union the next day and Mr. Fee said no, at least thirty days ought to intervene.

Mr. Broderick: If these people want to have their own organization they could do it. Tyler said he would go back there to them and recommend to them that they disestablish themselves.

Mr. Tyler: If we could reorganize immediately and be free of any further trouble.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you remember one of you said if that happens, if the union filed charges we would ignore them?

Mr Broderick: We couldn't ignore them. We would investigate them and if the charges had foundation in fact we would proceed as we are here. Mr. Tyler asked me how to proceed with the new union and I said "If I could tell you what to do I would not only be famous I would be rich".

Mr. Langsdale: Without casting any reflections on Frank, if I find Ahner in a union, I would know it was not intended to be a good faith union. When I find Frank I don't and I won't have confidence in it.

Mr. Tyler: What I said was that if it would settle this whole thing I would be willing to go back to my people and recommend they dissolve the union provided they could organize another union and that the Board would stand back of it.

Mr. Reed: There was talk here that day that the Board could not guard us against molestation in the future and the statement was made that if this thing was done under the auspices of the Board, that the Board could take care of that situation, that the board would have the right under [fol. 5613] those circumstances, and in that talk we talked about dissolving the union.

Mr. Broderick: You people were about an inch apart.

Mr. Hogsett: In your capacity as mediator here, now if you will take over the job of seeing that these employees can register under your supervision their choice as between the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and an employees union—if you object to this particular one, then some other employees union which may be better—and if they choose the employees union, as they would 100% against Clif's organization, and if you certify that as the bargaining agent of all the employees, what happens?

Mr. Broderick: Assume that happens. That organization comes in. They file a petition. We investigate the organization. There are only certain ways that those questions may arise. If it is devoid of any employer interference or domination there is nothing we can do about that.

Mr. Hogsett: I'm not undertaking to have you speak for anyone except yourself. But can't you in your official capacity arrange now to conduct an impartial election?

Mr. Broderick: Let me tell you Mr. Tyler. You go back and recommend to them that they disestablish the union. Tell them that Mr. Broderick of the Labor Board thinks that we are a company dominated union. We don't think we are but he says we are.

[fol. 5614] Mr. Langsdale: You people never had the slightest idea that your employees needed a union until after the Supreme Court invalidated the NRA. You rush in within a few days thereafter, get Miss Todd to organize these people.

Mr. Broderick: We won't send a copy of the charges to the Garment Workers Union.

Mr. Reed: Why?

Mr. Broderick: Because the Pacific Greyhound case says they are not necessary.

Mr. Reed: Why would a hearing be refused to these 1300 people whose organization is being directly attacked. Why would anybody refuse it?

Mr. Broderick: Oh, I would mail him a copy. I do not think his clients would be entitled to be heard.

Mr. Reed: Why not?

Mr. Broderick: Because the charges are against the company, not against the union. (Everybody then talked at once about judges refusing to hear testmiony, etc. at Labor hearings, and I couldn't get it).

Mr. Langsdale: I am perfectly anxious to settle both of these cases. We wouldn't be getting anywhere Senator. What my people want, regardless of my opinion, they have a right under the law to organize every employee.

Mr. Reed: Don't every other person have that right?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Mr. Broderick: Are you willing to reduce what you want to writing and I will reduce what I want to writing?

[fol. 5615] Mr. Broderick: I came out here fully thinking that we could agree, but we can't.

Mr. Reed: What would you have to have before you would be ready to consider this case closed if we do the same?

Mr. Langsdale: I'm the third party.

Mr. Broderick: I assumed your position would be the same as ours.

Mr. Langsdale: Not necessarily.

Mr. Broderick: Will you post notices, will you disestablish the union, will you reinstate the eight or ten people.

(No answer).

Mr. Broderick: If you will write me your provisions, I will make you mine concurrently, Mr. Langsdale will make his, in writing. I understand the Senator wants this boycott stopped.

Mr. Reed: Well we are going to stop it pretty quick.

Mr. Broderick: Can we agree now on a time for meeting. Bob I will call you.

[fol. 5616] (N. R. A.—J. M. C. Exhibit 3.)

HOLC'S Delinquents Peak of Foreclosures Spain Explained Votes Guessed

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The job of collecting the three billion dollars worth of mortgages which the HOLC has advanced to homeowners has put bearded, hard-working John H. Fahey in a tough spot.

Up until last June, Chairman Fahey and his board were happy and entranced. No dead cats came their way. They were paying out money, asking upon almost no one to pay it back.

Day of Reckoning

But now repayment day has come and the Home Owners Loan Corporation, with 15 years to collect its $3,000,000,000 of mortgages, has become the greatest liquidating agency in Washington.

Mr. Fahey got his first deluge of dead cats when he appeared before the House appropriations committee and was accused of enforcing a Scrooge-like foreclosure policy.

ing a moratorium foreclosure policy.

"Instead of turning people out in the streets," congressmen criticized, "why not declare a one-year holiday on foreclosures? Increasing prosperity will enable a lot of owners to pay up their mortgage interest by that time."

Firm For Foreclosure

But Mr. Fahey stood by his guns, insisted that HOLC could not do honest without risk of losing the government's $2,000,000,000 investment. Once HOLC started delaying mortgage payments, he pointed out, every homeowner would expect it.

He cited figures estimating that there would be only 100,000 foreclosures by July 1, 1936. On the face of it, this is a large figure. However, placed alongside the figure of 1,000,000 HOLC loans made, it shows up as but 10 per cent.

Sixteen foreclosures out of each 100 loans made is not bad, says Mr. Fahey, since it must be borne in mind that the HOLC co ld only lend to homeowners in financial distress—the exact opposite of the policy of private mortgage lenders.

Foreclosures Hit Peak

Mr. Fahey also claims that this is the peak year for foreclosures. From now on they will decline. The experience of all mortgage lenders shows that loans going sour do so within the first three years. After a man has held his home three years he is usually able to keep it permanently.

From 1933 to last July, the HOLC foreclosed on only 20,000 homes. [illegible] the total will go

SCHOOLS TO SUSPEND FOR SUMMER MAY 31

Board of Education Votes on Vacation Period

Memphis city schools will suspend for summer vacation May 31, it was decided last night at a meeting of the board of education, Ernest Ball, superintendent of schools, said. A Cotton Carnival holiday May 14 and a two-day Easter vacation March 25 and 26 also were voted.

John Gunn, former railroad man, was selected to succeed John S. Heffernan as custodian at Peabody High School. Mr. Heffernan, who died yesterday of influenza, had been connected with the schools for 28 years.

Cut School Schedule

The board decided to make up time lost by some of the schools during the recent flood emergency by eliminating certain outside activities and the "rainy day" schedule, and concentration on fundamental subjects, Mr. Ball said.

Permission to attend the national meeting of the Association for Childhood Education, to be held at San Antonio from March 29 to April 3, was granted the following teachers: Miss Margaret Johnson, Miss [illegible]

Cottonseed Oil Tax Hit By Browning

NASHVILLE, March 5.—(AP)—Governor Browning said tonight he sees little for students strike to do "except retaliate" if the Legislature passes a pending bill to tax cottonseed oil products.

Students protesters have been asked by committees of interests to send protests to the Iowa governor. Some estimated oil mill owners said the Iowa proposal would result in a virtual embargo against their products.

"I don't see anything for us to do except retaliate," Browning said. "By placing out-state Iowa products and putting a ban on it that will prevent its being sold here. That, it seems to me, is the only way to stop such things."

BROWNING WILL SEEK REFUND ON STATE DEBT

Parley Planned With New York Bondholders

HOPES TO CUT INTEREST

Appropriation Bill Will Give State "Balanced Budget" Is Prediction of Governor Browning

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

BY W. L. DURHAM, JR.

NASHVILLE, March 8.—Hoping to work out a refinancing plan whereby the state's $8,600,000 annual debt fund can be reduced a third, Governor Browning will confer with Tennessee's fiscal agent and principal bondholders in New York Monday, he said today.

Accompanied by Senate Speaker Byron Pope, House Speaker Walter M. Haynes, Treasurer Grover H. Keeton and Walter Stokes, commissioner of finance and taxation, the governor will leave for New York Saturday.

Details Not Revealed

Although he would not reveal the details of his refinancing plan, Governor Browning said he hopes to be able to refund a large part of the state's $129,000,000 bonded in-

To do a census on unemployment now, without reference to all the subjects in dispute, appears to many students of the problem as placing the cart before the horse.

In the Senate there is a move toward the latter approach. A resolution has been offered authorizing the President to appoint a commission to study unemployment and relief. It is sufficiently broad to utilize the various agencies now delving into facts, figures and other characteristics of the relief load.

If the nation is to benefit by its past mistakes and accomplishments in relief giving, the results to date must be shaken down by experts.

To chart a new course simply on the statistics of a census would place the administration in much the same position as it was in 1933 when the 1930 tabulations of employment and unemployment were used as a base.

Necessity for Study

Howard B. Meyers and John N. Webb of the WPA Division of Social Research sum up the necessity for a study—more than a census—when they say:

"Most studies of unemployment do not attempt to report the employability of those out of work, altho this should be the most important inference to be drawn.

"It is generally assumed that the definition of a gainful worker as a person who is usually employed at an occupation yielding an income, is sufficient indication of his employability.

"This assumption is incorrect in most cases. The fact that a person usually was employed prior to the loss of his last job is no basis for assuming that he can or will return to gainful work as employment increases. In many cases the loss of the job indicated that he was no longer employable according to the standards of that particular industry.

"This fact indicates that the employability of the unemployed cannot be determined with any confidence from the worker's own opinion of his chances in returning to his former job."

Face Important Decision

Now after nearly four years, the administration is up against an important decision. It must decide what it is going to do about those persons who are not getting back into private employment despite a definite upturn in all lines of business and industry. It is pledged to give support, but what kind?

The work philosophy has prevailed for all who are rated as employable without much regard to the degree of their employability. Opposing this policy is a demand for a return to the dole, state and locally financed or with the federal here, we can convince the bondholders they will be protected, come back here in special session and take care of these other propositions. We can also arrange to do away with tolls of bridges. But this refinancing program must be carried out first."

Ellis of Bentonville charged Milum's move to have the bill amended was part of a "well-planned scheme to kill this bill."

Milum said the bill provided for transfer to the new refinancing account the balance on hand in the bond refunding fund. He said this amounted to more than $380,000, and if the money was taken away the refunding board would have no funds to pay expenses.

"I know that you are killing the present bond refunding board and I don't want to do it," the Harrison senator exclaimed.

Extra Officer

Barney and Thompson asserted that the bill would not take all of the funds to the credit of the bond refunding board, but only that portion of those funds allocated to the payment of contractors' claims, the period for payment of which has expired.

To Morrell's objection that the bill would authorize employment of a disbursing officer when such a position could be filled by the state treasurer without additional cost, Thompson replied:

"I can bring you assurances from the governor and the board of finance that the comptroller, who is a member of that board, will per as the disbursing officer and that no new employe will be added."

Morrell said the bill would be unconstitutional because it did not set out specifically the amounts to be paid in salaries and expenses under the refinancing program. Thompson said a lump sum was appropriated for this purpose because "we don't know what the expense is going to be."

FATHER GETS CUSTODY OF ADOPTED CHILD

A fight for the custody of an adopted child ended yesterday when Chancellor Bejach, sitting by interchange for Probate Judge Bates, gave the boy, Charles Edison Sutherland, 7, to the father, George H. Sutherland, 629 N. Fourth.

Chancellor Bejach overruled the plea of the boy's mother, Mrs. Nellie Lee Sutherland. Altho Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland still live at the same address, a separation is imminent, Mr. Sutherland said in filing the petition for custody.

The child was adopted four years ago when the couple was living in Tipton County, Tennessee. Mr. Sutherland is a disabled war veteran.

WINDSOR, Vermont, March 8.—Every child in this town will be questioned in connection with the murder of little Beverly Ann Page, authorities announced late today. They believe the five-year-old boy who "confessed" the torture and drowning of the girl has not told the complete story of the crime.

When the identity of the slayer of the four-year-old golden-haired child is established, State's Attorney Alban Parker said today, a formal charge of murder will be lodged against him, regardless of his age.

Mrs. Parker said:

"If we establish, by our investigation, that the little boy who has admitted the crime is the actual slayer of Beverly Ann, we will charge him with murder and bring him into juvenile court. His fate will be determined by the court [redacted] remaining plan, Governor Browning said he hopes to be able to refund a large part of the state's $129,000,000 bonded indebtedness at lower interest rates. The state, he said, now has several issues outstanding which are drawing six per cent. These he hopes to refund at from 4 to 4½ per cent.

Also the governor is working on a plan whereby changes could be made in sinking funds accounts that would allow the state to save considerable interest charges by retiring bonds as rapidly as funds accumulate. At present sinking funds are kept on deposit in banks at 2 per cent interest while the bonds the funds are designated to retire draw from 4½ to 6 per cent.

Balanced Budget

During the 60-day legislative recess, the governor will study the debt refunding plan and the general appropriation bill. The latter will be the first order of business to come before the Legislature when it re-convenes.

Governor Browning said the appropriation bill will be drawn to meet revenues in prospect, and that the state's budget will be "absolutely balanced for the first time in 14 years."

"I think it is essential that we balance the budget," he declared. "We have normal times now, and this is the first step toward straightening the state's financial tangle."

He said social security and the enlarged school program will call for increased expenditures during his administration, but added that administrative expenses would be "materially decreased."

WHY NOT HAVE U. S. SERVICE MAKE SURVEY?

Employment Agency Equipped To Get Data Needed Besides Figures

By ROBERT R. BROWN
Press-Scimitar Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 9—An insistent demand for an unemployment census has been heard since 1934. Proponents declare that the administration is working in the dark and that efforts to offset the curse of dependency have been hampered by a lack of facts.

What the nation needs, these supporters say, is a tabulation of those without jobs showing how many there are, how long they have been out of work, what industries they come from and what work they are fitted to do.

THIS BUSINESS OF RELIEF

There is little doubt that such a survey would be helpful, but without the additional information as to the causes of unemployment the effects of it on the social and economic structure, and the possibilities of definite methods to conduct it, the census would prove sadly inadequate.

DEATH CLAIMS J. S. HEFFERNAN

Veteran Engineer Contracted Fatal Ailment During Flood Work

Back in the nineties, John S. Heffernan, then a steamboat engineer, had helped in the placing of mats along river banks during one of the worst of the Mississippi floods.

In 1927, while a steam engineer at Tech High, situated in the old building near Captain Bayou, he had worked strenuously in keeping flood waters out of the school.

Aided Refugees

Death came to him yesterday, a man of 77, who had been doing 24-hour flood duty at Peabody School. His death was the indirect result of overwork with flood refugees.

Mr. Heffernan was replacing desks and straightening the school after the flood refugees had gone from the building when he contracted influenza three weeks ago. Other complications developed and he was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he died.

Memphis and its growth had always been a source of pride to Mr. Heffernan, who was born near the river on North Main. The son of the late John T. Heffernan, who, as city carpenter, had laid the first board walks of the city, he was baptized at St. Peter's Church.

During the Civil War, the family lived on Dunlap—and the young boy who wanted to help the South tried to persuade the Confederate cavalry camped next door to take him as drummer boy. Then, during the yellow fever epidemics, he refugeed from the city twice.

Labor's Non-Partisan League yesterday ayung support to President Roosevelt's judiciary program. At the same time, Senate opponents charged high administration officials with "propagandist activities" in behalf of the court plan.

The farm group announced its support of the court program after conferring with Mr. Roosevelt. They declared "agriculture's greatest progress has been thwarted by the Supreme Court."

This pronouncement came as Labor's Non-Partisan League, created last year to support President Roosevelt's re-election, voted unanimously at an assembly of 600 labor leaders to give the judiciary program full backing.

President Roosevelt had called the labor group and farm representatives to the White House for judiciary discussions this morning. He will speak directly on the court question in a radio "fireside chat" tomorrow night.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson charged in the Senate that "chain letters" and women's clubs were being used in what he termed an "unfair" campaign against the court reorganization plan. He made the statement after charges that the administration was using every propaganda method at its command.

persons who are not getting back into private employment despite a definite upturn in all lines of business and industry. It is pledged to give support, but what kind?

The work philosophy has prevailed for all who are rated as employable without much regard to the degree of their employability. Opposing this policy is a demand for a return to the dole, state and locally financed or with the federal government contributing, as it does under the Social Security Act.

To go blindly into either form of assistance on a permanent basis can rightfully be termed unsocial and uneconomic. All theories, plans and policies should have a day in court, with an impartial commission sitting by to separate the wheat from the chaff.

A careful study of the situation might easily develop the fact that an unemployment census would be unnecessary if the nation were to strengthen and expand its system of employment exchanges. England, faced with about the same problems as have prevailed in this country, tried many schemes, but finally settled down to the exchange as the lone agency for determining unemployment administration.

Machinery Set Up

The United States Employment Service is already functioning. Last year it made a million and one-half private placements, in addition to registering all persons certified for WPA jobs. When the unemployment insurance system begins to function, thru co-operation with state employment agencies, it will gather additional data.

Rather than spend 30 million on an unemployment census, a commission might advocate that the money be diverted into the employment service where all workers in to those where shortages exist, and above all other advantages the exchange would be in position to fill private vacancies with a degree of certainty that the man selected for the job was qualified.

Such a plan is not untried in this country. The oldest employment exchange, at Cincinnati, is now working along similar lines, drawing funds from outside sources to add tests of efficiency to its regular services. It is in a limited way, is exploring the possibilities of vocational training for the young and re-training for the old unemployed persons in its files.

Until we as a nation know more about the underlying causes of unemployment, coupled with a knowledge of the people who are displaced, there will be a continued and unnecessary drain on our human and financial resources.

'TERRIFIC HAPPINESS,' SAYS MARY

Two larks couldn't look any happier than Mary Astor and Manuel Del Campo, in this picture of the bride and groom in Miss Astor's Toluca Lake home at their first reunion since their elopement Feb. 18. Del Campo had just returned from Mexico.

Miss Astor invited movie colony friends in for ice cream and cake to meet her third husband. They were "terrifically happy," they said.

The male residents of many Philippine provincial towns were conscripted without pay to save coconut trees and rice, corn and sugar crops from locust hordes.

Jobless Census Not Best Means of Determining Empl

WHY NOT HAVE U. S. JOBLESS MAKE SURVEY?

Unless More Than a Count Of Jobless Is Obtained, Census Is Useless

By ROBERT S. BROWN
Press-Scimitar Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 9.—An insistent demand for an unemployment census has been heard since 1934. Proponents declare that the administration is working in the dark and that efforts to offset the curse of dependency have been hampered by a lack of facts.

What the nation needs, these supporters say, is a tabulation of those without jobs, showing how many there are, how long they have been out of work, what industries they come from and what work they are fitted to do.

THIS BUSINESS OF RELIEF

There is little doubt that such a survey would be helpful, but without the additional information as to the causes of unemployment the effects of it on the social and economic structure, and the possibilities of definite methods to conduct it the census would prove sadly inadequate.

Census technique must be exceedingly simple. It can go no further than supply answers to stated questions. It takes time, so much that in the rapidly shifting picture of American production it might well be out of date before completed. It costs money, the price of the currently contemplated tabulation being placed at 20 million dollars.

Cart Before Horse

To do a census on unemployment now, without reference to all the subjects in dispute, appears to

Bailey Friends Warn That Bill in Its Present Form Is Unacceptable

By Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 9.—Warned by an administration leader that Gov. Carl E. Bailey probably would veto four bills intended to aid bondholders and land owners, the Arkansas Senate yesterday passed a measure appropriating $150,000,000 for refinancing highway, bridge and road improvement district refunding bonds.

Jones and Harrell led an unsuccessful fight to amend the bill, during which they asserted it would eliminate activities of the present road refunding board, provide for employment of an unnecessary official and be held unconstitutional if tested in court.

Attorney of Texarkana, describing their objections a "a tempest in a teapot," denied the bill would upset the present refunding board's activities, and added:

Veto Predicted

"There has been strong representations made to the governor that the Harris-Boyer bridge bill, the Pigue-Dillon bill to aid improvement districts in Pulaski County, the Kinney bill to reduce automobile licenses and the Milum bill to reduce the gasoline tax will violate the 1934 refunding act.

"It is likely that the governor will have to veto all of these measures. If the refinancing program provided for in this bill is carried out, we can convince the bondholders they will be protected, come back here in special session and take care of these other measures."

Q. Where are you employed?
A. Donnelly Garment Company.

A. No, I haven't.
Q. Have you at any time been forced to work at at speed in which you would become exhausted at the close of the working period during the day?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir. That is entirely up to yourself how fast you want to work.

Q. Are the machines adjusted so you have to work at any fixed speed?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir. The machines run on the same order of driving a car. Naturally, the more you push on the treadle the faster it goes, and that is up to you.

Q. And that is true in regard to all the machines that are used by operators?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. Have you ever seen any employees at the Donnelly Garment Company physically exhausted from their work?

Objection—immaterial.

A. No, sir.

Q. In performing your work are you required to keep up with any other operator?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5687] p. 603 A. No.

Q. Just explain to the court how you work?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Well, our work is brought to us to our machine, and it is up to us to put out that work the way that we want to, that is the time. There is nobody sets any time for you to get a certain amount of work done. When you have finished this bundle it is taken away and others is brought to you but there is no set time when to start nor when to finish it.

Q. And you don't know where the bundle goes?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Why, yes; the operators, the office help, any of the executives, we all ride the same elevator. Well, it is just like one family.
Q. You all use the same cafeteria?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir, we do.
Q. I hand you Plaintiffs' Exhibit 30 and ask you whether or not you signed one of these cards?
A. I did.
Q. Did you sign of your own free will?
A. I did.
Q. Did any instructor or superior or anybody in any superior position ask you to sign this card?
[fol. 5688] A. No, they didn't.
Q. Did you see any officer, executive or instructor ask any employee to sign this card?
A. No, sir.
Q. Just state, Mrs. Stites, how this card was given to you?
A. Well, that card was handed to me by the girl that sets next to me and I picked it up and read it and I did not question who had written it or anything. That was my feeling toward it so I signed it.
p. 604a Q. This document has a heading which reads "We, the undersigned, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company wish to make it known we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with this organization and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed". Was that your sentiment at the time?

A. Yes, sir, and it is my sentiment now.

Q. Where it has the statement that "We refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization" who did you have in mind in regard to that when you signed that?

A. Well, we had heard rumors that the strikers over at the other garment companies were coming over to our place of business next and they told us they were going to get us and we wanted to express our sentiment to our employer how we felt about our working conditions and that we were perfectly happy and we did not want any interference from someone else.

Q. Did you mean by that, somebody on the outside?

Objection and motion to strike the answer—not responsive.

A. On the outside.

Q. Well, state whether or not you meant some outside labor organization?

p. 605 A. We did mean some outside labor organization.

Q. Did any officer, executive or person in the position of hiring or firing ever make any statement to you in regard to union labor?

A. Nobody, no sir.

[fol. 5689] Q. Did you ever hear any statements made by any officer, executive or person in the position to hire or fire, that in any way disclosed that the company had any interest in whether or not you joined or didn't join any labor organization?

A. No, sir.

Q. You stated you were an operator, Mrs. Stites?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you please state what you earn per week?

A. Well, just what do you mean? Approximately?

Q. Approximately, yes.

A. Well, I earn all the way from $25.60 to $46.00.

Q. Will you state what your wage guarantee is per week? A. $25.60.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Stites, are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. A. Yes.

Q. Did you join of your own free will and accord?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I did.

p. 606 Q. Do you know of any instance or any time, Mrs. Stites, when your employer or any of the people who hire and fire down there threatened any employee or promised any employee anything or ever hinted to any employee what they should do about the Donnelly Garment Workers Union?

A. No, sir.

p. 612 Q. At the time you signed Exhibit 30 which you referred to there had been no talk in the shop at all about organizing any union of your own, had there? A. No, sir.

Q. State whether or not at the time you signed Exhibit 30 there had been or had not been any talk around the Donnelly plant about organizing a plant Union?

A. No; we had never discussed a union at all when that was signed.

Objection is made to all questions and answers and offers of exhibits of the testimony of John B. Bachofer contained in pages 1 to 18 inclusive herein (pages 716 to 815 Judge Miller record) and pages 1, 2 and 3 following herein (Judge Miller testimony 848, 852 inclusive) and all exhibits attached hereto for the reason that said testimony and said exhibits are immaterial.

[fol. 5690] JOHN B. BACHOFER

p. 716 called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiffs, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. State your name please, to the Court?

A. John B. Bachofer.

Q. Where do you reside, Mr. Bachofer?

A. At 6441 Holmes, Kansas City, Missouri.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am a certified public accountant.

Q. How long have you been a certified public accountant?

A. Since January, 1934.

Q. Are you a member of any national association of your profession?

A. I am a member of the American Institute of Accountants and the National Association of Cost Accountants.

Q. What, if any connection do you have with the plaintiff companies?

A. I am acting as comptroller.

Q. And how long have you had that connection with them?

A. For about a year.

Q. Now I hand you what has been identified in this record as Plaintiffs' Exhibits 34 and 35,

p. 717 being the plaintiffs' contracts with their employes and ask if you have examined those contracts and made a comparison of them with contracts between the International and certain manufacturers?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I hand you what has been furnished to us by Mr. Walsh as copies of the International's contracts with these companies, Bieberman Brothers, Ginsberg & Sons, Inc., Practical Frocks, Inc., Gernes Garment Company, Gordon Manufacturing Company, Missouri Garment Company, Liberty Frocks, Inc., and Mayfair Manufacturing Company, and will ask whether you have made a comparison and an analysis of the terms of the Donnelly contract with their employes as compared with each of these eight contracts that you hold in your hand?

[fol. 5691] A. I have.

p. 778 By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Mr. Bachofer, to bring back to mind the testimony that you gave on Saturday, you testified that you were a certified public accountant and that you had made a comparison as between the Donnelly Garment Company and Donnelly Sales Company's contracts with their employees and the contracts represented by the copies in Exhibit 99 being 8 contracts between the International and 8 other companies. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, sir.

p. 779 Q. Now, you say you have made a comparison of the rates of pay, wages, hours and other conditions of employment in the Donnelly contract and the same matters in each of these 8 contracts in Plaintiffs' Exhibit 99, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you embraced the result of that comparative analysis in written form?

A. Yes, sir.

(Document marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 105 for identification).

Q. I hand you Plaintiffs' Exhibit 105 and ask you if you identify that as the written statement of that comparative analysis?

p. 780

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice this exhibit seems to be an original affidavit. This, in fact, was your affidavit used before the three judge hearing of this Court?

A. Yes.

p. 781 Q. Now, Mr. Bachofer, I wish you would take this analysis and read the material parts to the Court.

p. 784 Q. (By Mr. Hogsett) Now, Mr. Bachofer, will you kindly read to the Court this Exhibit 105 and I suggest that in the interest of saving time, although I offer the entire exhibit, you omit that part on the first and perhaps the second page which merely describes these contracts because they are already before the Court. I suggest that you begin with the words "In connection with the summary of these contracts."

[fol. 5692] A. (Reading) "In connection with the summary of these contracts as given below, it is to be observed that the contracts are not uniform in their classification of labor, and for that reason I have adopted a classification which, in my opinion, most nearly fits all the contracts and makes comparison possible. In this summary, labor has been classified as follows: Cutters, Markers, Spreaders, Piece Workers, Week Workers, Apprentices."

Q. Now, at this time you are dealing with the general subject of cutters?

p. 785 A. That's right.

Q. And are comparing eight or nine contracts with reference to the wages provided for that class of labor, until you tell us something different?

A. That's right.

Q. Go ahead.

A. (Reading) "Cutters. The Donnelly Contract specifies minimum weekly wages of $42.50 for 'A' Class Machine Cutters.

"The Missouri Contract states that 'wages for Cutters and Spreaders shall be not less than the wages received by them at present.'

"The Gordon Contract states that 'the wages for Cutters shall be not less than the wages received by them at present.'

"The Liberty Contract states that 'the wages for Cutters shall be not less than the wages received by them at present.'

"The Gernes Contract states that 'the scale for Cutters shall be determined with relation to the rate and scale in general effect in the industry as applied to local conditions and circumstances.'

"The Mayfair Contract states that 'the Cutters shall receive an increase of not less than ten per cent (10%) beginning June 30, 1937, above the wages they receive at present.'

"The Practical Frocks Contracts stipulates
p. 786 those cutters receiving $25.00 per week are to receive a $3.00 increase; those receiving $22.00 per week are to receive a $3.00 increase; those receiving less than $22.00 per week are to receive a $2.00 increase.

"The number of employees falling into these different classifications and the base wages are not given.

"The Ginsberg Contract stipulates actual weekly wages of from below seventeen ($17.00) dollars to twenty-three ($23.00) dollars and above.

[fol. 5693] "The Biberman Contract stipulates minimum weekly wages of thirty-five ($35.00) dollars for 1937 and thirty-eight ($38.00) dollars beginning January 1, 1938. The Donnelly rate is $42.50 per week.

"It will be noted that the Missouri, Gordon, and Liberty Contracts merely provide that the cutters shall not receive 'less than the wages received at present.' What these wages are is not disclosed except as they may be in part reflected by the wages paid to other employees.

"The Gernes Contract provides that the scale shall be determined in relation to the rate and scale in general effect in the industry as applied to local conditions and circumstances. What this scale is cannot be determined from the contract.

"The Mayfair Contract provides for a ten per cent increase above 'the wages they receive at present.' What these wages are is not
p. 787 disclosed except as they may be in part reflected by the wages paid to other employees.

"The Gernes Contract provides that the scale shall be determined in relation to the rate and scale in general effect in the industry as applied to local conditions and circumstances. What this scale is cannot be determined from the contract.

"The Mayfair Contract provides for a ten per cent increase above 'the wages they receive at present.' What these wages are is not disclosed except as they may be reflected in wages paid other employees.

"As stated, the Practical Frocks Contract stipulates 'those cutters receiving $25.00 per week are to receive a $3.00 increase; those receiving $22.00 per week are to receive a $3.00 increase; those receiving less than $22.00 per week are to receive a $2.00 increase.' From this it appears that an actual weekly wage of $28.00 is provided for some of the cutters; an actual weekly wage of $25.00 is provided for some of the cutters; [an actual weekly wage of $25.00 is provided for some of the cutters;] and an increase of $2.00 is to go to those receiving less than $22.00 per week. The number of persons affected by these raises cannot be ascertained from the contract and the number who may be receiving less than $22.00 is not given; neither are their then present

p. 788 wages given but it clearly appears that the highest wages paid are $28.60 and from that they grade down to an unknown amount.

"The Ginsberg Contract as stated stipulates that cutters who have been receiving $19.00 per week and above shall receive an increase of $4.00; cutters receiving between $15.00 and $19.00, an increase of $3.00; cutters receiving below $15.00 per week, an increase of $2.00, but here again the number of cutters falling within the respective classifications is not given, but it is apparent that some of the cutters employed receive $15.00 per week; that other cutters had been receiving between $15.00 and $19.00, and that other cutters had been receiving $19.00 per week.

There may also have been cutters who have [fol. 5694] been receiving more than $19.00, but how many there are is not disclosed. But the contract clearly indicates that some of the cutters had been receiving below $15.00, but how much they received is not shown, and hence their present wages cannot be ascertained.

"As stated, the Biberman Contract stipulates a minimum weekly wage for cutters of $35.00 for 1937, and $38.00 for 1938."

Mr. Hogsett: Now, you have finished with the subject of cutters in all of these eight or nine contracts?

A. Yes, sir, that is right.

p. 789 Q. By Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Bachofer, at the noon recess you had finished dealing with the wages of cutters in all of the nine contracts, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, is it not a fact, summing up what you said, that the $42.50 for the cutters in the Donnelly plant is in excess of the minimum or wages fixed in any one of the eight contracts?

A. That is right, insofar as those wages are shown in those contracts.

Q. Go ahead with the next subject of your analysis?

A. The next subject is markers (Reading) "The Donnelly, Missouri, Gordon, Liberty, Gernes, Mayfair, Practical Frocks, and Ginsberg Contracts do not specify a distinct wage rate for workers of this classification.

"The Biberman Contract stipulates minimum weekly wages of forty dollars and fifty cents ($40.50) for 1937, and forty-three dollars and fifty cents ($43.50) beginning January 1, 1938."

p. 890 Q. Now, that is the sum and substance of all you find in any of the contracts on the subject of markers?

A. That's right.

Q. In other words, to sum that up, there is only one contract, The Biberman Contract that mentions any such group or classification of labor?

A. That is right.

Q. Go ahead with the next subject.

(5)

[fol. 5695] A. Spreaders or Stretchers (Reading) "The Donnelly Contract stipulates a minimum weekly wage of thirty-three ($33.00) dollars to Stretchers.

"The Gernes, Mayfair, Practical Frocks and Ginsberg Contracts do not specify wages paid to Spreaders or Stretchers.

"The Missouri Contract states that the wages for Spreaders shall be not less than the wages received by them at present. What their present wages are is not disclosed.

"The Gordon Contract states that 'the present male spreaders in the cutting department shall be paid at the rate of twenty dollars per week beginning July 1, 1937.'

"The Liberty Contract states that girl spreaders in the Cutting Department are to receive one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) increase above the wages received by them at present. What their present wages are is not disclosed.

"The Biberman Contract stipulates minimum weekly wages of twenty-four dollars and thirty cents ($24.30) for 1937, and twenty-
p. 791 seven dollars and thirty cents ($27.30) beginning January 1, 1938."

Q. Now, that covers the subject of spreaders or stretchers in all of the contracts as far as that subject is dealt with?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I will ask you whether the Donnelly minimum weekly wage of $33.00 to Stretchers is in excess of the wages in any one of the eight contracts which you are comparing, where there is any reference at all to wages in those contracts?

A. Yes.

Q. Go ahead with the next subject.

A. Piece Workers (Reading) "The Donnelly Contract stipulates the following minimum weekly wages for piece workers:

Note: In the following classification of minimum weekly wages paid to piece workers under the Donnelly Contract, groups are defined as follows: Group 1 workers are those who work a portion of their time on garments selling above $45.00 per dozen, and work the remainder of their time on garments selling at $45.00 per dozen and below; Group 2 workers are those who work on garments selling at $45.00 per dozen and below; Group 3 workers are those who work exclusively on lower price cotton garments.)" I might add that here follows the tabulation that shows the amounts guaranteed as a minimum weekly wage to these various people and it is in tabulated form.

"The above wages under the Donnelly Contract are minimum wages."

Q. That is the minimum wage?

p. 793 Q. These operators of all classes, and hand ironers and machine pressers and folders are all piece workers with these respective guaranteed minimums?

A. Piece workers include the Notion Department, button hand-sewers, and so forth. (Reading) "The Missouri Contract states that the piece rates for piece workers shall be set at a basis whereby not less than seventy per cent (70%) of the non-apprentice female workers in the different departments of the shop shall be able to earn not less per week than thirteen ($13.00) dollars.

[fol. 5697] "Elsewhere in the contract provision is made for a minimum weekly wage of thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week for a female worker of 'normal speed and ability.' Therefore, thirty per cent (30%) of the piece workers under the Missouri Contract have no minimum wage if they are not of 'normal speed and ability.'

"The Gordon Contract states that the piece rates for piece workers shall be set at a basis whereby not less than seventy per cent (70%) of the non-apprentice female workers in their Kansas City plant shall be able to earn per week not less than thirteen ($13.00) dollars.

p. 794 "Elsewhere in the contract provision is made for a minimum wage of thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week for a female worker of 'normal speed and ability'. Therefore, thirty per cent (30%) of the piece workers have no minimum weekly wage if they are not of 'normal speed and ability.'

"Special provision is made that in the Richmond, Missouri, plant that the minimum weekly wage of a female worker of 'normal speed and ability' shall be $11.00. Another clause provides that 'the piece rate for piece workers shall be set at a basis whereby not less than sixty per cent (60%) of the non-apprentices shall be not less than six ($6.00) dollars per week for a girl for the first six weeks of her apprenticeship.'

"The Liberty Contract states that piece rates for piece workers shall be set at a basis whereby a worker of 'average speed and ability' in the Kansas City plant shall be able to earn per week not less than $13.00.

"Piece rates in the Lexington, Missouri, factory 'shall be the same as those set for piece workers in the Kansas City factory and the workers shall be paid in accordance with their productive ability.' Workers, therefore, who are not of 'average speed and ability' do not have a minimum weekly wage at Kansas City and workers at Lexington, Missouri, have no minimum wage.

"The Gernes Contract states (paragraph 8) 'the wages scale for female workers in the employ of the employer shall be not less than $13.00 per week for a worker of normal efficiency and ability.' This does not guarantee $13.00 a week, but is merely a wage scale where a person of 'normal speed and ability' can earn that amount. The contract further recites 'the present prices for piece workers shall remain intact and shall be based on a basis that not less than 75% of the workers in the different departments of the shop shall be able to earn not less than $13.00 per week per capita.' In establishing this base rate for piece workers so that 75% of them may be able to earn not less than $13.00 per week per capita, there is a further provision that the base rate for piece workers shall be determined with relation to the rate in general effect in the industry as applied to local conditions and circumstances.

(8)

[fol. 5698] "The Mayfair Contract states that the piece rates for piece workers shall be set at a basis whereby not less than seventy-five per cent (75%) of the female workers in the different departments of the shop shall be able to earn not less than thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week. Elsewhere in the contract it states that thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week shall be the minimum wage for female workers of 'average speed and ability.' Therefore, twenty-five per cent (25%) of the piece workers, if they are not of 'average speed and ability', do not have a minimum weekly wage.

"It will be noted that the Donnelly Contract provides an absolute minimum of $16.50 per
p. 796 week for all of its employees. Upon the other hand, the above contracts—namely, Missouri, Gordon, Liberty, Gernes, and Mayfair—only provide that rates shall be so fixed that a worker of normal speed and ability in Kansas City can earn $13.00 per week, and workers in the plants outside of Kansas City can earn $11.00 per week—that is to say, the worker of average speed and ability is to receive what she earns. Whether they earn more than $13.00 per week or less than $13.00 per week, their earnings are measured by the amount of work done and at the scale fixed. If their earnings fall below $13.00 then there is no provision that they shall be paid $13.00. There is, therefore, no guaranteed minimum to workers of normal speed and ability as individual workers.

"Moreover, in the Gordon and Missouri contracts it is stipulated that the rates shall be so fixed that 70% of the non-apprentice females shall be able to earn not less than $13.00. In the Gernes and Mayfair contracts the stipulation is that the rates shall be so fixed that not less than 75% of the female

p. 797 workers shall be able to earn not less than $13.00 per week.

"Manifestly, therefore, it is contemplated from 25% to 30% of the employees in the plants named will not be able to earn $13.00. If I am correct in this conclusion, there is then no real minimum guarantee to any individual employees in the plants last above named.

"The foregoing contracts are all with Kansas City concerns.

"Practical Frocks, Inc., is located in Elizabeth, New Jersey. The characteristic of the Practical Frocks contract is that it merely provides for an increase of wages above those then received but in no case states the wage rates in effect at the time the contract was made. As has been previously pointed out, in the cutting department the provision is that there are to be certain raises above the prices paid which seems to indicate that there were some cutters who received less than $22.00 per week. The contract provides that week workers earning less than $10.00 per week shall receive an increase of $1.50 per week. All other week workers earning above $10.00 per week shall receive an increase of $1.00 per week. What the wages were then is not disclosed, but it is evident that some of the workers were receiving less than $10.00.

(9)

[fol. 5699] "As to piece workers, the provision is that they shall receive an increase of ten per cent on the piece rates existing in the shops of June 14, 1937. What these piece rates were is not disclosed. No minimum is guaranteed.

"Some indirect light may be thrown upon the probable piece work prices by considering the fact that the contract shows that there were evidently workers who had been earning less

p. 798 than $10.00 per week, as is shown by the provision that workers earning less than $10.00 per week were to have a raise of $1.50 per week, and the further fact that there must have been cutters who received less than $22.00 per week, for it is provided that cutters receiving less than that amount were to receive an increase of $2.00 per week.

"The Ginsberg contract does not specify any definite actual or minimum wage to be paid to piece workers. It merely states that 'all piece workers shall receive an increase of fifteen per cent (15%) on all piece rates existing in the shop as of March 16, 1937' and 'if any worker earns eight ($8.00) dollars per week or less on such rates, then twenty per cent (20%) instead of fifteen per cent (15%) shall be added to their weekly earnings.' What these previous earnings were is not disclosed, but attention is called to the fact that some of the workers must have been receiving less than $8.00 per week because the provision appears that 'such workers shall receive an increase of 20% instead of 15%'.

"The Biberman contract does not specify a definite minimum rate of pay for piece workers. It states that 'the employer agrees to increase all piece work wages by ten per cent (10%) as of February 1, 1937, and to make an additional increase of five per cent (5%) on January 1, 1938, for all persons employed as "front makers." All other operators shall
p. 799 also be entitled to the additional five per cent (5%) increase as of January 1, 1938; if their earnings are less than the earnings of the front makers.'

"What the wages for these piece workers were, which were to be increased by the percentages above stated, is not disclosed. However, where the Biberman contract does set out specific wages, as in cutters and spreaders, the minimum wage scale is below the wage scale of the Donnelly Company."

Q. You have dealt now with the provisions for piece workers in all of these nine contracts, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you find a single one of the eight contracts in Exhibit 99 which has provisions for wages as high as those in the Donnelly Contract?

(10)

[fol. 5700] A. No, sir.

Q. Proceed with the next subject.

A. (Reading) "Week Workers. The Donnelly Contract specifies minimum weekly wages for the following week workers:

Group 1 Examiners		$21.00
Group 1 Dividers		22.50
Group 2 Dividers		20.00
Group 1 Mechanics		42.50

p. 800 "The Missouri contract states that thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week shall be the minimum weekly wage for a female worker of 'normal speed and ability' and excludes all employees who are not actually engaged in the making of garments.

"The Gordon contract states that thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week shall be the minimum weekly wage for a female worker of 'normal speed and ability' and it excludes employees not actually engaged in making garments.

"The Liberty contract states that thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week shall be the minimum wage for a female worker of 'average speed and ability'.

"The Gernes contract states that thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week shall be the wage scale for female workers of 'normal efficency and ability' and it excludes employees who are not actually engaged in making garments.

"The Mayfair contract states that thirteen ($13.00) dollars per week shall be the minimum wage for a female worker of 'average speed and ability'.

"The Practical Frocks contract, after stipulating wages for the Cutting Department, states: 'All other week workers earning less than ten ($10.00) dollars per week shall receive an increase of one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50) per week. All other week workers earning about ten ($10.00) dollars per week shall receive an increase of one ($1.00) dollar per week'. This contract, therefore, states no minimum for these week workers.

p. 801

"The Ginsberg contract does not specify definite actual or minimum wages to be paid week workers except such as are governed by 'All other week workers except cutters, for whom increases were provided above, shall receive an increase of twenty per cent (20%) on their salaries as of March 16, 1937, if such salaries were eight ($8.00) dollars or less, and an increase of fifteen per cent (15%) if their salaries were above eight ($8.00) dollars per week.'

(11)

[fol. 5761] "The Biberman contract specifies that fourteen ($14.00) dollars shall be the minimum weekly wage to go in effect on January 1, 1938, except that those workers who are receiving less than fourteen ($14.00) dollars per week shall receive an immediate increase of one dollar ($1.00) per week and a further increase equal to one-fourth (¼) of the difference between the existing wage and the fourteen ($14.00) dollar wage every three months thereafter, so that such workers shall thus be brought up to a minimum wage of fourteen ($14.00) dollars per week within a year after the date of the signing of the contract."

Q. You have now dealt in full with all the provisions of the nine contracts respecting week workers, have you?

A. Yes, sir.

p. 802 Q. I will ask you whether or not the guaranteed minimums for week workers in the Donnelly Contract exceeds those in any one of the eight contracts in Plaintiffs' Exhibit 99?

A. It does.

Q. Proceed with the next subject.

A. Apprentices, (Reading) "Under the Donnelly contract, apprentices are guaranteed a minimum weekly wage during the full term of their apprenticeship as follows:

Beginner Operators	$16.50
Beginner Hand Ironers	16.50
Beginner Folders	16.50
Apprentice Stretchers	18.00
Beginner Dividers	18.00
Mechanic's Apprentices	18.00
Beginners in all lines of work in plant or office	16.50

"Thereafter they are guaranteed the above minimums or in excess thereof depending on their ability and type of work.

"Under the Missouri, Gordon, Liberty, Gernes and Mayfair contracts, apprentices are to receive wages varying from no minimum to ten dollars and forty cents ($10.40) per week for the first six weeks of their apprenticeship, and thereafter they are paid on the piece rate basis in accordance with their production and ability.

"Minimum apprentice wages in the various contracts under consideration may be summarized as follows:

Donnelly Contract	$16.50 to $18.00
Missouri Contract	7.75
Gordon Contract (Kansas City factory)	7.75
p. 803 Gordon Contract (Richmond, Mo. factory)	6.00

(12)

[fol. 5702]

Liberty Contract (Kansas City factory)	No special provisions.
Liberty Contract (Lexington, Missouri factory)	6.75
Gernes Contract	10.40
Mayfair Contract	8.75
Practical Frocks Contract	No special provisions as to wages during apprenticeship.
Ginsberg Contract	No special provisions as to wages during apprenticeship.
Biberman Contract	No special provisions as to wages during apprenticeship.

"The foregoing statements were arrived at by me from a careful study of the documents referred to and the conclusions I have set forth, are, in my opinion, true and correct."

Q. That is a summary of the eight contracts as compared with the Donnelly Contract?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have covered every classification of workers in all the contracts, have you not?

A. In as far as they are comparable, from data in the contracts themselves.

Q. Do you find a single classification of the workers in any other contracts where the provisions made in the International's contract with its factory is as good as the provisions

p. 804 made in the Donnelly Contract? Do you find it true in one single instance?

A. Not in these contracts.

Q. So far we have been dealing with eight factories which are, according to the record, producers of house frocks and wash dresses. Now, I hand you what Mr. Walsh has furnished to us as a duplicate of his contract with the Marlene Dress Company and ask you if you identify that and whether you compared that contract, of a so-called silk shop, with the Donnelly Contracts, Plaintiffs' Exhibits 34 and 35? A. I did.

p. 805 Q. Did you reduce to writing the result of your analysis of this Marlene Dress Company Contract and the comparison of that Contract with the Donnelly Contract?

[fol. 5703] A. Yes, sir.

(Contract marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 107 for identification).

Q. I show you a document which the reporter has marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 107 and ask you if that is that written instrument of your analysis? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You may now omit the purely formal part
p. 806 and read that exhibit. I suggest you read beginning with the paragraph "I have prepared and am submitting", and so forth. The rest of that is purely formal.

A. (Reading) "I have prepared and am submitting a comparison of the rates of pay under the Donnelly and Marlene Contracts. The results of my comparisons of wage rates, as shown in these two contracts, are set out below insofar as, in my opinion, a comparison of the wage rates of the various classes of workers specified in these contracts is possible from data within the contracts themselves."

Q. We can save some time there because in the previous exhibit you have stated that material very fully and I suggest you skip that part referring to the Donnelly Contract because the Court has just heard it, not over twenty minutes ago.

A. (Reading) "The Marlene Contract stipulates rates of pay which shall be the basis upon which piece rates shall be established for operators and pressers, and it also stipulates rates of pay for week workers. In stipulating these rates of pay the Marlene Contract states that they are not to go into effect until 'the close of the current season, but in no case beyond June 30, 1937,' There is a further stipulation regarding these rates that 'during those months in which the firm is engaged exclusively in the production of cotton dresses, the minimum wage scales of $14.00 shall prevail."

p. 807 "In arriving at a comparison between these two contracts, it is to be observed, first, that the wages set out in the Donnelly Contract are minimum wages throughout, and that the wages set out in the Marlene contract are "rates of pay"; second, that apparently only a portion of the employees of the Marlene Dress Company are covered or protected by the contract of that company. For instance, in the Marlene Contract, after reciting the various rates of pay, there is a provision that 'arrangements for subnormal producers shall be established to exempt them from the above scales.'

[fol. 5704] "Third, that the Marlene Contract does not specify the grade of garments upon which the different classes of operators work. However, it is to be assumed that the Marlene Dress Company produces a better grade of garments and a cheaper grade of cotton garments because of the differentiation in the wage scale paid to operators under Paragraph 7 of their contract, and for the further reason that there is a special provision in Paragraph 7-D of the contract which reads as follows: 'During those months in which the firm is engaged exclusively in the production of cotton dresses, the minimum wage scale of $14.00 shall prevail.'

"Fourth, The Donnelly Contract classifies its operators in detail, and under Group 1 operators it includes those who work a portion of the time on garments selling above $45.00 per dozen and work the remainder of their time on garments selling at $45.00 per dozen and below, and states that 40% of these operators shall receive one minimum wage, that 30% shall receive another minimum wage, and that the remainder shall be guaranteed a different minimum wage. This contract also contains a clause to the effect that approximately 40% of the operators of this group could perform all the sewing on garments selling above $45.00 per dozen.

p. 808

"For that reason, therefore, and for the purpose of comparison, I have compared the rates of pay of 40% of Group 1 Operators under the Donnelly contract with the rates of pay of 'operators' under Paragraph 7 of the Marlene Contract, and I have compared the rates of pay for the two 30% groups under Group 1 operators with the rate of pay for the 'low-range' operators under the Marlene Contract.

"In accordance with the foregoing observations, the following is my summary of this comparison: Operators.

"40% of Group 1 operators under the Donnelly Contract are guaranteed a minimum wage of 64¢ per hour, as compared with a rate of pay of 52½¢ per hour under the Marlene contract. 30% of Group 1 operators under the Donnelly Contract are guaranteed a minimum wage of 56¼¢ per hour, as compared a rate of pay of 40¢ per hour under the Marlene Contract. 30% of Group 1 operators under the Donnelly Contract are guaranteed a minimum wage of 50¢ per hour, as compared

p. 809 with a rate of pay of 40¢ per hour under the Marlene Contract.

"For the purpose of a further comparison, by averaging the above rates, we find that the average hourly rate guaranteed to Group 1 operators under the Donnelly contract is 57.475¢ as compared with not a minimum wage but an average rate of pay of 45¢ per hour under the Marlene Contract."

Q. That is all now on the subject of operators?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Go ahead with the next subject.

[fol. 5705] A. (Reading) "Pressers. Under the Donnelly Contract machine pressers are to be paid at the rate of 75c per hour. A comparable wage under the Marlene Contract is the rate of 70c per hour for men pressers.

"The Donnelly Contract recites that under the heading of 'Group 1 Hand Ironers' there shall be included those who work a portion of the time on garments selling above $45.00 per dozen, and work the remainder of their time on garments selling at $45.00 per dozen and below. It is further specified that the piece work rates shall be the same for all Hand Ironers in this group and are so fixed that at least 40% of the hand ironers shall receive an average minimum of not less than 64c per hour, and that at least 30% shall receive an average minimum of not less than 5[illegible]c per hour, and that the remainder shall receive an average minimum of not less than
p. 810 50c per hour.

"Comparing these rates with those for women pressers under the Marlene Contract, we arrive at the following conclusion: 40% of Group 1 hand ironers under the Donnelly Contract receive an average minimum of not less than 64c per hour, as compared with a rate of pay of 50c per hour under the Marlene Contract. 30% of Group 1 hand ironers under the Donnelly Contract receive an average minimum of not less than 56¼c per hour, as compared with a rate of pay of 50c per hour under the Marlene Contract. 30% of Group 1 hand ironers receive an average minimum of not less than 50c per hour, as compared with a rate of 50c per hour under the Marlene Contract. Cutters: Under the Donnelly Contract A class machine cutters shall receive a minimum of $42.50 per week of 40 hours. In terms of an hourly wage this represents a guaranteed minimum of $1.0625. Under the Marlene Contract top skill cutters receive a rate of pay of $31.50 per 35 hour week. Reduced to an hourly rate of pay, this represents wages at the rate of 90c per hour.

"Under the Donnelly Contract all cutters get $1.0625 per hour whereas the Marlene Contract specifies a rate of pay for second cutters of $25.00 per week, which represents 71.4c per hour. The Marlene Contract does not specify what type of work second cutters perform, but if they perform the same work as
p. 811 that performed by A class machine cutters under the Donnelly Contract, then there is guaranteed under the Donnelly Contract a minimum wage of one dollar six and one-fourth cents ($1.0625) per hour, as compared with a rate of pay under the Marlene Contract of seventy-one and one-fourth cents ($1.0625) per hour, as compared with a rate of pay under the Marlene Contract of seventy-one and four-tenths cents (71.4c) per hour.

Finishers: The Marlene Contract stipulates a rate of pay of $14.00 per week for finishers. Converted to an hourly basis, this means pay at the rate of 40c per hour. The Donnelly Contract does not specify a rate of pay for finishers.

[fol. 5706] "Assuming, however, that by finishers is [mean] piece workers, such as belt turners, workers in the notion department, button hand, sewers, etc., as is specified under the caption of 'Miscellaneous Piece Workers' under the Donnelly Contract, then the guaranteed minimum rate of pay for this type of work under the Donnelly Contract is 45c per hour for 50% of such piece workers, and 41¼c per hour for the remaining 50%.

"Again comparing the two contracts on this basis, under the Donnelly Contract 50% of such workers are guaranteed a minimum of 45c per hour, as compared with a rate of pay of 40c per hour under the Marlene Contract, and the other 50% are guaranteed an absolute minimum of 41¼c per hour, as compared with a rate of pay of 40c per hour under the Marlene Contract.

p. 812 Examiners: The Donnelly Contract specifies that Group 1 examiners shall include those to whom silks, woolens, and cottons selling above $45.00 per dozen are regularly assigned for examination, and under the Donnelly Contract such examiners are guaranteed an average minimum of not less than 52½c per hour. Under the Marlene Contract examiners receive a rate of pay of $14.00 per week, which, converted into an hourly rate, represents pay at the rate of 40c per hour. Therefore, examiners working upon better grade of garments receive a guaranteed average minimum of 52½c per hour under the Donnelly Contract, as compared with a rate of pay of 40c per hour under the Marlene Contract.

"The Donnelly Contract classes as Group 2 examiners those who work on cottons, linens, etc., selling at $45.00 per dozen and below, and guarantees them an average minimum of not less than 45c per hour. Assuming that some of the examiners under the Marlene Contract do work on cottons, linens, etc., selling at $45.00 per dozen and below, they receive, like the other examiners, a rate of pay of 40c per hour.

Special Machine Operators

"The Marlene Contract stipulates a rate of pay of $14.00 per week for special machine operators. Converted to an hourly rate of pay, this represents payment at the rate of
p. 813 40c per hour.

"The Donnelly Contract does not specify any operators as special operators or any separate rate of pay for special operators. Therefore, it is to be assumed that work similar to that performed by special operators under the Marlene Contract is performed by regular operators under the Donnelly Contract, and for the purposes of comparison they are here compared with Group 1 operators under the Donnelly Contract, as enumerated above. Such comparison is, therefore, as follows:

(17)

[fol. 5707] "40% of Group 1 operators under the Donnelly Contract receive an average minimum of not less than 64c per hour, as compared with a rate of pay of special machine operators under the Marlene Contract of 40c per hour. 30% of Group 1 operators under the Donnelly Contract receive an average minimum of not less than 56¼c per hour, as compared with a rate of pay under the Marlene Contract of 40c per hour; and the remaining 30% of Group 1 operators receive an average minimum of not less than 50c per hour, as compared with a rate of pay under the Marlene Contract of 40c per hour. Converting these last-named comparisons into average hourly rates, Group 1 operators under the Donnelly Contract are guaranteed an average minimum hourly rate of 57.475c as compared with the hourly rate of 40c per hour for special operators under the Marlene Contract.

p. 814

Subnormal Producers

"As has been heretofore observed, the Marlene Contract contains a provision to the effect that 'arrangements for sub-normal producers shall be established to exempt them from the above scales.' What these arrangements are is not shown in the contract, but it is apparent that subnormal producers do not have any minimum wage whatsoever under the Marlene Contract.

"Under the Donnelly Contract, however, all workers irrespective of their efficiency or ability are guaranteed minimum wages, ranging from $16.50 per week upward, or hourly rates of from 41¼c per hour upward. This is in excess of wages payable to many of the workers of normal efficiency and ability under the Marlene Contract.

"Moreover, under the Donnelly Contract apprentices are guaranteed an absolute minimum of $16.50 per week, or 41¼c per hour. This likewise is in excess of the hourly wage paid to many workers of normal productivity under the Marlene Contract.

"The foregoing statements were arrived at by me from a careful study of the documents referred to and the conclusions I have set forth are, in my opinion, true and correct."

Q. Now, have you completed your analysis and comparison of the Marlene Contract with the Donnelly Contract?

p. 815 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you find in the Marlene Contract covering operations in the silk shop, a single instance in which the wages provided for any class of workers is as high as those guaranteed in the Donnelly Contract?

[fol. 5708] A. There is only one single instance where the wages reached the same figure per hour.

Q. That is, not any better. What is that, I did not catch it but name it? Well, if it is going to take time, there is one instance where they pay as much as Donnelly, is that right?

A. For a portion of their group, that is 30% of ours would get as much or the same as their minimum.

Q. Is there any instance in which the silk shop employees under the Marlene Contract get any more than Donnelly?

A. No, sir.

Q. And only one instance where they get as much?

A. That's right.

(18)

[fol. 5709] JOHN B. BACHOFER, recalled, having been previously sworn, further testified as follows:

Redirect Examination

p. 848 By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. On yesterday, Mr. Bachofer, we introduced the tabulation made by Mrs. Keyes for the year ending October, 1937, just ahead of the three judge trial. Do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you at our request prepare a tabulation showing average earnings of piece work operators for the next year after that on a 40 hour basis?

A. Yes, sir. (Tabulation marked Plaintiffs' Exhibit 111 for identification)

Q. It this Exhibit 111 that tabulation?
A. Yes, sir.
p. 849 Q. You have this tabulation prepared in four columns have you not, first giving the name of the piece work operator, then the total hours worked in that year? A. Yes.
Q. Now, then the total money paid in that year and then the average weekly earnings on the 40 hour basis, is that right? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, I notice here at random that these wages on an average for the year run in such amounts as this: $29.44; $28.77; $28.58; $30.42; $40.10; $27.00; $26.31; $27.20; $40.54. Do I correctly understand that that means that these piece work operators averaged and received that amount of money per week for that year.
A. Yes, sir; that means that they averaged that much; their average earnings on a 40 hour basis were that.
Q. I see that this operator, Nina Galardi, who earned $40.54 worked 2023 hours. How much is that, how many weeks is that?
A. 2023 hours would represent approximately 51 weeks.
Q. So that operator worked not a full year but 51 weeks of the year and earned on the average $40.54, that is what your statement means?
A. That is right.
Q. Now, that is illustrative of the way the whole thing is prepared, is it now? A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 5710] Recross Examination

By Mr. Walsh:
p. 850 Q. Now, Mr. Bachofer, I will ask you to look at Plaintiffs' Exhibit 109 and tell me again what that is, please?
A. That is a payroll record of March 5th, 1937.
Q. And does that have on it the name—just tell us what that has on it?
A. Well, it has the employees' names and their number and the hours worked and their gross earnings and deductions for Social Security taxes and insurance and miscellaneous deductions and the net amount paid.

Q. I will have you look at Plaintiffs' Exhibit 110 and ask you what that is?

A. This says "[Employers] including beginners who work exclusively on merchandise selling wholesale for $45.00 per dozen and below, average earnings of piece work operators for week ending October 30, 1936 to October 22, 1937, on 40 hour basis, name, hours worked, money paid, average hourly rate and average weekly earnings."

Q. Does that exhibit there, that schedule, show all of the names of the employees and the same matters beginning with hours worked as this one, Exhibit 109 does?

A. I could not tell without checking one against the other, Mr. Walsh.

p. 851 Q. Is it supposed to do that? As I understand it, that is one month that is included in this year. A. This is one week.

Q. A week, yes. That is one week that is included in this year. A. Yes.

Q. Is it one week of 1937, that is in Exhibit 109 and is included or supposed to be included in Plaintiffs' Exhibit 110 which takes in the full year?

A. Well, I would assume that every name on this, granted this is a piece work payroll, went in here.

Q. Isn't it a piece work payroll? Look at it and tell us exactly what it is.

A. Mr. Walsh, as far as I can tell, it looks like the piece work payroll. It was a record that was kept before my time down there and that is as far as I can tell.

Q. Did you make this one up? (Referring to Exhibit 110) A. No, sir.

p. 852 Q. Was it made under your supervision?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 5711] Q. Who was the individual who made that up?

(2)

A. Mrs. Keyes.
Q. Who is the individual who made this up?
Q. I am now showing you Exhibit 109. Who is the individual that made that up, if you know?
A. I wouldn't know.

(2)

[fol. 5770] "Received your letter, also letter written to me by Schatz. Am sorry I have delayed answer. Stop. I will positively make Minneapolis either Sunday of this week or Monday of next week. We will then take full final action. In the meantime please proceed in getting a better hold on the shop. Meyer Perlstein." It is endorsed "Charge to International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 912½ Main Street, Dallas, Texas, main office 1111 Main Street, Dallas, Texas," with the numbers on it. You sent that telegram, didn't you?

p. 1955

A. I did.

Q. Now, I call your attention to telegram dated March 19th, 1 P.M. "David Dubinsky, President, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 3 West 16th Street, New York City, New York. Manufacturers have [bought] all our contempt cases to court, so court is busy with them the last couple of days. Our girls have made perfect witnesses. Stop. Things in court look more or less favorable. There are possibilities that Morton Davis who secured first temporary injunction should not get a permanent one. Meyer Perlstein. Charge to International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 912½ Main Street, Dallas, Texas." You sent that, didn't you.

A. I did.

Q. Another telegram, 1935 dated March 19th, 12 P.M.: "David Dubinsky, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 3 West 16th Street New York City. (3)

A. I did.

Q. Another one bearing the same date as those that have preceded; "Mr. David Dubinsky, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 3 West 16th Street, New York City. The hearing of one of the five temporary injunction against us in Dallas was completed today. The judge gave our lawyer all the breaks but decided the case in favor of the manufacturers. Stop. There are four other temporary injunctions pending. Intend to proceed to try them. Want to keep the manufacturers busy in court. The publicity we get out of these injunction hearings gradually awaken more public opinion in our favor, that is, if public opinion is worth anything. Stop. In St. Louis four of our main people in the conduct of the strike, two men and two women were arrested yesterday and kept for twenty hours. They were kept under the state law which allows the police that length of time for investigation. They were let free Tuesday without any charge filed. The other side is looking to frame up something. Meyer Perlstein. Night letter, charge to Garment Workers." You sent that, didn't you?

[fol. 5771] A. I did.

Q. Another telegram dated March 21, 1935, 9 A.M., main office 1011 Main Street, Dallas, Texas "Ray Owens, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 813 Walnut Street, Kansas City Missouri. Received your letter today. Sending you check for $100.00.

p. 1957 Meyer Perlstein. Charge to International." You sent that telegram?

A. I did.

Q. Who was this Ray Owens?

Q. Where?

A. In Kansas City.

Q. You sent him the money, did you?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you get the money?

Q. And you say in this telegram, I will read it again, "Proceed with the Duncan hearing. If the other girl wants to do the right thing good and well. Take care of her after the hearing but not before." What was the right thing you wanted her to do?

(4)

[fol. 5772] p. 1958 A. We intended to expel her from the union.

Q. All right. I read another telegram "April 2, 1935. Miss Hannah Haskell, 3 West 16th Street, New York City, New York. A. I did.

Q. Who is Dr. Threinman or Cohen?

A. I believe that had to do with a hearing before the Code Authorities; I don't remember exactly but that is my impression.

Q. You don't remember anything more about them than that?

A. I do not.

Q. Was this Cohen a Dr. Cohen or just Cohen?

A. Cohen, I believe; he was the enforcement officer for the Cloak and Suit Code Authorities.

Q. Cloak and Suit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right, I will read the next telegram:

"Dallas, Texas, April 5, 1935, Mr. Ben Gilbert, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri. Intended to make St. Louis Monday but it will be impossible. Stop. I was cited here for contempt of court and will have to appear in court Monday. Stop. I am leaving for Kansas City tonight and will be back here Monday. Stop. Would want you and Morrey to come to see me in Kansas City Sunday morning or late Saturday night. Please deposit additional $100.00 to my revolving fund. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram, did you?

p. 1960

[fol. 5773] A. I did.

Q. Another telegram "Dallas, Texas, April 5, Miss Hannah Haskell, 3 West 16th Street, New York City, New York." This is from Dallas, Texas "29 strikers were cited for contempt yesterday. Sentence and possibly hearing will be imposed Monday. Stop. Edith Phillips was also cited for contempt yesterday. Sentence or hearing in her case may be imposed Monday. Stop. I finally had to leave my hotel room this morning and citation papers were served. I was brought before the judge and put under bond to appear Monday for contempt proceedings against me. Stop. When I came out of my hotel room this morning I had also a Federal [imigration] officer waiting for me to question me. Stop. I am leaving tonight for Kansas City; will be back for court proceedings here Monday. Signed Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram, didn't you? A. I did.

p. 1961

Q. Now, this Edith Phillips referred to is the Edith Phillips that you said was your assistant in St. Louis?

A. She was an organizer.

Q. Working out of the office where you made your headquarters in St. Louis?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. So Edith Phillips went to Dallas from St. Louis? A. Yes.

p. 1962 Q. She was arrested there in Dallas?

A. She was cited for contempt, at least papers were served upon her.

Q. Cited for contempt of court for violating an injunction in Dallas?

A. And she was not convicted.

Q. You were, though? A. I was.

Q. Now, I will read another telegram: "Dallas, Texas, April 8th. Miss Hannah Haskell, 3 West 16th Street New York City. My case, also Phillips and 29—" I withdraw that last question. This telegram of April 5th which I just read you, you say "I finally had to leave my room this morning." What were you hiding in your room for?

(6)

[fol. 5774] A. I wasn't hiding.

Q. Well, what did you mean when you say you had to leave it?

A. I had to leave it because they wanted to serve papers on me and I opened the door and I left the room and they served it on me.

p. 1963 Q. Very well, let the telegram stand as it is. Now the next telegram is April 8th, 1935 "Miss Hannah Haskell, 3 West 16th Street, New York City, New York. My case, also Phillips and 29 strikers cited for contempt postponed until Wednesday afternoon because union lawyer out of town. Stop. If you have not mailed the check please wire money." You sent that telegram? A. I did.

Q. I will read the next one "May 23, 1935, David Dubinsky, president, 3 West 16th Street, New York City, New York. Saw Lorch St. Louis. Wouldn't do anything. Does not want union. Stop. Myself, committee of state and city federation leaders saw mayor yesterday. Promised to take up matter with city council tomorrow. Stop. President Central Labor Union and one of our men visited most of councilmen today." The word here is "Beniment", sentiment, that is what it must be. "sentiment more or less favorable for some action tomorrow. Stop. Manufacturers bringing pressure on counsel not to interfere. Stop. Please wire money today for strike benefits." You sent that telegram, didn't you?

A. I did.

Q. It is signed Perlstein and all of these are marked "Charge to International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.". I read another telegram "Dallas, May 25, 1935. Main office 1011 Main Street, Dallas, Texas. David Dubinsky, president 3 West 16th Street, New York City. Thousand to eleven hundred dollars per week is minimum they need here to continue. Stop. From this amount strike benefits, special relief, lawyer fees, luncheons to the strikers and strike expenses. Stop. Money received yesterday not sufficient. Please send today additional $250.00. Stop. City mayor turn matter over yesterday to city attorney for legal advice. Signed Perlstein. Charge to International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union." You sent that telegram?

A. I did.

Q. The next telegram is May 24th. It seems to be out of order. The telegram reads "Dallas, Texas, May 24, 1935. Artie Wilson, International Ladies'' Garment Workers' Union, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri. Tell members of Local 182 they have no reason to be upset. Stop. If Joint Board will not cover expense of delegate, International will. Stop. Please tell Margaret or Doris to

p. 1965

(7)

[fol. 5775] give you money for the delegate. I will cover the amount given to you. Stop. Mailing signed check. Stop. Please tell Morrey received his letter. Let him go ahead. Regards." You sent that telegram? A. I did.

p. 1966 Q. I will read another telegram "Dallas, May 25, 1935, Sol Goldberg, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 813 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri. Am leaving for Kansas City tonight. Believe June 5 all right for meeting." You sent that telegram?

p. 1967

A. Let us hear the balance of it.

Q. Signed Perlstein. A. I did.

Q. Who was Sol Goldberg?

A. He was a secretary here in 1935.

Q. Secretary of what?

A. Of the Kansas City locals.

Q. I will read another telegram "June 12, 1935, Dallas, Texas. Doris Kling, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis. Please send at once air mail to Dallas union office list of International locals throughout the country. Signed Perlstein." You sent that telegram?

A. I did.

Q. Another telegram, "Main office 1011 Main Street, Dallas, Texas, June 12, 1938 Sam Schatz, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 813 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri. Advised yesterday Emily that you turn over neckwear local to Richard of the Amalgameted. They properly belong to this organization. Any expense attached with strike or local must be covered by Amalgameted. Give them all the moral assistance possibly can. Stop. Will stay in Dallas Hotel Adolphus couple of days. Advise developments. Perlstein." You sent that telegram, Did you? A. I did.

Q. Another telegram, July 8th "Sander Genis,

(8)

[fol. 5776] 'International Ladies' Garment Workers'

p. 1968 Union, Lumber Exchange Building, Minneapolis, Minnesota." It reads "Do not intend to give Solomon any arbitration. Stop. Therefore don't consider it and try [intilligently] to ignore his request for arbitration. Stop. He must accept the same agreement and the same wages and hours the workers are receiving in Chicago or Cleveland. Stop. It would not hurt if the strike would last a couple of weeks. Stop. Don't settle with him unless you consult me first. Stop. Have wired President Dubinsky to wire you $200.00. In the meantime you could ask our local to lay out the money and I will take care of same. Stop. Please see that there should be active picketing. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram didn't you? A. I did.

Q. Now, was there a strike going on in Minneapolis at this time? A. Yes.

Q. That was a strike of your garment workers union? A. Yes, a cloak shop.

Q. Very well, but it was the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union that was putting on the strike? A. Yes.

Q. And who was Solomon?

A. Solomon was the owner of that cloak shop.

Q. And Solomon wanted arbitration, did he?

p. 1969 A. He wanted to arbitrate.

Q. Well, he wanted arbitration, did he?

A. He did. May I explain why?

The Court: Just answer the questions now and your counsel will give you all the opportunity.

Q. He wanted arbitration and you were not going to give it to him, that is right, isn't it?

A. Yes, but there is an explanation with it.

Q. Yes, and then you said "It would not hurt if the strike would last a couple of weeks". You said that, didn't you?

(9)

[fol. 5777] A. I did; there is an explanation also for that.

Q. A man wanted to arbitrate and you would not arbitrate but you wanted the strike to continue a couple of weeks longer anyway, that is the import of this telegram isn't it, that is what you wanted?

p. 1970

A. In this case, yes.

A. There are three cloak shops in Minneapolis. One of them is the Solomon Cloak Shop and for several years the Solomon Cloak Shop refused to pay the Code wages and we had several complaints against him with the Code Authorities and finally when the Code was declared unconstitutional the workers have organized, they have joined the union and have demanded to the employer the code
p. 1971 wages and hours, the same wages and hours that prevailed in the cloak industry. There are about thirty-five thousand people employed in the cloak industry who were receiving the same wages and the same hours as established by the code. Mr. Solomon said that he will not pay the wages paid by all the manufacturers; what he wants is to arbitrate if he [shoulc] or he should not, so I advised Mr. Genis to tell him that this wage scale is established for the industry and no individual manufacturer can demand the payment of lower wages or the union can afford to refer something that has been established in the industry, to arbitration because whatever the arbitrator may have decided in this case would have affected the wages of thirty-five thousand workers employed in the other shops.

Q. That is all the explanation you want to make?

A. In connection with the arbitration.

Q. What was the reason you wanted the strike to last two weeks longer then instead of having it settled?

p. 1972 A. (Continuing) And before we are making another agreement we want him to know that the workers will not stand for broken promises and we thought by them stopping for another week or two it will do a whole lot of good to establish better relations in the future.

Q. That is you were going to punish him and make him be good?

A. In this case some disciplinary action would do him a lot of good.

(10)

[fol. 5778] p. 1974 Q. Now, I will read another telegram: "July 8th, 1935. Edith Phillips, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri. Please find out if Tobin sent the required letter to Ely-Walker. Stop. Am wondering why I did not receive the copy. Stop. Also wire of any developments there may be. Stop. How are the strike activities. Stop. Advise. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram, didn't you? A. I did.

p. 1975 Q. Well, I will read another telegram, July 29, 1935 from Dallas, Texas: "Sol Goldberg, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 813 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri. Girl from Prins shall be taken in for $25.00. Stop. This girl should be put to work immediately to help us unionize that shop. Stop. At present we are engaged to win Stern-Slegman-Prins' shop and every worker that was loyal to this firm should be won over by the union to help us in that fight. Stop. After the shops have been unionized p. 1976 and cloak trade as a whole will be union trade, then the time will be opportune to punish heavily those that betray the union. Regards. Perlstein." You sent that telegram?

A. I did.

p. 1978 Q. Now, in Kansas City did your union make any kind of agreement that did not have a closed shop provision in it?

A. We did not.

p. 1983 Q. Now you say that "after the shops have been unionized and the cloak trade as a whole will be union then the time will be opportune to punish heavily those who betray the union." What do you mean by that?

A. I mean discipline them.

p. 1986 Q. Well, I won't ask it further if you didn't get it. I will read another telegram. "Dallas, Texas, July 29th. Ben Gilbert, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri. Reference your wire, you should make special arrangements to get cutters, Cardais Cloak Company. Don't stop at any expense. Handle it yourself but act at once. Meyer Perlstein." Who sent that telegram? A. I did.

[fol. 5779] p. 1992 Q. I will proceed with the telegrams. Telegram of July 29, 1935, from Dallas, Texas, addressed to Hannah Haskell, 3 West 16th St., New York City: "Strikers waiting in office for strike benefit. Please wire money at once. Stop. Please send two hundred copies Justices Houston, Texas." It is signed "Meyer Perlstein". You sent that telegram, did you? A. I did.

Q. The next telegram I read is one sent from Dallas, Texas, July 30, 1935, addressed to David Dubinsky, care International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 116½ E. Prairie, Decatur, Illinois, and it reads: "Am still wrangling manufacturers do not want the power of commission to safeguard discrimination to extend to workers that may join union in future. Stop. They want to limit power of commission to strikers only. Stop. The number of strikers that they object that is supposed to be left to the commission is also larger than originally stated. Stop. Cotton dress manufacturers are the main obstacle in way. Stop. At any rate doing my best to get through with it if possible will know about tomorrow. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram? A. Yes.

p. 1993 Q. The next telegram is one dated August 1st, 1935, from Dallas, Texas, addressed to Hannah Haskell, care International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 3 West 16th Street, New York City, and it reads: "Am still hanging around here hagling still uncertain if I will be able to get through with it or not hope I may. Stop. Will know definitely about

We are to have another conference tomorrow. Stop. I don't know what we will accomplish but that is the situation. God help me. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram, didn't you? A. Yes.

p. 2001 Q. I will read another telegram, dated August 13, 1935, and addressed to Ben Gilbert, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri: "They have cited me for contempt. Stop. My case comes up Friday. Stop. You will have to take charge of the situation in St. Louis until my return. Stop. Tell Schatz how to go about his business. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram?

A. I did.

p. 2002 Q. I will read another telegram, dated August 9, 1935, from Dallas to Ben Gilbert, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri: "Please have two hundred dollars deposited my revolving fund. Will return it Monday. Intend to leave for St. Louis tomorrow." That is signed "Perlstein". You sent that telegram, didn't you? A. I did.

Stop. Will have to continue the strike for some weeks. Letter with details follows. Please have the strike benefit wired Saturday morning. Meyer Perlstein." In the light of that telegram do you say you weren't conducting that strike?

p. 2003 A. I wasn't conducting that strike.

Q. All right. You sent this telegram, anyway, didn't you? A. Yes, I did.

(14)

[fol. .5782] p. 2003 Q. I read another telegram of August 9, 1935, from Dallas to Ann Markiewicz, Savoy Hotel, Alton, Illinois: "Hope to be in St. Louis tomorrow or Monday. Stop. Advise workers to stick to their union. Have meetings with them and explain what company unionism is. Stop. Tell them not to be afraid for discharge. The union will protect them. Meyer Perlstein."

p. 2004 Q. I will read another telegram of August 12 from Dallas, that is 1935, addressed to David Dubinsky, President: "Am stopped leaving Dallas by court order. Stop. Twenty eight strikers participating Wednesday's picketing cited for contempt. Stop. Case coming up court tomorrow. Stop. Must have at once addition four hundred dollars for lawyers. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram, did you?

A. I did.

p. 2005 Q. Mr. Perlstein, I call your attention to a telegram dated August 13, 1935, addressed to David Dubinsky, 3 West 16th Street, New York City, which reads as follows: "Four of the cited for contempt strikers did not [put] up any defense and were sentenced three days jail and twenty-five dollars fine each. Stop. The case of the others comes up Friday. Stop. They have served me with contempt of court warrant this morning accusing me of everything under the sun. Stop. They are using my Governor's Commission testimony to connect me inciting violence and contempt of the injunction. Stop. Case comes up Friday morning. Stop. They are also trying get an indictment against me for inciting a riot which is a grave offense in Texas. Stop. They want to get me either in jail or out of town. Stop. Will have to have money to pay fines about three hundred fifty dollars. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram?

A. I did.

Q. Well, you were tried for contempt; were you not, by the judge?

p. 2006 A. I was.

Q. And the charge was for conspiring among other things to strip—strike that out. I want to get this in the record right. This telegram that I have just read refers to a proceeding in Court and a restraining order. The complaint among other things recited "That on April 9, 1935, about 5 P. M. Eva Hernandez, a non-striking employee of plaintiff, left this plaintiff's establishment after completing the day's work proceeding toward her home; that between Poydras and Murphy Streets on Elm Street in Dallas, Virginia Monk and Charlotte Duncan, members of the defendant unions in this cause, and both and each of them unlawfully knowingly and willfully attacked the said Eva Hernandez from her back; that the said Virginia Monk and Charlotte Duncan [fol. 5783] and both and each of them unlawfully, knowingly and willfully tore the clothes of the said Eva Hernandez and exposed her person upon a busy public street to her shame; that the said acts of the said Virginia Monk and Charlotte Duncan were a personal injury, interfering with, hindering and stopping the said Evan Hernandez."

It further recites: "That Meyer Perlstein conspired with each and all of the persons committing the acts set forth in Article 3 hereof, to commit the same; that such conspiracy obstructed and interfered with this plaintiff in the free and unrestrained control and operation of its plant, factory, property and the operation of its business, and was in violation of the temporary injunction issued by this Honorable Court, and in derogation and in contempt of this Court; that as such conspirator, Meyer Perlstein was responsible for the unlawful acts of this co-conspirators, and must answer to this Court therefor.

"That Meyer Perlstein incited the actors who committed the acts set forth in Article 3 hereof, to commit the same, in that he taught them that strike is war; that being Russian he taught them the Russian Philosophy; that examples of his teaching of war and revolution and Russian philosophy, are the following statements made in the presence of members of the defendant unions, the names of such members being to this plaintiff unknown, but known to Meyer Perlstein, at the hearing before the Commission appointed by the Governor, in Dallas, on or about July 10, 1935.

"'I believe that if the Government ever dares to do what the manufacturers are doing, I will tell my sons to take up arms against the Government.

"'The time will come when they (meaning plaintiff's non-striking employees) will become members of the union and they will be on the streets picketing, fighting for better living.

"'After all, revolution does not change habits—it is revolution that lays the foundation for a healthier, normal evolutionary process."

p. 2008

I read further: "That the said teachings of Meyer Perlstein, after the issuance of the temporary injunction, by him, were unlawfully, knowingly and wilfully done; that said teachings have caused lawful members of the union to become unlawful in committing the acts set forth in Article 3 hereof, and made them irresponsive to the law of the land; that the said teachings of Meyer Perlstein to each of the members of the union are a violations of the temporary injunction issued herein, and in contempt of the dignity of this Honorable Court."

"That Meyer Perlstein has protected, aided and assisted these members of the defendant unions herein who committed the acts set out in Paragraph 3 hereof, in that prior to and after the acts and each of them afore set forth, the said Meyer Perlstein paid and recommended that the International Ladies Garment Union pay $6.00 per week to each of said members committing the said acts unlawfully, in that he retained and paid and—or recommended that the International Ladies Garment Union pay attorneys to defend one perpetrators of the said acts; that after the commission of the said acts described in subsection 'O' of Paragraph 3, to-wit: On August 8, 1935, the said Meyer Perlstein increased the said payments and—or recommended to International Ladies Garment Union that the [fol. 5784] p. 2009 said payments should be increased so that all of those described in Article 3 hereof, as unlawfully violating this injunction, received thereafter $7.00 per week, instead of $6.00 per week; that the said Meyer Perlstein was expressly enjoined from protecting, aiding and assisting any person or persons in violating the injunction herein, and his actions in this paragraph set forth are a knowing, wilful and unlawful violation thereof, and in contempt of this Honorable Court."

Now, there are others. "That Meyer Perlstein, as the officer of International Ladies Garment Union, in control of this said strike, was under a legal duty to discipline members of the defendant unions who violated the terms of the temporary injunction herein; that he has disciplined none of the members of the defendant unions who committed the acts described in Article 3 hereof; nor has he assisted in procuring or procured the arrest of any of said members; that on the contrary, instead of aligning himself upon the side of law and order, he has made no effort to see that the law of the land be kept; that these said omissions were knowing, wilful and unlawful, and were a violation of the injunction herein, and in contempt of the dignity of this Honorable Court.

That Meyer Perlstein, at the hearing before p. 2010 the Texas Commission, appointed by the Governor of this state, did threaten, in the presence of Lester Lorch, who is this plaintiff's spokeman in dealing with the strikers, on or about July 10, 1935, as follows:

"'The workers will have to adopt the same measures as they adopted in San Francisco, and there will be a calamity.'"

"'The workers here may decide to take drastic action to teach these open shoppers the same lesson that the San Francisco workers have taught to their open-shoppers, and the workers in other states have taught to others.

"'All the trades may be forced to make a joint move. We do not want it, we will try to fight it, but if the people here are driven to desperation they will have to adopt desperate measures;' that the statements were unlawful, knowing and wilful, in violation of the temporary injunction herein, were a threat of a general strike, with violence and blood shed as the probable outcome, and in contempt of the dignity of this Honorable Court.

That on or about July 25, 1935, Meyer Perlstein did state, over the telephone, at about 8:30 P. M. to Lester Lorch, who is the spokesman of this plaintiff for dealing with the strikers, as follows:

p. 2011 'Don't say that I did not warn you—be sure and take care of yourself.'

The said statement was an unlawful, knowing and wilful threat, in violation of the temporary injunction herein, and in contempt of the dignity of this Honorable Court.

Wherefore, premises considered, this plaintiff prays that Meyer Perlstein be cited to appear herein to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of Court for the acts herein set forth, and that upon a trial hereof the said Meyer Perlstein be punished for contempt in such manner as may be proper."

Now, that is part of the complaint that was filed against you, wasn't it?

(17)

[fol. 5785] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you appeared at a hearing on this contempt proceeding, did you not?

A. I did.

Q. And these telegrams that I have been reading were offered in evidence upon that proceeding?

A. They were.

p. 2012 Q. Now, I want to read this from the judgment of the court:

"The said plaintiff having appeared in this court at 9 o'clock A. M. on the 14th day of September, 1935, and announced ready for trial, and the defendant Meyer Perlstein having appeared on said day and hour both in person and by attorneys and announced ready for trial to show cause why said defendant should not be held in contempt of this Court as prayed in plaintiff's second amended original motion; and the court, after hearing the evidence and the argument of counsel and being fully advised in the premises on this the said 30th day of September, 1935, finds that the said temporary injunction hereinbefore described was in full force and effect from March 25, 1935, continuously until August 22, 1935; and that the said Meyer Perlstein was duly cited therein and had knowledge thereof; and that the said Meyer Perlstein has violated the aforesaid temporary injunction in that:

p. 2013 "It is therefore the opinion of this Court that the said defendant Meyer Perlstein is guilty of contempt of this court and is in contempt of this Court.

p. 2014 It is, therefore, Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed that the said defendant Meyer Perlstein, be, and he is hereby, adjudged in contempt of Court, and he is hereby punished by being fined $100.00 and costs of this proceeding and further by being sentenced to the Dallas County jail from 10 A. M. September 30, 1935, until 10 A. M. October 3rd, 1935, and thereafter until said fine of $100.00 and costs are paid.

It is therefore ordered, adjudged and decreed by the Court that the State of Texas do have and recover of and from the defendant Meyer Perlstein, the said fine of $100.00 and all costs of this proceeding for which let execution issue.

It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that capias shall forthwith issue herein commanding the Sheriff to arrest the said defendant Meyer Perlstein and place him in the County Jail of Dallas County, Texas, and there safely keep him in prison until 10 o'clock A. M. October 3rd, 1935, this order being issued September 30, 1935, at 10 o'clock A. M. in the presence of the Sheriff and the defendant hereinbefore named, and there safely keep him thereafter until such time as this said fine of $100.00 and costs shall be paid. Signed Towne Young, Judge."

(18)

[fol. 5786] Now, that was the decree that was entered against you, wasn't it?

A. That was the decision of the Court, yes.

p. 2015 Q. You undertook to get a writ of habeas corpus from the Supreme Court of Texas?

A. We did.

Q. And that was refused?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were incarcerated in the jail in accordance with this decree?

A. I was.

Q. And paid the fine.

A. I did.

p. 2016 Q. Mr. Perlstein, I show you Exhibit 84-A and ask you if that is your picture looking through the bars of the jail. A. It is.

Q. Did you make a report to the union on the Dallas strike? A. I did.

Q. And after that report was received did the Executive committee of your union make a printed report of the convention?

A. They did.

Q. Do you recognize this book, Exhibit 85, as that report? A. It is.

Q. I want to read from page 92 under the heading "Dallas", "Dallas is a considerable center for silk and cotton dresses. There are also several underwear and uniform shops located in that city, employing, all told, about 2,000 workers.

In February, 1935, the union served notice on fifteen Dallas dress manufacturers that they would have to increase wages and shorten work hours if a strike were to be averted. The Dallas group of employers, organized in an anti-union association which

[fol. 5787] was receiving help from the open shop organizations in vigorously opposing all trade union organization in that city, refused to deal with the union. Their reply to the union's call was an inauguration of a system of dismissal of workers suspected of union
p. 2017 activity, tightening the reign of intimidation in the shops. On March 7, after the dressmakers employed in the shop of the Merton-Davis Company struck for reinstatement of several of their fellow workers dismissed for union activity, the dressmakers of all the other shops walked out in their support. The Dallas dress strike which lasted from March to November, 1935, will occupy a place of honor in the annals of our union."

Was that report made after you had told the union what had been going on in Dallas?

A. Yes.

Q. And after they knew of the circumstance of your conviction, you had reported all that, hadn't you? A. I did.

Q. And the fine that was paid by you, the money was furnished by the International? A. Yes.

Q. And the fees for your lawyers in the defense of these cases down there was paid by the International?

A. Was paid by the International.

Q. All the expenses of Dallas were paid by the International?

A. All the expenses of what?

Q. Of this whole strike and all this litigation?

A. The greatest portion was paid by them.

p. 2018 Q. And how much did you say you had expended down there on that one strike?

A. I don't remember; there is a statement there.

Q. How is that? A. I don't remember exactly.

[fol. 5788] Q. Didn't you make the statement that you thought it was about $30,000.00? I would like to get through with this quickly if we can. A. Approximately.

Q. Approximately $30,000.00. Now, I want to read you just three more telegrams, they are short: "August 13, 1935, Sam Goldberg, 813 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri. Am cited here for contempt. Stop. Must appear in court Friday. Please see that the work should be attended to. Stop. Give may regards to Garfinkel. Please tell him to attend to the work. Will see him soon. Meyer Perlstein."

Q. You sent that telegram anyway? A. I did.

Q. The next telegram is August 16, 1935 addressed to Morris Weiss, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri: "Take committee of shop and see Schminke. Find out" - - I think it should be, it is written our

p. 2019 - - - "Why shop is closed and what he is doing. Stop. Send somebody to investigate Benneterre. Stop. My contempt case postponed for tomorrow morning. Perlstein." You sent that telegram, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

p. 2020 Q. Another telegram, August 16, 1935; Sam Schatz, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 703 North 16th Street, St. Louis, Missouri. Advise members cotton locals that the situation in the shops of Ely-Walker is being watched by the International. We are gathering the necessary information and proper action will be taken at the proper time. Stop. Please advise them that the International stood by them and always will stand by them. Expect to be in St. Louis early next week. Meyer Perlstein." You sent that telegram? A. I did.

p. 2022 Q. In the same hearing did you make this statement "I believe that if the Government ever dares to do what the manufacturers are doing I will tell my sons to take up arms against the Government."

p. 2023. Q. Did you make that statement, that is all I want to know, did you make it? A. I did.

(21)

[fol. 5789] p. 2026. Q. I hand you Exhibit 92 which is a photograph and ask you if you recognize the lady whose picture appears there?

A. I do.

Q. Who is it? A. Dora Smith.

p. 2035 Q. Look at Exhibit 61 and see if you saw that
p. 2036 picture in the paper?

A. I did see it outside of Memphis, in another city.

Q. Wasn't this picture published widely in papers all over the country?

A. I saw it in a paper.

Q. This picture that I have just shown you is from a New York newspaper, isn't it?

A. Yes, the New York Sunday News.

p. 2037 Q. Yes, after the picture. Now, there was a strike in the Gernes Garment Company of Kansas City in 1937, wasn't there?

A. There was.

Q. You knew about that? A. I did.

Q. You were here? A. I was.

Q. And the strikers carried on until finally the doorways, the stairways leading into that factory were occupied by sit-down strikers?

A. They were.

(22)

[fol. 5790] p. 2039. Q. Now, it was after that that you made an agreement with the Gernes people?

A. Yes.

Q. The end of this violence. All right. How long did this strike last?

A. Three or four weeks.

Q. You continued the strike for how many weeks?

A. For several weeks.

Q. And when you settled with Mr. Gernes it was conditioned that his employees should join the union? A. It was.

Q. Well, you did tell this court didn't you "no one could call a strike if the workers in the shop are not members of the union"?

p. 2040 A. Well, that is not the policy of the union. What I meant to say was that my own policy, to advise the locals, to guide the locals.

Q. I am talking about what the strike was called for at Gernes?

A. For improvement of conditions.

Q. And what else?

A. Shorter hours.

Q. Yes; what else?

A. The right of collective bargaining.

Q. What else?

(23)

A. The right to set prices on the garments, on piece work garments,—rates.

Q. What else?

[fol. 5791] A. That no worker should be discharged without a just cause.

Q. What else?

A. And if a complaint arises, that if there is no
p. 2041 agreement between the employer and the representative of the union it should be submitted to arbitration.

Q. Didn't you make a condition that his shop should be unionized? A. Yes.

Q. It should be unionized and when you made your contract, you made your contract for a closed shop didn't you? A. I did.

p. 2042 Q. And you follow the policy always of never having a strike unless you have membership in the plant?

p. 2043 A. It depends entirely on the existing conditions in every individual situation.

Q. That is to say your own policy gives way to different situations at different times?

A. As a method to be pursued.

Q. Let's see what you mean, "The method to be pursued",—that while your policy is never to call a strike unless you have employes there, that the organization does have strikes when they have no employes?

A. The organization does have a right to call strikes.

Q. Well, do they have them?

A. Possibly have but not that I know of, but they have a right to have it.

p. 2044 Q. You are a frequent contributor to Justice, aren't you. A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the official organ of the International, isn't it? A. It is.

Q. And who is the editor?

(24)

[fol. 5792] A. Max Dannish.

Q. And who is the secretary and treasurer?

A. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Q. But what individual?

A. I believe it is —

Q. What position does Dubinsky hold?

A. President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union and general secretary and treasurer.

Q. Well, to make this as short as we can, David Dubinsky is president of this publication, isn' he? A. Yes.

Q. And general secretary and treasurer?

A. He is.

Q. And Max Dannish is editor? A. Yes.

Q. You are a frequent contributor? A. I am.

Q. In the issue of October 15, 1937, there is an article by you is there not?

A. May I see it?

Q. Yes, sir. A. Yes.

p. 2045 Q. And in that article you made this statement, did you not: "The Gernes Garment Company in Kansas City is the only shop that manufactures children's dresses. It is known as one of the finest shops in the country. When the agreement was signed with them several months ago, our local of these workers was [fol 5793] organized as Local 288. None of the workers in the shop was a member of the Union prior to the organization of the local and the entire procedure and methods of unionism were strange to most of them." You made that statement in that article? A. I did.

Q. And you made a contract with the Gernes people and an entirely different contract with the Gordon Company?

p. 2046 A. In certain respects; minor changes.

Q. They are two different contracts aren't they, between two different concerns and the union?

A. Yes; two individual contracts.

Q. You know, do you not, that during the progress of that strike that you brought in people from the outside who were not members of the Gernes Company or its employes?

A. I did.

p. 2047 Q. If there were no members of the Gernes Company who were members of your union when that strike started, who was it that started the picketing of that company?

A. The Gordon Brothers and the Missouri.

Q. So this company was picketed by outside people and their employes were unanimously protesting against it, weren't they?

A. They were picketed by the Gordon Brothers strikers, who considered that shop a part of their shop.

Q. How many of the actual employes of Gordon were on strike? A. I believe about fifty.

Q. How many did they have working for them?

A. At that time when the strike was called?

Q. Well, about how many?

(26)

[fol. 5794] A. I imagine about 100 to 125.

Q. Now, I show you Justice of the issue of April 1, 1937, and I refer to page 8. You made this statement, didn't you, in an article that you

p. 2048 wrote and had published:

"Our new Union shops in Kansas City have already established themselves. All the workers in these shops have already joined the Union and the shops are beginning to function as well organized shops where union conditions, union hours and union treatment prevail.

Some of the workers, particularly in the shop of the Liberty Dress Co., where 250 girls are employed, have already tasted the picket line. Peculiar how quickly the girls joining our Union get imbued with its fighting spirit! For years and years we had tried to organize the Liberty Frock. It is only three weeks since an agreement was signed with the firm and these girls are already on the picket line organizing others! Yes, over 200 girls strong from the Liberty Frock were on the picket line in the Gordon Mfg. Co. strike last week and everyone who saw them was wondering at how quickly they had acquired their knowledge. They certainly have given a good account of themselves!"

Now, the Liberty Frock was entirely separate and distinct from the Gordon Company wasn't it?

A. It was.

Q. And from the Gernes Company?

A. It was, but they were members of the same union.

p. 2049 Q. But the girls from Liberty Frock, 200 of them, came over to engage in this strike at the Gernes Company where you did not have a single employee in that company?

A. They came to engage in helping the pickets in the three shops.

Q. The three shops were all in one building, weren't they?

A. Yes.

Q. You had 200 outside pickets?

A. The 200 didn't come at the same time; they were,—during that week, two hundred.

Q. All right. I will read a little further from this same article:

"On March 17, the workers of three shops, the Gordon Manufacturing Company, a cotton dress shop where about 225 people are employed; the Gernes Mfg. Co., a children's dress shop, where about 200 people are employed; and the Missouri Garment Co., where about 200 cotton dressmakers are employed, went out on strike."

(27)

[fol. 5795] Now, it wasn't true that the 200 people in the Gernes Company went out on a strike was it?

A. The union people went out on strike.

Q. Well, there wasn't any union people in the Gernes Company at that time as you have just shown.

p. 2050 Q. Now, you had a sit-down strike there didn't you?

A. The girls did have a sit down strike.

Q. I will read you this, so we can get it in the record clearly: "Fifty of the Gordon Mfg. girls, all members of the Union, occupied the front hallway. These three shops are located in one building. The girls blockaded the front door so that those who intended to become strike-breakers could not get in. These 50 girls were on the stairway for 60 hours, blocking the front door. Their families
p. 2051 brought them cots and blankets and for two nights they slept on the stairway. Finally the Health Department of the city began to make arrangements to move the strikers because of sanitary conditions, and they vacated."

That was true, wasn't it, that the sit-down strikers were in there? A. Yes.

Q. You knew about that?

A. I did.

Q. You said this in your article, didn't you: "Finally the Health Department of the city began to make arrangements to move the
p. 2052 strikers because of sanitary conditions and they vacated". You said that in your article didn't you? A. I did say it.

Q. Was it true or false? Was it true or false?

A. I believe it was false; they were ready.

(28)

[fol. 5796] p. 2053 Q. And in the same article you made this statement didn't you, referring now to the Gernes, the Gordon and the Missouri: "These three firms will soon have union shops; if not they will never again manufacture dresses." You made that statement, didn't you?

A. I believe I did.

Q. And you proposed to carry out that threat, didn't you?

A. I proposed to keep the strike until the shops will become union shops.

Q. And unless they yielded you were not going to permit them to ever again engage in the manufacture of dresses, that is what you meant, isn't it?

A. That is not what I meant.

Q. What did you mean?

A. I meant that the workers will refuse producing dresses until the strike will be settled.

Q. But there could be other workers.

A. Well, it was up to the employer to engage them but these workers will not work on these dresses.

p. 2054 Q. You didn't say these workers. You said "these firms will never again manufacture dresses." Did you say that?

A. That is what it says in the paper; I didn't.

Q. Didn't you write this article that appears in the paper?

A. Yes, but the editor blue pencils my articles some times.

Q. It starts out: "Drive in Southwest sweeps on. By Meyer Perlstein, ILGWU Regional Director." Do you say now that that was changed in the office?

A. That was corrected by the editor.

Q. And you did say it?

(29)

[fol. 5797] p. 2054 A. I did say the substance of it; not word for it.

Q. Is that what you intended to do to the Donnelly Garment Company? A. No.

Q. What were you going to do, now, to them?
A. Try to organize them.
Q. And if you didn't organize them what were you going to do? A. Try again.
Q. And then what? A. I never give up.

p. 2055 Q. I am reading now from the Justice of May 1, 1937, article by Meyer Perlstein, ILGWU, Regional Director. There is a lot of it but I come to the headline, Kansas City, Missouri: "Prior to 1933, our Union had hardly any organization in Kansas City. As reported to the Chicago [conventioned], we succeeded in 1933, in organizing a few of the smaller cloak and dress shops, forming our first local, No. 114, in August of that year.

The Union, however, kept constantly at its task, driving ahead with greater or lesser efforts at times, for the unionization of the local market. During 1934 and 1935 some headway was made by the organization of

p. 2056 a few more of the smaller shops though it still failed to make a dent in the big factories.

The real break in the Kansas City situation came towards the end of 1936, growing out of a strike which the Union conducted against the Stern-Slegman-Prins Co. during July and August of that year. The drive against Stern-Slegman-Prins actually had begun a year prior to that, when in June, 1935, the Kansas City Joint Board began its activity to unionize the workers of the Stern-Slegman-Prins firm. Shortly thereafter, the Missouri State Federation of Labor, in convention, placed this company on its unfair list.

The heroic conduct of our Kansas City workers on the picket line during the fall of 1936 and the publicity campaign which followed it obviously had the right effect for shortly thereafter the Kansas City Joint Board succeeded after several months of negotiations in reaching an agreement with the firm on the basis of a complete union shop"••

Now, this heroic conduct that you speak of

p. 2057 Q. What was heroic then?

(30)

[fol. 5798] A. Girls were working all day and going out evenings visiting non-union girls.

Q. That is what you called the heroic conduct?

A. Yes. I subscribe to every word in that article.

Q. Was that heroic, to violate the law so that the police officers had to take them down?

A. I don't know that they have violated the law.

p. 2058 Q. Now I continue this article:

"The Stern-Slegman-Prins settlement created a deep impression throughout the women's garment markets in the Middle West. The first immediate effect of the Stern-Slegman-Prins settlement was the signing of an agreement with the second largest cotton garment firm in Kansas City, the Liberty Garment Company on February 23, a firm employing 450 workers in two shops in Missouri." You had a strike there too, didn't you?

Q. "This firm became also the first union label cotton dress factory in Kansas City."

"The immediate result of this settlement was an agreement with the second largest cloak shop in Kansas City, the Brand and Puritz Company. The next agreements signed in Kansas City were with the Marlene Dress Company, a silk dress shop employing about 100 workers and the Caplan Garment Company, a cotton dress shop employing about

p. 2059 100 people, which were followed by strikes in three large shops, the Gordon Bros. Manufacturing Company, a cotton dress shop employing over 200 people in Kansas City and about 150 people in Richmond, Missouri, the Missouri Garment Company, a cotton dress shop employing over 200 people, with whom the Union had had several battles and lost, and the Gernes Garment Company, a children's and juniors' dress shop employing over 200 workers. Agreements were also signed with those firms.

"The membership in the Union in Kansas City, which totaled about 175 members before the conclusion of the agreement with Stern-Slegman-Prins has now grown to 2200 members. Sister Wave Tobin, former secretary of the St. Louis Joint Board, has been in Kansas City for a year and a half as manager of the Joint Board.

The Union is now concentrating on organizing the few remaining [shall] shops while preparing to organize a drive to unionize the Donnelly Garment Co., the shops owned by former Senator James Reed, and employing about 1500 workers."

Is that true or is that not true?

p. 2060 A. It is true.

(31)

[fol 5799] p. 2062 Q. Now, I call your attention to an article by yourself on page 11 of the issue of Justice of September 15, 1938:

"Our publicity campaign in the Donnelly Garment and Forest City situations has brought us face to face with the problem of making the consuming public realize the difficulties of the men and women who produce the garments they buy.

In this campaign to win public confidence and sympathy we come face to face with the retailers, the men between the manufacturers and the buying public. Very few of these retailers, particularly the larger ones, will voluntarily take the initiative to help us. With them it is the immediate money consideration that governs their actions. A good many of them do not care where and under what conditions the garments they sell are produced as long as they can sell them at a good profit. In many cases where storekeepers have expressed a sympathetic view, it was not because they were anxious to help us, but because their customers happened to be women with a definite sympathy for the ex-

p. 2063 ploited workers.

Organizing Liberal, Labor Pressure.

Our problem, therefore, is to bring before the sympathetic public the actual facts as to why this campaign against the two firms is being conducted and why and how their cooperative effort can help us and what they should do in order to bring the necessary pressure on the retailers from whom they buy to stop selling the unfair garments. The problem before our road committees, as they visit towns or cities on their itineraries, is to visit not only the retailers but also representatives of labor organizations, of social and political groups and with individual liberal-minded citizens in every community to spread information and to organize pressure on the retailers long after these committees have left that locality.

It is a tiresome and nerve-wracking but worthwhile task. Organizing public opinion is a very slow process. Definite constructive results will be forthcoming later but, at first, we must have a lot of [patiences], the patience of pioneers to slowly and gradually build up that great force known as public opinion.

Picketing unfriendly stores: In the campaign we are conducting against the Forest City Manufacturing Company and the Donnelly Garment Company, we are confronted also
p. 2064 with some retailers who lend a deaf ear to all appeals made in behalf of workers. In such cases we advise the public of the attitude of these firms through pickets in front of their stores, that they refuse to give up selling the unfair garments. And so we are picketing at present a large department store in St. Louis, the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barnet Company. There are fourteen pickets in front of this store daily carrying signs appealing to the public not to buy dresses that carry the Forest City Label."

You wrote that article, didn't you?

(32)

[fol. 5800] A. I did.

Q. And the statements in there as to what you were doing about picketing and so forth are true? A. Are true.

Q. You heard read here, did you not, an interview with yourself that was printed in the Kansas City Times of February 26, 1937?

A. I remember giving an interview but not word for word as stated here. It was not a written statement.

Q. No, but you gave that interview in substance and effect; didn't you? A. Certainly.

Q. In that interview you stated "We are going to send a letter to the Donnelly Garment Company within the week suggesting a conference

p. 2065 to establish collective bargaining on the question of wages and working hours. If the firm refuses, we will go to the consuming public of the country and advise buyers of the wages and hours prevailing there now." You made that statement, didn't you? A. I did.

Q. "The Regional Union Director who will remain in Kansas City, to supervise the organization campaign said the minimum wage in this section for women making silk dresses is $22.05 working a five day week. He said that Donnelly Company employes receive a minimum of $15.00 weekly and that they were working 45 hours a week." What company here engaged in making women's silk dresses had a minimum wage scale of $22.05?

A. They were supposed to have.

Q. I didn't say suppose to. What company had it? You made a statement here that they had. What company had it?

A. No company at present—

p. 2066 Q. Then this statement you gave to the press in that respect was untrue, wasn't it? Answer yes or no?

A. My answer is yes, I did say it.

(33)

[fol. 5801] p. 2071 Q. In the interview that you gave on February 26th you made the statement that part of the union's campaign directed against the Donnelly Garment Company "Will be to send six women to cities and

p. 2072 towns where its garments are sold." Did you send out those six women?

A. I did, four of them.

Q. What?

A. Four women were sent out.

Q. Who were the four women?

A. One of them was Jane Palmer, Esther Smith, Mary Jane Miller, and Grace Bullard.

Q. Is Jane Palmer the young lady that has been sitting here back of Mr. Walsh most of the time?

A. Yes.

Q. She lives in Kansas City?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you get Esther Smith?

A. She is a Kansas City girl.

Q. And Mary Jane Miller?

A. She is a Houston girl.

Q. And Grace Bullard?

A. She is a Kansas City girl.

Q. Did any one of these people ever work in the Donnelly plant to your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge; they may have.

Q. You don't know of it?

(34)

[fol. 5802] A. No.

Q. Where did you send Jane Palmer and Esther Smith?

A. Jane Palmer and Esther Smith went to the east end of the section of the country.

Q. Whereabouts?

A. I think the record is in my office, but I know that they went and visited Kentucky and I

p. 2073 believe they visited possibly parts of Ohio and Illinois. I don't know exactly at present what section they visited, but I know it was the eastern section.

Q. When you say they visited those states, you mean they visited the customers of the Donnelly Garment Company wherever they were in those states?

A. Yes.

Q. And endeavored to reach them all, didn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did Mary Jane Miller and Grace Bullard go?

A. They went to the southern section of the country.

Q. In what states?

A. I believe they were in Texas. I believe they were in Florida, and maybe one or two states more; I don't have the record with me.

Q. You endeavored to cover all of the southern states where the Donnelly Company was selling goods?

A. Yes.

Q. And they visited according to your understanding all of the customers of the Donnelly Garment Company in those southern states?

A. Not all, but a great many.

Q. Did they go to Mississippi?

A. I am not sure if they did or not.

Q. Did you afterwards get any recruits to this group of ladies that were out on the same business?

(35)

[fol. 5803] p. 2074 A. I didn't get the question.

Q. Did you afterwards get any additions to these four people?

A. They were out on the road for a while and then they wanted to come back, and other girls were sent out in their places.

Q. Who did you send.

A. A certain young lady by the name of Vance Brisk; and there was another young lady by the name of Ruby Talbott.

Q. Any others?

A. There were two other but I don't recollect their names at the present time. I will be glad to give them to you later.

Q. Was there a Doris Whilhite?

A. There was a Doris Wilhite, yes.

Q. Who was the other?

A. I do not recollect.

Q. Where did Vance Brisk come from, where did you get her?

A. She is a St. Louis girl.

Q. Had she been working down there in St. Louis in the strikes?

A. She worked in the shops.

Q. But was she engaged in the strikes there when they were going on?

A. She was not.

Q. Ruby Talbott, where did you get her?

A. She is a St. Louis girl.

Q. And Doris Wilhite?

p. 2075 A. A Kansas City girl.

Q. Did these girls travel in pairs or did they go out singly?

(36)

[fol. 5804] A. In pairs.

Q. Who went out with Vance Brisk?

A. I believe Ruby Talbott.

Q. Where did you send those two girls?

A. These girls—the original four that I sent out returned and they took up the same territory.

Q. Then what territory would Vance Brisk and Ruby Talbott have taken, the eastern or southern?

A. The eastern.

Q. And Doris Wilhite and this other lady whose name you can't remember went into the southern territory, did they?

A. Part of the southern territory and part of the midwest.

Q. When they went into the midwest, what states did they cover?

A. It covered Missouri—I will be glad to furnish a list of the territories visited, but I don't recollect them at the present time, each territory that the groups visited.

Q. You can only remember Missouri at the present moment?

A. I believe they were in Illinois, part of Illinois.

Q. Michigan?

A. I believe they were in Michigan.

Q. Minnesota?

A. Yes, they reached as far as Pennsylvania.

p. 2076 Q. It was your intention to cover the whole forty-eight states?

A. Yes.

Q. Every place that the Donnelly Garment Company sold goods?

A. Yes.

Q. Who went to New York?

(37)

[fol. 5805] A. I personally visited New York.

Q. Who did you visit in New York?

A. In connection with the Donnelly Garment matter?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't visit any store in New York in connection with the Donnelly Garment Company. I misunderstood your question.

Q. But who did go to New York in connection with the Donnelly business?

A. I didn't send anyone to New York.

Q. Do you know whether anybody went?

A. They may have.

Q. You didn't send them?

A. Not as far as I know.
Q. Who went to Massachusetts?
A. Possibly some of these girls I mentioned did go up to Massachusetts.
Q. But you did not?
A. They possibly did. I am almost sure that they did. I know Massachusetts, Boston, was visited, but I don't know by which group.
Q. Do you have any record which will show?
A. I have a record in my St. Louis office.
p. 2077 Q. Were there any other persons that you sent out besides those you have already named?
A. There was an additional girl that we had in Minneapolis, Minnesota?
Q. Who was that?

(38)

[fol. 5806] p. 2077 A. I could give you her name later. I do not remember her name now.
Q. Now, who was it that instructed these girls, trained them?
A. I did talk to them personally.
Q. You did it personally?
A. Yes.
Q. Who was in charge of this squad of girls?
A. I personally directed them, and some of my workers possibly talked to them.
Q. In this interview which you gave on February 26th you said, didn't you: "Part of the union's campaign directed against the Donnelly Garment Company will be to send six women to cities where these garments are sold, advising retailers and labor organizations. Miss Palmer will be in charge of this squad of field workers." Did she have charge of them?
A. At the time when the announcement was made, we intended to put her in charge, but I decided to take personal charge of it.
Q. You further stated, "The union claims only twenty-five members among the Donnelly workers, but hundreds of others are related to union members." You said that, didn't you?

p. 2078 A. May I see it, Senator; I want to look at it.
Q. Do you remember whether you said it or not?
A. I believe I did.
Q. Would you say yes or no?
A. I believe I did.
Q. And you also stated in that interview, following just what I read you, "within a year we will have it completely organized and as soon as we have enough members we will call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers." You made that statement, didn't you?
A. I did.
Q. On May 26th, you gave this interview, didn't you?

(39)

[fol. 5807] A. Will you permit me to look at it; I don't know if I did or not.
Q. I will get it to you in time. "We will open with an advertising campaign through newspapers and radio against the patronage of garments manufactured in the Donnelly plant. Six girls are now in training to travel from coast to coast, visiting storekeepers handling the Donnelly garments, urging them to stop handling the Donnelly product. If the store
p. 2079 operators refuse to comply, their stores will be picketed. As the membership of our union in the Donnelly plant increases, a strike will be called. In such case, additional money will be required and we are ready to spend $250,000.00 to accomplish our goal, and that amount is ready. There are two organizers working in the plant at the present time." The language which I read you is your interview? A. It is partly mine.
Q. It is set up here in quotations.
A. The quotations there are not correct; it is not the way I gave it.
Q. Did you say this, "We will open with an advertising campaign through newspapers and radio against the patronage of garments manufactured in the Donnelly plant?"

A. I did say that.

Q. Did you say "six girls now are undergoing training to travel from coast to coast visiting storekeepers handling the Donnelly garments urging them to stop handling the Donnelly garment product;" Did you say that?

A. I did.

Q. Did you say this, "As the membership of our
p. 2080 union in the Donnelly plant increases, a strike will be called. In such case, an additional amount of money will be required, and we are ready to spend $250,000.00 to accomplish our goal, and that amount is ready"; did you say that? A. I did.

p. 2082 Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 36 which is the first of these circulars that you sent out. How many of those did you have printed?

A. To begin with, about 5,000.

Q. Well, to begin with. How many did you afterwards have printed?

(40)

[fol. 5808] A. An additional five or ten thousand.

p. 2083 Q. Is that the total that you had printed?

A. Approximately between ten and fifteen thousand.

Q. How did you distribute them?

A. The committees took them out on the road, and they were also sent through the mail.

Q. Who sent them through the mail?

A. We had a girl in the office that used to send them through the mail.

Q. In what office.

A. In the St. Louis office.

Q. Who directed them to send them out?

A. I did.

Q. Were they instructed to give these to the customers of the Donnelly Company?

A. They were advised to use their judgment, to give it to anybody they would feel it was advisable to.

p. 2084 Q. They were furnished to show to the customers of the company, were they not?

A. Yes.
Q. Were they also instructed to circularize the towns? A. Yes.
Q. You know they did that, don't you? A. Yes.
Q. In the town of Alexandria, a small town, they had distributed something over 2,000, hadn't they?
A. I don't know how many they distributed, but I believe they were in that town.

(41)

[fol. 5809] Q. Generally speaking, when they went through these towns and cities, these girls would visit the stores, wouldn't they, that were customers of the Donnelly Company?
A. They would.
Q. They were also instructed, were they not, to visit civic societies and labor organizations?
A. They were.
Q. They did that, too, did they not?
A. I believe they did.
Q. And they were also instructed to circularize the towns?
A. Not necessarily; they were advised that whenever it is necessary to give that circular, they do so.
Q. Whenever they thought it was necessary to circularize the town, to go ahead and do it?
A. Certain organizations in town.
p. 2085 Q. You paid the bills, didn't you?
A. I paid all their expenses.
Q. When did they quit distributing or sending out this exhibit 36; give me the date, if you can?
A. I am sorry, I can't; the only thing I know, I stopped them and called them back from the road as soon as the injunction was issued against us.
Q. How long did you keep them here?
A. Until the injunction was modified by Judge Collet.
Q. And when the injunction was modified by Judge Collet, you got out the second circular?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell the Court that these women weren't out on the road at any time between July 5, 1937, the date of the restraining order and July 18th, 1938, the date of the restraining order's modification, the date the restraining order was modified?

(42)

[fol. 5810] A. They were out but not in connection with the Donnelly Garment Company.

p. 2086 Q. Did you withdraw them on July 5, or immediately thereafter this circular, Exhibit 36?

A. I did, I told them to discontinue the circular.

Q. Did you take up these circulars?

A. Did I do what?

Q. Did you take them away from the girls, those that had them?

A. They were supposed to deliver everyone of them back to the office.

p. 2087 Q. Now, on July 18 Judge Collet modified the restraining order and continued it in force, you remember that, don't you? A. Yes.

Q. And then you got out the second circular, which is marked Exhibit 98, didn't you?

A. May I look at it?

Q. Oh, yes, if you don't know what it is (handing paper to witness)

A. I want to be sure; yes.

Q. The principal modification that Judge Collet made of his first restraining order was that you must confine yourselves to the truth, wasn't it? A. Yes.

p. 2088 Q. You had a right, now, under the modified injunction to tell the truth; that is right, isn't it?

A. Whatever they advised me, I followed their advice.

Q. I assume that they advised you that under the modified injunction you had a right to tell the truth?

(43)

[fol. 5811] A. Naturally.

Q. So that you withdrew in the second circular a very large number of the statements in the first circular, because they weren't true?

A. I withdrew the first circular—first of all, I was not sure if we have a right to send circulars. Then I consulted our lawyers and they advised me they believe I have the right, and then I told them that the injunction was modified and I don't want to do anything that might put me in contempt of court. I suggested to them that they write at least partially the circular that we have a right to send out, and they did.

Q. And you went over it with them?

A. Yes.

Q. And in this second circular you left out nearly all of the statements you made in the first circular, didn't you?

A. I did leave out certain things.

p. 2089 Q. Well, you left the statements out because your attorneys told you under the modified restraining order you musn't send out anything except what you did send out in the second circular? A. Yes, that is true.

p. 2090 Q. How much money was paid in salaries and expenses to this group of girls that were out on the road?

A. They were paid $25.00 per week salary and all expenses for hotel and meals and carefare.

Q. I asked you how much money you paid them?

A. Do you mean the amount?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know, exactly.

Q. Can you approximate the amount?

A. Possibly $1,000.00 or $1500.00; I don't know exactly the amount. It might possibly have been $2,000.00; I am just guessing.

Q. Have you got them still on the road at the present time?

(44)

[fol. 5812] A. No.

Q. When did you withdraw them the last time?

A. Several months ago.

Q. Since the first of the year have they been out?

A. No, they were out after the first of the year.

Q. After January 1st, 1939?

A. I believe sometime either in February or in March of this year.

Q. When did you actually call them in?

p. 2091 A. I would be glad to give you the date, but I don't remember.

Q. Weren't they out working on the road until substantially the beginning of this trial?

A. No.

Q. About a month ago?

A. Possibly a month or six weeks ago, either in February or March; I don't exactly know the date. Possibly it was at the end of January, but I don't remember the date.

p. 2097 Q. Now what were your instructions from Mr. Dubinsky before you came here, about lining up the Donnelly Plant with the International?

A. His instructions to me were that, first of all, I should investigate conditions, what the conditions in the plant are; how many hours the workers are working; what are the wages they are receiving; how the piece rates are set; if a worker has the right to join a labor organization voluntarily, and so forth. And he told me that, after the investigation had

p. 2098 been made, and if conditions are not what they should be in comparison to the other shops, to talk to the workers; explain what is doing in other shops; explain conditions of industry; conduct an additional campaign; and see, too, that the workers as well as the employers, as well as the public at large, ascertain the aims and aspirations of our organization, and so forth.

Q. Well, were you or were you not instructed to line the Donnelly Plant up with the International before you came here, if you could?

(45)

[fol. 5813] A. Yes.

Q. That was regardless of these other facts, was it not, you were frankly instructed to get the Donnelly employees lined up with the International, if you could, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. When you came here, how many employees of the Donnelly Plant were you able to get to make complaints about affairs down there?

A. Three or four made complaints to me then.

p. 2099 Q. What were the names of the employees from whom you did get complaints?

A. I don't remember all of them. I remember one, Ellen Fry. Another one I remember is Thelma Owens. I don't remember the names of the others.

Q. Those are all the names you remember?

A. At this time.

Q. You have referred in your testimony to your interview of May 25, 1937, with certain newspaper reporters. I will show you the copy of it from the transcript of the record in the 3-Judge Case.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. You gave that interview?

A. Yes.

Q. And in that interview, you and Miss Tobin said that a strike would be necessary at the Donnelly plant, did you not?

A. I did. That was part of the interview.

Q. In giving that statement, did you give any consideration of any kind to what the wishes of the employees at the Donnelly Plant would be, or were, about a strike?

p. 2100 A. Positively.

(46)

[fol. 5814] p. 2101 Q. I believe I asked you for the names of the members in the plant?

A. I do not remember them.

p. 2103 Q. I will show you a certain advertisement, which has been introduced in evidence. This is a copy from the 3-Judge Court which was published in the Kansas City Journal Post on June 8, 1937. You had a part in preparing and authorizing that advertisement, did you not?

Q. Did you, or did you not, have a part in preparing and authorizing that advertisement?

A. I did.

Q. That says in part, does it not—I am reading here at the top—"And as practical business people you, we take it for granted, realize that whatever your feelings for the moment may be, you will eventually have to carry on collective dealings with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which cannot, should not, and will not permit one individual employer to segregate himself from the rest of the industry in matters of work conditions and other fundamentals of employment." That is included, is it not?

A. Yes.

p. 2106 Q. Who asked Sylvia Hull to go to the convention of the International at Atlantic City?

A. I did.

Q. Did anyone else?

A. There was some people present when I talk to her.

Q. Who were they?

A. I believe Jane Palmer was there.

Q. Any one else?

A. I don't remember. There may have been, or there may not have been.

p. 2107 Q. She was to represent the Donnelly Workers, was she not? A. Yes.

(47)

[fol. 5815] p. 2109 Q. How many of the Gernes employees went out on strike?

A. Several.

Q. Give the number to the best of your knowledge?

p. 2110 A. I know several, but I don't know their names, and don't know exactly the number.

Q. Answer as to whether you know there was less than a majority?

A. Not of the Gernes Plant. The majority of the Gernes Plant did not walk out.

Further Cross Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

p. 2115 Q. Mr. Perlstein, if I correctly understood you this morning, you do not admit that the methods used by the International at the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri Companies were illegal, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And I believe you stated yesterday that you never give up, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Then we may reasonably expect that these same methods used by the International at the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri strike, whatever they were, will be continued down at the Donnelly plant unless this Court grants a permanent injunction, is that true?

A. Yes.

p. 2116 Q. I call your attention to a statement in the circular labeled 'We do not patronize the Nelly Don Dress" as follows: "On the next page of this booklet we reproduce a copy of a letter which was sent the Donnelly Garment Company. The firm has not replied to this letter but has instead organized a company union which has been named the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union." You knew that statement was in this document when it was prepared, did you?

A. Yes, sir. May I see that document?

(48)

[fol. 5816] p. 2118 Q. Now, I show you Plaintiffs' Exhibit 98. Do you remember when the document I just showed you was [publishes],—I am referring to Plaintiffs' Exhibit 36. Do you remember when that was sent out?

p. 2119 A. It was sent out prior to the issuance of the injunction.

Q. Now, I show you Plaintiffs' Exhibit 98 and call your attention to the statement "The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has filed a complaint now pending before the National Labor Relations Board charging that the Donnelly Company was guilty of unfair labor practices in dominating the formation of a company union and all of its activities." When was this sent out, referring to Exhibit 98?

A. That was sent out after the injunction was modified.

Q. Why did you modify it to comply with the injunction?

A. In order to obey the law; right or wrong I want to obey the law.

p. 2126 Q. Do you recognize the right of these employees to organize a labor union if they do it of their own free will, without coercion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they have the same right, if they represent fifty-one per cent or more, to bargain for them as the International does?

A. I do.

Q. So there could be no other labor union, if it is a minority, outside of the International, with any right to bargain, is that right?

A. If they do it voluntarily, without any coercion, we have a right to do it.

Q. Then the Donnelly people would have a right to do it if it was voluntary and without

p. 2127 coercion, wouldn't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never offered to negotiate with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, did you?

A. I can't hear you.

Q. You never offered to negotiate with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did not.

Q. But you never negotiated or tried to deal with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, did you?

(49)

[fol. 5817] A. No.

Q. You are not willing to make any agreement with them unless they will first dissolve this Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, is that correct?

A. Yes.

DONNELLY WORKER WILL BE SENT TO UNION CONVENTION

Garment Organization Seeking Support for Strike at Plant.

Sylvia Hull, an employe of the Donnelly Garment company, has been named a delegate from Kansas City to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union biennial convention May 3 at Atlantic City, Meyer Peristein, regional director, announced Thursday.

The Donnelly worker, according to Peristein, was one of a committee from that garment company who appeared Wednesday night before a joint group representing various Kansas City locals and requested representation at the national convention.

Peristein said the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and ask the international body to indorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions. The Kansas City joint committee, Peristein asserted, agreed to pay all expenses of the Donnelly delegate.

Other delegates from Kansas City are [redacted] and Alice Vincent, [redacted] employes of the Hart-Shaffner-Marx company, and Miss Wave Dale, business representative of the Kansas City local.

Peristein said the executive committee of the various local unions in Kansas City would meet Thursday afternoon to consider a resolution calling on the national organization to appropriate funds to carry on a strike at the Donnely plant.

The delegates from this section will meet April 30 in St. Louis to go to Atlantic City by special train. Peristein will be a delegate from St. Louis. The convention will last two weeks.

New Contract For Old Firm

The agreement we signed several months ago with the Kansas Dry Goods Co., covering two of their cotton dress shops in St. Louis, was up for discussion at a conference held last week.

The Kansas Dry Goods Company is known as one of the top cut-rate concerns in the country. The manufacture of dresses is only a small portion of the business, and they employ only a few hundred employees in their dress shops. Ours, however, was the first union agreement they ever signed. After that they signed also an agreement with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, covering certain shirt factories, but our agreement, provides for the predominant union shop.

At this conference the Kansas executives and several lawyers tried to digest the paragraph pertaining to the predominant union shop. They seemed to be wondering how far the present trend of unionism which compelled them to sign this agreement would reach. Some of them insisted that it was my obligation, when I discussed that paragraph with them, to explain to them how I meant it to be carried out in the future. We had before us the task of teaching an old-time, conservative firm the modern trends of labor relations.

To Attend Or Not to Attend?

Local 248, which consists of fourteen workers, is but a few months old. The majority of the members are young women, whom unionism and attending meetings are new. Most of them receive the fact that unionism does reduce hours and increase wages, but why unionism should compel them to attend meetings is something many of them cannot grasp.

The main question was also discussed at the meeting of Local 248, which consists of the workers of Lovenbaum's, a large cotton dress factory. After a long discussion, they also decided that every member of the local must attend at least one meeting a month.

Women Leaders In Kansas City, Mo.

I had a really enjoyable evening recently when I attended a meeting of Local 111 in Kansas City. This local consists of workers in the four smaller cloak shops in that city who have had agreements with the ILGWU since 1933. The girls of this local union also covered the convention floor in Kansas City for the celebration of the end of the industry. They love their Union and look upon themselves as the veterans of the garment strike in Kansas City.

There were around a hundred girls at the meeting, and it was conducted in a most orderly and parliamentary manner. The credit for the fine manner of conducting the local meetings is naturally due to the president of the local, Miss Edyth Stearns, who makes the most outstanding chairman of any local under the jurisdiction of the Southwestern Regional Office. This young lady has acquired her knowledge partly through union activity, and partly through membership in church and social organizations in which she was active.

Due credit must also be given to the four shop-chairladies of these four shops, Anna Kreid, of the Fashion-Beth Garment Company, who is also president of the Kansas City Joint Board; Ethel Cotton, who is the chairman of the Louis Wolfson shop; Louise Smith, chairlady of the LaVerne shop, and Mrs. Shorts of the Eppy Coat Co. These chairladies have had their hands in the battle to unionize the rest of the industry and are looking them at present to make the advantage of this local educational and enjoyable. It was really a pleasure to see how intelligently questions were discussed.

F. C. Children's Dress Local

The Kansas City is the only cloak that manufactures children's dresses. It is known as one of the finest shops in the country. When the agreement was signed with them several months ago, our local of these workers was organized, which is known as Local 111. Some of the workers in the shop were a member of the Union prior to the organization of the local and the entire procedure and methods of [illegible] to be present at their meeting and enjoyed a pleasant evening. The officers of the local, as well as the officers of the shop, have made wonderful progress.

The activities of this local are gradually being expanded. Educational and social activities are next on the program and a good many of the girls in the shop have joined the different classes that have recently been organized, and the organization is growing in beauty and strength.

A Fiesta in San Antonio, Texas

A real trade union fiesta was held last week for the first time in the history of San Antonio. The fiesta was arranged by our Union for the workers of the Shirley Frocks Company of San Antonio to celebrate the establishment of the first strictly union shop in the garment industry in San Antonio.

Mexican music, Mexican songs, Mexican dishes, and Mexican entertainers were graciously displayed at this fiesta. Congressman Henry Gonzalez of San Antonio was the main speaker and he delivered one of his enthusiastic speeches. Mr. Levine of the Shirley Frocks Co. and many other American and Mexican speakers, including our Governor Taylor, delivered talks and everybody in the city appeared himself freely, stating that in his opinion there seemed to be no task that was impossible for the ILGWU. They marveled at the vitality of our organization in overcoming the insurmountable obstacles in a city like San Antonio and making a fiesta of this type possible. It was the first real trade union victory for the Mexican workers.

Old and Young in Baltimore, Md.

On Friday, September 24, I installed the local that consists of the workers of the Pioneer Cloak Company. The installation took place at a special celebration arranged for that purpose in connection with a dance that followed the installation. Every worker employed in the shop and a good many others were present. All the prominent Baltimore trade union men connected with the ILGWU were also present by special arrangement, and the celebration lasted until the small hours of the morning.

On Saturday evening, September 25, I had the pleasure of installing [illegible] Local 248. This local consists of workers employed by the Kansas Dry Goods Co., operating two of their cotton dress shops in St. Louis, and by the Lovenbaum & Co. factory, which has just been organized. The installation took place in the Jefferson Hotel, and was followed by a dance. Many of the workers brought their friends and relatives to the affair, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

Big Shops Sign Contracts

From Milwaukee comes the news, through Ben Dubish, manager of our local organization in that city, that he has just signed union agreements for situation heads and dress in six of the largest ready-to-wear Milwaukee stores.

They are: Rosenberg's, Frisch's, The Grand, Grunt's, Silver & Gordon, and Boston. Negotiations with other stores are now on and the prospects for signing them up are quite good. The agreements call for minimum wage scales; a 5 per cent increase for those who receive less than $20 per week; a 3 per cent increase for those who get above $20; pay for all holidays that the stores observe, and time and a half for overtime.

The CIO State Meet

The Wisconsin State Industrial Union Council of the CIO held a conference in Milwaukee from September 30 to October 2. 300 delegates, representing 35,000 members, were present. The ILGWU was represented by 13 delegates from Milwaukee, Racine and La Crosse.

B. Ben Dubish writes, was a very successful convention. One of our delegates, Mary Dubrosky, was the only woman who spoke at the convention and she got a fine reception. Moreover Dubish was elected as one of the 11 vice-presidents elected by the State body. The convention also passed a strong resolution to cooperate with our strike at La Crosse.

[illegible] point here however there was no room for them in the large Red Carriage Hall which has a seating capacity of about 1,200.

Of course this problem will have to be and soon if we have to build our own building. Until then, committees of the local are covering every nook and corner of the town to find a suitable meeting space. Knowing Local 248 as I do, I am certain that their committees will find some hall that will be spacious and comfortable for the entire membership to meet in.

The Sterling-Baltimore Campaign

News of importance for the entire cotton dress industry is contained in the developments connected with the plants of the Sterling-Baltimore Corporation.

This firm is among the giants of the industry, controlling and owning as it does twenty-two cotton garment factories throughout the United States. The firm makes every conceivable item in the cotton garment industry from cotton pajamas, shirts, work-clothes, to dress items in which the ILGWU is directly concerned, cotton dresses. All cotton dresses are made in their two plants in Huntington, W. Va., and in Kokomo, Ind.

Through the active assistance of the CIO in Huntington, W. Va. and in Kokomo, a start was made in getting interested groups together who to have appealed to Sterling Head. played in the shop and a good many guests were present. All the other Baltimore locals were represented by special committees, and the celebration lasted until the small hours of the morning.

On Saturday evening, September 28, I had the pleasure of installing the local that consists of the workers of the Louis Hoover Corporation, who are employed in the three shops that the firm operates in Baltimore. A good many members of Local 6 of Baltimore, who are working at present for Louis Hoover, had to be transferred to this new local, a good many of them union veterans. Gray haired men, many of them members of our Union for the past quarter of a century, and young girls who were just stepping into the movement were there.

At a meeting of this type we could not avoid throwing the old days of our organization. There were tears in the eyes of the veterans when we talked to one another the struggles and sacrifices of all those years. The youngsters were equally listening and there was applause after applause.

The Executive Boards of these locals are now being organized and the machinery of all the locals has been geared up for debates, study circles, of our delegates, Mary Dubrouski, was the only woman who spoke at the convention and she got a fine reception. Manager Spindel was elected as one of the 11 vice-presidents elected by the State body. The convention also passed a strong resolution to cooperate with our strike in La Crosse.

Chicago Dressmakers, Local 100

The Executive Board of Local 100 is a real congress of labor. It is fully aware of the fact that the destiny of its 4,000 members, and perhaps another 10,000 souls who depend upon them, rests upon it.

At the weekly meetings of the board, discussions as to how to better the conditions of the workers are always on the order of the day. Great respect is given to the new price settlement system that the Union has lately inaugurated and many chairladies are visiting the Executive Board meeting to familiarize themselves with that new system and with the various functions of the organization.

The meetings of Local 100 are very well attended and it is not an exaggeration to say that from 25 to 30 hundred members come to a meeting—and only the other day, on a visit to a meeting of the board, I saw hundreds of members

Through the active assistance of the CIO in Huntington, W. Va., and in Kokomo, a start was made in getting interested groups together, who in turn appealed to Brother Dubinsky, ILGWU organizer in Cincinnati, O., and to our Chicago office for aid in completing organization. Our office assigned Abbel Rechtzeit of Milwaukee to help Brother Solomon conduct the campaign in Huntington and Sister Ida Austin was assigned to carry on an active campaign in Kokomo.

Both offices report excellent progress. Huntington is almost completely organized, and Kokomo is rapidly getting into shape. At first, the company fought our Union with an effort to bring in a company union, but several hearings before the National Labor Relations Board in Cincinnati, in which Brothers David Solomon and Abraham Flexter attended in behalf of the ILGWU, resulted, at least for the time being, in establishing friendly relations with Mr. Hoch, first vice-president of the company. In the meantime sufficient organization work has been done to justify the Union in calling upon the company officials to discuss the negotiations to be started.

In Kokomo, the workers already have been chartered by the ILGWU as Local 703.

Many outside elements have entered the field, such as detective agencies, some of them the most notorious agencies in the country, as well as the "protective council" of the anti-union industrialists in the city. This latter group has entered the field to help the Donnelly Garment Company. The campaign we are conducting is a three-fold one. First, to unionize the workers in the shop; second, the wide publicity campaign, and, third, personal contact with retailers that sell, and with the public that buys, the Nelly Don Dress.

This week two groups of our girls have left for the road to visit every town over 10,000 where the Nelly Don Dress is being sold. The first group left last Saturday. A young lady by the name of Jane Palmer, who was formerly a practicing attorney in Kansas City and has for the last six months been connected with our Union, is in charge, accompanied by Esther Smith, a member of Local 115 in Kansas City, who on the picket line has developed an intelligent initiative and knowledge to be entrusted with this important work. These two will visit the Middle West and Eastern section of the country. Another group, headed by Miss Mary Jane Miller, manager of Local 114, Houston, Texas, accompanied by Grace Bullard, a member who recently joined our ranks in Kansas City and had the privilege of being a delegate to our convention, will visit the South. Alteration workers in large department stores in Houston are striking. A group in one of the largest stores has recently joined our Union and a local will soon be established for them. Things are rolling smoothly in Local 214, Houston. While the manager, Mary Jane Miller, is on the road in connection with the publicity campaign against Donnelly Garment, Sol Goldberg of Kansas City will be temporarily in charge.

Kansas City, Missouri

Prior to 1933 our Union had hardly any organization in Kansas City. As reported to the Chicago convention, we succeeded, in 1933, in organizing a few of the smaller cloak and dress shops, forming our first local, No. 114, in August of that year.

The Union, however, [illegible] steadily at its task, [illegible] with greater or lesser [illegible] times, for the unionization of the local market. During 1934 and 1935, some headway was made by the organization of a few more of the smaller shops though it still failed to make a dent in the big factories.

The real break in the Kansas City situation came towards the end of 1936, growing out of a strike which the Union conducted against the Stern-Siegman-Prins Co., during July and August of that year. The drive against Stern-Siegman-Prins actually had begun a year prior to that, when in June, 1935, the Kansas City Joint Board began its activity to unionize the workers of the Stern-Siegman-Prins firm. Shortly thereafter, the Missouri State Federation of Labor, in convention, placed this company on its unfair list.

The heroic conduct of our Kansas City workers on the picket line during the Fall of 1936 and the publicity campaign which followed it obviously had the right effect for shortly thereafter the Kansas City Joint Board succeeded after several months of negotiations in reaching an agreement with the firm on the basis of a [illegible] which established [illegible] and wage conditions in the factory in North Kansas City and established normal trade union relations between the workers and the firm. The Stern-Siegman-Prins settlement created a deep impression throughout the women's garment markets in the Middle West. The first immediate effect of the Stern-Siegman-Prins settlement was the signing of an agreement, with the second largest cotton garment firm in Kansas City, the Liberty Garment Company, on February 23, a firm employing 450 workers in two shops in Missouri. This firm became also the first union label cotton dress factory in Kansas City.

The immediate result of this settlement was an agreement with the second largest cloak shop in Kansas City, the Brand and Purits Company. The next agreements signed in Kansas City were with the Marlene Dress Company, a silk dress shop employing about 100 workers, and the Caplan Garment Company, a cotton dress shop employing 100 people, which were followed by strikes in three large shops - the Gordon Bros. Manufacturing Company, a cotton dress shop employing over 200 people in Kansas City and about 150 people in Richmond, Missouri, the Missouri Garment Company, a cotton dress shop employing over 200 people, with whom the Union had had several battles and lost, and the Gernes Garment Co., a children's and juniors' dress shop employing over 200 workers. Agreements were also signed with these firms.

The membership in the Union in Kansas City, which totaled about 175 members before the conclusion of the agreement with Stern-Siegman-Prins, has now grown to 2,200 members. Sister Wave Tobin, former secretary of the St. Louis Joint Board, has been in Kansas City for a year and a half as manager of the Joint Board.

The Union is now concentrating on organizing the few remaining small shops while preparing to organize a drive to unionize the Donnelly Garment Co., the shops owned by former Senator James Reed, and employing about 1,500 workers.

Movement Begun To Organize Nelly Donnelly Firm in Kansas City

Dubinsky Says He Will Deal With Ex-Senator Reed As A Maker of Dresses.

Sidney Dubinsky, president of the ILGWU, on Saturday, March 6, officially launched a movement to organize the Donnelly Garment Company, controlled by Mrs. James A. Reed.

Dubinsky, speaking before more than 700 members of the Union in Kansas City, Mo., in the Little Theatre of the Municipal Auditorium, emphasized the need for organizing all Kansas City garment factories, including the Donnelly concern.

"Mr. Reed said many harsh things about me during the recent political campaign," Dubinsky said, "but all that is past and I shall deal with him only as a maker of dresses. He shall be treated with consideration during our movement to organize his workers, regardless of the stand he takes."

Refers To Campaign

Discussing the report that employees of the Donnelly Company signed a pledge of allegiance to their employers, Dubinsky said:

"In the presidential campaign Mr Reed called me a Bolshevik and said many other uncomplimentary things about me. You would imagine that I had long whiskers, a pocket crammed with bombs and did nothing else but wave a red flag.

"The Bolshevik charge is old stuff. Non-union employers always call their employees such names when they ask for a raise in pay."

Defends Court Plan

Dubinsky also defended the President's plan for reorganizing the United States Supreme Court, asserting the opponents were the same group who opposed Roosevelt's reelection.

"The election November 3 should be considered a mandate by the people for the changes proposed by Mr. Roosevelt since they voted for him knowing that he would do whatever was possible to help them."

Dubinsky said that Reed would receive a polite letter within a few days inviting him to confer with Kansas City labor leaders about signing a union contract.

"If he refuses to meet with us, we shall start our campaign," President Dubinsky said. "It may take a long time to organize the Donnelly company plant, but, we will win out in the end, as all the 250,000 members of our organization are behind us."

Installs Officers

At the conclusion of the meeting President Dubinsky installed officers in the new local Union which was chartered at the Stern-Bleeman-Prins Company when that concern signed a Union contract.

The officers are Omar Rose, president; Ethel Foster, vice-president; Ana Herrig, secretary-treasurer, and Joe Easton, sergeant at-arms.

By Meyer Perlstein
ILGWU Regional Director

...new non-Union shops in Kansas City have already established themselves. All the workers in these shops have already joined the Union and the shops are beginning to function as well organized shops where union conditions, union hours, and union treatment prevail.

Seven of the workers participating in the drive of the Liberty Dress Co., where 250 girls are employed have already tasted the perfect life. Practically all the girls joining our Union got into hand with the fighting spirit. For years and years we had tried to organize the Liberty Frock. It is only fifteen weeks since an agreement was signed with the firm and these girls are already on the perfect line organizing others.

Ten more girls strong from the Liberty Frock were on the picket line in the Gordon Mfg. Co. strike last week and everyone who saw them was wondering at how quickly they had acquired their knowledge. They certainly have given a good account of themselves.

Strike in Kansas City

On March 11, the workers of three shops, the Gordon Mfg. Co., a cotton dress shop where about 225 people are employed; the Carmen Mfg. Co., a children's dress shop, where about 100 people are employed; and the Missouri Garment Co., where about 200 cotton dressmakers are employed, went out on strike.

Fifty of the Gordon Mfg. girls, all members of the Union, were filling the front hallway. These three shops are located in one building. The girls stationed the front door so that those who intended to become strikebreakers could not get in. Those 50 girls were on the stairway for 24 hours, behind the front door. They therefore brought their own meals, blankets and for two nights they slept on the stairway. Finally the Health Department of the city forced to make arrangements to move the strikers because of sanitary conditions, and they succeeded.

These three firms will soon have union shops if not, they will never again manufacture dresses. The Gordon Mfg. Co. also has a shop in Richmond, Mo., a mining district. The girls in Richmond are already on the picket lines, thus proving to this Mr. Gordon that they also are entitled to a living wage.

Dorothy Garment Co. Kansas City

One old friend, Jim Reed, former United States Senator from Missouri, will also soon have a Union shop.

The Fabels too are resolved ...

...reply to the letter is recently sent to the firm, but there is a move on among the workers in the Dorothy shop for unionization. A committee of girls have recently joined the Union. Mrs. Dorothy, Jim Reed's wife, made last week a speech to the 1,200 workers they employ, pleading with them not to "listen to the agitators."

For some reason or other, the Reeds figured out that the strike in their shop would be called on Wednesday, March 17. That morning the shop was surrounded by the entire Kansas City police department. We never had, of course, any intention of calling a strike on that day. It only shows that Mrs. Reed feels that the Union is coming, that the work conditions in the Dorothy shop will also have to be put up a basis that will enable the workers to enjoy the rights which a strong organization can give them.

They work in that shop over 50 hours per week. They [illegible] ...ers under 18 in the department while only 10% of skilled operators. They really were treated as "children." They worked 47½ hours per week for $8 or $9 wages. But the surprise the firm got on the morning of the strike was, probably, something they did not expect. Everyone of their workers walked out; they cleared out of the shop 100 per cent.

And now that they are on strike, these girls with happy smiles on their faces, are giving a good account of themselves. The enthusiasm they display is really unbelievable. Meyer Perlstein, Organizer, Opens Headquarters Here

Meyer Perlstein of St. Louis, southwest regional director of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, opened headquarters at 1022 Baltimore avenue today to organize, he says, the Donnelly Garment company.

"We will open with an advertising campaign through newspapers and radio against the patronage of garments manufactured in the Donnelly plant," Perlstein said. "Six girls now are undergoing training to travel from coast to coast visiting store keepers handling the Donnelly garments urging them to stop handling the Kansas City product. If the store operators refuse to comply their stores will be picketed.

"As the membership of our union in the Donnelly plant increases, a strike will be called. In such a case additional money will be required and we are ready to spend $250,000 to accomplish our goal, and that amount is ready."

There are two organizers working the plant at the present time, Miss Wave Tobin, manager of the local union, said, and this number will be increased to fourteen, she said, to build up the membership of the I. L. G. W. union in the Donnelly plant. Both Miss Tobin and Perlstein said a strike would be necessary.

Supreme Court Refuses Habeas Writ

Meyer Peristein, representative of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Tuesday was serving the second day of his three-day jail sentence for contempt of court for his participation in the disorders some weeks ago in connection with the local garment workers' strike. Before Peristein can be released from jail he must also pay a fine of $100.

The picture shows the union representative behind the bars of his cell door just before he learned that the Supreme Court had refused to permit his release on a writ of habeas corpus.

Affidavit.

State of Missouri,
City of St. Louis—ss.:

Before me, the undersigned Notary Public, personally appeared James J. Milligan, who on his oath states:

I am a practicing attorney in the City of St. Louis, Missouri; that during the year 1935 I was engaged as Special Prosecutor in the two St. Louis City Courts and the two St. Louis Courts of Criminal Correction in connection with the prosecution of charges against persons involved in the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against the Forest City Manufacturing Company. The defendants in these cases were defended by attorneys employed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and that Union supplied bail bonds for such defendants.

The charges in these cases were principally for violations of St. Louis City Ordinance 1471, covering disturbers of the peace, and St. Louis City Ordinance 1472, covering egg-throwing.

The following is a list of a few of the convictions obtained in the City Courts:

The evidence in some of these cases of peace disturbances showed that the police were present and on duty at the time of the assault, but were unable to intercede in time to prevent the assaults. The facts adduced in these trials of peace disturbance range from the use of vile language to bodily assaults and injuries, stripping of clothing, throwing acid, beating and kicking employees of the Forest City

Manufacturing Company who continued to work after the strike was called by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 5832] Cross-Examination of Mr. Dubinsky.

p. 2214 By Mr. Hogsett:

p. 2227 Q. What position does Meyer Perlstein hold, and did he hold in 1937?

A. Regional Director.

Q. Southwest Regional Director?

A. Southwest Regional Director.

p. 2228 Q. What were his duties? What jobs did you tell him specifically that you wanted him to [attent] to?

A. General supervisor of this territory; supervise the local unions, advise them in their actions, guide them, help them in their organizational activities, help them on all matters where he could be of value and assistance to them.

p. 2229 Q. You felt that you had a reasonably accurate picture of what Mr. Perlstein was doing?

A. I had a reasonably fair picture of what he was doing.

p. 2233 Q. I will show you something that might jog your memory. I hand you Plaintiffs' Exhibit 28A, being your announcement to the Associated Press in Washington, on November 9, 1936, and ask if that refreshes your memory as to who it was that determined upon the drive to organize the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. This indicates that the General Executive Board authorized it.

p. 2234 Q. Was the Donnelly Garment Company drive specifically authorized by the General Executive Board?

A. Yes; it was authorized by convention subsequently.

Q. I am sticking, for the present, to November 9, 1936, in Washington, D. C. and I would like a direct answer: Was the drive to organize the Donnelly Garment Company specifically authorized by the General Executive Board at its meeting on that day and in that city?

A. Yes.

p. 2236 Q. Now, all of these drives that I have mentioned were purely local matters except the drive on the Donnelly Garment Company and the drive on the St. Louis companies; those had the attention of yourself and the General Executive Board, is that right?

A. Those that you have mentioned?

Q. Yes. A. You are right.

Q. Now, Mr. Dubinsky, who had charge of the carrying out of the drive to organize the Donnelly Garment Company?

[fol. 5833] A. Meyer Perlstein and Wave Tobin.

p. 2238 Q. Now, in the drive on the Donnelly Garment Company who laid out the particular plan of campaign there? A. Meyer Perlstein.

Q. Your Lieutenant? A. Yes.

p. 2247 Q. Now, in case all of the [employers] of a plant, 100 percent who have their own union, and through that union they enter into a collective agreement with their employer, and they are entirely satisfied with their wages, hours and working conditions and representation, is it the International's policy to let those employes alone or do you attempt to take them into your union, nevertheless?

Objection—immaterial

A. We attempt to take them into our union, nevertheless.

Q. That is to say, you claim the right,—not only claim it but act on it, act on the claim that you have a right to organize [employers] who are already organized and who unanimously say they are satisfied and have no grievances.

That is what your answer amounts to doesn't it?

Objection—immaterial

A. Yes.

p. 2248 Q. Now, take another case. The case of a garment plant where all the employees in that plant have formed their own union and where the International does not have a single employee as a member, is it the policy of the International to let those employees alone with their organization they have already got or do you attempt, nevertheless, to take them into your union?

Objection—immaterial

A. We will make attempts to take them into our union.

p. 2250 Q. Do you recall, referring to the Gernes Garment Company, I mentioned reading an article in Justice of April 1, 1937, where your regional director, Perlstein, said, referring to the Gernes, the Gordon and the Missouri Garment Companies "These three firms will soon have union shops. If not they will never again manufacture dresses?" Did you read that?

Objection—immaterial

A. I think I did.

Q. To bring it back to your mind clearly I show it to you. Do you see it there in the article by Meyer Perlstein under date of April 1, 1937, referring to the strikes in Kansas City and specifically to the Gordon, Missouri and Gernes Companies this language: "These three firms will soon have union shops. If not, they will never again manufacture dresses." Do you now remember reading that?

Objection—immaterial

A. I now remember not having read it.

Q. Your memory has improved since I showed it to you?

Objection—immaterial

[fol. 5834] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. Because I heard it here at the court and thought that I read it but now when I observe it in the paper I remember distinctly not having read it. Still and all I am ready to go into it.

Q. Do you recognize that statement?

A. Not in the language that it has been written.

Q. Do you endorse it with any qualifications?

A. Yes.

p. 2251 Q. And this paper under its banner, as a part of its banner says that it is the official organ of your union? A. Yes, it is.

p. 2254 Q. I will withdraw the question and put another one. In case 100 per cent of the employes protest against your intervention you go right along and attempt to organize them nevertheless, don't you? A. Yes.

p. 2255 Q. Before you ordained the beginning of that drive had you personally ever been in the Donnelly plant or had you ever talked with any employes of that plant? A. No.

Q. To the best of your knowledge had Mr. Luigi Antonini ever visited the plant or talked with any of its employees?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Or had Mr. Abraham Katovsky ever?

A. To my knowledge, no.

p. 2256 Q. Or had Mr. Morris Biotis?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Or had Mrs. Rose Pesotta?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Or had Mr. Israel Feinberg?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Or had Mr. Salvatori Ninfo?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Or had Mr. Basilio Disti?

[fol. 5835] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Or had Mr. Max Cohen or Mr. Louis Levy, or any other member of the general executive board? A. To my knowledge, no.

p. 2257 Q. I show you exhibit 29, which is a newspaper item in the Kansas City Times, I think, of February 26, 1937, and ask you to glance it over. A. Yes I have read it.

Q. Now that you have read it do you approve what he says there; do you regard it as an accurate statement of the plans and policies of the International at the time he made the statement?

A. Providing you go item by item, generally so.

p. 2258 Q. I am asking you only whether you approve of what Mr. Perlstein is there represented as having said?

A. I will have to go over it item by item.

Q. It is rather important. I wish you would take the time to do that.

A. "Meyer Perlstein of St. Louis, regional director of the union, said that the International headquarters had appropriated a large sum to be spent in the drive seeking recognition of the I.L.G.W.U., as the collective bargaining agent in the Donnelly Garment Company." For the campaign of organizing the dress industry or the non-union shops, in substance he is right.

Q. Pass to the next statement attributed to Mr. Perlstein, either in quote marks or otherwise?

A. "We are going to send a letter to the Donnelly Garment Company within the week suggesting a conference to establish collective bargaining on the questions of wages and working hours." I agree with him on that.

Q. Continue.

p. 2259 A. "If the firm refused, we'll go to the consuming public of the country and advise buyers of the wages and hours prevailing there now." I agree with that.

Q. Take the next statement attributed to him.

A. "The regional union director, who will remain in Kansas City to supervise the organization campaign, said the minimum wage in this section for women making silk dresses is $22.05, working a five-day week. He said the Donnelly Garment Company employees receive a minimum of $15.00 weekly, and that they are working forty-five hours weekly now." Substantially right.

Q. Take the next.

[Vol. 5836] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. "Mr. Perlstein announced that Miss Jane Walker Palmer, 4040 Bellefontaine Avenue, a graduate of the Kansas City School of Law in 1932, started work yesterday organizing an educational campaign for members of the union." I suppose those arrangements he made and so stated. "After-work classes in music, art, economics, public speaking, trade unionism, parliamentary law, and dramatics will be offered the members. The board of education will be asked to furnish teachers, Mr. Perlstein said." I find no objection to that. "The campaign lines. Part of the union's campaign directed against the Donnelly Garment Company will be to send six women to cities and towns where its garments are sold 'advising retailers and labor organizations', Mr. Perlstein said. Miss Palmer will have charge of this squad of field workers."

p. 2260 I find no objection to that.

Q. You knew that was part of the plan and it had your full approval?

A. I knew that he contemplated it.

Q. And it had the full approval of yourself and of the general executive board?

A. There was no objection on my part.

Q. And that is true of the general executive board?

A. Until ratified by the general executive board, because between sessions I am to exercise my own judgment.

Q. Take the next paragraph.

A. "'Within a year we'll have it completely organized', Mr. Perlstein said, 'As soon as we have enough members, we'll call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers'". I have no objection.

Q. Do you now, speaking as president of the union, say that was a proper statement for Perlstein to make for your union at that time?

p. 2261 A. I would have added the words "Subject to the approval of the general executive board."

Q. Other than that do you approve of what he said?

A. Other than that I do approve.

p. 2262 Q. Now, on March 5, 1937, you made a speech here at Kansas City, didn't you, about your plan to organize the Donnelly employees?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. I show you Exhibit 31 and ask you to glance it over and see whether it correctly quotes you, with substantial accuracy.

A. As I recall, this was not the report of the meeting held, but it was rather an interview the following day.

Q. I gathered that it was a report of the meeting, but whatever it is is it substantially accurate, is it a substantially accurate account of what you said?

[fol. 5837] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. Yes.

Q. In that connection you will note that you apparently learned and made comment upon the fact that the employees of the Donnelly plant had signed a pledge of allegiance to their employer?

A. Yes.

p. 2264 Q. Don't you know that the Pledge of Allegiance was not all that this document contained, but that it also said, 'We refuse to acknowledge or be represented by any labor organization?

A. I didn't know it at that time, but I know it now.

Q. That wouldn't have made any difference if you had known that?

A. Not much, frankly.

Q. In other words, the attitude of the employees, speaking with perfect frankness and candor, was a matter of utterly no importance to you?

A. Based on my knowledge and experience under the circumstances that these things happened, it did not.

p. 2266 Q. The record shows that on May 25 Mr. Perlstein gave out another announcement to the Kansas City Star, which I will now show you

p. 2267 and ask you to glance that over.

A. Yes, I have read it.

Q. Did you see the item at the time or substantially at the time it appeared?

A. No.

Q. Was it reported to you at the time or at about the time it appeared?

A. I don't remember it having been reported to me.

Q. As you now read it do you approve it as a correct statement of the then plans of the International for the organization of the Donnelly plant?

A. No.

Q. In what respect is it not an accurate statement of the plan?

A. "'We will open with an advertising campaign through newspapers and radio against the patronage of garments manufactured in the Donnelly plant' Perlstein said." I agree with that. "'Six girls now are undergoing training to travel from coast to coast visiting storekeepers handling the Donnelly garments urging them to stop handling the Kansas City produce.'" I could not agree. If he had said "The Donnelly product", I would have agreed.

Q. Is it not apparent that is what it means?

[fol. 5838] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. It is apparent.

Q. But "the Kansas City product" in the connection in which those words are used obviously means the Donnelly product?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you do approve that?

A. Yes.

p. 2274 Q. Mr. Dubinsky, yesterday you said that even though all the employees in a plant are already organized in their own union and have said they do not want to join your union or be represented by it, it is your policy nevertheless to attempt to organize them. You recall that?

A. Yes, I recall that answer.

Q. In such a case do you seek a closed shop contract with the employer?

A. If we can get it.

Q. And if you get a closed shop contract, under those conditions it means that the employees will have to join your union to hold their jobs?

A. In those cases we do not expect the firm to discharge the workers.

Q. Well, what is a closed shop contract, if it does not mean that they either must be members or must become members of your union?

p. 2275 A. A closed shop contract would mean that all workers who are employed are to be engaged by a firm to be members of the union.

p. 2276 Q. I will eliminate the word "common". If in the conditions that I have put to you this morning you get a closed shop contract with the term in it, then the employees must join your union or lose their jobs, is that right?

A. If that condition should be obtained from the employer, he should have agreed to sign such a contract, that would be the requirements of the contract.

Q. And the employees would have to join whether they wanted to or not, or lose their job?

A. If this would have been the requirements of the contract.

Q. We will start again. If the contract requires them to join, that is, the contract between the employer and your union, then the employees, whether they like it or not have to join or lose their jobs?

A. Exactly, if this is the requirement of the contract.

p. 2279 Q. Now, referring to the article given out by Mr. Perlstein on May 25, 1937 you recall the article had an item in it as follows: "As the membership of our union in the Donnelly plant increases, a strike will be called. In such a case additional money will be required and we are ready to stand $250,000.00 to accomplish our goal, and that amount is ready." You recall that in the item?

[fol. 5839] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I recall that.

Q. Was that a true statement or false statement, the $250,000.00 had been appropriated for the Donnelly drive?

A. It was not appropriated, $250,000.00 for the Donnelly fight at that time.

Q. Did you later?

A. No.

Q. Well, the statement was just without foundation altogether, was it?

A. What period was it the statement appeared? Was it after our convention?

Q. The exact date is May 25, 1937.

A. Well, by that time we had the decision of the convention, $100,000.00 appropriated.

Q. I am speaking about a quarter of a million dollars, Mr. Dubinsky, the exact language is "In such a case additional money"—that is in the event of a strike—"We'll be required and we are ready to spend $250,000.00 to accomplish our goal and that amount is ready."

A. If it referred to Nell Donnelly Company it was not correct; if it referred to the cotton
p. 2280 garment industry or the dress industry it was correct.

Q. This refers only to the Donnelly plant?

A. Then it was not correct.

Q. Then it is a false statement?

A. It was not correct.

Q. Now, I show you a full page advertisement inserted by your union in the Kansas City Star or Times and the Kansas City Journal-Post on June 9th and June 8th respectively and ask you to hold one copy of it while I keep the other. Do you recall the insertion of those ads by your union?

A. Very definitely so.

p. 2281 Q. I notice at one place in that ad which is addressed to the management of the Donnelly Company you say this "And as practical business people you, we take it for granted, realize that whatever your feelings for the moment may be you will eventually have to carry on collective dealings with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union which cannot, should not and will not permit one individual employer to segregate itself from the rest of the industry in matters of work conditions and other fundamentals of employment." Now, that represented your view at that time did it, and the view of your General Executive Board?

[fol. 5840] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. It represented my view at that time, it represents my views today.

p. 2283 Q. Now, will you give me your attention to the lower part of the second column of the ad: "It still lies within your choice to avoid a conflict which may prove as costly as it appears futile at this stage to all sides involved in it. Your readiness to meet us in this endeavor in a spirit of industrial statesmanship rather than in that of guerrilla warfare will be applauded by every constructive factor in the dress industry and by industry in general the country over." That represented your views at the time the ad was written?

A. Yes.

Q. Whose particular choice of language was the use of the word "guerrilla warfare?" Was that Mr. Dannich's or yourself?

A. That is Mr. Dannich's.

Q. But you approved it?

A. I thought it fits into the situation.

Q. I say you approved it?

A. I said I approved the entire ad. The entire ad was submitted [for] me for approval so I approved it.

p. 2288 Q. Did you ever tell Perlstein that you were opposed to violence?

A. I don't think so.

p. 2289 Q. Did you ever tell Wave Tobin that you were opposed to violence?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever tell Merle Zappone of your Texas organizing staff that you were opposed to violence?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever tell Edith Phillip of your St. Louis organizing staff that you were opposed to violence?

A. I don't think so.

p. 2300 Q. Let me have Justice, Exhibit 45-2, April 1, 1937. Will you look at page 8 and see whether you see an item there regarding that fact that "Over 200 girls strong from the Liberty Frock were on the picket line in the Gordon Manufacturing Company strike last week and everyone who saw them was wondering at how quickly they had acquired their knowledge. They certainly have given a good account of themselves." Do you see that?

[fol. 5841] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, under the constitution, page 38, the General Executive Board is given power, at the bottom of Section 2, Article 7: "Whenever any branch of the trade is involved in a strike or lockout, the General Executive Board shall have the power to order a strike in such other branches as it may deem necessary in order to assist the members on strike." Is that right? A. That is the constitution.

p. 2303 Q. You did not say you were opposed to it did you? Well, I will refresh your memory "Mr. Dubinsky, what is the policy of your organization with reference say first to sit-down strikes?

A. We do not favor sit-down strikes.

Q. Do you or do you not condemn them?

A. We had no occasion." That was your evidence yesterday?

A. Yes.

p. 2304 Q. Now, when did you reach the frame of mind where you say you do not favor the sit-down strike? When did that first become a part of your belief?

A. It would be hard for me to tell.

Q. Do you remember any particular change in your mental process on that subject when you reached a conclusion that "From now on I am against it"?

A. I remember when the first sit-down strike took place in the auto industry, when it was considered by some labor leaders as an industrial weapon for establishing collective bargaining and conditions for workers. There were differences of opinion within labor circles whether it is a legitimate weapon, legal and effective.

p. 2305 Q. And which side were you on?

A. I was of those that believed that it is a legitimate one.

Q. That is you thought it was all right?

A. I thought it was all right; I doubted whether it is effective.

Q. But legally you thought it was perfectly all right?

[fol. 5842] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. Legally I thought it was all right.

Q. For strikers to walk in on a plant and take possession of it and keep it as long as they wanted to; that struck you as perfectly legal? A. It struck me legal.

p. 2311 Q. You know and knew at that time that the charge on which he was convicted was that of having conspired to have a woman worker stripped naked in the public streets of Dallas, Texas, you knew that?

A. Yes. You refer to the charge?

Q. I am referring to the charge and the conviction? A. Yes.

Q. Yet, in your report to the Atlantic City convention of 1937 you said "The Dallas dress strike which lasted from March until November, 1935 will occupy a place of honor in the annals of our union." You said that?

p. 2312 A. If it is in the report we said it.

Q. Well, you signed the report didn't you?

A. Oh, yes.

p. 2314 Q. Mr. Dubinsky it has been shown that Exhibit 36 was distributed by your union. Did you know anything about it,—that is the pamphlet you have heard reference to?

A. I know in a general way that such pamphlets have been distributed.

Q. Did you approve the get-up of it or make it, the contents?

A. Now, it was not submitted to me for approval.

Q. Was the March 9th letter ever submitted to you for approval?

A. No, it was not.

Q. Did you know about that also? A. Yes.

Q. You paid the distributors of this pamphlet who traveled over the country talking to Donnelly customers and civic clubs and labor unions? A. Yes.

Q. You paid all their expenses and for their services?

[fol. 5843] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. Yes.

p. 2334 Q. Now, coming to the contracts, I hand you Exhibit 99 which contains your copies of contracts with Biberman and Ginsburg. I want to ask you some questions about those contracts. A. May I get the original copy?

Q. Certainly. I just want to make two or three comparisons. I give you the provisions for cutters in the Donnelly contract. The Donnelly contract specified a minimum weekly wage of $42.50 for A-class machine cutters. I want you to look at the Ginsberg contract and the Biberman contract and see if you find a provision there equal to or as good as the Donnelly provision for cutters?

A. This contract is not Biberman's; this is Missouri.

Q. It contains eight contracts, Mr. Dubinsky. Perhaps I should help you, Mr. Dubinsky, by finding that.

A. Please.

Q. Let's get the connection again. I have read the substance of the Donnelly provision for cutters, $42.50. What does the Ginsberg contract provide for cutters?

A. This agreement was made on the 4th day of May, 1937.

Q. 1937? A. Yes.

p. 2358 Further Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Your organization encourages friendliness and cooperation between the employer and the employee, does it not?

p. 2359 A. Yes.

Q. So that the mere fact, if it was a fact that a group of employees had some feeling of appreciation or friendship to the employer would not, of itself, make it impossible for them at the same time to organize a good faith labor union, would it?

A. Yes, what they term a good faith labor union.

Q. You say a feeling of appreciation by the employee to the employer would make it impossible to organize a good faith union?

A. No, it would not make it impossible.

Q. You knew about the bulletin No. 36 "We do not patronize the Nelly Don dress" which has been shown to you, sent out by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at the time it was sent, did you?

[fol. 5844] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I stated already once before that I did not see the bulletin but I had a general knowledge of it.

Q. Did you have a knowledge of this claim made in it "The firm has not replied to this letter but it is understood it has organized a company union which has been named the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union."

A. I did not have the knowledge that it is exactly as it is in this letter; I had a general

p. 2360 knowledge about it.

p. 2361 Q. And don't you know as a matter of fact that this protest against union domination made on March 2nd was against your union and had no reference whatever to a union of their own? Don't you know that?

A. It meant any union.

GARMENT WORKERS' DRIVE.

Funds Set Aside for Unionization of Entire Industry.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—An immediate nation-wide drive to unionize an estimated 90,000 unorganized clothing workers was ordered today by the executive board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

In deciding on a vigorous effort to extend its influence into new fields, the board voted an appropriation of ¼ million dollars and pledged "all its material resources." David Dubinsky, president of the union, was authorized to utilize his entire present staff in the drive and to employ fifty additional organizers.

Deferred until tomorrow was consideration by the board of its future relationship with John L. Lewis's committee for industrial organization.

Dubinsky said the ladies' garment workers now has a membership of 225,000 and about 4 million dollars in its treasury. About $130,000 was spent in helping finance President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election.

He said the organization drive would open with establishment of offices in St. Louis, Kansas City, Pennsylvania and Upper New York.

Dubinsky asserted the St. Louis office would have suffered for Missouri except that the union "wants to give Jim Reed a break." He explained that the wife of James A. Reed, former Democratic senator from Missouri who supported Governor Landon in the campaign this year, is the founder and principal stockholder of a factory in Kansas City.

The Kansas City office of the drive will concentrate on unionizing employees in the Donnelly Garment Company, which Dubinsky says is largely owned by Mrs. Reed.

The report may have been edited in minor details after I wrote it, but to the best of my recollection the form in which it appears in the attached newspaper clipping is a true report of the substance of Mr. Dubinsky's statements as I understood them.

[fol. 5851] SYLVIA HULL

Resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross-Examination

p. 1763 Q. Mrs. Hull, you worked for the Donnelly Garment Company about eight years, didn't you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Would you please help me remember the date you began. I forget that?
A. As near as I can remember it was in February or March, 1929.
Q. Speaking generally of your employment down there would you say that you got along all right and made pretty good wages?

Objection—immaterial

A. Well part of the time I did and part of the time I didn't.
Q. That would be true of the company's business would it not; part of the time it might be good and part of the time it might not?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Not altogether; sometimes we had better prices than we did other times.
Q. Of course the operations that you were working on would differ from time to time?

Objection—immaterial

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that would just be a normal thing, wouldn't it, for the prices to range upward or downward according to the character of the operation?

Objection—immaterial

p. 1764 A. Well, at different times the operations were priced higher than they were at other times.
Q. There must have been some reason for that, wasn't there?

Objection—immaterial

A. Well, I think there was.
Q. What was it, if you know?

Objection—immaterial

A. Well, to be exact about it, some time I remember when our prices were raised was during that NRA, and before that and it was at the time when the girls were in court and our prices were raised then.
Q. And were they raised at other times, too, than that?

Objection—immaterial

A. Some other times but usually—
Q. (Interrupting) But you just happen to remember those when the NRA hearings were?

Objection—immaterial

[fol. 5852] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I do remember that time.
Q. But it is a fact that they were raised and lowered and raised and lowered during the eight years that you worked there, isn't that right, depending upon the change in the operations, the change in the styles, the change in the materials, the change in the difficulty of doing the job; now frankly, isn't that true?
A. Sometimes our prices were better than others.
Q. We will pass that. Now, would you say that your wages for the first months or we will say the whole time of 1937 that you were there would be fair cross-section of your wages generally? A. No, sir.
p. 1765 Q. Let me read you your wages for that period of time and ask you if you recall that these were about the wages that you drew from the period January to the time you left. For the week ending January 8th, 1937 $16.63; January 16th, $12.43; I will omit the dates hereafter because they run straight along: $17.22; $22.73; $22.38; $27.34; $29.05; $31.29; $25.90; $17.34; $21.71; $22.39; $25.85; $25.61; $29.92; $22.62. Does that sound right to you?

A. Well I have a copy of my own wages here, if you don't mind if I look it over.

Q. Look and see. How, by the way did you happen to keep it?

A. The company gave me a little book here in 1937 to keep the record in.

Q. All right, check with what I have which has been handed to me as taken from the payroll. You say the company gave you what?

A. They gave us this litle book when the old age assistance—old age benefit came in and this was taken out; they gave us this to keep a record in.

Q. All right, now read what you have. Who wrote it down in the book by the way?

A. I did.

Q. It is not anything the company wrote?

A. No, sir. Do you want me to start the first there in January?

Q. Yes, the week ending January 8th.

[fol. 5853] Objection is made to all questions and answers contained on this page to and including: "Q. $22.62? A. Yes, sir; $22.92 is what I have. I had the 22 because that was the last check that I got and it was sent me through the mail for the last four days," for the reason that said questions and answers are immaterial.

p. 1766 A. The first one is $16.63.

Q. That checks.

A. I did not put the next one down.

Q. That was $12.45, apparently not a full week or at least that is what the amount is. Does your book show you were there that week?

A. It does not show that I was there that week but I just failed to put it down.

Q. Anyway our figure is $12.43. Go ahead.

A. The next one that I have is $12.43.

Q. Go ahead, there is a confusion there.
A. $22.73.
Q. Now, you skipped one of $17.22 and then we have $22.73. Let us look at this together without taking the time to go over it in detail. $22.73, you find that? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And then $22.38?
A. I did not put that one down.
Q. Now, the next week we have is $27.34?
A. That is right, 53 hours.
Q. The next is $29.05? A. Yes, sir, 53 hours.
Q. And the next is $31.29? A. Yes, sir, 53 hours.
Q. And the next is $25.90? A. Yes, sir.
Q. $17.34? A. Yes, sir, 45 hours.
p. 1767 Q. $21.71? A. Yes, sir.
Q. $22.39? A. Yes, sir.
Q. $25.85? A. Yes, sir.
Q. $29.92? A. Yes, sir.
Q. $22.62? A. Yes, sir, $22.92 is what I have.

I had the 22 because that was the last check that I got and it was sent me through the mail for the last four days.

p. 1770 Q. Please give me again the date when you joined the International?
A. The 23d of March, 1937.
Q. And you joined at the solicitation of Miss Jane Palmer, the lady here? A. Yes, sir.
Q. What inducements, I mean by that what did she say to you that induced you to join? Did she tell you about how badly you were being treated and how the union would raise your wages for you?
A. No, sir. The reason that I joined the union—
[fol. 5854] Q. (Interrupting) No, if you will just answer the question, what did she say?
A. I don't remember exactly the conversation.
Q. Where was it that she said to you or induced you to join? A. At my home.
Q. And how many times had she been there?
A. I think that was the first time that she had been in my home.
Q. And you signed immediately?

A. I signed that evening.

p. 1771 Q. You asked Miss Palmer to have your membership kept secret? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that request made at the time you signed the application? A. Yes, sir.

p. 1772 Q. Did you later make that same request of Mr. Perlstein? A. No, sir.

Q. You spoke also, you mentioned one other girl who was a member. Who was that?

A. The girl that I knew was Fern Sigler.

Q. And when did she join? A. I can't say.

Q. When, with relation to your date of joining? Before or after?

A. All I know is she came to my house the day before I was fired, she came with Miss Palmer to my house and that is the first I knew that she was a union member.

Q. The first you knew then was on April 22nd?

[fol. 5855] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when were you requested to become a delegate at the Atlantic City convention?

Objection—immaterial

A. On April 21st.

Q. And by Mr. Perlstein, as you mentioned?

Objection—immaterial

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where did you have your talk with him?

Objection—immaterial

A. At the Muehlebach Hotel.

Q. Did he send for you to come down there?

Objection—immaterial

A. Miss Palmer asked me to come.

Q. And did anyone go with you?

Objection—immaterial

A. My husband went.

Q. Was anyone present besides yourself, Mr. Perlstein and your husband?

Objection—immaterial

A. Miss Palmer was there.
Q. And where did you meet, you four?

Objection—immaterial

p. 1773 A. We met in one of the rooms in the hotel, I don't remember that room.
Q. And how long were you there?

Objection—immaterial

A. I was there quite some time because—
Q. (Interrupting) I just asked the time; about how long?

Objection—immaterial

A. Well, I couldn't say exactly.
Q. Several hours?

Objection—immaterial

A. No, about an hour I would say.
Q. Were you to receive pay for attending the convention?

Objection—immaterial

[fol. 5856] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. My expenses were to be paid.
Q. And how much were you given as expense money?
A. I don't remember exactly how much that expense was; the same was given to all the delegates who went from Kansas City.
Q. Roughly, approximate the expense given you?
A. Well, I just don't remember.
Q. Even within $100.00 could you not recall it? I don't try to pin you to an exact amount, that is not my purpose at all.
p. 1774 Q. Can you give the amount?
A. No, I don't remember the exact amount.
Q. All right; about how much?

A. Well, we were gone almost three weeks and naturally the expenses were rather high and I am sure it was more than $100.00 that was allowed for the expense but I don't know the exact amount.

Q. I have understood you to say that. About how much? Was it $300.00, $500.00?

A. No sir; some over $100.00 but I don't recall how much.

Q. You did not at once agree to go to this convention, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you wanted to talk it over or think it over?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your husband it was who the next day called up Mr. Perlstein and said you would go?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did your husband go with you?

[fol. 5857] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the next evening after that report or the same evening perhaps, this article appeared in the Kansas City Journal-Post, given out by Mr. Perlstein?

A. There was an article in the Post.

Q. Is that it?

A. I have read that but it seemed to me like there was more here than there was in that; I am not sure.

p. 1775 Q. In any case this article reads—I will not read it all. "Sylvia Hull, an employee of the Donnelly Garment Company has been named a delegate from Kansas City to the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at Atlantic City, Meyer Perlstein Regional Director announced Thursday. The Donnelly worker, according to Perlstein, was one of a committee from that garment company who appeared Wednesday night before a joint group representing various Kansas City locals and requested representation at the national convention". Was the last statement in that article that I have just read true or false?

A. Will you read that again.

Q. I will read the part I have reference to: "The Donnelly worker according to Perlstein was one of a committee from that garment company who appeared Wednesday night before a joint group representing various Kansas City locals and requested representation at the national convention". Was that statement true or false?

A. There was one other girl, Fern was there at the hotel that night; she was not in the room where we were but she was there.

Q. Downstairs?

A. No, sir, she was waiting out in the hall.

Q. She did not appear as a member of any committee?

A. I don't know what took place after I left.

Q. She stayed in the Hall?

p. 1776 A. She was not in there when I was.

Q. I will take it [apart] at a time. Was any committee and if so please name the individuals who composed it.

[fol. 5858] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. There was the four only when I talked to Mr. Perlstein.

Q. Mrs. Hull, you apparently did not understand the question. Was there a committee from the Donnelly Garment Company that appeared before Mr. Perlstein and Miss Palmer?

A. I don't know. There was not when I was there.

Q. Have you ever heard of any such committee?

A. I never discussed that.

Q. Have you ever heard of any such committee?

A. I don't know what they had there.
Q. Wasn't that paragraph that I have just read you twice false in its entirety? Was there a word of truth in it that Mr. Perlstein—
A. (Interrupting) I don't know what took place that evening; I wasn't there all the time.
Q. During the time you were there, I will put it?
A. During the time I was there there was only four of us in the room.
Q. And nobody purporting to be a committee from the Donnelly Workers was there?
p. 1777 Q. Was there anybody purporting to be a committee from the Donnelly Garment Company, please answer that yes or no?
A. Miss Palmer and Mr. Perlstein represented the members there.
Q. Mrs. Hull, was there any other Donnelly employee in that room except you?
A. No, sir.
Q. Now, did even you, if it could be said by any stretch of the imagination that you were a committee, did you request representation at the national convention or did Perlstein ask you to go as a delegate.

[fol. 5859] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I was asked to represent our members.
Q. All right. Then was there any request by any Donnelly worker for representation at the national convention? A. I don't know.
Q. Was there while you were there?
A. Not while I was there.
Q. All right. Now that is that paragraph. Next is this "Perlstein said that the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and asked the International body to endorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions". Was there one word of truth in that statement by Mr.

Perlstein, any part of it true? If so, what was? A. Will you repeat that question?

p. 1778 Q. All right: Perlstein said that the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and asked the International body to endorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions". Now, my question is, was any part of that sentence true?

A. I don't know; these others may have requested that of Mr. Perlstein.

Q. There was nobody else there but you from the Donnelly Company?

A. There was a girl there from the Donnelly Company but she was not in the room when I was there.

Q. All right, you were there for an hour and all the time that was spent was in relation to your appearing as a delegate, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during that hour when that subject was being discussed did anything happen such as stated in the sentence last read from this announcement by Mr. Perlstein?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know. Could it be that your memory has failed on that subject?

[fol. 5860] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I don't understand exactly what you mean.

Q. I will let you read it with me, Mrs. Hull: "Perlstein said that the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and asked the International body to endorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions". Now, did anything like that happen? A. Not while I was in there.

Q. That is what I am talking about. Did you ever hear of that happening anywhere, as this delegate now that is going down to this convention to sponsor this strike against this company, did you ever hear that that happened anywhere and if so I will ask you where?

A. I did not.

Q. You never heard of that happening, did you?

A. It could have happened, though.

Q. Pardon me, did you ever hear of it?

A. I did not, no.

Q. You are the delegate?

A. I did not.

Q. You never did. Now, Mrs. Hull, you know this article, when you read it, was false, didn't you? You have demonstrated that here.

A. No sir, I didn't know it was false.

Q. You didn't know it was false?

A. They had other members in the factory besides me.

Q. All right, had you, as a delegate, any interest in knowing whether this so-called uprising of Donnelly employees and a demand for a strike was true?

[fol. 5861] p. 1780 A. I supposed it was.

Objection—immaterial.

Q. You did?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever ask anybody whether it was true.

Objection—immaterial

A. It was only the day before that appeared in the paper.

Q. Now, the next day, this article having appeared the night before, the employees, apparently incensed, had this demonstration that you have described in your direct testimony, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They made it very plain to you the reason for that, did they not, was your assumption, according to this article, of authority to represent them when you didn't have that authority; that is what they were incensed about, wasn't it?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Didn't they tell you plainly "where did you get the authority to represent us and have a strike called in this plant"?

A. No, sir; they asked me what that meant in the papers

Q. And by the way, in direct testimony you said it didn't mean a thing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You thought it didn't mean a thing that you were going down there, according to this article, to sponsor a strike in that plant?

A. I merely told the girls that because they were threatening to throw me out the window.

p. 1781 Q. When you went to that convention did you think you represented The Donnelly employees?

Objection—immaterial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5862] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. The girls in the union.

Q. Well you and Fern Sigler you mean?

A. Yes, sir; I was told there were other girls in.

Q. Who were the other girls?

A. I don't know.

p. 1782 Q. Do you understand what I am asking you, whether you understood you represented any Donnelly employees when you went to Atlantic City?

A. Yes, sir, I thought I did.
Q. Now, whom did you think you represented?
A. The members of the ILGWU.
Q. Can you name any one employee that you thought you represented?
A. Well I remember Fern Sigler.
Q. Is she the only Donnelly employee that you thought you represented? A. No, sir.
Q. Can you name any others?
A. At that time she was the only member I knew.
Q. Then you could not name any others that you thought you represented except yourself and Fern Sigler?
A. I was told we had other members in the factory.
Q. Mrs. Hull, would you please be so kind, can you name anybody else, or could you when you went to Atlantic City to advocate this strike, could you name a single employee that you thought you represented except Fern Sigler?

[fol. 5863] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. Our names were kept secret because we were afraid we would lose our jobs.
p. 1783 Q. Anyway, you go down to Atlantic City; you were not here when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized were you; you were not at the plant?
A. No, sir.
Q. When did you leave for Atlantic City?
A. I don't remember the exact late we left.
Q. The convention opened May 3rd according to this article?
p. 1784 A. We left sometimes before that.
Q. A couple of days before that, and who went with you?
A. In our delegation we met at St. Louis and I don't remember how many delegates were there.

Q. Or their names?
A. Well, I could remember some, who went from Kansas City.
Q. Any from the Donnelly plant? I judge not but I ask that question?
A. No, sir, I was the only one.
Q. How long were you away from Kansas City in all?
A. I don't remember exactly; I think it was almost three weeks.
Q. How long were you in the convention?
A. Two weeks.
Q. Where were you the rest of the time?
A. On the trip back and forth and then we went to New York for a day.
Q. For pleasure, just a side trip to New York?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were your expenses paid to New York by the International?
[fol. 5864] A. I spent part of my own money on the trip.

Objection—immaterial.

Q. When you returned did you ever call the plant or stop in at the plant?
A. No, sir; when they sent me home they told me that they would call me when they wanted me.
p. 1785 Q. The answer is no, you never called the plant for work, is that right?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever call them at all?
A. No, sir.
Q. From the day you left on April 23, 1937, to this time have you ever applied at the Donnelly Company for reemployment? A. No, sir.
Q. And what have you been doing since then?
A. Well, that summer I was at home and then I believe it was in September I started working in the Quality Hill Dress Factory and I am still employed there.
Q. You have been in the one place ever since then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think my recollection is you said in the three judge hearing that you got that employment two weeks after you left. Am I wrong about that?

A. You are; it was in September, I think.

Q. Have you done any organization work for the International, calling on girls?

A. I called on some girls after I got back from the convention.

Q. When did you begin your organization work, calling on girls?

A. Shortly after I came from the convention.

Q. About how long, just roughly approximate it?

[fol. 5865] A. Probably four or five days.

Q. And how long did you continue that work?

p. 1786 A. Well, I did not continue that very long because it was along toward the last of May when I got back.

Q. Just without a long statement, how long did you continue the organization work?

A. Well, probably about four weeks.

Q. And were you paid for your services?

A. When I joined I was told that if—

Q. (Interrupting) Mrs. Hull, the question is very simple, when you did this four weeks of organization work were you paid for your services?

A. Well, during that time I had to have money for my expenses and I was paid.

Q. How much were you paid?

A. $20.00 a week.

Q. And how many weeks did you draw pay from the International as an organizer?

A. I never drew pay as an organizer.

Q. In whatever capacity, whatever term you think should be used or stated as your employment?

A. My pay was from the time I was fired at Donnelly's until I went on the other job.

Q. Oh, then from April 23rd, 1937 you continued to draw $20.00 a week until September?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you promised that when you joined the International?

A. I knew when I joined that I would probably lose my job for it had been told us.

Q. You apparently did not hear the question I imagine; I may have put it so clumsily that [fol. 5866] p. 1787 you did not understand it but it was, I thought, clear. Would you please read it?

(Last question read by the reporter)

A. I was promised in case I lost my job that I would be paid the time I lost.

Q. And the amount was agreed on?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was said about the amount, if anything?

A. There wasn't anything said about the amount.

Q. Who made the agreement to pay you for any month that you might be out of work? Miss Palmer of Mr. Perlstein?

A. I think Miss Palmer.

Q. You think so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you sure? A. Yes, I think she did.

Q. Now, it was either Miss Palmer or Mr. Perlstein, you are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, during this time you worked as an organizer you called on a great many Donnelly employees trying to get them to join the International?

Objection—immaterial.

A. I called on some; I don't know how many.

Q. How many, fifty, one hundred, five hundred, two hundred or what?

Objection—immaterial.

p. 1788 A. Probably thirty five.

Q. And you told them how badly they were treated and how the union could do this and that for them, of course?

Objection—immaterial.

[fol. 5867] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I told them that I thought the union would help them.

Q. How many joined in response to your solicitation? A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember any, do you?

A. I don't remember.

Q. As a matter of fact none, isn't that true?

A. I wouldn't say that.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, Mrs. Hull, you know, don't you, that the Donnelly plant in its physical equipment and facilities for the comfort of employees is the best garment plant anywhere that you know anything about; don't you admit that? A. In some ways, yes.

Q. Well, in the ways I have specified is it not? It is a model plant, known as such in the industry; won't you admit that?

A. Well, not in every way, I don't agree with you.

Q. In what way do you not agree with me?

A. Well, one reason I don't agree is because we had such long hours while I was there.

Q. I haven't gotten to the hours, I have asked about the plant, the physical equipment and facilities for the comfort of the employees, just that. I will take it up one at a time. Was it not, in that respect, the best plant that you know anything about?

p. 1789 A. I think so.

Q. Do you know of any other garment plant in Kansas City that was paying wages as high as the Donnelly Company? If so I will get you to name it?

A. I did not know what other factories were paying but I was told they had a higher rate of pay than they did.

Q. You were told that down at Atlantic City, I understand, as will later develop but I am speaking of what you know. Do you know of any other plants in Kansas City that paid wages as high as the Donnelly Garment Company? If so, which plant?

[fol. 5868] A. Well, I only worked in the one factory; I could not say about the others; I don't know.

Objection—immaterial

Q. But you have been acting in union work and from any source of knowledge you have, can you name another garment plant in Kansas City that pays wages as high as the Donnelly Company?

Objection—immaterial

A. I understand the coat factories pay higher.
Q. We are talking about ladies' garment factories. Can you name a single plant in that industry that pays wages as high as the Donnelly Company? If so let us hear it and pass on?

Objection—immaterial

A. I don't know what the others make.
p. 1790 Q. You get good wages at Quality Hill, don't you? A. We have fair wages there.
p. 1791 Q. But not as good as Donnelly's?
A. Yes, sir, I think they do, for the hours.
Q. Are you satisfied there?
A. Well, I don't know.
Q. You don't know. All right. Now, at convention—Senator Reed reminds me of one point. You have mentioned the spy system. Do you know of any spy system?
A. We had clubs when we were ——
Q. (Interrupting) The answer is first yes or no?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know of a spy system? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, tell us all about it?
A. We had clubs in the Donnelly factory and when we would go out on our parties they always sent some of the supervision along with us, so if anything was said about the union that it could be reported.
Q. Can you name any spies?
[fol. 5869] A. Well, I considered that the instructors were sent for that purpose.
Q. That was your judgment about it?
A. That's what I thought.

p. 1792 Q. You introduced a resolution, didn't you, at the convention?

Objection—immaterial

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you remember that? Who prepared it?

Objection—immaterial

A. I don't know.
Q. Well, who handed it to you?

Objection—immaterial

A. Mr. Perlstein.
Q. You did not have anything to do with writing it, did you; it was handed to you tailor made or prepared, is that right?

Objection—immaterial

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And at the same time he handed you a speech to deliver, didn't he?

Objection—immaterial

A. No, sir.
Q. You did read a speech there?

Objection—immaterial

A. I did.
Who wrote that?

Objection—immaterial

A. I don't know.
Q. Well, that, too, was handed to you?

Objection—immaterial

A. I was not used to speaking before so many people so I asked Mr. Perlstein if he would help me to write a speech.
Q. Well, he wrote both the resolution and the speech?

Objection—immaterial

p. 1793 A. I don't know.
Q. Didn't you just say so?

Objection—immaterial

[fol. 5870] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I did not; I said I didn't know.
Q. I am sorry; I don't want to be unfair but I thought you said that he handed you the resolution?
A. He handed me the resolution but I don't know who wrote it.
Q. But he did write the speech?
A. I don't know.
Q. You surely said that a second ago.
A. I said that I asked [me] to assist me in writing this speech and I was not in the hotel at the time so someone, from the facts I had given them, wrote the speech and then later I read it.
Q. So you were handed a resolution by Perlstein and a speech by Perlstein?
A. No, sir, not by Perlstein.
Q. Who handed it to you?
A. Someone sent it to my room.
Q. Among other things in the resolution did you resolve as follows—propose this resolution: "Resolved that this convention instruct the incoming GEB"—I suppose that is the general executive board—"to give the joint board of Kansas City the necessary financial support which it may require in the further conduct of this organization campaign, and be it further resolved that the incoming GEB lend its moral assistance to the publicity campaign which the Kansas City Joint Board is about to undertake in order to advise the
p. 1794 buying public of America of the conditions that exist in the Donnelly Garment Company, and be it still further resolved that the incoming GEB be instructed to give all financial assistance to the joint board of Kansas City in the event that it will be compelled to order a strike against the Donnelly Garment Company for the enforcement of the 35 hour week, for the minimum wage scales that prevail in the silk and wool dress industries, for the establishment of genuine collective bargaining and for the abolition of the company union, spy and caste system which prevails in the Donnelly Garment Company". That was your resolution, wasn't it? A. I think so.

Q. Have you any doubt about it? Isn't it familiar to you?

[fol. 5871] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. It has been two years ago.

Q. I am reading from page 234 of the report of that convention? A. I think that's it.

Q. Now, in your speech or in the speech—I won't say your speech—in the speech that you read among other things you said this, did you not, "I find that the wages paid by the Donnelly Garment Company are at least forty per cent lower than the workers in the other shops are earning". That was part of your speech, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir, and I talked to a girl from New York who told me that she made $60.00 a week.

p. 1795 Q. You also said this "And what is worse than anything else is the inhuman speed up which the company has developed in its factory. As a result of this speed up system the majority of the girls in the factory must quit working after a few years because their nerves become overstrained and they break down. In many instances these workers are not able to return to work". You said that, too, didn't you, in the speech that was written for you? A. Well—

Q. (Interrupting) First, did you say that?

A. I don't know. When—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a minute, I want to get an answer to that question if I may. Read right there, please. A. I see what is there.

Q. Pardon me, let us have an answer.
A. Oh, I don't know whether I read that or not.
Q. Did you read this speech, as reported in this official report?
A. If you will permit me to explain to you, when I read this over I crossed out some of the things there and then when I gave it to the girl she may have put all of those things in.
p. 1796 Q. That is pure speculation, isn't it? As a matter of fact, this meeting was stenographically reported just like this trial is and what you said there is what appears here, isn't that right?
A. No, sir.
Q. Why, they have got "applause" in here. You did not have "Applause" in your written speech, did you?

[fol. 5872] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I don't know.
Q. Do you seriously mean to say that somebody who writes this speech for you, had a parenthesis at the end and "applause"? You don't mean that surely, do you?
A. I don't know.
Q. Well, is it your best recollection that in that speech, handed to you, you said what is written in that bracketed portion that I just last read?
A. I know the girls are nervous in that factory.
Q. I wonder why it is I cannot—I think it may be my fault but did you make part of that speech, did you include that in that speech? Did you say that?
A. I don't remember; I suppose I did.
Q. All right, you suppose you did. Now, I want to ask you, you say here that a majority of the girls broke down, they had to quit working for a few years because their nerves were over-strained. That would mean at least 650 girls, wouldn't it? That would have to fall by the wayside like wheat before the reaper?

p. 1797 A. They have new faces in there all the time.

p. 1798 Q. Now, we will pass to something else. The next thing you say, not the next thing but skipping along you say that Senator Reed owns this factory?

A. I thought Mr. Reed did own the factory.

Q. Who, do you really mean that?

A. Well, he was—

Q. (Interrupting) You knew Mrs. Reed founded this business in her own home?

A. He is the husband of—

Q. (Interrupting) Mrs. Donnelly founded this business back in 1919; didn't you know that?

A. I didn't know when she started the business.

[fol. 5873] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

p. 1799 Q. Now, you say here also "I joined the union several months ago." The writer of this speech didn't know that you had just joined it six weeks ago?

A. That was just merely said "several months ago".

Q. But the fact is that the writer assumed you had joined several months ago, and didn't know that you had just joined about six weeks before?

A. I don't know what he knew.

Q. Now, you say further in the speech "I kept my membership in the union secret because I knew that I was being watched and spied on by the detectives employed by the firm. Every worker in the shop is spied on and followed inside and outside the factory". Now, that is the first time in your testimony that the word detective has been mentioned at all, isn't it; you have spoken of detectives before? A. They had detectives there.

Q. Pardon me, you have not spoken of detectives? A. I don't know.

Q. Well, have you?

A. I don't know whether I have or not.
Q. You have no way of jogging your memory?
A. I don't know.
Q. In the statement which you gave Mr. Walsh from which he was obviously reading as he was examining you, did you ever mention detectives? A. I don't think so.
Q. No, and you didn't in your testimony, did you, Mrs. Hull? A. I don't think so.
Q. But you told this convention or purported to tell them that the company had a detective agency following the employees both inside and outside the factory. Why, you knew that was one hundred per cent false, didn't you.

[fol. 5874] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. No, sir. There has been someone at my own home and I know that they have been there at least six different times.
Q. Well, what of it? What does that prove?
A. It proves they were following me.
Q. Who? How do you know it proves that? If someone knocks at your door and you are not there what does that prove as to where they came from?
A. It was not knocking at my door.
Q. What do you mean then?
A. I mean after I joined the union and went to the convention at least six different times I know someone was there and they brought old soiled underwear, someone's underwear and left it on my porch and on my front steps, on the garage door and they also left a note there one time.
Q. What fantastic—what does that prove as to who they were?
A. They were the only enemies I have.
p. 1801 Q. That is after you left this company's service?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And after you had gone to the convention?

A. Yes, sir, after I joined the union.
Q. But at the convention how could you foresee when you were talking about detectives, how could you forsee that people were going to come to your house and leave some dirty underwear on the front porch? Can you think of any answer to that?
A. (No answer)
Q. Well, we have been waiting a few minutes. Have you any answer to that?
A. No, sir.
Q. If you think of any later I would be glad to hear it. Now, you say in the resolution which was handed to you for introduction, you speak of caste system and up to now in your evidence that is the first time that that has been mentioned, has it not?

[fol. 5875] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I didn't mention everything—
Q. What did you mean by caste system?
A. Some were considered better than the operator.
Q. By who?
A. I suppose by the higher ups in the factory.
Q. Go ahead, describe the so called caste system in its minute details?
A. The instructors, when I left there, they had a special place that they had their lunch, they didn't eat their lunch with us; also the office workers, they had their own special tables where they ate.
Q. All in the same cafeteria?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How big is the cafeteria?
A. Well, it is quite large; I don't know.
Q. I don't know myself; you tell us. As big as this court room?
A. Well, I think it is as large as this.
Q. And what you mean now by the caste system is that the office people who worked together and of course were acquainted would sit down when they would get their tray—they would go around the ring and get their food and just go to the same table?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then the instructors would sit at the same table—I don't suppose they could sit at the same table, one table, you don't mean that, do you?

A. No, sir; I mean the instructors had a little room to themselves where they had their lunches.

Q. Now, is that all? Is that the caste system in full detail?

[fol. 5876] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

p. 1803 A. Yes, sir.

Q. That these people ate at different tables in the cafeteria, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, as a [mater] of fact, didn't they have parties and dances among the Donnelly employees and haven't they had for several years, attended by everybody from Mrs. Reed to the bundle boys?

A. I don't know; I never attended these.

Q. You know they had them, though and you were invited; you were perfectly welcome to attend them; you knew that?

A. Well, I never attended those dances.

Q. Would you go that far, did they have them?

A. They did have them.

Q. Did they have Christmas parties—Mrs. Reed?

A. Yes.

Q. Every year for how many years has she given Christmas parties for all the employees?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, about how many?

A. I couldn't say how many.

Q. Ever since you have been there?

A. Well, I remember I think two.

Q. As a matter of fact you know they were annual events and have been for years, don't you? Please let us have an answer.

A. I don't know that they have had them every year.

p. 1804 Q. Were you at any of those?

A. I have been.

Q. How many have you attended?

[fo] 5877] Objection is made to all questions and answers on this page because the questions and answers are immaterial.

A. I have attended two.

Q. And you knew that Mrs. Reed would give presents to the children of the employees, and would, from her ranch, bring turkeys down and give them, you knew that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did that to everybody indiscriminately, high and low in the scale of service, you knew that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the plant you say had a caste system that you said at Atlantic City had this caste system, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hogsett: That is all

Further Cross Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I don't want to go over anything that they have gone over with you but I do not believe this question has specifically been answered. Did anyone else at all, anyone except Mr. Perlstein and Miss Palmer ask you to go to Atlantic City representing the Donnelly employees?

A. Not that I recall

Q. The Quality Hill Shop is a union shop, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was your next employment after leaving the Donnelly shop?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has been suggested here that it is difficult for girls who leave the Donnelly shop because they sympathize with the International to get jobs in the other shops where the International has contracts. Did you find that other shops in town where the International had closed shop contracts would not let Donnelly girls who left the Donnelly plant on account of sympathy with the International, get a job there?

A. I don't know. I never applied for work any place only Quality Hill.

Q. You never found it to be true that other shops would not allow Donnelly girls to get a job did you?

[fol. 5878] p. 1805 A. This was a union shop and I did not know about the others.

Q. So far as you know there was no prejudice against you because you had been in the Donnelly plant?

Objection—immaterial

A. No, sir, this is a union shop, Quality Hill is.

Q. And naturally they would favor girls who had been let out of the Donnelly shop on account of sympathizing with the International, wouldn't they?

Objection—immaterial

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Well, at least they would not be prejudiced against girls who belonged to the same union that their own closed shop was with, would they?

Objection—immaterial

A. They had no prejudice, no.

p. 1806 Q. You said in your direct testimony that the girls said in this disturbance that arose the day you came to work after the newspaper article about your going to Atlantic City, the girls said that if they caught you with the Loyalty League pin they would tear your clothes off?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What girls said that?

A. I don't know who said that; there was a group of girls there and they were threatening me and someone said that.

Q. Just someone or many of them?

A. Well, I don't know whether more than one said it or not.

Q. You testified originally that they said that, didn't you?

A. Someone said that; I don't know whether more than one.

Q. I asked you if you said in your direct examination that they said they would tear your clothes off?

A. I may have said that.

Q. What?

[fol. 5879] A. I think so.

Q. Do you know Marie Jamison?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of your best friends, isn't she?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is she the one that said she would tear your clothes off?

A. I don't remember who said they would tear my clothes off.

Q. I will ask you if you did not, in your affidavit filed in the trial of this cause before the three judge court say "Mamie Jamison, a worker in the special section left and came back with thirty five cents and demanded my pin. I told her I had changed my mind and intended to keep it. She said 'you had better not let us catch you with it on or we will tear your clothes off' ". Did you so testify or did your affidavit include that sentence?

p. 1807

A. She may have been the one; I don't know.

Q. Did your affidavit include that statement?
A. I think so.
Q. Do you remember now whether she said that or not?
A. At that time my memory was fresh and if that is what I said then, then it is true now.
Q. And you did not say that anyone else said it at that time, did you?
A. I don't think so.
Q. And you don't now claim that anyone else said it do you?
A. If I said Marie Jamison was the one that said it then she is the one; I have forgotten; it has been some time ago.

[fol. 5880] p. 1810 Recross-Examination

By Mr. Hogsett:
Q. Mr. Tyler asked you if you wanted to go back to the Donnelly plant and you said you would under union conditions?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I suppose you mean the International Union conditions?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And unless the International Union had the closed shop contract you don't want to go back?
A. I want to go back if they have shorter hours and better wages.
Q. The question is unless the International has a closed shop contract with the Donnelly Garment Company you don't want to go back, do you? Can you answer that?
A. Well, I don't know.
Q. You don't know?
A. No sir.

Mr. Hogsett: That is all.

Mr. Walsh: That is all.

JOURNAL-POST.

DONNELLY WORKER WILL BE SENT TO UNION CONVENTION

Garment Organization Seeking Support for Strike at Plant.

Sylvia Hull, an employe of the Donnelly Garment company, has been named a delegate from Kansas City to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union biennial convention May 3 at Atlantic City, Meyer Peristein, regional director, announced Thursday.

The Donnelly worker, according to Peristein, was one of a committee from that garment company who appeared Wednesday night before a joint group representing various Kansas City locals and requested representation at the national convention.

Peristein said the Donnelly committee desired one of their number to appear at the convention and ask the international body to indorse and support a strike against their employer for failure to negotiate a contract for higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions. The Kansas City joint committee, Peristein asserted, agreed to pay all expenses of the Donnelly delegate.

Other delegates from Kansas City are

Cinderella Robinson and Grace Pollard, members of local No. 226 [illegible] employes of the [illegible] company; Lodie [illegible], local No. 215, employed at the [illegible] Laverne [illegible], Alma Revel, local No. 114, employed by the Fashionshop Garment company; Arleen Gaither, local No. 118, employed by the Gordon, Mayhere Manufacturing company; Ory Thornton and Annie Vaughan, local No. 200, employes of the Stern-Stagman-Prins company, and Miss Wave Tobin, business representative of the Kansas City locals.

Peristein said the executive committee of the various local unions in Kansas City would meet Thursday afternoon to consider a resolution calling on the national organization to appropriate funds to carry on a strike at the Donnely plant.

The delegates from this section will meet April 30 in St. Louis to go to Atlantic City by special train. Peristein will be a delegate from St. Louis. The convention will last two [fol. 5881-a] Objection is made to all questions and answers of W. B. Rosenfield for the reason that said questions and answers are immaterial.

W. B. ROSENFIELD called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiffs, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Depping:

p. 506 Q. State your name please?
A. W. B. Rosenfield.
Q. Where do you live?
A. Memphis, Tennessee.
Q. What is your profession. A. Attorney.
Q. How long have you been practicing your profession? A. Since July 15, 1915.
Q. Where? A. In Memphis.
Q. Are you a member of the various Bar associations, from the American Bar Association on down? A. Yes.
Q. Did you represent the Kuhn Manufacturing Company of Memphis in a controversy with the union? A. Yes.
Q. What does the Kuhn Manufacturing Company make?
A. It is not in business at the present time. At the time that I represented them, they were manufacturers of ladies' dresses, cotton dresses principally.

p. 507 Q. Did the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union conduct the campaign to organize the Kuhn Manufacturing Company for that union? A. Yes.
Q. You knew, of your own knowledge, who was in charge of that campaign?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Who was it?
A. Meyer Perlstein, who at the time I think, was regional director of the union, with headquarters in St. Louis. Mrs. Zappone, who was an organizer of the union, and Miss Ida Sledge, who became associated with the union as an organizer, when it sought to enter Memphis and unionize the trade in Memphis.

Q. What did the representatives of your union, do in their attempt to unionize into their union the Kuhn Manufacturing Company?

[fol. 5882] A. Well, I had numerous conferences with Mr. Perlstein, at which other persons were present, and following those conferences and our inability to agree upon any satisfactory terms, the strike resulted.

Q. Just state what it was Mr. Perlstein said he wanted?

A. Mr. Perlstein told me, at the initial conference that it was the desire of his union to unionize those girls who were working in the trade in Memphis, that the wages that were paid at one of the plants in Memphis, were inadequate, and that working conditions were not satisfactory. However, he did not make that complaint with respect to the client whom I represented.

Q. State what complaint, if any, Mr. Perlstein made to you about your client, the Kuhn Manufacturing Company? A. Only one.

Q. What was that?

A. My recollection is that we were working, or rather the plant was [wroking fourty] four hours a week, and he insisted that girls in the industry should not work more than forty hours a week, and eight hours a day.

Q. Was there anything else?

A. Nothing else at all.

Q. What if anything was said about Mr. Perlstein with reference to a closed shop?

A. It was discussed, Mr. Perlstein always started and ended with the demand that there be a closed shop agreement, and that if we would agree to enter into a closed shop agreement, that we could write our own terms, with respect to the other clauses to be incorporated in the agreement. He did insist that one class of employees should get a wage increase of ten per cent, but he would never discuss a contract except upon the theory that it be a closed shop contract.

Q. For his union? A. For his union.

Q. Will you fix a date about when these conversations with Mr. Perlstein started?

A. March 10, 1937 was the date upon which I first conferred with him at the request of my client.

[fol. 5883] Q. Were there any indications by Mr. Perlstein as to what would ensue if the closed shop contract with the International was not signed by your client?

A. He stated definitely we would meet with trouble in the form of a strike if we did not sign a closed shop agreement.

Q. Did he make any reference in that conversation to what occurred in other strikes in Memphis by the International?

A. Yes. We knew what had happened. He stated the same things were bound to happen if he called a strike at the plant of the Kuhn Manufacturing Company.

Q. Briefly, what thing had happened at those other places, that he referred to?

p. 510 Q. Will you tell what you know of your own knowledge that happened at these other places that Mr. Perlstein referred to?

A. There were numerous fights, acts of violence.

Mr. Walsh: Q. Were you present at these Mr. Rosenfield?

A. I saw them, yes, some of them.

Mr. Depping: (Resumed questioning)

A. Assemblage of large crowds of union sympathizers, and fights in the several places of business of the firms engaged in that line of business and elsewhere in the city.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge if any clothing had been stripped from women at those places? A. Yes.

Q. Had that happened? A. Yes.

Q. Just to go back for a minute—you mentioned he wanted a closed shop contract. What do you mean by that?

A. That the firm might not employ as workers—and excepted from workers were the officers of the firm of course, the designer, and one or two other employees—but outside of those, that all workers in the shop must be union employees and members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union Association, and that none other but members of the union could be employed at the place of business.

[fol. 5884] p. 511 Q. State whether or not during these conversations with Mr. Perlstein if he ever told you [now] many employees of the Kuhn Manufacturing Company, if any, belonged to his union? A. No.

Q. Did he ever tell you who the employees of the Kuhn Manufacturing Company were that he was representing?

A. He stated, he represented a majority of the employees, but he never established the fact to me.

Q. During these preliminary negotiations with Mr. Perlstein, do you, of your own knowledge, know whether a majority of the employees of the Kuhn Manufacturing Company belonged to his union? A. They did not.

Q. Did he later ever make a statement to you regarding a membership in his union of the employees of the Kuhn Manufacturing Company during these negotiations?

A. I don't know that I understand your question exactly.

Q. Well, I will re-state it. Did he at any time ever state to you whether or not he had a majority of the employees of the Kuhn Manufacturing Company in his union?

p. 512 A. He stated that he did; and we were perfectly willing to bargain with him, whether he represented a majority or not, because we had nothing that we were unwilling to negotiate about.

Q. State what the real point of difference was?

A. The closed shop demand.

Q. Was a so called strike called by the International Union?

A. Yes. It was more than a strike.

Q. Did acts of violence on the part of the International Union occur? A. Yes.

Q. Just describe to the Court what you know occurred of your own knowledge of acts of violence during that so-called strike by the International. Just tell what happened.

[fol. 5885] A. I think it was on March 22nd, 1937, that the strike was called. On that morning, we anticipated the strike, and at the request of the officers of my client, I accompanied them to their place of business. Upon arrival, we saw large numbers of people surrounding the building in which their plant was located, some of whom I recognized, and some of whom I did not. Among those who were present were Mrs. Zappone and Ida Sledge, whom I have mentioned previously in my testimony as being members and the organizers of the union. And when the employees who wanted to come to work started toward the building, they were prevented p. 513 from doing so by the large number of so called union members and sympathizers and the picket line which was in control of the union and its representatives, and naturally the women who were accosted, resisted, and they were slapped and their hair pulled, and clothing torn from them to some extent, hats pulled off, or things of that nature, and in order to prevent greater violence, we closed the plant.

Q. All right. Now, in this, whatever violence that occurred there, that you saw, state whether or not the employees who were trying to go to work were the aggressors?

A. No.

Q. You closed the plant? A. Yes.

Q. Did you obtain an injunction against violence on the part of the International Union?

A. No. We applied for and obtained an injunction before we opened the plant to resume operations, and the morning we attempted to resume operations was that upon which the strike occurred, that is violence occurred.

Q. Prior to that time, had you been threatened with a strike and violence?

A. Yes, and for that reason, I was unwilling to advise my clients to resume operations unless they obtained an injunction to prevent violence.

Q. Did you obtain the injunction?

p. 514 A. Yes.

Q. Did you open up the plant? A. Yes.

[fol. 5886] Q. And after you had obtained an injunction against violence by the International Union, and had opened up the plant, what happened of your own knowledge?

A. The things I have detailed as having occurred I think on the morning of March 22, 1937—the assemblage of the crowd, the acts of violence, the demand of those who were members of the union and the organizers, those loyal employees who didn't want to become members of the union not going to work—fights, general confusion, and virtual riot, that led me to advise my client to discontinue operations. We had quite a number of employees who wanted to work, and who didn't want to be members of the union. To protect them, and rather than commit themselves to [humilitation] and mistreatment, we closed down.

Q. After you obtained the injunction?

A. Correct.

Q. What court?

A. Chancery Court of Shelby County, Tennessee, the Court of Equity Jurisdiction.

Q. Service was had on union officials, members of the union, and their representatives?

A. Service was had upon the union, Perlstein, Mrs. Zappone, and as is customary in equity proceedings of that sort, all members of the union through their hands and all other persons.

Q. All right. Do you of your own knowledge know if the International Ladies Garment Workers Union at about the same time you had referred to, conducted campaigns against other garment companies in Memphis in an attempt to unionize the employees of the plants into the International Union?

A. Prior to that time I have referred to and about the same time, they attempted to unionize two other plants.

Q. What two plants?

A. Tri-State Manufacturing Company and Nona Lee—I think it is—dress company.

Q. State briefly to the Court what that violence consisted of that you have observed?

[fol. 5887] A. I think it was about the 23d or 24th of March that a strike was called by the union at the Nona-Lee Dress Company. I happened to have passed their place of business on my way to work that morning, and when I passed, I noticed virtually a mob assembled about and surrounding their place of business on Court street in Memphis. The employees sought to enter the building, and the union organizers, members, and sympathizers attempting to prevent them from doing so. I happened to see all of that on my way to work.

p. 516

Q. What happened when they attempted to do so?

A. Well—it was almost like two armies meeting in a tug of war. Those who wanted to get in and go to work were prevented from doing so by being pulled and assaulted, accosted and some of them got in and some of them couldn't get in.

Q. Were any of them injured? A. Yes.

Q. Were those that wanted to get in to work, the aggressors? A. No.

Q. Did anything unusual in the way of violence occur on March 25th that you recall?

A. If that is the date, the strike at the Nona-Lee was called, what I have just stated, was on that date. I don't remember whether it was the 23d, 24th or 25th, but about that time, the date the strike occurred; and for thirty six or forty eight hours—I don't know what happened continuously when I wasn't there, but every time I did pass by or look at the place, there would be quite a number of people there. Those employees who got into the building stayed in, and had their food sent in, or someone provided food for them over night. They slept in the building, and stayed in there, I know the following day, and possibly the day after that, to keep from coming out and getting in a fight.

p. 517 Q. The employees stayed at the building over night? A. Yes.

Q. State whether or not you saw employees of the Nona-Lee Dress Company forced into union headquarters? A. Yes.

Q. Describe that to the Court?

[fol. 5888] A. My office is on the corner of 3rd and Court in Memphis, and the union headquarters at that time was right across the street from my office. The Nona-Lee girls, leaving work, some of them would come up to the corner of 3rd and Court to catch the street car. As they did, they would be accosted by other girls and ushered up the stairs to the union headquarters. Some of them didn't want to go, but sufficient force was exercised to force them up. I watched it with some little amusement, because I was interested in the two manufacturing companies and our negotiations were going on at that time. All I had to do was to go to the window, look down in the street, and see what was going on, and knowing the time the girls would get off from work, I could see those acts.

Q. Did you and your clients finally give up and sign with the International? A. Yes.

Q. Then what happened?

A. We liquidated.

Q. You liquidated the business? A. Yes.

Q. Why?

p. 518 A. It was impossible to continue operations profitably as my clients concluded. They had lost a great deal of money during the strike. During the time we were operating under the union contract, there were quite a number of companies registered. My clients though, were not justified, and rather than to be burdened with that sort of trouble, they decided to liquidate and go out of business, which they did.

Q. How did the contracts you negotiated with the International Union compare with what was being paid to the employees before you made the contract?

A. No raise whatsoever. The work was on a piece rate basis, and the same wages prevailed during the time we operated under the union contract. When I say "we" I mean my client. I use that form of expression. I had no financial interest in my client's business.

Q. How long did you operate under the contract with the International before business was liquidated?

A. I think about three months, two and a half months. As a matter of fact, when the contract was signed we signed it in order to

[fol. 5889] cover the merchandise on hand, and I had in mind at that time that the firm was going to liquidate and I incorporated in the contract a clause that, despite the obligation to employ union members, that the firm might nevertheless liquidate at any time it chose so to do; and that clause was incorporated in the

p. 519 contract at the time, because we did not want to be in a position where the union would go into a court of equity and insist we stay in business for a year to conform and comply with the contract.

Q. Now, Mr. Rosenfield, will you state whether or not at any time after this contract was signed with the International, you had a conversation with Mr. Perlstein, the southwest regional director of the International Union, with respect to violence and strikes?

A. Yes.

Q. Give details of that conversation and the circumstances?

A. After the three contracts had been signed by the three firms in Memphis, the union wanted to have a "good-will" dinner to which all members of the union and the employers were invited. The lawyers who had represented the three firms were likewise invited to that dinner. I went with Mr. Kuhn, at his request. The firm had signed the contract and we wanted to comply with it in good faith, and to do everything possible to instill a good spirit, and I accompanied him and advised him to go. Mr. Perlstein at that time told me that he wanted to organize a plant at Forest City, Arkansas. The proprietor of which, or the manager was named Ed Ash. My relations with Mr. Perlstein had not been particularly unpleasant. We simply didn't agree. At his request, I telephoned Mr. Ash on long distance to make an engagement for Mr. Perlstein to see Mr. Ash. Purely as an act of courtesy, and while I was waiting —I believe it was while I was waiting to [complet] that telephone call,—I discussed with Mr. Perlstein the various acts of violence that had occurred in Memphis. I took the position that if the union wanted to unionize certain employees in the industry that it could be done by education and persuasion rather than by acts of violence and force, and threats, and coercion. I took particular offense at the union's activity at times that the employer could not protect himself or itself. The union always strikes during the busiest season and likewise, I took offense in the discussion, or rather argued that violence was not necessary, and I told him I didn't see how the union expected to get along with employers after the various acts of violence to force them to sign a closed shop agreement. Mr. Perlstein said those things were just necessary incidents to a strike, and resulting, they had to occur; otherwise, they couldn't whip the employer into line and force him to sign a closed shop agreement.

Q. In that conversation state whether or not Mr. Perlstein at any time denied the acts of violence you attributed to the International Union?

[fol. 5890] p. 521 A. No. He never denied it, rather laughed about it. He didn't attempt to conceal that the union supported those things.

[fol. 5891] Objection is made to all questions and answers and offers of exhibits of the testimony of Robert J. Ingraham contained in pages 1 to 5 herein and attached exhibits for the reason that said testimony and said exhibits are immaterial.

ROBERT J. INGRAHAM

p. 965 called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiffs, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Will you state your name to the Court?

A. Robert J. Ingraham

Q. You are a member of this Bar?

A. I am
Q. And coun[illegible] for the plaintiffs?
A. I am.
Q. And a partner of Senator Reed?
A. I am.
Q. You have been counsel for plaintiffs throughout this litigation and for many years prior thereto, have you not?
A. That is true.
Q. Mr. Ingraham, I will ask you whether during the months of January and February, 1939, any conferences were held between counsel for plaintiffs and counsel for defendants and counsel for intervener in the effort to settle this controversy? Yes or no.
A. Yes.
Q. You may state the dates of those conferences.
A. The first date was January 20, 1939; the next date was February 4th.
Q. State the time and place of each conference.
A. There was a confer[illegible]ce on January 20, 1939 at Senator Reed's home; there was a conference February 4, 1939 at the offices of the National Labor Relations Board; there was a conference last Saturday, April 1, 1939, at the office of Senator Reed.

p. 966

Q. Now, at these conferences were negotiations had between the parties in the effort to settle the controversy?
A. There were.
Q. You may state in what manner the conference of January 20, 1939 at Senator Reed's home originated; how it came about.

[fol. 5892]

A. There had been several conferences with the Regional Director of the National Labor Relations Board with the representatives of the Donnelly Company and the attorney for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. At the last of those conferences Mr. Paul Broderick, the Regional Director of the National Labor Relations Board suggested or made a proposal of settlement which he assured us would be satisfactory with the union.

Mr. Broderick proposed a settlement which he assured us was satisfactory with the International Union. We did not know whether
p. 967 or not that was the case, and in the second place we felt that the proposal was very unfair. A short time after that conference, which I think was in the early part of January, Mr. Broderick asked a conference with Senator Reed and that was arranged for January 20th. A day or two before that date Mr. Broderick called me and asked if it would be agreeable to bring Mr. Clif Langsdale, who was the attorney for the union, and I stated it would be agreeable. I might say that Mr. Langsdale has been the attorney for the International Union for a number of years and he appeared in this case up until the hearing before Your Honor.

Q. He was one of counsel for the International?

A. For the defendants.

Q. In other words, for the defendants, plural, all of them?

A. That is right. Then we held this conference at Senator Reed's house on January 20th, as I say, at the request of Mr. Broderick.

Q. And what was his position, precisely?

A. Mr. Broderick, as I understand, is acting Regional Director for the National Labor Relations Board. Mr. Broderick's position has been all along that it is part of his duties to bring about industrial peace and that he wanted to see if it could be accomplished in this case.

Q. Now, at the conference at Senator Reed's home, you say that negotiations were had be-
p. 968 tween the parties in the effort to settle the controversy?

A. Yes; practically every alleged controversy in dispute was discussed pro and con.

Q. Was a stenographic report made of those negotiations?

A. There was.

p. 992 Q. Mr. Ingraham, following the conference of January 20th, and pursuant to the suggestion made that the plaintiffs put their position in writing in the form of a letter, was that done?

A. That was done.

Q. On what date was the letter written, and delivered?

A. February 4, 1939. Can I explain what occurred prior to that?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 5893] A. Mr. Broderick called me a few days prior to February 4th and asked if that date would be satisfactory, and he said that we would meet at the National Labor Relations Board Offices at 2:00 p. m. on Saturday, and I told him that that would be satisfactory and that we would have our letter in the form that he would understand it and he said at that time why he wanted the date fixed was because the

p. 993 International wanted to have Mr. Perlstein present, so we then met at that time.

Q. And was that letter delivered to Mr. Langsdale and Mr. Jerome Walsh on that date?

A. It was.

Q. Is Plaintiffs' Exhibit 113, the letter of February 4th delivered to Mr. Langsdale and Mr. Jerome Walsh on February 4th?

A. It is. I would like to make another explanation of what happened before this letter, in addition to what I have said.

Q. Very good.

A. After the meeting of January 20th I met Jerome Walsh and we discussed the possibility of a settlement. Mr. Walsh said that he felt there might be a possibility of arriving at some settlement and suggested that we get together. We got together at lunch; Mr. Walsh called me and invited me to lunch. At that time he stated that he felt if we would put in writing a form of decree that would be satisfactory to us that it would expedite any settlement, so I told him that we would try to do that and he said he was leaving town to be gone for several days and on his return he would get in touch with me. Well, when he

p. 994 returned, which as I remember, and I am sure about it, it was February 3rd, he called me and asked me if he could have the form of decree. I explained to him that Mr. Broderick had already arranged for a meeting on February 4th, the next afternoon, and that we had not completed the form of the decree and I suggested that we all meet according to our understanding with Mr. Broderick. So he said that was satisfactory and I understood him to say when he called me that he wanted the decree because of Mr. Umhey—

But in any event Mr. Walsh said that the next afternoon was satisfactory. The morning of February 4th Mr. Langsdale called Mr. Hogsett and I was in Mr. Hogsett's office and Mr. Langsdale asked if he could have, at once, the proposed draft of decree. We sent that over to his office at once and then later, at 2:00 o'clock, we met at the Labor Board offices for this conference. Mr. Hogsett and myself represented the Donnelly Companies, Mr. Tyler was present representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Mr. Broderick represented the Labor Board. Mr. Langsdale, Mr. Walsh and Mr. Rucker came into the room and we delivered our letter to them, and they in turn turned over their letter to us. I p. 995 think Mr. Tyler at that time delivered a letter stating his position. Mr. Langsdale just glances at our letter and said that he did not care to waste any further time and with that Mr. Langsdale, Mr. Rucker and Mr. Walsh walked out of the room. Now, do you want me to read the letter?

p. 998 Q. Before lunch you read Plaintiffs' Exhibit 113, which was our letter to Messrs. Walsh and Langsdale, and since lunch you have read the decree submitted with it. Was that our proposition submitted to these people in response to request?

A. That is right.

Q. I think you said that on an occasion when we met in the National Labor Board's office on February 4 Mr. Langsdale made some comment which you repeated and handed to me a letter?

A. Yes.

Q. You have had that marked as Plaintiffs' Exhibit 115?

[fol. 5894] A. Yes.

p. 1000 Q. Was an answer to that letter from Messrs. Walsh and Langsdale written?

A. There was.

Q. That letter was signed was it?

A. Yes, and that letter was dated February 17th.

Q. Was that letter answered by Messrs. Walsh and Langsdale?

A. Yes, it was, on February 18th.

Q. Do you have the answer?

A. I have the answer.

Q. Please have it identified.

p. 1003 Q. Now, at the opening of this trial, as the record shows, his Honor, Judge Miller made some reference to the possibility of a settlement of this matter. Following that did Mr. Walsh write a letter to the plaintiff, Donnelly Garment Company of March 29th?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, did Mr. Walsh write us a letter or the plaintiffs a letter on March 29th?

A. He did.

Q. Will you please have that marked.

Q. Now, in line with that letter was a conference between counsel for the various parties held on April 1, 1939 at Senator Reed's office?

A. Yes, but let me explain about this letter. This letter was received on March 29th. We advised counsel that afternoon that we would be willing to meet with them after the adjournment of court that day. That day first was

p. 1004 agreeable but when we got to our office Mr.

Walsh called and said that he had an appointment and he could not meet that day but would meet the following day or the next day so a conference was arranged for one o'clock Saturday, April 1st.

Q. Now, was a stenographic record made of that conference?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. I hand you Plaintiffs' Exhibit 119 and ask you if that is the stenographic record of that conference?

A. Yes.

Q. And whether it is correct?

[fol. 5895] A. Yes, I have read this.

Q. Now, following that meeting of the first of April and in line with the promise which we made to Mr. Walsh was a counter proposal made? A. There was.

Q. Have the plaintiffs or their counsel had any reply to that letter? A. We have not.

Redirect Examination.

p. 1027 By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. In the cross-examination Mr. Walsh asked you whether you had ever had any conference as requested by the International in this letter of March 9, 1937, the so-called polite letter? You said you had not and that you had not replied to that letter. Now I ask you why?

A. Well, at the time we received that letter the union did not claim to represent a single employee in our plant. A week before we

p. 1028 received the letter all the employees had delivered to Mrs. Reed the March 2nd document which is in evidence where the employees stated that they refused to have anything to do with an outside union and for the further reason that every complaint that the union made in that letter was taken to be absolutely false. We had tried out for months the question of the discharge of the 15 girls.

Q. Before the NRA?

A. Before the NRA. At the time the Labor Board delivered their complaint to us charging that we had discharged 15 girls we had reemployed 8 of the 15. That left 7. The evidence in that hearing disclosed that at the time the 7 were laid off only one of those girls belonged to the International Union. I am speaking now of their own testimony in that case. The remaining six testified in that hearing that they joined the International after they had been laid off by the Donnelly Company and we showed in that case that there was a very large, substantial lay-off in the summer of 1934 when these girls were laid off; There were 300 girls laid off at that time and that when business picked up we called back girls to work and by December we had called back some, I think 180 girls and of that number 8 of them were members of this union and we did not know at the time that they were members of the union, that any of them were members of the union or not members of the union and the one girl that claimed that she was a member of the union at the time she was laid off said nobody knew it; she testified in that hearing that no official of the company or nobody connected with the company knew that she was a member of the International.

[fol. 5896] "Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 113 A M F.

"February 4, 1939.

"To Paul F. Broderick, Acting Regional Director
National Labor Relations Board,

To Clif Langsdale, Esq., and Jerome Walsh, Esq., representing the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union,

To Frank E. Tyler, Esq., representing the Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

Gentlemen:

This letter is written in compliance with the suggestions made by Mr. Broderick, acting regional director of the National Labor Relations Board on January 20, 1939, to the effect that the parties participating in the negotiations that day held should state their several positions in writing with respect to the controversies between the Donnelly Garment Companies and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the National Labor Relations Board.

In order to accurately state our position, it seems proper to refer to what preceded the conference of January 20th. The meeting above referred to was preceded by several previous negotiations between the representatives of the National Labor Relations Board, the Donnelly Companies and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. At these previous meetings, no direct representative of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union was present, and the question was raised as to the authority or ability of the representatives of the National Labor Relations Board to come to any understanding or agreement of adjustment or settlement which would be binding upon the ILGWU and insure a peaceful and permanent settlement of the controversies between the Donnelly Companies and the ILGWU. [fol. 5897] Accordingly, at the request of Mr. Broderick, at the last meeting Mr. Langsdale was brought into the negotiations as the representative of the ILGWU and the Kansas City Joint Board of the ILGWU.

At that meeting (January 20, 1939) the Donnelly Companies took the position that they had in no manner violated any law of the United States; that they had been guilty of no unfair labor practice; that the accusations made against them by the ILGWU, the Kansas City Joint Board of the ILGWU and the representatives of these last named organizations were groundless; that, nevertheless, the company was willing to endeavor, through negotiations, to arrive at a peaceful settlement and adjustment of all controversies including the above mentioned charges and all other accusations brought against them of unfair treatment of employees, of the maintenance of a spy system, of a caste system, of a speed up system of long hours, of low wages, and of discrimination against certain employees on account of affiliations with the ILGWU and the right of the ILGWU and the Kansas City Joint Board to indulge in any of the oppressive or unlawful acts complained of in the action then pending in the United States District Court at Kansas City.

Mr. Langsdale stated that the settlement should include all matters of controversy and that he was authorized to negotiate on behalf of the ILGWU and the Kansas City Joint Board with reference to such a settlement, but emphatically stated that he would not agree to any settlement of the existing controversies unless, as a prerequisite, the companies would agree to disestablish the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to cancel their contracts with the last named union and to refuse to deal or bargain with any future plant labor organization formed by their workers.

Mr. Langsdale further stated that it was a part of the fixed policy of the International never to recognize a plant union and that the Union would never recognize the validity of a plant labor organization of the employees of the Donnelly Company. At said conference, it was even suggested by Mr. Langsdale that Mr. Tyler should withdraw.

[fol. 5898] Mr. Tyler, representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, took the position that his client was a valid and legal labor organization created in compliance with Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and that in its organization and maintenance there was no violation of Section 8 of said Act, and that it had a valid and subsisting contract with the Donnelly Companies with relation to hours, wages, and all conditions of employment. That 100% of the employees of said Donnelly Companies were (and are) members of said union and through their representatives parties to said contract, and that said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union would stand firmly upon its rights and resist any attempt on the part of the employers, the National Labor Relations Board or the ILGWU to displace it as the proper bargaining agent for the employees of said companies, and that it would submit to no cancellation or abrogation of its contract. That said contract was a valuable contract and was a better contract than was held by any employees of similar companies in Kansas City.

The representatives of the National Labor Relations Board stated in substance that charges had been filed with the Board. The full nature and extent of the charges was not disclosed but it was stated that unless a settlement was made between the ILGWU and the Donnelly Garment Companies, the Board would charge that the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was an illegal organization; that it was organized by or was dominated by the employers, and (2) that certain employees were discharged because of affiliation with the ILGWU and that the Donnelly Garment Company had refused to reinstate them on account of said affiliations and that back pay to these employees might or would be assessed. This was said notwithstanding the fact that the companies had never been given an opportunity to produce evidence to show Mr. Broderick that the charges were unfounded and thus avoid the necessity of a formal hearing and trial, and this right to produce evidence, the companies insisted, ought in justice to be given to them. As we understood Mr. Broderick, he stood firmly on the position that unless we acceded to Mr. Langsdale's position and disestablished the union, charges would be filed as aforesaid.

The above, we believe, is a fair statement of the substance of the negotiations. Mr. Broderick requested that the parties to the conference put in writing their positions with a view to the future meeting to discuss the positions taken.

[fol. 5899] The position of the Donnelly Companies is:

1. That the companies have not interfered with, restrained or coerced any employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act.

2. That the companies have not dominated or interfered with the formation or administration of any labor organization and particularly the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or contributed financial or other support to it or any other labor organization.

3. That the Donnelly Companies are not guilty of discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization.

4. That all of the companies' employees notified the companies in writing that they would not join the International or be represented by it for the purpose of collective bargaining. That all said employees formed, organized and are maintaining, a union known as Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and have unanimously chosen their representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining.

5. That the companies know of no fact or facts that would justify it in refusing to recognize for the purpose of collective bargaining the representatives of all its employees.

6. That the companies would be guilty of violation of subsection 5 of Section 8 of the National Labor Relations Act in the event it refused to bargain collectively with the said representatives so chosen.

7. That the representatives of the Labor Board and the representative of the International have stated that the International does not have a majority of employees in the Donnelly plant and it is not even contended that they have any substantial minority.

8. That the companies, after their employees have chosen their exclusive bargaining representatives, are forbidden by Section 9 (a) of the National Labor Relations Act to [fol. 5900] bargain collectively with any one else.

9. In compliance with the law, the companies entered into a valid and binding contract with the representatives chosen by their employees covering all terms and conditions of employment and representation for the purpose of collective bargaining which said contract cannot be abrogated without the full consent of the said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. The [the] companies cannot disestablish the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union without violating Section 7, sub-sections 1, 2 and 5 of Section 8, and Section 9. (a) of the National Labor Relations Act.

10. That any settlement providing that the companies would refuse to permit their employees to organize a plant labor union of their own choice or provide that the company would not deal with or contract with any plant labor union organized by a majority of their employees would be violative of the law.

11. That any attempt on the part of the companies to compel or induce any of its employees to join the International would likewise be violative of the law.

Unless the International recedes from its position as expressed by Mr. Langsdale it would [see] to be very difficult, if not impossible, to come to any understanding and agreement which will embrace a settlement of the existing controversies. Nevertheless, we stand ready to further negotiate and if possible to arrive at some common ground which will bring about a peaceful adjustment within the law of all existing controversies.

We stand ready:

First, to place placards on bulletin boards in the factory stating the substance of Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act, and

Second, to arbitrate the matter of placing on a preferred list for reemployment the ten girls who claim to be entitled to reinstatement, provided:

(a) A final decree be entered in the case of Donnelly Garment Company, et al v. ' .ternational Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, et al, No. 2924, now pending in the United [fol. 5901] States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District, in substantially the form hereto attached; and that appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law in support thereof be filed as the basis for such decree. (Inasmuch as any final decree necessarily must dispose of all the parties to the suit and of all of the issues raised by all the pleadings filed therein, we have requested Mr. Tyler, representing the Interveners, to collaborate with us in drafting the attached form of decree, and he has done so.)

(b) That the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Kansas City Joint Board, withdraw all charges pending before the National Labor Relations Board, and treat the same as finally settled and disposed of.

We think it is regrettable that we are in substance and effect told that we must violate the National Labor Relations Act and deny to our employees the rights secured to them under said law or we will be put to the expense and trouble of a trial before the Labor Board on charges which we feel are absolutely without merit and totally groundless.

Very truly yours,

JAMES A. REED,
WILLIAM. S. HOGSETT,
ROBERT J. INGRAHAM.

Grand Avenue Temple,
City.

Dear Bill:-

We have received a copy of Final Decree which you propose shall be entered as a settlement of the controversies and labor dispute now existing between the Donnelly Garment Company and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Some days ago, I was informed by Mr. Paul Broerick, Regional Director of this district for the National Labor Relations Board, that Senator Reed desired a conference with reference to the charges filed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union before the National Labor Relations Board against the Donnelly Garment Company. That conference was had. At the conference, Senator Reed suggested that if the Labor Board matter should be settled, the injunction suit which it has been judicially determined involves a labor dispute, should be settled also. I informed Senator Reed that I had no authority to represent the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in the settlement of the labor dispute, but that I would be glad to carry any of his ideas back to the proper officials of that union. I find that the officials of the Union are genuinely anxious to make every reasonable effort to settle all controversies and labor disputes now existing between the Union and the Donnelly Garment Company. Your proposed "Final Decree" which you offer as such settlement, is so unreasonable as to lead us to believe that those whom you represent do not have any such genuine desire.

Senator Reed was informed at that conference that any settlement agreement would have to contain an article to the effect that the Donnelly Garment Worker's Company [fol. 5903] and the International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union, that end can be accomplished upon the following basis:

1. The Donnelly Garment Company must consent that a decree be entered in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit disestablishing the Donnelly Garment Worker's Union as an agency for collective bargaining and the representation of its workers.

2. Those employees, members of the International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union who were discharged and discriminated against because of their activities in behalf of that union, must be offered reinstatement with back pay.

3. The case of Donnelly Garment Company, et al, against International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union, et al, No. 2924, now pending in the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, must be dismissed at plaintiff's cost.

If the above three articles are agreed to by the Donnelly Garment Company, the International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union agrees:

First: To cease all activities of every kind and character which tend to keep anyone from purchasing any of the products of the Donnelly Garment Company, so long as the Donnelly Garment Company does not recognize any plant union as the bargaining representative of its employees.

Second: The International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union will agree that it will continue its efforts to organize the workers of the Donnelly Garment Company by peaceful and lawful methods.

If you cannot agree to the above proposition, the International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union proposes to submit all controversies and disputes now existing to arbitration.

Very truly yours,

CLIF LANGSDALE,
JEROME WALSH.

"Mr. Clif Langsdale,
Mr. Jerome Walsh,
Attorneys for International Ladies'
Garment Workers' Union,
Kansas City, Missouri.

Gentlemen:

Answering your letter of February 4th, we desire to advise you distinctly that our clients have at all times reaffirmed, and do now reaffirm, the position taken by them in their amended bill of complaint in the pending suit—that for all the reasons there alleged any effort to settle the alleged dispute with your clients by negotiations, mediation or arbitration is not required.

In order to correct some of the misstatements contained in your letter, we call attention to the following facts:

A conference was held on January 20th between representatives of the Donnelly Companies, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, the International Union, and the Labor Board, in the hope that in such a conference we might convince your clients and the Labor Board of the justice of our position and thereby bring about peace. Mr. Langsdale, at the conference, stated that he was authorized to appear for and represent the International and the Kansas City joint Board. The respective parties presented their various contentions, as stated in our letter of February 4th.

After a long discussion Mr. Broderick suggested that the meeting be adjourned, and that the parties should put in writing their various contentions and proposals, and that at the adjourned meeting these writings should be simultaneously interchanged, to the end that, the points of difference being thus outlined, they could be further discussed at the adjourned meeting.

After the meeting of January 20th was adjourned, Mr. Walsh, one of the attorneys for the International, had [fol. 5905] several talks with Mr. Ingraham relative to the various matters in controversy.

One of the matters which had been discussed in the conference was as to the form of the decree embodying a permanent injunction to be entered in the suit now pending in the District Court. Mr. Walsh stated that the discussion would be expedited if we would submit a draft of decree which the Companies would accept. He further stated that he would be out of town for several days, and upon his return would communicate with Mr. Ingraham.

Prior to Mr. Walsh's return Mr. Broderick arranged that the adjourned conference should be held February 4th.

On February 3rd Mr. Walsh advised Mr. Ingraham that Mr. Umhey, Vice President of the International, was here and requested a copy of the proposed decree for their consideration. We were also informed that Mr. Perlstein was here.

Mr. Ingraham informed Mr. Walsh that the draft of decree was not in final form, and that as Mr. Broderick had arranged a conference for the next day, February 4th, the draft of the decree would be at that time delivered.

On the morning of February 4th and prior to the hour arranged for the adjourned meeting, Mr. Langsdale requested Mr. Hogsett to furnish the form of decree as soon as possible. And, accordingly, the form was delivered to Mr. Langsdale and Mr. Walsh some hours before the adjourned meeting was to be held.

At the adjourned meeting we presented the form of decree and accompanied it with a letter setting forth our contentions and proposals in accordance with the previous arrangement. We were fully prepared and intended to continue the discussions and to see if possibly an agreement could be arrived at.

At the meeting, which lasted only a few minutes, Mr. Langsdale and Mr. Walsh delivered to us their letter of February 4th and, without waiting to discuss it or to discuss any of the proposals which we had submitted and were prepared to discuss, withdrew, Mr. Langsdale remarking that "he did not propose to waste further time". Having deliberately broken off these negotiations, you suggest arbitration.

[fol. 5906] "It is our clients' position that they have made every reasonable effort to settle the controversy with your clients by negotiation, that such effort failed solely through your clients' fault, and that our clients are not required by any law or by any rule of fair dealing to also attempt to settle the controversy by arbitration.

The pending injunction suit embodies practically all the facts in controversy and is ready for trial. In this trial you can obtain every right which could be granted you in an arbitration, except possibly an order for reinstatement with back pay of certain employees in the event the court should find that your charge that they were wrongfully discharged is true; and as to these matters or any other matter which could not be covered by the decree of the Court, and which we have the power to arbitrate. We will stipulate that the judge as arbitrator shall have jurisdiction to determine such matters and to enter a decree of the Court covering the same. Moreover, we are ready to go forward in such manner at once. In other words, we will agree that as to all matters of controversy which are not strictly within the jurisdiction of the Court in the pending suit the Judge shall sit as an arbitrator and shall have jurisdiction as an arbitrator over all questions which could properly be submitted to a board of arbitration and that his decision as an arbitrator shall be embodied in a decree with the right of appeal reserved to each party. Such a procedure would give the parties the benefits of the right of subpoena, inspection, and other remedies which are essential in a hearing of these matters.

Of course, we cannot commit the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as to whether they are willing to submit the question of the validity of their union or the validity of their contract with our clients, but our clients can and do agree to submit the same in so far as they may be authorized by law to submit it to arbitration.

If your proposal to arbitrate is made for the purpose of obtaining further delay in a hearing of the pending suit, we will say now that we will oppose the same. Any postponement is unfair and grossly injurious to our clients, when your clients continue their attacks. Your clients have been persistently violating the restraining order, [fol. 5907] and the means to which they might resort if the restraining order were annulled may be easily imagined.

We are willing to continue the negotiations or to discuss with you the matter of an arbitration if a conference can be arranged tomorrow or at a very early date.

Yours very truly,

"Messrs. Reed and Ingraham,
Mr. William S. Hogsett,
Attorneys for the Donnelly Garment Company,

Gentlemen:—

We have your letter of February 17th, which we assume you mean to be in reply to our letter of February 4th, in which we offered to arbitrate all of the differences existing between the Donnelly Garment Company and the International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union.

Your letter is in the same spirit that your client's attitude to the International has always been.

Your letter is so full of factual inaccuracies that it seems to us that if we ever meet again, we should have a stenographer present.

For instance, you state that Mr. Walsh on February 3rd advised Mr. Ingraham that Mr. Umhey vice-president of the International Ladies Garment Worker's Union was in Kansas City, and requested a copy of your proposed decree. Mr. Umhey was no closer to Kansas City than Eighth Avenue in New York.

Again you state that Mr. Langsdale, at a meeting at Senator Reed's home on January 20th, stated that he was authorized to appear for and represent the International and the Kansas City Joint Board, when, as a matter of fact, Mr. Langsdale went to that meeting solely for the purpose of discussing the Labor Board proceeding, and specifically stated that if any settlement should be made of the injunction suit, he would have to get authority from his clients to negotiate such settlement.

It appears to us that there is only one thing to do in view of your uncompromising attitude and your insistence [fol. 5909] upon conditions that are not even permitted by law, that is proceed to trial with the injunction suit in the Federal Court, and with the charge against the Donnelly Garment Company of fostering an unlawful company union and discharging members of the International Ladies' Garment Worker's Union because of their activities in behalf of said Union before the Labor Board.

We are, however, still ready to submit the entire controversy to arbitration.

Very truly yours,

CLIF LANGSDALE."

Gentlemen:

This is to advise that we still stand ready to follow the suggestion of Judge Miller to attempt to settle the labor dispute and other matters involved in the pending litigation.

You will recall that on the afternoon of March 21st, 1939, shortly after Judge Miller made his suggestion, Mr. Frank P. Walsh telephoned Mr. Hogsett advising of our willingness to meet, discuss and, if possible, adjust and settle all of the disputes and differences between the parties. Aside from the announcement made by Mr. Hogsett in open court on the following morning, we have had no word from you. We would be glad to hear from you on the subject.

Should efforts at negotiation or settlement be unavailing, we again offer to submit the matters to arbitration.

[fol. 5911] "Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 120 A M F

"April 3, 1939

"Messrs. Frank P. Walsh and
Jerome Walsh, representing International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Kansas
City Joint Board, et al.,
Kansas City, Missouri.

Dear Sirs:

Before the trial of this case there were negotiations between the parties looking to a settlement. These negotiations were broken off by your clients or their representatives. As a final word in those negotiations, we offered to arbitrate all differences which are at issue in this case as we more fully set forth in Paragraph 2 of our proposition. Your proposition now comes after the plaintiffs have practically introduced their entire case and after they have gone to great expense in carrying forward this trial and in bringing witnesses from long distances. However, we have this to say regarding your proposition of April 1, 1939:

1. There are three parties to this present controversy;

(1) the employers, whom we represent;

(2) the employees, represented by Mr. Tyler; and

(3) the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Kansas City Joint Board, and numerous defendants, represented by yourselves.

Your proposition entirely ignores the employees, and it must be manifest that no agreement can be made which will be of validity or force unless the employees are a party thereto, and their rights have been considered and determined. Clearly this is true for the following, among other, reasons:

[fol. 5912] (a) The workers in the plant, prior to the beginning of the present suit, unanimously served notice upon the employers that they were satisfied with their wages and working conditions and in substance stated that they repudiated interference by any outside union.

(b) The law gives to the workers in the Donnelly plant the right to organize and they have voluntarily organized the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for their bargaining representative, all of the employees being members thereof. Said union has entered into a contract with the employers covering all terms and conditions of employment, including representation. The contract is being observed by both parties.

The employers are without legal right and have no desire to breach that contract or to make any agreement which would ignore the terms thereof. Indeed, if they were to do so they would subject themselves to the heavy penalties prescribed by law.

2. Under your proposal, for a period of three years the right of the employers and the employees to deal freely under the terms of the contract referred to would be destroyed.

3. You make no proposition to repudiate, contradict or retract the false statements and charges made and broadcast throughout the country by your clients, and which have caused incalculable damage to the companies and their business.

4. You fail to propose that an injunction shall be issued in the cause now pending to protect the companies against the perpetration or continuance of any of the wrongful acts set forth in our amended bill of complaint. On the other hand, you now propose a new tribunal to hear the issues in the cause now pending after we have presented to the Court approximately our entire case and have produced at great effort and expense witnesses in open court who reside at far distances from Kansas City. Manifestly to require a [fol. 5913] new trial before a different tribunal would be unfair and costly to plaintiffs and the decision of the tribunal suggested could not give the plaintiffs the protection of an injunction of the Federal Court.

5. You fail to make any provision or proposition to compensate the companies for the heavy damages you have already occasioned for the perpetration of which your clients are liable.

For these reasons, we are unable to accept the proposal which you have made. However, in a sincere effort to settle the controversy between us, we submit to you the following counter proposal:

1. That a final decree be entered in the pending suit in substantially the form submitted to you with our letter of February 4, 1939; and that appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law in support thereof be filed as the basis for such decree.

2. That as to all matters of controversy between us which are not strictly within the jurisdiction of the court in the pending suit, and as to which we have the power to arbitrate, his Honor, Judge Miller shall sit as an arbitrator and shall have jurisdiction as an arbitrator over all questions which could properly be submitted to a board of arbitration, and that his decision as an arbitrator shall be binding.

3. That all claims by the companies for damages caused by the wrongful acts of your clients up to this date be released.

We hope that this proposal will meet with your favorable consideration and approval. We shall be glad to hear from you further.

Yours very truly,

Attorneys for Donnelly Garment Company, Donnelly Garment Sales Company."

[fol. 5914] (Part of N. R. A.—J. M. C. Exhibit 3.)

In the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri.

Objection is made to the findings of fact, conclusions of law and judgment contained herein for the reason that said findings of fact, conclusions of law and judgment are immaterial and are not binding upon the examiner or the Board.

Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation, and Donnelly Garment Sales Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs,
No. 2924 vs.
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Defendants,

Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Interveners.

Findings of Fact.

The court makes and files in the record of this cause the following findings of fact:

1. Plaintiff Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Missouri, is engaged in the manufacture and sale of ladies' house dresses and wash frocks under the trade name of "Nelly Don." Plaintiff Donnelly Garment Sales Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Missouri, is engaged exclusively in the sale and distribution of ladies' house dresses and wash frocks manufactured by the Donnelly Garment Company under its trade name "Nelly Don." Plaintiffs are and were, during the times complained of, engaged in interstate trade and commerce, bringing raw materials from outside the state of Missouri and manufacturing the same in the state of Missouri, and selling over [fol. 5915] 80 per cent of the finished product outside the state of Missouri.

2. The defendant, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (hereinafter referred to as International), is an unincorporated association composed of members, many of whom reside in the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri; and the individual defendants are officers, members of the Executive Board, members, agents or servants of said International.

3. The interveners are members of the Executive Committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, formed and administered by all of the employees of plaintiffs, exclusive of officers, executives and persons with authority to employ or discharge.

4. On March 2, 1937, about three or four days after the International had publicly announced in the Kansas City press its intention to organize the plant of the Donnelly Garment Company, 1183 of plaintiffs' employees (being all but three of the then employees, excluding those with authority to hire or discharge) in a writing delivered to plaintiffs refused to acknowledge or accept the International as their representative.

5. On March 9, 1937, the International mailed to the Donnelly Garment Company a letter asserting certain alleged "grievances" pertaining to wages, hours and working conditions in the Donnelly Garment Company plant. The statements of fact in said letter, upon which the alleged "grievances" were based, were false and fraudulent statements, known by the writers of the letter to be false when the letter was written; and the purported "griev- [fol. 5916] ances" therein were not stated in good faith, but were stated fraudulently for the purpose of making it ostensibly appear to plaintiffs' customers, the consuming public and the courts that there was some basis for said "grievances", when in fact there was no basis therefor. Said letter did not represent a bona fide attempt by the International to negotiate or adjust a labor dispute, but was merely part of a scheme by the International to organize plaintiffs' employees as members of the International. No bona fide demand concerning "terms and conditions of employment" or concerning "the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment," was being made by any of the defendants upon plaintiffs in said letter, or at the time this suit was filed.

6. Shortly after the Supreme Court of the United States sustained the validity of the National Labor Relations Act, and on April 27, 1937, one hundred per cent of plaintiffs' employees (other than officers, executives and those with authority to hire or discharge) voluntarily formed and became members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and unanimously designated and selected the nine members of the Executive Committee of said union as their sole representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining with plaintiffs in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment and all other conditions of employment, and all matters for their mutual aid and protection. Said empolyees have at all times freely administered and maintained said union. At the time of the formation of said union and at all times since, none of said employees have been or are members of the defendant International.

[fol. 591.7] 7. On May 27, 1937, after negotiations between plaintiffs and the Executive Committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, a written contract was made and entered into between plaintiffs and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, which was supplemented thereafter on June 22, 1937, by a supplemental contract between the same parties, which contracts provided for wages, rates of pay, hours of employment and all other conditions of employment. Said contracts provided that plaintiffs were bound to and did recognize the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the sole bargaining agency on behalf of all of their said employees. Said contracts were and are satisfactory to all parties thereto, and the same have been at all times since and are now recognized by the parties as in full force and effect. By the aforesaid negotiations and contracts all matters of agreement between plaintiffs and their employees concerning terms and conditions of employment, and concerning the association and representation of plaintiffs' employees in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing and seeking to arrange terms and conditions of employment, were fully fixed, established, settled and determined; and at all times since the making of said contracts there has been and is now no controversy or dispute of any kind between plaintiffs and any of their employees concerning any of those matters. At all said times, and up to the time this suit was filed, and ever since, complete harmony has prevailed between plaintiffs and their employees, and all parties to the contracts were and are satisfied therewith. The terms and conditions of said contracts are more favorable to the employees than the terms and conditions contained in any contract between the International and any manufacturer of house dresses [fol. 5918] and wash frocks introduced in evidence in this cause.

8. Plaintiff Donnelly Garment Company is and has been continuously since its incorporation a manufacturer of house dresses and wash frocks (so-called "cotton garments") and is classified in the industry as such, and is not classified as a "ready-to-wear" manufacturer (so-called "silk dress" manufacturer). According to the established custom in the industry the rates of pay of piece work operators in the "ready-to-wear" industry (so-called "silk dress" industry) do not apply to the rates of pay of piece work operators in the "house dress and wash frock" industry (so-called "cotton garments" industry).

9. At all times which are material in this case the wages actually paid by plaintiffs to their employees for various kinds of work were, and are now, in excess of wages paid to similar employees for the same or similar kinds of work by other manufacturers of ladies' garments operating under any of the contracts with the International which are in evidence, whether said manufacturers were engaged in the ready-to-wear industry or in the house dress and wash frock industry.

10. Notwithstanding the entirely harmonious relations between plaintiffs and their employees, the International, its officers, the General Executive Board, and its Southwest Regional Director, Meyer Perlstein, several months prior to the institution of this suit, entered into a combination and conspiracy for the sole and only purpose of compelling plaintiffs' employees to join the International and accept the International as their exclusive bargaining agent for the purposes of collective bargaining.

[fol. 5919] 11. Pursuant to said combination and conspiracy, and in carrying forward the same, the International, its officers, General Executive Board, agents and members have threatened to and have in fact caused to be published and circulated among plaintiffs' customers and the consuming public false statements regarding wages, rates of pay, hours of labor and working conditions in plaintiffs' plant, and have attempted to induce said customers and the consuming public to boycott plaintiffs' goods, and have threatened plaintiffs' customers with a secondary boycott of their places of business and with picketing of the same upon refusal by such customers to discontinue purchasing or selling plaintiffs' merchandise.

12. Pursuant to said combination and conspiracy and in carrying forward the same, the International, its officers, General Executive Board, agents and members have threatened or caused to be threatened the use of physical violence against plaintiffs' employees for the purpose of intimidation of plaintiffs and their employees.

13. The International, its chief officers and General Executive Board, and its Southwest Regional Director, Meyer Perlstein, have authorized, ratified, confirmed or approved the use of assaults, physical violence and threats thereof, and publication of false statements, and the use and threats of a secondary boycott, as means of destroying the business of garment manufacturers, including plaintiffs, unless they recognize the International as the exclusive bargaining agent for their employees, and compel their employees to join the International.

[fol. 5920] 14. The acts and threats of defendants, by this court found to have been established by the evidence, and by this court found to be unlawful, were acts and threats in pursuance of a combination and conspiracy on the part of the International, its chief executive officers, its General Executive Board, its Southwest Regional Director (Meyer Perlstein), its Kansas City Manager (Wave Tobin), and its agents, Jane Palmer, Esther Smith, Grace

Bullard, Mary Jane Miller and others, the object and purpose of which combination and conspiracy was to injure and destroy plaintiffs' business (and thereby to restrain, burden, obstruct, interrupt and destroy plaintiffs' interstate trade and commerce), as a means of coercing plaintiffs to require their employees to join the International and to accept the International as their sole bargaining representative in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment and other conditions of employment.

15. The acts and threats of defendants which are found by this court to have been established by the evidence, and which are by this court declared to be unlawful, will, unless enjoined, materially burden, obstruct, interrupt and destroy plaintiffs' interstate trade and commerce, causing immediate and irreparable loss and damage to each of the plaintiffs far in excess of $3000.00.

16. The defendants' unlawful acts hereinabove described have been threatened and will be committeed unless restrained, and have been committed and will be continued unless restrained; and substantial and irreparable [fol. 5921] injury to plaintiffs' property will follow; and as to each item of relief prayed for and granted, greater injury will be inflicted upon plaintiffs and interveners by the denial of relief than will be inflicted upon defendants by the granting of relief; and plaintiffs and interveners have no adequate remedy at law; and the public officers charged with the duty to protect plaintiffs' property are unable and unwilling to furnish adequate protection.

17. After plaintiffs received from 1183 of their employees on March 2, 1937, the employees' protest against any acknowledgment or dealing with the International as the representative of said employees, and after the aforesaid negotiations and the making of the aforesaid contracts with their employees, and before the time this suit was begun, plaintiffs definitely determined that they could not attempt to compel or influence any of their employees against their will and free choice to become members of or to be represented by the International, and could not negotiate, mediate or arbitrate any demand by defendants for the abrogation of plaintiffs' contracts with their employees, or for the nullification of their employees' rights of self-organization and collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing.

18. At no time after the plaintiffs on March 2, 1937, were notified by their employees of their refusal to accept the defendant union as a bargaining agent, was there anything which the plaintiffs or interveners could reasonably have offered to the defendants by way of compromise or settlement of the dispute which had arisen; and any settlement between plaintiffs or interveners and defendants of any alleged controversy or alleged dispute between plain-
[fol. 5922] tiffs or interveners and defendants, or of any demand by defendants upon plaintiffs, was at all times after March 2, 1937, utterly impossible; and any attempt at such a settlement by plaintiffs, or interveners, either by negotiation or with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or by voluntary arbitration, would have been and was at all said times, entirely and obviously useless and unreasonable.

19. In conferences which occurred on January 20, 1939, February 4, 1939, and April 1, 1939, between duly authorized representatives of the plaintiffs, defendants and interveners, and in the letters which passed between the parties shortly following each of said conferences, plaintiffs and interveners did in fact make every reasonable effort to settle the dispute with defendants by negotiation, and with the aid of available governmental machinery of mediation (that is, through representatives of the National Labor Relations Board) and through voluntary arbitration; and the failure to settle such dispute was not due to any fault or unreasonable attitude or position taken by plaintiffs or interveners.

20. Plaintiffs and interveners have not failed to make every reasonable effort to settle the dispute with defendants either by negotiation or with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or by voluntary arbitration.

21. Due and personal notice of this hearing has been duly given by plaintiffs and interveners (although this court has not directed or required the giving of any such notice) to all known persons against whom relief is sought, and also to the chief of those public officials of the county [fol. 5923] and city within which the unlawful acts have been threatened or committed, charged with the duty to protect plaintiffs' property.

22. There has been clear proof of actual participation in, or actual authorization of, the acts to be enjoined, or ratification of such acts, by the defendants after actual knowledge thereof.

23. Plaintiffs did not at any time discriminate against their employees on account of affiliations with defendant International; and at and long before the time this suit was filed the plaintiffs' employees unanimously were protesting against any interference in their affairs by the International, and the International was not the representative of any of said employees for the purposes of collective bargaining or otherwise.

ANDREW MILLER,
United States District Judge.

[fol. 5924] (Part of N. R. A.—J. M. C. Exhibit 3.)

In the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri.

Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation, and Donnelly Garment Sales Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs,
No. 2924 vs.
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Defendants,

Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Interveners.

Conclusions of Law.

The court now files in the record of this cause the following conclusions of law:

1. This court has jurisdiction of this suit because it is a suit of a civil nature in equity wherein the matter in controversy exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum and value of $3000.00, and which arises under the Anti-trust Laws of the United States (15 U. S. Code, Secs. 1, 26).

2. The fact that on August 8, 1938, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union filed charges against the plaintiff Donnelly Garment Company with the National Labor Relations Board, and that on April 7, 1939, a complaint was filed against said company by said Board, does not in any way affect the jurisdiction of this court in this suit.

[fol. 5925] 3. Section 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act (29 U. S. Code, Sec. 108) is not to be construed so as to require of plaintiffs or intereveners a mere idle ceremony; and the court having found as a fact that any settlement between plaintiffs and defendants or between interveners and defendants of the controversies between them was impossible, and that any attempt at such a settlement, by negotiation, mediation or arbitration, would have been useless, such an attempt was not required of plaintiffs or interveners as a condition precedent to the plaintiffs' or interveners' right to injunctive relief.

4. Section 8 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act (29 U. S. Code, Sec. 108) did not require any effort on plaintiffs' or interveners' part to settle the dispute with defendants where such an effort would have been unreasonable; and the court having found as a fact that any attempt by plaintiffs or interveners to settle the controversy with defendants by negotiation, governmental mediation or arbitration, would have been unreasonable, such an attempt was not required of plaintiffs or interveners as a condition precedent to plaintiffs' or interveners' right to injunctive relief herein.

5. The plaintiffs and interveners have not in any respect failed to comply with any obligation imposed upon them by any law involved in the labor dispute in question. (This suit involves or grows out of a labor dispute.)

6. The publication and circulation by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of false statements of fact regarding plaintiffs' treatment of their employees, for the purpose of injuring plaintiffs' business, was unlawful, and constituted a fraud upon plaintiffs.

[fol. 5926] 7. The International's threat to cause secondary boycotts of plaintiffs' customers and to picket such customers' places of business, unless such customers would cease buying plaintiffs' products, was unlawful.

8. The International's threats to use physical violence and acts of terrorism and intimidation against plaintiffs' employees, as a means of coercing plaintiffs to require their employees to join the International and accept the International as the representative of such employees for purposes of collective bargaining, was unlawful.

9. The wrongful acts and threats of the defendants, found to have been established by the evidence, constitute a restraint upon plaintiffs' interstate trade and commerce, in violation of the Anti-trust laws (15 U. S. Code, Sec. 1).

10. Plaintiffs and interveners respectively have no adequate remedy at law; and are respectively entitled to a permanent injunction against the defendants, their officers, agents, servants, employees, representatives and members, and all persons acting under the authority, direction, or control of defendants, or any of them, permanently enjoining them from any and all acts of fraud or violence or threats thereof complained of in the complaint and petition of intervention; and from conducting, threatening, instigating, or causing or attempting to conduct, threaten or instigate a secondary boycott or picketing of any of plaintiffs' customers, or of any of the places of business of plaintiffs' customers.

ANDREW MILLER,
United States District Judge.

[fol. 5927] (Part of N. R. A.—J. M. C. Exhibit 3.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri.

Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation, and Donnelly Garment Sales Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs,
No. 2924. vs. In Equity.
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Defendants,

Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, et al., Interveners.

Judgment.

Now on this 27th day of April, 1939, again come all of the parties in this suit, by their attorneys of record, and this cause having heretofore come on for trial before the court upon plaintiffs' amended complaint, defendants' answer thereto, interveners' petition of intervention, and defendants' answer thereto; and the court having heard the evidence of the parties in the form of the testimony of witnesses in open court (with opportunity for cross-examination) in support of the allegations of plaintiffs' verified amended complaint and interveners' verified petition of intervention; and now the court, being fully advised in the premises, doth now find that unlawful acts have been threatened and will be committed by defendants unless restrained, and have been committed and will [fol. 5928] be continued by defendants unless restrained; that substantial and irreparable injury to the property of plaintiffs and to the property of interveners will follow; that as to each item of relief prayed for by plaintiffs and interveners respectively, and as to each item of relief granted, said parties respectively, greater injury will be inflicted upon plaintiffs and interveners, respectively, by the denial of relief than will be inflicted upon defendants by the granting of relief; and that plaintiffs and interveners respectively have no adequate remedy at law; and that the public officers charged with the duty to protect the property of plaintiffs and interveners respectively are unable and unwilling to furnish adequate protection; and that due and personal notice of this hearing has been duly given to all known persons against whom relief is sought, and also to the chief of those public officials of the county and city within which the unlawful acts have been threatened or committed, who are charged with the duty to protect the property of plaintiffs and interveners respectively; and that the plaintiffs and interveners respectively have not failed to comply with any obligation imposed by law which is involved in the labor dispute in question, and have not failed to make every reasonable effort to settle such dispute, either by negotiation or with the aid of any available governmental machinery of mediation or voluntary arbitration; and that there has been clear proof of actual participation in, or actual authorization of, the acts hereinafter enjoined, by the defendants, or of ratification of such acts by the defendants after actual knowledge thereof; and that issuance of a permanent injunction as prayed by plaintiffs and interveners respectively and as hereinafter granted, is necessary to prevent immediate and irreparable injury to plaintiffs and interveners, respec-

[fol. 5929] tively, by reason of threatened loss and damage to plaintiffs and interveners and each of them, from violation by defendants of the Anti-Trust Laws of the United States, and from unlawful acts and threatened attempts by defendants to destroy the rights of plaintiffs and interveners respectively;

And as the basis of this decree, the court makes and files in the record of this cause, prior to the issuance of the injunction hereinafter granted, findings of fact and conclusions of law, which constitute the grounds of the court's action herein;

And the court further finds that the injunction hereinafter granted includes only a prohibition of such specific acts as are expressly complained of in plaintiffs' amended bill of complaint and in interveners' intervening petition, respectively, and as are expressly included in said findings of fact made and filed by the court as aforesaid.

Wherefore, It Is Now by the Court Considered, Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, that the defendants International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated association, David Dubinsky, president of said association,

[fol. 5938] Cross Examination of Lillian Rutherford

By Mr. Hogsett:

Q. Mrs. Rutherford, you say you made an application when you first entered the employ of the Donnelly Company in which you gave your entire history?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the way they do down there isn't it,—they employ their people with care, try to get people they know something about, is that right?

A. They did me.

Q. Well, that was routine; it wasn't true only with you was it? It was a blank you filled out wasn't it,—I mean a printed blank?

A. At the time I went to Donnelly's I didn't fill any blank out; they asked me questions.

Q. But in any case they do that with every person that enters the service of that company don't they and have for years? Do you know or not?

A. Well, they did me; I presume they do.

Q. You told them you had worked in a union shop?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell them where?

A. Yes.

Q. You told the truth?

A. Yes.

Q. They hired you nevertheless?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It didn't make any difference, did it? It didn't apparently make any difference to them, did it, that you had worked in a union shop?

A. They hired me.

Q. And when you left in 1934 you went out along with a hundred and sixty or seventy other people who were laid off at that same time, is that right?

A. There were sections closed down when they laid me off.

Q. Your section would be only forty people; I am inquiring about a hundred and sixty or seventy. There were, in fact, that many that were laid off at that same time and you just happened to be in that draw, isn't that true?

A. I was the out of our section that was laid off; I don't know anything about the other sections.

[fol. 5939] Q. Now, you say that you had signed an application to join the union when?

A. In the spring.

Q. Of what year?

A. 1934.

Q. Now you testified on that same subject before the NRA Board—at page 122, Mr. Walsh—did you testify as follows on the question of when you signed your application,—the precise point: "Q. Did you ever sign an application card to become a member of the union? A. Yes, sir. Q. Do you remember when you signed that card? A. In November. Q. You didn't sign the card until you actually joined then? A. No, sir." Did you give those answers.

A. I don't remember.

Q. I will show you the transcript, it may refresh your memory. See that; "did you ever sign an application card to become a member of the union? A. Yes sir. Q. Do you remember when you signed that card? A. In November. Q. You didn't sign the card until you actually joined then? A. No, sir." Do you see that there?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, to prove that you were correct about it I show you your application and ask you if you identify it?

A. Yes, that is my application.

Q. Pardon me, this is your application, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. So you did not sign this application until about four months after you left the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. No.

Q. This is right, isn't it.

A. Right.

Q. Now, you have enumerated a good many grievances that you had there at the Donnelly Company. In spite of that, in spite of all the trouble, all that treatment that you now complain about, as a matter of fact you wanted to go back to work there, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. After you left Donnelly's you got a job at once at Gernes Garment Company?

A. Yes.

Q. And there your guarantee was only $13.00 while at Donnelly's it was $15.00; that is right too, isn't it?

A. Yes.

[fol. 5940] Q. And in spite of the bad treatment you got at Donnelly's, you wanted to go back to work there and so swore at the time of this hearing, didn't you?

The Court: What do you mean by "this hearing"?

Q. This NRA Labor Board hearing where you testified.

A. May I tell you why I wanted to be back.

Q. I just wanted to know if you have an answer, if you did so testify?

A. Yes. May I tell you why I wanted to go back? Because when we got let out at Donnelly's and tried to get another job we had to tell where we had worked and they wouldn't have us.

Q. You just got through saying that you got a job at Gernes'—

A. And when they found out we were Donnelly girls they laid us off.

Q. "Us". Who do you mean by "us"?

A. The girls that were there.

Q. Who was "us"?

A. Thelma Owen.

Q. This lady who testified just a few minutes ago?

A. Yes.

[fol. 5942] (I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit 2.)

The employees of the Donnelly Garment Company hereby associate themselves under the name of the "Nelly Don Loyalty League."

We protest against and will resist all attempts of out side interference with the business of said company, or with our relations to the company as employees.

We recognize the fact that for many years this company has paid wages far in advance of the wages paid in similar factories. That our working conditions are good; that we have had practically continuous employment throughout the year which is almost unknown in this line of industry; that we have had generous and fair treatment from Nelly Don (Mrs. Reed), President of the company, and we repose our confidence in her rather than in professional agitators who are sent here to create discontentment among the employees of the company.

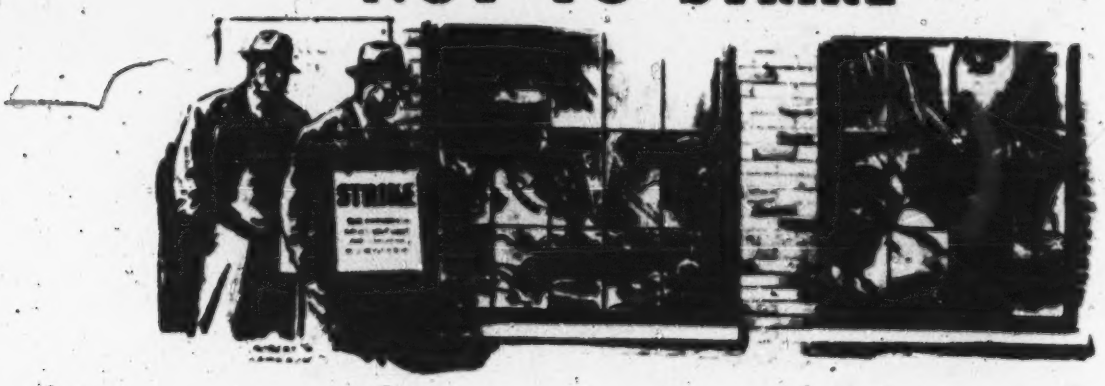
PROTECTION IN THE RIGHT NOT TO STRIKE



IN organization there is strength. Scattered units, no matter how numerous, rarely secure proper consideration.

Labor unions have demanded and have secured the right to strike. In fact there is nothing in the Constitution which prevents one man, or any number of men, from leaving their jobs.

Legislators desiring to cater to the votes of the workers are inclined to favor them at every opportunity. But it is about time for lawmakers everywhere to give some consideration to workers who are not organized. Their constitutional rights should be defended. If workers want to strike, they have that right. But their right not to strike should be considered just as sacred as the right to strike. And their inalienable rights as citizens of this country should be properly respected.

We have heard, for example, of strikes where considerably more than 50 per cent of the workers did not want to go on strike but through intimidation were compelled to join the strikers. To have maintained their right not to strike, to have continued on the job, would probably have meant personal injury more or less serious in character.

The question of wages will always be a source of troublesome and serious debate. Only a certain percentage of the gross receipts of a business can be used for wages. When such a percentage is continuously exceeded, bankruptcy can be the only result and every worker in the establishment automatically loses his job.

There may be excuses for strikes during normal times; but when every business executive is straining to his utmost to maintain his business and pay his bills, a strike at this time only invites disaster to both workers and owners.

Every citizen is supposed to be entitled to police and legal protection essential to maintain his inalienable rights, and whether one is rich or poor should make no difference before the law. If the rights of those who did not want to strike had been properly protected, and if labor agitators—who often earn their living by creating hate and resentment between the workers and employers—had been properly restrained, many costly and violent strikes would never have occurred.

When we see pickets walking up and down in front of a reputable business organization, carrying sandwich boards with derogatory statements in reference to the owners, we often wonder what would happen in a reverse situation. Suppose the proprietors of the business should picket the homes of the strikers, with sandwich boards expressing their criticisms. We all know that such pickets would soon be in the hospital, if they managed to survive. And yet, if the owners are to be granted the same privileges as the workers, they should be allowed to publicize their grievances.

In presenting this viewpoint we are not favoring capital. We are simply asking for a fair deal for workers, union or nonunion, and also a fair deal for owners of business organizations which have been honestly and fairly conducted. Quarrels between capital and labor are not unlike wars between nations in their results.

They often bring disaster to both winners and losers, as was so dramatically exemplified in the World War.

The rigid wage scales which the unions tried to maintain during the depression sent thousands of substantial business organizations into bankruptcy and added millions to the unemployment list. Had the white-collar employees been unionized, and had they tried to maintain similar rigid wage scales, nearly every business would have been bankrupt. It was only the ability properly to reduce wages that saved almost the entire business world from financial ruin.

Witnesseth:

Whereas, the parties hereto desire to establish a standard of conditions under which the workers employed by the said Employer, shall be employed during the term of this Agreement, and

Whereas, the parties hereto desire to cooperate in establishing conditions in the industry which will tend to secure the workers a living wage and fair and reasonable conditions of labor, and to provide methods for the fair and peaceful adjustment of all disputes which may arise between them so as to secure uninterrupted operation and general stabilization of the industry, to the honor and dignity of all parties concerned, as well as to the general welfare of the community at large, and

Whereas, both parties recognize that it is due to the consuming public whose patronage supports the industry as well as to the existence of the industry in Kansas City and all activities, decisions and arrangements growing out of this Agreement shall be based on the principles of true efficiency and the necessity for the lowest unit cost of production possible under the wage scales determined by this Agreement.

Now, Therefore, in consideration of the mutual promises and obligations assumed, the parties hereto agree as follows:

1. All the workers who are now on strike and who were in the employ of the Employer on the 17th day of March, 1937, shall be reinstated by the Employer within two (2) weeks from the signing of this Agreement without discrimination.

1. (a) The term "workers" used herein is understood to mean manufacturing employees; that is, employees who are actually engaged in the making of garments.

The Employer agrees that he will not have in his employ three (3) weeks after the date of the signing of this Agreement any worker who was in its employ on March 17th, 1937, and who is not at said time a member of the Union. In case the Employer is in need of additional workers he shall apply for such workers to the Union. Should the Union be unable to supply the Employer with the required competent workers suitable and acceptable to the Employer, the Employer shall have the right to employ non-union workers and after a trial period of four (4) weeks, no such worker shall remain in the employ of the Employer unless he or she shall have become a member in good standing of the Union.

3. The employer agrees to divide the work of the several departments equally and equitably among all the regular employees in such departments of the shop. No worker shall be discriminated against. 5. (b) The wages for cutters and spreaders shall be not less than the wages received by them at present.

5. (c) The wage scale for Apprentices shall be not less than $7.75 per week for a girl for the first six weeks of her apprenticeship. After that period they shall work on the piece rate basis and be paid in accordance with their production.

6. No workers shall be called in for less than one-half a day's work.

Such committee shall be elected by the workers from their own membership and no person shall be eligible for election to such committee who has not been an employee of the Missouri Garment Company, Incorporated for at least one year next prior to election. The prices so set shall be fair and equitable. This price committee and the Employer shall meet weekly after working hours for the adjustment of all prices.

8. One member of the Shop Committee shall be its chairman, who shall represent the shop committee in all matters of any grievances that may arise in the shop between the Employer and the workers. Any matter of grievance which cannot thus be speedily adjusted shall be considered by the Employer and the Shop Committee as a whole.

The decision of any arbitrator so agreed upon and selected shall be final and binding on all parties.

The cost of such arbitration proceedings shall be borne equally by the Employer and the Union.

Either the Company or an accredited representative of the General Executive Board of the I.L.G.W.U. may call on the arbitrator for the arbitration of disputes, said arbitrator to be selected by the parties hereto on or before July 1, 1937. The cost of arbitration shall be borne equally by the Employer and the Union.

This Contract made and entered into this twenty-third day of February, 1937, by and between the Liberty Frocks Company, Incorporated, a corporation with its principal office located in Kansas City, Missouri, and a branch factory in Lexington, Missouri, hereinafter called the "Employer" and the Joint Board of the Kansas City locals and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, hereinafter called the "Union".

Witnesseth:

For and in consideration of the mutual efforts of the parties hereto to establish and maintain harmonious and satisfactory relations with respect to employment, wages and working conditions in the plants of the Employer, the parties to this contract hereby agree as follows:

1. The Employer agrees to employ none but members in good standing of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. All the employees at present in the employ of the Employer shall in a period of two weeks from the date of signing this agreement become members in good standing of the Union. In case the Employer is in need of additional workers he shall apply for such workers to the Union. Should the Union be unable to supply the Employer with the required workers, the Employer shall have the right to look for them elsewhere and, after a trial period of two weeks if they remain in the employ of the Employer, they shall become members in good standing of the Union.

2. The Employer agrees to divide the work equally and equitably among all the workers in the different departments of the shop. No worker shall be discriminated against and no worker shall be discharged unjustly.

3. The working week shall consist of forty (40) hours per week divided into the first five (5) working days of the week. During busy periods, when over-time work is necessary, such over-time work shall be permitted, but there shall be no abuse of this right of over-time by the Employer.

4. Thirteen Dollars per week shall be the minimum wage for a female worker of average speed and ability.

[fol. 6012] 5. (a) The piece rate for piece workers shall be set at a basis whereby a worker of average speed and ability shall be able to earn not less than $13.00 per week.

5. (b) Workers of sub-normal productivity shall receive the same piece rates the rest of the workers receive and be paid in accordance with their productive ability.

5. (c) The wages for Cutters shall be not less than the wages received by them at present, Girl Spreaders in Cutting Department to receive $1.50 increase above the wages received by them at present.

5. (d) Piece rates for the piece workers in the Lexington, Missouri, factory shall be the same as those set for the piece workers in the Kansas City factory and the workers shall be paid in accordance with their productive ability.

5. (e) The wage scale for Apprentices in the Lexington, Missouri, factory shall be not less than $6.75 per week for a girl for the first six weeks of her apprenticeship. After that period they shall work on the piece rate basis and be paid in accordance with their production.

6. The piece rates for piece workers shall be agreed upon mutually by a committee of not less than three and not more than five, selected by and from the employees of the shop, and the Employer. The prices so set shall be fair and equitable and be based on the productive ability of the average worker. This price committee and the Employer shall meet weekly for the adjustment of all prices.

7. There shall be in the shop of the Employer a Shop Chairman selected by the Union of the workers of the Employer to adjust all grievances that may arise in the shop between the Employer and the workers.

8. There shall be no strikes, stoppages or lockouts during the life of this contract.

9. The Union and the Employer agree to fully cooperate with one another in order to promote greater efficiency and productivity in the shop of the Employer.

[fol. 6013] 10. The Employer agrees that for ninety (90) days from date of this contract all garments produced by the Employer shall bear the Union Label, and that thereafter the use of Union Label shall be optional with the Employer. This Union Label is owned and controlled by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the Employer shall purchase this Label from this Union at a price of $1.00 per thousand Labels. The Label shall be under the control, in the shop of the Employer, of a Label custodian named by the Union. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union obligates itself to widely publicize the garment produced by the Employer bearing the Union Label.

11. Any and all complaints that may arise in the shop of the Employer between the workers and the Employer or between the Union and the Employer shall at the first instance be taken up for adjustment between the Shop Chairman and the Employer. In case no adjustment is reached, the matter in dispute shall be taken up for adjustment between an accredited representative of the Union and a representative of the Employer. In case no agreement is reached, either of the parties, the Employer or the Union, shall have a right to refer the question in dispute to arbitration.

The arbitrator shall be selected jointly by Employer and an accredited representative of the Union within 48 hours from the time either of the parties will notify the other party that such arbitration is to take place.

In case the employer and an accredited representative of the Union fail to agree on an arbitrator within 48 hours, either of the parties, the Union or the Employer, shall have the right to call on the District Representative of the National Labor Relations Board to name the arbitrator.

The decision of such arbitrator shall be final and binding on all parties.

The cost of such arbitration proceedings shall be borne equally by the Employer and the Union.

[fol. 6014] 12. This contract shall be binding upon the parties and their successors in interests for one year from the date of this contract, and the parties represent that they were authorized by their respective boards to enter into this agreement.

In Witness Whereof, the parties hereto have caused the signatures affixed hereto by their respective officers this twenty-third day of February, 1937.

We, the undersigned employes of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company of Kansas City, Missouri, below the rank of officer or any position carrying with it the right to employ or discharge, again reassert under oath that it is our free, voluntary and considered wish and choice to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and not to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any other union. We understand that there is in some quarters a disposition to question the fact that membership in our own union is our own voluntary choice, and therefore for the purpose of establishing that fact to the satisfaction of the Labor Board, the public, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and any and all others who may be interested, we hereby repeat the previous demands for an election and do ourselves specifically request that a fair and secret election of employes be held for the purpose of allowing us to designate our choice of labor unions and representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining, in which every employe shall be entitled to one vote and only one, and such vote shall be absolutely secret, and any other condition which shall be fair and just.

Each signer hereby further states that he or she has either read or had read to him or her the contents of this affidavit; that he or she understands that it is an affidavit and that the decision of whether to sign it or not has been left to affiant without any coercion, persuasion or pressure of any sort, and that affiant at the time of making this statement is a bona fide employe of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

Rulings Of The Trial Examiner

1. In this statement of rulings, the Donnelly Garment Company is referred to as the respondent; Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the intervener; and the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union as the Union.

2. On July 15, 1939, the hearing in the above entitled matter closed for the taking of oral testimony. In the record of June 15 (pages 3098 to 3116), certain exhibit numbers were reserved for the submission of offers of proof, testimony to be offered from the National Recovery Administration case and Judge Miller Federal Injunction case, and other matters. All matters having been submitted and made a part of the record, the undersigned makes the following rulings thereon:

(a) Board Exhibit 28, by stipulation a true and accurate reflection of the facts and figures of all of the respondent's time-workers' pay-roll records to whom it purports to refer for the period April 15, 1937 to July 15, 1937, will be received in evidence. (Board Exhibit 1-uuuu is respondent's objection to Board Exhibit 28).

(b) Board Exhibit 1-tttt is a motion to amend the amended complaint. The motion is denied. (Board Exhibit 1-uuuu is the respondent's objection to the motion to amend the amended complaint). Board Exhibit 30-e, a [fol. 6100]. motion to amend the offer of proof, providing the motion to amend the amended complaint is granted (Board Exhibit 30) by inserting a paragraph, is denied. (Board Exhibit 1-uuuu is the respondent's objection to the motion to amend the offer of proof.)

(c) Stipulation of the parties making no objection to Board's motion to conform the amended complaint to the proof. Motion is granted. The stipulation is hereby made a part of the record and designated as Board Exhibit 1-vvvv.

Trial Examiner

[fol. 6175] (Statement of Exceptions of Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to Trial Examiner's Intermediate Report.)

United States of America

Before the National Labor Relations Board

Seventeenth Region

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Workers' Union, Party to the Contract

Case No. XVII-C-371

Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union (referred to in the intermediate report as the Independent), objects and excepts to the Trial Examiner's intermediate report, to the proceedings, rulings, findings, conclusions, recommendations, and other matters appearing in the record of this cause in the particulars and for the reasons hereinafter stated:

1. To the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against the respondent and intervener, evidenced by:

(a) His denial of intervener's petitions for an investigation and certification of representatives (Board's Ex. 1-MMM, 1-NNN, 1-OOO and 1-XXX), and motion for continuance praying that an election be held by the Labor Board to determine the desires and choice of intervener's members as to employee representation and union affiliation.

(b) His refusal to receive and consider relevant and competent testimony of numerous witnesses offered by intervener concerning numerous matters important to the case of respondent and intervener and particularly showing such witnesses' freedom in the choice of their bargain-
[fol. 6176] ing representatives and union affiliation, and freedom from employer domination in making such choice.

(c) His preconceived and unjustified assumption that witnesses offered by respondent and intervener were subject to domination and in fear of their employers, and that they would give false testimony because of such (assumed) domination and fear.

(d) His complete disregard of the overwhelming testimony offered by respondent and intervener.

(e) His refusal to receive and consider evidence showing a principal cause of the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, namely, the fear and dislike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by respondent's employees, which fear and dislike were engendered by acts and threats of fraud, intimidation and violence done by said International Ladies' Garment Workers Union and operating to terrify and coerce garment workers and their employers in Kansas City.

(f) His numerous findings of facts and drawing of inferences and conclusions unwarranted by and in disregard of the evidence.

(g) His unjustified characterization of witnesses of respondent and intervener as unworthy of belief.

(h) His refusal to consider the testimony received, or to hear or consider the testimony of scores of witnesses offered by respondent and intervener, the effect of which testimony, either that received or that offered and not received, if considered, would have been to compel findings contrary to those of the Examiner, including, among others, the following findings:

(h1) That the petition circulated by three employees on March 2, 1937, was not inspired by or in any way promoted by Respondent nor by the Donnelly Loyalty League.

[fol. 6177] (h2) That the meeting of March 18, 1937, was not a Donnelly Loyalty League meeting nor in any way inspired or promoted by respondent or the Donnelly Loyalty League, but was a voluntary and spontaneous reaction of respondent's employees to the campaign of threats, violence and intimidation then being waged in Kansas City by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, such employees meeting to discuss ways and means of protecting themselves from violence and coercion; that said meeting was not dominated by persons representing the respondent; that the appearance of Mrs. Reed at said meeting was not planned but occurred in response to a request from an operator from the floor of the meeting; that Mrs. Reed did not say anything to proscribe or discourage membership of respondent's employees in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union but on the contrary Mrs. Reed reminded said employees of their freedom of action in union activities and of the respondent's policy of non-interference.

(h3) That three employees did call upon Frank E. Tyler, an attorney of Kansas City, Missouri, on March 27, 1937, and subsequently, for the purpose of discussing protection of respondent's employees from the activities of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; that their discussion with said attorney concerned the possibility of securing an injunction; that said attorney asked for a retainer of $500.00; that a meeting of employees was held on or about March 30, 1937, for the purpose of discussing the raising of money to pay the retainer fee; that the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was not discussed with said attorney until after the date [fol. 6178] (April 12, 1937) of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States sustaining the constitutionality of the Wagner Act; that said meeting was not a meeting of the Donnelly Loyalty League; that said employees in consulting said attorney and calling said meeting were not inspired, controlled or directed in any way by respondent but acted upon their own responsibility spontaneously and through a desire solely to secure legal advice and assistance in order to protect themselves and fellow employees from violence then being employed by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in Kansas City.

(h4) That the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and its subsequent existence was not and has not been coerced, inspired, promoted, induced, financed, aided, abetted, dominated, interfered with or influenced by either the respondent or the Donnelly Loyalty League or anyone acting in their behalf.

2. Intervener objects and excepts to the following rulings, findings, conclusions and recommendations in the intermediate report for the reasons stated:

3. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner contained in the third paragraph on page 3 of said amended overruling the motions of intervener and respondent to dismiss the amended complaint, and to the denial of respondent in motions to dismiss certain paragraphs of the amended complaint.

4. To the finding in paragraph 4 thereof that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union admits to membership all the employees of respondent, for the reason that such finding is without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence.

[fol. 6179] 5. To the finding in paragraph 5 thereof that Rose Todd is a supervisory employee, for the reason that such finding is without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

6. To the finding in paragraph 5 thereof that "other supervisory employees of respondent" (except Mrs. Reeves) attended the meeting referred to, for the reason that such finding is without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

7. To the finding contained in paragraph 8 thereof that the activities of the Donnelly Loyalty League, outside of occasional social affairs, coincided with efforts of the Union to organize respondent's employees, such finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

8. To the findings contained in paragraph 9 thereof that all executives and supervisory employees were members of the Donnelly Loyalty League and that the League remained in nebulous form to be called into use when the occasion required, for the reason that said findings are without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, immaterial, and irrelevant, and are not binding upon either the respondent or intervener if true.

9. To the findings contained in paragraph 10 thereof that Herbert Mutchler and Rose Todd are supervisory employees of the respondent, such findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, said findings being arbitrary, unjust, false and unfounded, springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent and intervener, and not binding upon respondent and intervener.

[fol. 6180] 10. To the findings contained in paragraph 11 thereof that the respondent supported the Loyalty League and that a Loyalty petition was prepared by representatives of the League, and as a part of its plan, such findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

11. To all of the findings contained in paragraphs 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 thereof for the reason that said findings are unjustified, immaterial and irrelevant and have no tendency and are incompetent to prove any charge in the complaint of unfair labor practices by the respondent or illegality affecting the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and could, if true, in no respect bind or affect intervener or respondent.

12. To the findings contained in paragraph 12 thereof for the reason that said findings are unjustified, in disregard of the evidence, immaterial, prejudicial, not binding upon either intervener or respondent, and do not tend to prove the issues charged in the complaint.

13. To the findings contained in paragraph 13 thereof that a committee circulated the loyalty petition, said finding and all other findings in said paragraph being unjustified, in disregard of the evidence, prejudicial, not binding upon intervener or respondent, not tending to prove the issues charged in the complaint and concerning matters ruled by the Trial Examiner to be beyond the scope of the evidence.

14. To the finding contained in paragraph 13 thereof that there is a large number of inconsistencies in the testimony of respondent's witnesses, such finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and springing from the [fol. 6181] bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

15. To the finding in paragraph 14 thereof that the meeting of March 18, 1937, was a Loyalty League Meeting, which finding is wholly unjustified, is contrary to the evidence of all witnesses offered by respondent and intervener and contrary to the proffered evidence (refused or not considered by the Examiner) of scores of witnesses whose names are listed in offers of proof filed by respondent and intervener.

16. Intervener further excepts to the findings contained in paragraph 14 thereof that the meeting of March 18th was a Loyalty League meeting, that it was called by officers of the Loyalty League and the respondent's facilities and the instructors were used to give notice thereof, for the further reason that such purported facts are not shown by the testimony or any reasonable inference therefrom to have been with the knowledge and procurement of the respondent or by its authority, or under its influence, and for said reasons none of said purported facts are binding upon the respondent or upon the intervener and do not tend to prove the charges made in the complaint.

17. To the findings and inferences expressed in paragraph 15 thereof to the effect that the meeting was held on company property, that chairs for the meeting were ordered by the Donnelly Loyalty League, that supervisory employees attended the meeting, that Mrs. Reed had advance notice of the meeting, that Mrs. Reed was prepared for the invitation to speak at the meeting, that the management of respondent called the meeting and used the offices of the Donnelly Loyalty League for such purpose, such findings being unjustified, without foundation in the evidence, contrary to and in disregard of the positive testimony and to the testimony of several hundred witnesses [fol. 6182] proffered by respondent and intervener and refused by the Trial Examiner, such findings evidencing the Trial Examiner's prejudicial belief that all witnesses produced by respondent and intervener committed perjury and all that they offered to produce would commit perjury.

18. To the findings in paragraph 16 thereof to the effect that Mrs. Reed indicated to the employees that she was opposed to outside unions or to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, that Mrs. Reed said she would not permit any union to force her employees to join a labor organization, that the employees should not consider an outside union, that the meeting of March 18th laid the ground-work for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, all of such findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified and contrary to the positive and overwhelming testimony offered by respondent and intervener and to the testimony of several hundred employees whom respondent and intervener offered to produce, whose testimony the Trial Examiner refused to hear, such action and findings being necessarily based upon the belief by the Trial Examiner that all of said witnesses testified falsely or would testify falsely if given the opportunity, such findings further evidencing the Trial Examiner's bias and prejudice.

19. To the findings in paragraph 17 thereof that the witness, Mrs. Greenhaw, was a disinterested party and a witness worthy of belief, that her testimony was given in a straightforward and unhesitating manner, and that the testimony of respondent's witnesses with respect to the calling of the meeting and circumstances varied substantially, such findings being unreasonable, unjustified and contrary to the evidence, particularly to the admissions of the witness, Greenhaw, that she held a grudge against respondent and was secretly, as an employee of respondent, [fol. 6183] attempting to aid the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union while it was engaged in unlawful and fraudulent conduct with the publicly announced purpose of ruining respondent's business.

20. To the findings contained in paragraph 18 thereof that an increase of salaries of Donnelly employees was connected with an activity of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and that meetings of the Donnelly Loyalty League and action of the respondent was always tied with some activity of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, such finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, and not binding upon the intervener.

21. Intervener further excepts to the findings referred to in paragraphs 17 and 18 hereof for the reason that said findings are not binding upon intervener and do not justify the further inference and finding that intervener was organized as a result thereof or that respondent's employees were, by reason thereof, controlled or influenced and deprived of their freedom of action and choice in organizing intervener union.

22. Intervener further excepts to the findings referred to in paragraphs 17 and 18 thereof for the reason that said findings, considering the overwhelming, substantial evidence, demonstrate the inability or unwillingness of the Trial Examiner to consider the evidence judicially and reach conclusions necessitated by the evidence, and establish that intervener was denied due process of law within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

23. To the findings of paragraph 19 thereof that there [fol. 6184] was a substantial amount of conflicting testimony concerning the meeting of March 30, 1937, that Mr. Smith's testimony cannot be accepted, that his recollection of the meeting and the testimony of all of respondent's witnesses was hazy, such findings being unreasonable, unjustified, contrary to and without foundation in the evidence, and to the evidence offered and refused, and arrived at in disregard of the evidence, immaterial and irrelevant, and not binding upon the intervener or respondent, such findings further evidencing the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner and his inability or unwillingness to reach conclusions necessitated by the evidence.

24. To the findings contained in paragraph 20 thereof that the meeting of about March 30, 1937, was never held, that the date of the latter part of March or the first part of April for said meeting was used falsely, that the $500.00 paid to attorneys was paid in behalf of the Donnelly Loyalty League and that the same was paid for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, such findings being unfounded in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to the evidence, in disregard of the evidence, springing from bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, immaterial and irrelevant, and not affecting the legality of intervener nor binding upon the respondent.

25. To the finding contained in paragraph 21 thereof that if it had been planned to collect the funds for an attorneys' retainer on March 30th a loan would have been unnecessary, or if so, Todd would have reported the loan, said finding being on its face purely argumentative, based upon assumptions not justified by the evidence, being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, immaterial and irrelevant [fol. 6185] and not binding upon intervener or respondent.

26. To the findings contained in paragraph 22 thereof that the employment of attorneys and the raising of funds were for the purpose of organizing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and its formation and organization are inseparably tied up with the Donnelly Loyalty League, such findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence, springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, such findings further not binding either intervener or respondent because of the absence of evidence showing their responsibility therefor.

27. To the findings contained in paragraph 23 thereof that the incident of April 23, 1937, involving Sylvia Hull demonstrates respondent's opposition to the organization of a union in its plant, and demonstrates the activity of the Loyalty League, that respondent erroneously (the Trial Examiner implies) attributes the incident to an article in a Kansas City paper, said findings being without foundaton in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, and are irrelevant and immaterial to establish any illegality affecting intervener.

28. To the finding contained in paragraph 23 thereof to the effect that the employees engaged in the Sylvia Hull incident were never disciplined, said finding erroneously assuming that respondent had any right or duty to discipline employees in the premises.

29. To the findings contained in paragraph 24 thereof and the inferences (implied by the Trial Examiner) therefrom that respondent by the acts found interfered with,

[fol. 6186] coerced, discriminated against or restrained its employees in the exercise of rights guaranteed to them by the Wagner Act, or violated the Wagner Act in any respect, and that respondent by the acts found dominated or interfered with, restrained, coerced, supported or otherwise affected with illegality the organization and existence of intervener union, being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

30. To the findings contained in paragraph 25 thereof that Mrs. Allison, the instructor, and Rose Hendricks, her assistant, and Pearl Collins were supervisory employees and had authority and power and were under a duty to control employees in the premises or to reprimand them, such findings being without foundation or justification in the evidence, contrary thereto and in disregard thereof, and erroneously assuming that said employees had any duty or right to discipline in the premises.

31. To the finding contained in paragraph 26 thereof that the demonstrating employees were not disciplined in any way, such finding assuming a right, power and duty on the part of the employer to discipline in the premises, such assumptions being without foundation in law and without foundation in and contrary to the evidence.

32. To the findings contained in paragraph 27 thereof that the Donnelly Loyalty League received support and encouragement from the respondent and its agents that it was active only on occasions when necessary to call the employees' attention to some activity of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and that it laid the proper foundation for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, for the reason that said findings are without foundation in the evidence, unwarranted by [fol. 6187] and in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence, and are not binding upon intervener or respondent.

33. To the finding contained in paragraph 28 thereof that respondent organized and dominated the Donnelly Loyalty League and that such activities had interfered with, coerced and restrained its employees in the exercise of rights granted to them in Section 7 of the Wagner Act, such findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence, and not binding upon the intervener.

34. To the finding contained in paragraph 29 thereof that witness Cameron Herold was unable to distinguish between an employee meeting on March 18th and the organization meeting on April 27th, the said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence.

35. To the finding in paragraph 30 thereof that witness Mrs. Lynn Davis and other employees were unable to distinguish between the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that Mrs. Davis and other employees were of the opinion the employees had consulted attorneys to organize a union and not to secure an injunction, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence, and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

36. To the finding contained in paragraph 31 thereof that Rose Todd testified that she had an interview with Attorney Tyler on April 13, 1937, about an injunction, and to the finding that Tyler was originally employed for the purpose of organizing an independent union, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence.

[fol. 6188] 37. To the findings in paragraph 32 thereof that the testimony of Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton conflict as to why the meeting of April 27, 1937, was called, and that Rose Todd's testimony indicates that the meeting just happened, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, in contradiction of and in disregard of the evidence.

38. To the findings contained in paragraph 33 thereof that Rose Todd is a supervisory employee and as such is the directing influence in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

39. To the findings and inferences contained in paragraph 34 thereof because the said findings and inferences are unjustified by the evidence and pertain to matters that are irrelevant, immaterial and inconsequential, not shown by the evidence to have been done by authority or with the knowledge of respondent, and do not tend to prove any violation of law by respondent or any illegality affecting intervener.

40. To the finding contained in paragraph 35 thereof that Rose Todd is a supervisory employee, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

41. To the findings contained in paragraph 36 thereof that Nellie Stites and other employees were unable to distinguish between the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and that the chairs for the April 27th meeting were ordered by the Donnelly Loyalty League, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

[fol. 6189] 42. To the findings contained in paragraph 37 thereof, for the reason that the same, as stated by the Trial Examiner, do not fairly or with necessary completeness reflect the occurrences at said meeting as disclosed by the evidence, but give an incomplete, biased and prejudicial view thereof.

43. To the findings contained in paragraph 38 thereof that Miss Todd dictated the name of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and to the further fact that the quotations embodied in said findings are selections of portions of the remarks of the persons quoted, other portions being ignored, thus changing the effect of the remarks made by said persons, such findings being unjustified and in disregard of the evidence.

44. To the findings contained in paragraph 39 thereof, with respect to the appointment of the nominating committee, its representation of the employees of the plant, the preparation and adoption of the requirement that officers of the union must have been employed for one year, for the reason that said findings do not fairly and completely reflect the evidence with respect to such matters, are unjustified, in disregard of the evidence and prejudicial.

45. To the findings contained in paragraph 40 thereof, that the employees were unable to distinguish between the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, because they were not familiar with the by-laws, of the method of electing officers of the union, and that one employee testified that the officers were elected at the meeting April 27, 1937, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary thereto and in disregard of the evidence.

46. To the findings contained in paragraph 42 thereof that there was a great deal of conflicting testimony with [fol. 6190] respect to the meeting of May 25, 1937, that Mrs. Greenhaw prepared minutes of this meeting, that the latter part of the meeting was conducted as a Donnelly Loyalty League meeting, that Mrs. Greenhaw's minutes and testimony as to the meeting were correct, that her testimony is credible, that the testimony of respondent's and intervener's witnesses with respect to the meeting are not consistent with the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or with the chronology of events which preceded and following the meeting of May 25, 1937, said findings being without foundation in the credible evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the overwhelming evidence received and that offered and refused by the Trial Examiner.

47. To the findings contained in paragraph 43 thereof that the minutes of the meeting of May 27th as written by Mrs. Greenhaw are correct, and that Marjorie Green testified she changed the minutes of the meeting of April 27th, said findings being without foundation in the credible evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the overwhelming evidence, and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

48. To the findings contained in paragraph 44 thereof that the Donnelly Loyalty League was organized by the executives of respondent acting through supervisory employees, that it was organized in an effort to prevent the unionization of the Donnelly Garment Company by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, that Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton are supervisory employees, that the Donnelly Loyalty League was inseparably tied up in the financing, organization, formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that respondent's executives were responsible for the organization of the Donnelly Loyalty League, that respondent's executives were responsible for the organization of the Donnelly [fol. 6191] Garment Workers' Union, that the respondent organized, formed, sponsored, dominated and supports the Donnelly Loyalty League, that the respondent organized, formed, sponsored, dominated and supports the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, all of said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, and in making said findings the Trial Examiner has deprived intervener of a fair and impartial trial, deprived intervener's members of the rights guaranteed to them by Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act, and of due process of law within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

49. To the findings contained in paragraph 45 thereof that a relationship of supporting, sponsoring and dominating has been exercised by the respondent over the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, and being insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or affect its legality or the legality of its contracts.

50. To the finding contained in paragraph 46 thereof that Martha Gray is a supervisory employee, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and being insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect intervener's legality or the legality of its contracts.

51. To the finding contained in paragraph 47 thereof that all the plant employees were familiar with the fact that executives and supervisory officers were members of the Donnelly Loyalty League, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in [fol. 6192] disregard of the evidence, and being insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect intervener's legality or the legality of its contracts.

52. To the findings contained in paragraph 48 thereof that an instructor is in charge of forty operators, that a second girl in each section is an assistant instructor, that Rose Todd has not been assigned to any particular department since her re-employment, "being directly responsible to Mr. Batty, the plant superintendent", and to the inference intended to be drawn from the quoted finding that Todd is a special or close assistant to the plant supervisor and therefore in a supervisory position, for the reason that said findings and inference intended to be drawn therefrom as to Todd's work and position are based upon incomplete and distorted statements of the evidence, are without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary thereto and in disregard of the evidence, and are insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener or to affect intervener's legality as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

53. To the findings contained in paragraph 49 thereof as to Todd's duties and the inference intended to be drawn therefrom that Todd is a supervisory employee, for the reason that said findings are incomplete, insufficient and distorted statements of the evidence, and are unjustified and in disregard of the evidence and said inference is without foundation in the evidence, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and is insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent or to affect the legality of intervener's existence as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

54. To the findings contained in paragraph 50 thereof and the inference intended to be drawn therefrom that Todd is a supervisory employee for the reason that said [fol. 6193] findings are incomplete, insufficient and distorted statements of the evidence, and are unjustified and in disregard of the evidence, and said inference is without foundation in the evidence, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and is insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent or to affect the legality of intervener's existence as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

55. To the findings contained in paragraph 51 thereof that Rose Todd succeeded to a part of the duties of Mrs. Wherry, an assistant plant superintendent or general instructor, and that Rose Todd is one step above the instructors in their relationship to the plant superintendent, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, the inference therefrom that Rose Todd is a supervisory employee being unjustified, contrary and in disregard of the evidence, and said findings and intended inference being insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect the legality of intervener's existence as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

56. To the findings contained in paragraph 52 thereof that Rose Todd is a supervisory employee, that her dual capacity as a supervisory employee and president of intervener accounts for the fact that she has a desk on the 7th floor, that she transacted union business at her desk during working hours, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and being insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect the legality of intervener's existence as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

57. To the findings contained in paragraph 53 thereof for the reason that said findings are without foundation in [fol. 6194] the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, are irrelevant, immaterial and inconsequential, and are insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect the legality of intervener's existence as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

58. To the findings contained in paragraph 54 thereof that Hobart Atherton is a supervisory employee, that he performs the duties of a supervisor, that he performs the duties of a supervisor in the mechanical department, that he was indefinite about receiving phone calls for repairs, that he transmits instructions to employees of the mechanical department, that his explanation of his work creates an impossible situation, such findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and being insufficient in fact and law to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect the legality of intervener's existence as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

59. To the findings contained in paragraph 55 thereof that Mrs. Nichols and Ted Scoles are supervisory employees, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and being insufficient in fact and law to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect the legality of intervener's existence as a bona fide union or the legality of its contracts.

60. To the findings contained in paragraph 56 thereof that Pauline Hartman is in a position analagous to that of a supervisory employee, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, being a product of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, evidencing clearly the apparent desire of the Trial Examiner to strain the evidence for findings adverse to respondent and intervener, [fol. 6195] said findings and the inferences, if any, intended to be drawn therefrom being unjustified and insufficient in fact and law to bind intervener or respondent or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

61. To the finding contained in paragraph 57 thereof that Jack McConaughey formerly was in charge of the service or mechanical section, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

62. To the finding contained in paragraph 58 thereof that Marvin Price is a supervisory employee, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and such finding beng insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

63. To the findings contained in paragraph 58 thereof that sewing instructors are supervisory employees and that their membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union sufficiently indicates to the machine operators that it is advisable for them also to belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, and such findings being insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

64. To the findings contained in paragraph 60 thereof that Mrs. Reeves testified that "Competent instructors teach the operators the particular operations to be performed by them and constantly supervise the same", that instructors were left off the Loyalty petition until their [fol. 6196] signatures were requested by Mrs. Reed, that the quoted remarks of Hobart Atherton indicated a doubt that the instructors should be admitted to full membership in the union, and to the statement quoted in the testimony of May Fike, for the reason that same are without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, are incompetent and insufficient recitals of the evidence, give a warped and biased view of the evidence, do not support or justify the conclusions and inferences drawn and intended to be drawn therefrom, and such findings, conclusions and inferences are insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

65. To the findings contained in paragraph 61 thereof that the testimony of respondent's and intervener's witnesses show the instructors to be supervisors, and that the instructors' supervisory authority is shown by the fact that when work is slack the instructors decide who shall take a day off and in what order the operators will take off their time, for the reason that said findings are without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and the recitals of the evidence in said paragraph contained, and incomplete and insufficient, give a warped and biased view thereof, do not support or justify the conclusions drawn and intended to be drawn therefrom, and such findings and conclusions are insufficient in fact and law to bind intervenef or respondent or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.'

66. To the evidence referred to in paragraphs 60, 61 and 62 thereof, and the conclusions and inferences intend- [fol. 6197] ed to be drawn therefrom, for the reason that same is not the whole evidence, that said evidence fairly considered, or considered with all the evidence does not support or justify the conclusion and inference that instructors are supervisory employees, that said evidence is insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

67. To the findings, inferences and conclusions contained in and implied in paragraphs 60, 61, 62 and 63 thereof that instructors are supervisors, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and are insufficient in fact and law to bind intervener or respondent, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

68. To the findings, inferences and conclusions contained in paragraph 63 thereof that examiners and inspectors are supervisory employees, said findings, inferences and conclusions being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, being a product of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner, evidencing clearly the apparent desire of the Trial Examiner to strain the evidence for findings adverse to intervener and respondent, said findings, inferences and conclusions that examiners and inspectors are in a position analogous to supervisory employees being insufficient in fact and law to bind intervener or respondent, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

69. To the evidence quoted in paragraphs 64, 65, 66 and 68 of the Trial Examiner's intermediate report, for the reason that same is not the whole evidence, that said evi- [fol. 6198] dence fairly considered, or considered with all the evidence, does not support or justify the conclusion that instructors have been supervisory employees at any time material to the charges made in the complaint, that said evidence is insufficient in fact and law to bind intervener or respondent or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

70. To the finding contained in paragraph 68 thereof that the change in June 1935 was not in accordance with Mrs. Reed's testimony, quoted in said paragraph, of May 1935, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

71. To the findings contained in paragraph 69 thereof that the operator knew nothing of the change in authority of sewing instructors effected in June 1935, and that they looked upon the instructors in the same way at the time of the organization of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as they did prior to June 1935, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

72 To the finding contained in paragraphs 69 and 70 thereof to the effect that the action of sewing instructors in becoming members of the union demonstrates the relationship of the respondent to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, such finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and such finding is insufficient in law and fact to bind intervener or respondent, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and based upon incidents which are trivial, inconsequential and immaterial, not shown to have been done with the knowledge or authority of respondent, and insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

74. To the findings contained in paragraph 72 thereof that the intervener had no office or meeting place except in respondent's plant, and that intervener used respondent's typewriters, desks, ditto machine, safe and bulletin boards, for the reason that said findings are without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, the evidence showing that intervener paid rent for the use of the meeting room and for the further reason that the matters referred to are of a trivial, inconsequential and immaterial nature, not shown to have been done without knowledge or authority of respondent, and are insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

75. To the findings contained in paragraph 73 thereof to the effect that an inseparable relationship existed between the respondent and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that it was conclusive to the employees, that such inseparable relationship is evidenced by the actions of supervisory employees, the leadership of supervisory employees in the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and the use of respondent's [fol. 6200] building, equipment and supplies, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

[fol. 6201] 76. Intervener further excepts to the conclusions and inferences drawn and intended to be drawn, if any, by the Trial Examiner from the fact of the membership of Martha Grey, Herbert Mutchler, Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton, Mrs. Nichols, Pauline Hartman, Ted Scoles, Jack McConaughey, Marvin Price and the instructors, inspectors and examiners and other alleged supervisory employees in the Donnelly Loyalty League or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, the said conclusions and inferences being that by such membership and activities, if any, said persons represent the respondent, or are believed by other employees to represent the respondent and are coercive influences upon other employees and rob such employees of their freedom of action and cause them to support and belong to said organizations. Such conclusions and inferences and others of similar import, if intended to be drawn by the Trial Examiner, are not drawn definitely but are merely hinted at and intervener objects and excepts to the same for the reason that they are wholly without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and are insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful union, or the legality of its contracts.

77. To the finding contained in paragraph 73 thereof that acquiescence of Mrs. Reed and Rose Todd to a closed shop contract constituted a reversal of the positions taken by them at the meeting of March 18, 1937, such finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

78. To the findings contained in paragraph 74 thereof that Rose Todd's testimony as to a meeting of April 28, [fol. 6202] 1937, with Mrs. Reed is indefinite and contradictory and that no careful check was made of the thirteen hundred signatures and cards, the same being unjustified from the evidence, contrary thereto, irrelevant and immaterial and not tending to prove any issue in the case.

79. To the findings contained in paragraph 75 thereof that on April 23rd Rose Todd stated to Fern Sigler: "We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way. The majority is going to rule as always.", and that on May 11th she advised a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that "anybody coming to work for us will join the union immediately. If there is any doubt in their minds about whether or not they want to join our union, then there is some doubt in their minds as to whether or not they want to work here.", said findings being irrelevant and immaterial and not tending to prove any charge in the complaint.

80. To the findings contained in paragraph 76 thereof that the reversal of Mrs. Reed's and Miss Todd's viewpoint on the closed shop "can only be explained by the conclusion that having organized and dominated the Independent the respondent intended to insure its future control of this organization", said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, Section 9(a).

81. To the evidence quoted in paragraphs 77 and 78, and the inferences and conclusions, if any, intended to be drawn therefrom, for the reason that same is not the whole evidence, that by the separation of said evidence from other evidence pertaining to said subjects, same is warped, distorted and unfair, and unjustified meaning given thereto, that said evidence fairly considered, or considered with all the evidence does not support or justify any inference [fol. 6203] that intervener's contracts are illegal, or other inferences intended by the Trial Examiner, and are insufficient in law and fact to affect intervener's existence as a lawful and bona fide labor union, or the legality of its contracts.

82. To the findings contained in paragraph 79 thereof that Mr. Baty's testimony as to the discussion at the meeting of May 27, 1937, is in conflict with the weight of the testimony and should be given no weight, and that his entire testimony is at variance with the facts established by the record, are without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and spring from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

83. To the refusal, as stated in paragraph 80 thereof, of the Trial Examiner to consider the testimony with respect to the provisions of the supplemental agreement, said testimony being competent, relevant and material to establish the genuineness and legality of intervener union as an independent bargaining agency free from coercion, domination or sponsorship by the respondent.

84. To the finding contained in paragraph 80 thereof that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was and is sponsored, dominated and supported by respondent, such finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

85. To the finding contained in paragraph 81 thereof to the effect that the contract entered into between intervener and respondent is void and of no force and effect, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence, and springs from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

[fol. 6204] 86. To the findings contained in paragraph 82 thereof to the effect that a check-off system was instituted without authority from the membership or group chairman, that Rose Todd and Jack McConaughey were unable to satisfactorily explain any plan to check the amount received, said findings being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and springing from the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner.

87. Intervener excepts to the finding in paragraph 84 thereof to the effect that an instructor and assistant instructor were present during the time of the demonstration against Sylvia Hull and to the inference and conclusion intended to be drawn therefrom for the reason that the evidence does not show that said persons or the respondent had any ability, right, duty or authority to prevent said incident, or to reprimand or discipline those responsible therefore, or if such power, duty and authority existed in such instructor and assistant, that their failure to exercise same is insufficient in law and fact to bind respondent or intervener or to prove any charge in the complaint or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful labor union, and the legality of its contracts.

88. To the finding contained in paragraph 87 thereof that Sylvia Hull was excluded from the plant by respondent because of her membership or activities in behalf of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, said finding being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

89. To the finding and conclusion contained in paragraph 88 thereof that the alleged exclusion of Hull from [fol. 6205] respondent's plant was an unfair labor practice, for the reason that said finding is without support in the law and the evidence, contrary to the law and the evidence, unjustified under the law and the evidence, and in disregard of the evidence, and for the reason that said finding and conclusion are insufficient in fact and law to bind respondent or intervener, or to affect intervener's existence as a bona fide and lawful labor union, and the legality of its contracts.

90. To the finding contained in paragraph 89 thereof that Fern Sigler was excluded from the plant of the respondent for the reason that said finding is without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

[fol. 6206] Exceptions to "Conclusions and Recommendations"

91. Intervener further objects and excepts to the following conclusions and recommendations appearing under the subject, "Conclusions and Recommendations", in the Trial Examiner's intermediate report.

92. To the finding and conclusion that respondent has dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, has contributed support to it and that respondent has engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of the National Labor Relations Act, said finding and conclusion being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence.

93. To the finding and conclusion contained in paragraph 2 thereof that respondent discriminated in regard to the tenure of employment of Sylvia Hull, that thereby respondent discouraged membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and that thereby respondent has engaged and is engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of said act, said finding and conclusion being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the law and the evidence.

94. To the findings and conclusions contained in paragraph 3 thereof that respondent has and now is interfering with, restraining and coercing its employees in their exercise of the rights guaranteed by Section 7 of the act, and that respondent has and is engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of the act, said findings and conclusions being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the law and the evidence.

95. Intervener further objects and excepts to the follow- [fol. 6207] ing recommendations contained in the Trial Examiner's intermediate report appearing therein under the subject entitled, "Conclusions and Recommendations".

96. To the recommendation contained in paragraph 1 (a) for the reason that said recommendation assumes that respondent is dominating or interfering with the formation or administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any other labor organization of its employees, and contributing support thereto or to any other labor organization, such assumptions being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the law and the evidence.

97. To the recommendation contained in paragraph 1 (b) for the reason that same assumes that respondent is discouraging membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any other labor organization of its employees by discriminating in regard to their hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of their employment, such assumptions being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary thereto and in disregard of the law and the evidence.

98. To the recommendations contained in paragraph 1 (c):

That respondent cease and desist from recognizing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the representative of its employees for the purpose of dealing with respondent with respect to grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment and conditions of employment, and in paragraph 1 (e):

That respondent cease and desist from giving effect to its contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and to any modification, continuation, supplement, extension, or renewal thereof, and in paragraph 1 (f):

That respondent cease and desist from giving effect to any agreement for the deduction or collection of dues from the wages of its employees in behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 6208] for the reason that all of such recommendations are predicated upon findings of fact and law which are without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary to and in disregard of the evidence and said recommendations deprive intervener of rights guaranteed to it and its members under Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act. Said recommendations further deprive and threaten to deprive intervener's members of their liberty, freedom of association and their property right in their contracts with respondent, all of same being predicated upon a trial in which intervener was denied due process of law within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, by reason of the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner and many errors unfair and prejudicial to the intervener, to which exception is elsewhere taken.

99. To the recommendation contained in paragraph 1 (g) for the reason that same assumes that respondent is engaged in interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the particulars and respects and in the matters set forth in said paragraph, said assumption being without foundation in the evidence, unjustified, contrary thereto and in disregard of the law and the evidence.

100. To the recommendation contained in paragraph 2 (a) thereof that respondent withdraw all recognition from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as representative of its employees for the purpose of dealing with resp ent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment or conditions of work; and completely disestablish all relations with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as such representative, such recommendation being erroneous and prejudicial to intervener for all of the reasons stated in paragraph 98 hereof.

[fol. 6209] 101. To the recommendation contained in paragraph 2 (b) that respondent notify all its employees that they are free to join or assist any labor organization (meaning thereby any organization other than intervener) for the purpose of collective bargaining with the respondent, such recommendation being erroneous and prejudicial as to intervener for all of the reasons stated in paragraph 98 hereof.

102. To the recommendation contained in paragraphs 2 (c) and (d) thereof that respondent post notices to the effect set forth in said paragraph 2 (c), and report as directed in paragraph 2 (d), the said recommendations and requirements in all particulars in said paragraphs 2 (c) and 2 (d) being erroneous and prejudicial to intervener for all of the reasons set forth in paragraph 98 hereof.

103. To the recommendation contained in the next to the last paragraph of said intermediate report on page 41 thereof that the respondent communicate with the National Labor Relations Board its willingness to comply with the recommendations of the Trial Examiner and that the matter be referred to the National Labor Relations Board in the absence of such communication, such recommendation being erroneous and prejudicial to the intervener for all of the reasons set forth in paragraph 98 hereof.

104. Intervener excepts to the intermediate report, the findings, conclusions and recommendations therein contained, for the failure or inability of the Trial Examiner to judicially consider, follow and abide by the plain and overwhelming import of the evidence in all essential matters.

105. To failure of the Board and of the Trial Examiner to investigate, by holding a secret election or otherwise, and the refusal of the Trial Examiner to hear the evidence [fol. 6210] of intervener's members, to determine the true desires of intervener's members as to their choice of representation for collective bargaining and union affiliation and their freedom from employer interference, restraint, coercion and domination in making such choice.

Exceptions to Rulings and Errors Appearing in Transcript of Record

Intervener further objects and excepts to the following rulings and errors of the Trial Examiner:

106. To the ruling (Tr. p. 130) denying intervener's motion (Board's Ex. 1-LLL) to dismiss the complaint, for the reasons in said motion stated, said ruling operating to deprive intervener's members of rights guaranteed to them by the National Labor Relations Act and of due process of law as guaranteed to them by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

107. To the ruling (Tr. p. 130, 194) denying intervener's application for an election and for a continuance (Board's Ex. 1-MMM); to the ruling (Tr. p. 130, 194) denying intervener's petitions for investigation and certification of representatives (Board's Ex. 1-NNN and 1-OOO;) and to the ruling (Tr. P. 130, 194) denying intervener's motion for a continuance (Board's Ex. 1-XXX) to permit an election to be held to determine the free will choice of intervener's members as to their bargaining representatives and union affiliation, said rulings being erroneous for the reasons set forth in said application, petitions and motion for continuance, and for the reasons set forth in the argument of intervener's counsel appearing in the transcript of the record at pages 185 to 194, inclusive, said rulings operating to deprive intervener's members of rights guaranteed to them by Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and of due process of law as guaranteed to them [fol. 6211] by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

108. To the ruling contained in Board's Ex. 1-YYY denying intervener's motion (Board's Ex. 1-WWW) to make the amended complaint (Board's Ex. 1-RRR) more definite and certain in the particulars set forth in paragraphs (1), (2) and (3) of said motion, by reason of which intervener was deprived of due process of law within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

109. To the ruling contained in Board's Ex. 1-YYY, paragraph 7, denying the petition contained in part C. of respondent's answer (Board's Ex. 1-JJJ), for an investigation and certification of representatives pursuant to Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act, said ruling operating to deprive intervener's members of rights guaranteed to them by Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and to deprive them of due process of law guaranteed to them by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

110. Intervener excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner (Tr. p. 273 overruling intervener's objection to the receipt of evidence concerning the Donnelly Loyalty League, said objection and overruling order reading as follows:

"Mr. Tyler: Just a moment, Mr. Examiner. I object to any testimony or questions in regard to the Donnelly Loyalty League, for the reason it is purely a social organization that has no connection whatever with the matters involved in this case or with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Tyler, they allege it is a labor organization, and I presume the only way I could determine that is to get some facts that will enable me to do it. So, I will overrule the objection."

[fol. 6212] 111. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner (Tr. p. 306) receiving Board's Exhibit 2 in evidence over intervener's objection, said objection and ruling reading:

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener desires to object to it on the ground that nothing done or said by the Athletic Association would be binding on the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any of their members; also, that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, at this stage in the proceeding, it is pretty difficult for me to determine what, if anything, has any relevancy. So I will receive it subject to the connection with later testimony. In other words, the first day this hearing starts, I certainly can't tell what relevancy anything has.

(The document heretofore marked as 'Board's Exhibit No. 2' was received in evidence.)

"Mr. Leary: I suggest, Mr. Examiner, it will all be connected up."

112. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner (Tr. p. 321) overruling intervener's objection to questions as to Loyalty League, said objection and ruling reading as follows:

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) What were the matters that were discussed at these Loyalty League meetings?

"Mr. Tyler. Just a minute. Mr. Examiner, I wish to renew my objection to questions as to the Loyalty League, the method by which it did business, where it held meetings, and the way it carried on its affairs, because it has no connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and because it has no bearing on the issues tried in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: He may testify as to what was discussed at any meeting he attended. To that extent I will overrule the objection. As I said this morning, there is an allegation here that it is a labor organization, and I presume the only way we can determine that is to get the evidence."

113. To the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner toward intervener by his remarks and his refusal to consider the evidence of Rose Todd in regard to what occurred at a meeting between the executive committee of intervener and its attorney and Mrs. Reed and the executives of re- [fol. 6213] spondent (Tr. pp. 554-559), the record with respect thereto reading:

"Q. You remember there was a great deal of discussion, do you?

A. I certainly do.

Q. Do you remember any matters that you discussed?

A. Yes, each step of that thing was discussed, Mr. Leary, in detail.

Q. Now will you explain any bargaining that went on between yourself and the company?

Mr. Lane: Now, if the Examiner please, I submit that calls for a conclusion and I think the witness said there was a great deal of discussion pro and con, back and forth, about the terms, and that constitutes a part of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I will agree with you this far: that there is some difference of opinion as to what bargaining is. I think if the witness will tell, the unfortunate part about it, Mr. Lane, is that the witness just can't tell us what the discussion was.

Now, she said there was a lot of discussion. That doesn't mean anything. Now, if she could remember what, as usually is done in these matters, she could tell what she said, what Mrs. Reed said, what the other members said, but she can't remember what anybody said. So I can't accept her statement that there was any discussion, when she can't remember anything, even if it was 2 years ago.

The Witness: Mr. Batten—

Q. (By Mr. Leary) You may state, Miss Witness, any discussion that took place.

A. I did say, or try to say, that each step of this agreement was discussed.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, Miss Todd, there is the point where I would like to ask you a question. Now, that doesn't mean anything unless you can tell in substance, at least, what you said and what Mrs. Reed said, who was another very important party to this transaction, or what the attorneys said. You can't tell us anything about it.

A. Well, I don't know, Mr. Batten. This agreement was primarily drawn up by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with the assistance of our attorneys, and we would naturally have been presenting this to her as it was written.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) I know all that, but, Miss Todd, my point is this: that if I attended the meeting, at which I entered into a contract, and I were to enter the [fol. 6214] organization, even if it were two years ago, a matter of wages and working conditions, I would have some idea about what took place at the meeting. At least, I would remember what I did and what I said. Now, you don't seem to have any recollection of it.

A. Well, I certainly will never forget that meeting. Now, as to going in and telling—I seem to be in this position: that if I say I said such-and-such a thing on that day, then I am to be asked something about this, and if—I couldn't word a thing that I said on that day like that now.

Q. Miss Todd, I am asking you, in substance, what did you say, if anything?

A. That this was what we had prepared, not this particular paper, but a similar paper, and we would want to offer it to her for her consideration.

Q. Well, now, just—

A. (Interrupting) And these are the things that were demanded—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a moment. Are you the one that offered her the paper?

A. I don't think that I did. I think—

Q. (Interrupting) Who did?

A. I think Mr. Tyler did.

Q. Well, are you sure that you didn't?

A. Yes, I am quite certain that Mr. Tyler read this to Mrs. Reed. I know I am right about that.

Q. Now, at any point in this conference, did you say anything at any time?

A. Yes, Mr. Batten. I had a great deal to do with the conversation. It was a general discussion of the people that were there.

Q. Well, now, tell me now some of the things that you said.

A. Well, I just don't know how to tell you any further than that; discussing each point of this contract is what went on, at that meeting. I don't know how to tell you any different.

Q. Did you discuss each point?

A. I don't know that I discussed each one, but I took an active part.

Q. Did you discuss any one of the points that you recall? [fol. 6215] A. I surely did. I think I probably discussed,—I think I probably should say, then, that I particularly discussed with her these piecework guarantees. Now, there were operators there, and they may have said something too. No doubt they did.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, "may"—of course, "may" anything. I don't want what may have happened or what might have happened. If you don't know anything about this meeting, just tell me you don't remember anything about it, and we will let it go.

A. I just told you, Mr. Batten, that I could never forget that meeting the longest day I live.

Mr. Ingraham: Just a moment—

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten, interrupting) Tell me what you remember about it.

A. I don't seem to know how to tell it.

Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I want to except to your remarks. This witness hasn't said she knows nothing about this meeting. She said they discussed every single point.

Trial Examiner Batten: I said as to specific things that transpired at the meeting. Now, when she says she discussed everything, Mr. Ingraham, surely you don't think that means anything from the standpoint of evidence, do you?

Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think when she says they discussed every point, that that is about as far as anybody can go. You mean that she is to tell some conversation?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, but I think that a person who attended one of these bargaining meetings, if that is all she can tell about it, I think she has a very, very faint recollection of what happened, not sufficient to accept in any way, in any form, as evidence of anything.

Mr. Ingraham: I except to your Honor's remarks.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may except, but I am saying that I don't think it amounts to anything.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener wishes to except, also, and calls your Honor's attention to the fact that this meeting occurred more than two years ago, attended by many people, that the results of it were principalized in written form, which is the summary of the witness' memory of what was done; that there is no provision or presumption that she doesn't remember conversations connected with it, any further than that, that her evidence is, you say, worthless.

If the court will recall, she has testified that these demands were submitted as demands of the union.

[fol. 6216] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, my only position about this witness is this: that either she has an extremely poor memory or else she doesn't want to remember some of these things. Now, you may take exceptions to that, because that is clearly, Mr. Tyler, my impression thus far of this witness' testimony, and I think, as the Examiner in this hearing, I have a perfect right to express such an opinion, and instead of expressing it in my report, I express it now so you may take the necessary exceptions to it.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts to the remark.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener excepts.

Mr. Ingraham: As highly prejudicial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is incorrect I think it is, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: I think it is incorrect.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I doubt if anyone present could state what question Mr. Leary last asked, and that occurred less than an hour ago.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I think the record will clearly indicate what everybody's position is, what questions were asked and what the answers are. Of course if it is prejudicial, the record will bear it out."

114. To the error of the Trial Examiner toward intervener and respondent evidenced by his remarks and his refusal to receive testimony concerning rumors and threats of violence toward employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, said evidence being offered to show the effect thereon upon said employees and being competent, relevant and material for that purpose, the evidence and error complained of reading (Tr. pg. 838-839):

Q. What was the purpose of chartering buses?

A. The purpose was to give the employees protection in coming to and from work that apparently was needed.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) You say "apparently". What do you mean by "apparently"?

A. Because of all of these threats and rumors.

Q. Were you ever threatened individually by anybody?

A. Not any one person, Mr. Batten.

Q. Did anybody ever threaten you personally?

A. Not personally, no sir.

[fol. 6217] Q. Then, all you know about it is what you heard, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Miss Todd, you had read in the paper what was going on at the other garment company plants, had you not?

A. The papers were full of it, and I could see what was going on at Twenty-Sixth and Grand as I came to and from work.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not material, and if it is material we want to be permitted to show that when A. A. Ahner hired strikebreakers it was to prevent most of the violence she claims she saw.

Trial Examiner Batten: [Ware] not going to try out the newspaper in this case and have all of those articles brought in, and then have the reporters brought in and prove that it is true or not true. If there were threats and violence, bring the people in here that were threatened, and the people violence was done to, and let them testify.

I will sustain the objection as far as that part of it goes. We are not going to try out all of those matters."

115. To the refusal of the Trial Examiner (Tr. pp. 865-867) to receive and consider evidence of Wage scales provided in contracts of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in similar industries in the Kansas City territory for the purpose of comparison with higher wage scales obtained by intervener in its contract with respondent, the said evidence being material and competent to show that intervener is a bona fide union and its contracts are the result of genuine bargaining, the record with respect thereto reading in part as follows:

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may I state the intervener's position in connection with this matter?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Lane: It has been asserted here by Mr. Langsdale from time to time that he expects to offer evidence to establish that the intervener union is merely a sham union, that it is not in fact and under the law a representative of the employees. Now, in that connection the intervener asserts that the establishment of the results that [fol. 6218] were obtained in the contract which was entered into is an important point to be considered in determining the bona fideness of the intervener union, and in connection with determining the results that were obtained by that contract the prices and the minimum wages guaranteed by other garment concerns, the same industry, in the same community, is a point to be taken into consideration, so that a comparison of those figures will at least tend to show one of the results obtained by this contract.

Whether that result was obtained by collective bargaining or not would have to be determined from some other means. But the comparison of the prices is an important factor to determine the result obtained by this union in the contract, and I submit it is therefore proper, and we will expect to offer evidence to show that the minimum wage guarantee obtained in our contract was substantially in excess of that obtained in other garment industries.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it would be well now to settle this question so that everyone will know, as I have done once or twice already, what my position is.

I want you to be prepared for it, although the evidence is not submitted. I can tell you now, Mr. Lane, I do not propose to go into that matter. The only reason I tell you that is this, that you may be making your preparation and preparing an offer of proof. I want to advise the attorneys now that I am not going to try this case by comparison with other plants in this town or in other towns. It is not material to the issues in this case.

I think the material thing is, as I told Mr. Ingraham, whether there were negotiations, whether there was collective bargaining, and whether it was arrived at freely by a representative of the employees and the management. If so, it wouldn't make any difference what the employees of the Donnelly Company were getting, whether $5 minimum or half as much as any other plant in town. The employees, if they are free to bargain and contract, can contract and bargain for anything they want, so you do not have to compare it, Mr. Lane, with somebody else's plant."

116. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner (Tr. pp. 907-916) refusing to receive and consider evidence of violence, newspaper reports and other reports and rumors of violence at other plants perpetrated by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and reports of threats of impending violence by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union toward interveners' members, and evidence of fraudulent conduct with respect to intervener's members, said evidence being competent and material evidence show-
[fol. 6219] ing a principal motive and producing cause for the organization of intervener union, the record with respect thereto reading in part as follows:

"Q. Had the employees before that time manifested resentment against the action of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. Very definitely.

Q. In what ways?

A. One way was, we had been to talk to Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler previous to that time.

Q. And had been to the police prior to that time?

A. And had been to the police. There had been a meeting of the employees, discussing what they could do in the way of protecting themselves against the actual physical attacks that were being threatened.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, Miss Todd.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Did anybody physically attack you? A. Not personally.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Had you or had you not seen notices in the papers of physical violence at the Gerney plant?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not proving any issue in this case, as to what occurred at the Gerney plant.

Mr. Tyler: I submit what is endeavored to be shown here is whether these people of their own volition desired to form their own labor union, and in so doing they are entitled to give reasons for taking that action. If the actions are probable they are persuasive; if they are not probable they are not persuasive. But they are entitled to give such reasons as they say they had to stay out of the International and join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and if they did understand violence was being exerted by the International, that might well be a reason—whether it was true or not, if they so understood, that might well be a reason for their choice, and they are entitled to show good faith for their choice by citing their reasons.

Mr. Langsdale: That speech might be proper at some other stage of the proceedings.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will forget about speeches. I will sustain the objection. As I said yesterday, I am not going into all of these rumors. If you have any evidence of anyone who was threatened personally, they may come up and testify to it personally and I will receive that [fol. 6220] testimony, but I am not in this hearing going into all of the rumors that fly around during an organization campaign of unions.

Mr. Tyler: It is not the truth of the violence I am establishing. It is merely the reason these people had for staying out of the International and forming their own union.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material for the purpose for which you have offered it.

Mr. Tyler: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Had there been picketing of the Donnelly plant by the International before the incident to which you referred? A. There had been.

Q. On about what date did the International picket the Donnelly Garment plant?

A. That has been done a good many times, as far back as December, 1934, and I think again in the early part—January or February of 1935. And there has been some other picketing since that time with—they had thrown pamphlets and circulars.

Q. Did you see this picketing you speak of yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any of the banners or signs the pickets carried? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what they said on them?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Tyler. I do not intend to receive any of that, either, unless it is something which was unlawful or illegal. If these pickets picketed this plant in the way in which they are permitted to under the law and there was nothing unlawful about it which amounted to actual coercion, I do not intend to go into all of those matters.

Mr. Tyler: I expect to show, if the Court please, that these signs contained untruthful statements, and that that had some effect on the choice these people made."

. . . . . .

At page 911:

"Mr. Tyler: I wish to say, we will show at a later period the acts of violence by the complainant in this case, and the threats that had been applied to these interveners, but I don't make my offer of evidence on that ground.

I submit to Your Honor that in showing what their real choice of labor unions was they have a right to refer [fol. 6221] to any conduct, lawful or unlawful, of the International to show why they didn't want to join it. That is the vital crux. If the International had a habit of wearing red neckties and they didn't like red neckties and they didn't want to join the union for that reason, I submit they have a right to give their reasons for preferring their own union.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I say, I do not propose to go into it with this witness, and if that is your theory on this particular matter you may submit it as an offer of proof.

. . . . . .

At page 913:

"Mr. Tyler: I wish to make an offer of proof.

Intervener offers to prove by this witness that for months before the organization of the Donnelly Garment

Workers' Union the employees had seen numerous accounts of violence by the International against employees of other garment plants in Kansas City and had, many of them, seen such violence with their own eyes, and had, many of them if not all, heard reports of such violence, that they were in a state of almost hysteria from constantly overheard statements that the same tactics were to be applied to the employees at the Donnelly Garment Company, and that this was a reason which affected them in their choice as to forming their own union or joining the International or staying out of all unions.

Mr. Langsdale: May I ask Mr. Tyler a question about that offer?

Trial Examiner Batten: If an attorney makes an offer of proof—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) I want to know how to make my objection to it.

Mr. Tyler, is this offer of proof in connection with your effort to have this witness explain what she said as to the Fern Sigler incident?

Mr. Tyler: Partially.

Mr. Langsdale: Then, I object to it on the ground that it has no bearing whatever on the meaning of this witness' statement at the Sigler hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the balance of your reason?

Mr. Tyler: I submit it does, because she is saying of what she was apprehensive. She is entitled to say the feeling of these employees was such that it would be very uncomfortable for her to join the union, and to say why the feeling of the employees was that way.

She is also entitled to testify along that line for the purpose of showing reasons for the forming of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 6222] Mr. Leary: I object to the offer of proof, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is denied.

117. To the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against intervener manifested by his unreasonable argument with witness Rose Todd, appearing at pages 947-949 of the Transcript of Record with respect thereto, reading:

"A. Well, there were more complaints, I didn't say there were not. There might be more.

I think we have a pretty good contract, and I don't think to just ask for something unreasonable—We do try to ask for the thing that is right and the thing we think we are entitled to, and try to get it.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) But what has that to do with why you didn't get more complaints?

A. I think if we have already established a good setup in our salaries and piecework prices we are not apt to have as many as if we just had a very small guarantee.

Q. In other words, you think that would indicate the majority of the employees are very well satisfied?

A. In most instances—in a great many instances. I don't know whether that is just the word I should use. But, on the whole, we have a good contract. We have higher guarantees than they have around town.

Q. Does that stop anybody from wanting more?

A. It doesn't but it does make us not want to be unreasonable and ask for something we couldn't possibly get. We have already created a condition by our contract whereby we have more than similar industries in Kansas City.

Q. Do you think, on that basis you should forever be satisfied, then, as long as you are one jump ahead of somebody else?

A. I don't think we would forever be satisfied, no, sir.

Q. Then, how much has that to do with it?

A. We have worked out an agreement there that is above the average in Kansas City, and in doing that we are not possibly creating a thing that makes somebody want something more, more, more, that is unreasonable.

Q. Suppose all of the other shops in Kansas City beginning the first of next month reduced their wages 50 per cent, do you think you should agree to reduce yours 25 percent so you do not get too far away from them?

[fol. 6223] A. I don't think we would.

Q. Then, what relationship is there between them? Isn't it a question of what you produce and how your plant operates, and so forth, that should govern what you get?

A. It does. We have always, Mr. Batten, had good wages at the Donnelly Garment Company. We did get some decided increases in our contract—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a moment. I want you to tell me what you mean by "good." How do you determine what is good?

A. I think in a community where—

Q. (Interrupting) Let's forget all about the community. You are putting this entirely on a basis of comparison. Outside of that paint, what point do you mean by "good?"

A. They are away above the average—

Q. (Interrupting) I say, let's forget all about comparisons. On any other basis are they good?

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I submit she cannot give an opinion as to whether the wages are good without in some way comparing them with others.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, she should say so. I am asking her if on any other basis outside of comparison they are good. I am trying to find out if that is the only basis for determing if they are good.

A. No. I think the contract and the salaries the employees receive will speak for themselves, aside from anything else. We know that they are good.

118. The refusal of the Trial Examiner (Tr. p. 981) to receive and consider evidence as to comparative cost of membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union based on the testimony of Velma Dowdy (Respondent's N.R.A. J.M.C. Exhibit 3, at page 566) and the cost of membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, said evidence being competent, relevant and material to show a reason for the preference of intervener's members for the intervening union rather than the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the record showing such refusal at pages 981 to 983:

Q. Miss Todd, did you hear the testimony of Velma [fol. 6224] Dowdy in the injunction suit tried before Judge Miller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had occasion to use the figures she testified that she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union for a period of a year—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting) Just a minute. I object to that as immaterial.

Mr. Tyler: Let me finish my question.

Mr. Langsdale: Then, you have the witness wait until I make my objection.

Mr. Tyler: I will. Please don't answer until Mr. Langsdale makes his objection.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler)—the figures she testified she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union with the figures which the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid to their union, each for a period of one year?

Now, don't answer yet.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issues in this case. It involves a lot of collateral issues which will greatly prolong this hearing, as we should be entitled to show what we do with that money and why we need it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not concerned with what you should be entitled to show. What is your objection to this question? That is the thing I am concerned with.

Mr. Langsdale: I object for the further reason it is incompetent and irrelevant what she heard someone testify to in some other court. We are about to enter into a stipulation, I hope, and then if they want to produce that testimony the Examiner will have an opportunity to rule on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I now rule it absolutely immaterial and irrelevant to this hearing. I do not intend to have a comparison between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Unions. The International Ladies' Garment Workers'

Union is not on trial here, neither is the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. It is the respondent who is here answering to charges of unfair labor practices. That is the thing we are going to try. If you have any further testimony of any kind pertaining to this matter you can present it in the form of an offer of proof, but I do not intend to receive it."

[fol. 6225] 119. To the refusal of the Trial Examiner to receive and consider the evidence referred to in the offers of proof set forth in that portion of the record quoted below, being quoted from pages 1000 to 1004 inclusive of the Transcript, said evidence so offered having to do with the desire and repeated efforts of intervener's members and intervener to obtain and submit to and abide by an election conducted by the Labor Board and by the Trial Examiner and in Federal Court litigation with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to determine the free will desire and choice of intervener's members as to bargaining representatives and labor union affiliation, which said evidence is relevant, material and competent for the purpose offered, and the failure of the Trial Examiner to receive and consider such evidence operated to deprive intervener and its members of rights guaranteed to them by Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and of their liberty, freedom of association and property rights within the meaning of the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ever petition the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election of employees?

A. Yes, Sir.

Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner, and move the answer be stricken. I think if there is any petition they might have filed, it would be the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think that it is immaterial whether they have or haven't, so far as this hearing is concerned. What is the—how is it material to these issues, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: I wish to show that they have at all times been willing to have such an election and have so expressed themselves, and have been confident of their ability to win such an election; that they have petitioned the Board for it, and that the suggestion which has appeared somewhere, I believe—I may be wrong about that—that they didn't petition until very late, has a very sound reason, that [fol. 6226] it doesn't in any way discredit their statement that they can prove their choice by an election.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I don't see it has anything to do with this hearing at all. Any matter connected with the petition or anything with relation to it.

Mr. Tyler: Then, I wish to make an offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may make an offer of proof.

Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by this witness that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has filed two petitions with the National Labor Relations Board for an election of the employees as to bargaining representatives and labor unions, both recently, before the beginning of this hearing; that the reason they did not file any such petition earlier was because they had a contract with their employer and were operating satisfactorily under it through representatives of their own choosing, and they felt that their situation was satisfactory and that if any outsider disputed the claim that they were being represented by representatives of their own choice, it was devolved upon such outsider to ask for such an election to change the status quo. Also, that the union on several occasions authorized their attorney to agree to submit to an election of the employees and abide by the result, and that that was done in the record and the three-judge court hearing and again during the hearing before Judge Miller.

Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union object to the offer for the reason that the matters related in the offer have no bearing whatever upon any of the issues in this proceeding, and for the further reason that if they should have, that this isn't the proper way to make the offer, because the petitions themselves are the best evidence of the contents, and his statement that they have petitioned the Board is a mere legal conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler,—well, no, I don't know as—I thought I wanted to ask you a question, there. Of course,—I think that I will. Of course, you know that any request to the three-judge court or Judge Miller is of no force and effect, don't you?

Mr. Tyler: I don't concede that, your Honor.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, as far as the Wagner Act is concerned, you concede that it is not?

Mr. Tyler: I concede that the Wagner Act does not authorize Judge Miller to hold an election. I concede that.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what I meant.

[fol. 6227] Mr. Tyler: But I would insist very respectfully, but very earnestly, that what we are trying to find out here is what these employees really want of their own free will and this is some evidence of it. Now, it may be they are dominated in that, or somebody ordered them to do that, but I submit that I have a right to show that they are eager to have an election and they are willing to have it, whether it is under the Wagner Act or otherwise, and agree to abide by the results.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Examiner, I might point out that in counsel's offer of proof, he purely demonstrated it would be impossible to have an election or any certification, due to the fact that by his own statement, he shows clearly that there is no question concerning representation which is a prerequisite for any hearing in a representation case. By his own statement, he indicated clearly that there was no question of representation among the employees at the Donnelly Garment Company. There is no contention on the part of any other organization that they represent a majority. The contract exists now, so, independent of this case, his filing the petition would have no standing before the National Labor Relations Board, in my opinion.

Mr. Tyler: Well, does Mr. Foster agree there is no contention by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union that they have a right to represent the employees?

Mr. Foster: I didn't state that. I stated there was no contention on the part of any other organization that they represented a majority.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think Mr. Foster's position is, Mr. Tyler, that as far as this hearing is concerned, or I presume, you are also taking in as far as any petition is filed?

Mr. Foster: That is right.

Trial Examiner Batten: That there is no question of representation, that is, nobody is disputing—

Mr. Tyler (Interrupting): That the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is a proper representative of these employees?

Trial Examiner Batten: (Continuing)—is disputing the matter, so there is no question of representation at the present time; at least, there certainly isn't any such question in this hearing.

Mr. Tyler: Well, do I understand that it is conceded that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and their committee is a proper representative of the employees for bargaining purposes?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, nothing is conceded except there is no question of representation. To have a question of representation, there must be somebody who is disputing a fact, and nobody, as far as I can see, [fol. 6228] is disputing any fact.

Mr. Tyler: Very well; your Honor understands my position."

120. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner (Tr. pp. 1267-1268) receiving in evidence and considering Board's Exhibit 14, being the Loyalty League pledge, and overruling intervener's and respondent's objections thereto, the same being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and not binding upon respondent and intervener, the objections and ruling reading as follows:

"Mr. Lane: I object to Exhibit No. 14 for the reason that it has not been properly identified. There has been no showing as to where it originated, how it originated, or who was responsible for getting it up, and for that reason it could be in no way binding here on anybody.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection, and the further objection that it is immaterial to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is received."

121. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner (Tr. p. 1268 and subsequent) receiving in evidence and considering testimony with reference to the Donnelly Loyalty League and overruling intervener's and respondent's continuing objections thereto, said testimony being immaterial, irrelevant, incompetent and not binding upon intervener and respondent, the evidence received, objections and rulings appearing in the following portions of the transcript:

At page 1268:

Q. Do you know whether or not your instructor was present when those documents came through your section?

A. She was in the section, yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not she said anything at the time?

A. She said we should sign and pass that to the next girls, if I remember right.

[fol. 6229] Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, I move the answer be stricken out as not binding on respondent, what the instructor said.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled. By overruling the objection I am not saying it is binding, but I am overruling the objection.

Mr. Stottle: We further object because it is not identified as to what instructor said that.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may proceed."

* * * * * * * * * *

At page 1269:

"Q. About this time, in February, 1935, or thereabouts, did you have occasion to go to Mrs. Reeves' office with any other girls?

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, intervener objects to this and all similar questions with respect to the formation of the Nelly Don Loyalty League for the reason that it was long prior to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. There is no connection between the two organizations, and this testimony could in no way be binding on the intervener here; and for the further reason it is anterior to the matters inquired about under the complaint here, and for that reason it is immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are not representing the Loyalty League, are you, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: I am representing the intervener, and I make the objection on behalf of the intervener for the reason that what happened then does not in any way bind the intervener and does not prove any of the issues brought by this complaint.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, it is hard for me to tell now whether it does or doesn't. Objection overruled.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent objects to the question for the reason that it relates to matters prior to the passage of the National Labor Relations Act.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Mr. Leary: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. If I remember right, we were called up there to Mrs. Reeves' office, ten at a time.

Q. Who sent you to Mrs. Reeves' office?

A. The instructor.

[fol. 6236] Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, may my objection go to all of these matters?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may have a continuing objection. Mr. Lane, do you wish to have the same?

Mr. Lane: I ask that I have an objection to all of these things.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is, prior to the time you stated in your objection, is that it?

Mr. Lane: Yes."

And continuing thereafter through pages 1271, 1272, 1273, 1274 and ending with the following answer on page 1275:

"Oh, when—during '34 and '35, up until this other organization was formed, they had meetings."

[fol. 6231] 122. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in admitting and considering the testimony of May Fike as to what papers the instructor in her section saw passed around, and overruling the objections of intervener and respondent thereto, said testimony being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and not binding on intervener or respondent, said testimony, objections and rulings complained of reading (Tr. pp. 1288-1289):

"Q. Now, Mrs. Fike, do you know whether or not the instructor can see any papers that pass down the table which the girls read and sign?

A. There is never no papers come into that section that she don't know about it before the girls get them, and—

Mr. Lane: I move to strike the answer as not responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let her finish.

Mr. Lane: I thought she had finished.

Trial Examiner Batten: She was saying something else there.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) What were you saying?

A. She is notified of what comes into that section before the girls get it. Sometimes she personally brings it to us. At that time it was started up at the other end of the machine.

Q. (By Mr. Leary) Can she see—

Mr. Lane: (Interrupting). Just a moment. If the witness has now finished her answer, I move that it be stricken for the reason that it is not responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Mr. Lane: I object to it further for the reason that it calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

123. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in admitting and considering the testimony of May Fike with respect to conversations and actions of Fern Sigler over [fol. 6232] the objections of intervener and respondent, and in overruling the motions of intervener and respondent to strike the same, said testimony being heresay, self-serving, not binding upon intervener or respondent, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, the said testimony, objections, motions and rulings reading (Tr. pp. 1292-1294):

"Q. What, if anything, did Fern Sigler say to you about the union button?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that as heresay.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. She told me that she had on her pin that morning and that she was going to wear it into the shop, and I told her she had better not or she would lose her job.

She said, well, she was going to wear it anyway. And I said, "Well, I will lose mine too." And she said, well, she didn't think I would—I don't remember her exact words, but something to that effect.

She told me to go on up and not stay with her at all, so I went upstairs. Her locker wasn't in the same place mine was. That is the last I talked to her until the evening of the 23d.

Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out—I object to the part of the answer that relates to what Fern Sigler said; and I move that the balance of the answer be stricken out as self serving.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection and the same motion to strike.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled—

Mr. Leary: (Interrupting): Now, I submit this is outside of the scope of the intervener's interest.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. (Continuing)—and the motion to strike is denied.

Mr. Leary: Whose motion to strike is denied?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham's motion to strike.

Mr. Lane: Was there a ruling on my motion?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I said overruled. Mr. Leary, did you start to say something when I interrupted?

[fol. 6233] 124. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in receiving and considering the testimony of May Fike hereinafter quoted, with respect to the Fern Sigler incident, and in overruling intervener's and respondent's motion to strike the same, said testimony being incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial and insufficient to bind intervener or respondent, such testimony, motion and ruling reading (Tr. pp. 1305-1307):

"Q. Now, can you identify any of the individuals that you heard say any of those things, Mrs. Fike?

A. Well, of course they were all hollering. I couldn't describe now which ones did say which.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is all.

Mr. Lane: Intervener renews the motion to strike this testimony for the reason that the persons alleged to have made such remarks have not been identified.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same motion.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

* * * * * *

At Page 1306:

"Q. Have you told the Examiner all of the things that you heard said to Fern Sigler by this crowd of girls?

A. They told her she couldn't belong to the International Union and work in their shop.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection that has been heretofore made.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection heretofore made?

Mr. Lane: To this same line of testimony. I made an objection to the nature of it, and I am renewing it now.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Mr. Lane: In order not to burden the record, may I have a continuing objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as to this incident of April 23rd?

Mr. Lane: Yes sir.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent moves to strike the answer [fol. 6234] out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony, and for the further reason that anything the employees said is not binding on the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied.

Mr. Ingraham: And, Your Honor, may I have a continuing objection to this incident?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, to this incident."

125. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in receiving and considering, and denying intervener's motion to strike the following testimony of May Fike with respect to the instructors and the Fern Sigler demonstration, the said testimony being the conclusion of the witness, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and not sufficient to bind intervener or respondent, the said testimony, motion and ruling reading (Tr. p. 1309):

"Q. Do you know whether or not the instructors made any effort to stop the second or third demonstration?
A. No, sir, they didn't.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike that out as a conclusion. She may state what she observed but not the conclusion that they made no effort.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand as it is."

126. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in receiving and considering, and in denying intervener's and respondent's motions to strike testimony of May Fike with respect to the Fern Sigler incident hereinafter quoted, said testimony being hearsay, the persons making threats not being identified, not shown to have acted with the knowledge or authority of respondent, being insufficient to bind respondent or intervener, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, said testimony, motions and rulings reading (Tr. pp. 1310-1313):

"Q. Did you hear any threats made to Fern Sigler?

A. The last bunch that came in there threatened to throw her out of the window. They said they didn't want her in there, and kept hollering at her to go home, that she couldn't work with them and belong to that union—to our union—the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and kept suggesting they throw her out of the window.

[fol. 6235] Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony, not binding on the respondent; and for the further reason, the witness has not identified a single individual in this third group, and has not identified anyone as making the remarks she has just stated.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will deny it as to the second reason. As to the third reason, the matter of identification, Mr. Leary, I think you should further identify this group.

. . . . . .

Q. (By Mr. Leary) Are you able to name any persons in the third group?

A. Ethel Carpenter was in all of them, and Mary Sprofera—I don't remember the names of all of them. I really knew more than that, but I don't remember the names of all of them. There was—I can't think of her first name, her last name is Hayward—

Q. Do you know where this person named Hayward worked?

A. I believe she either worked on the seventh or eighth floor, I don't remember which.

Q. Was she an operator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you name any other persons who were in any of the groups?

A. I don't believe I remember the names of them.

. . . . . .

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Can you identify any of the people in the third group who said any particular thing, Mrs. Fike?

A. Well, Ether Carpenter and Mary Sprofera told her they didn't want her in there. I am not sure about who said "Throw her out the window." I think that was Mary Sprofera, but I am not sure about it.

Mr. Shepard: I ask that her answer about throwing the girl out the window be stricken out for the reason that she is not sure who said it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied."

127. To the action of the Trial Examiner in receiving and considering any and all testimony of May Fike concerning the Fern Sigler incident, appearing in the transcript from pages 1291 to 1323, inclusive, for the reason that the identity of the participants was not shown; the authority of such persons, operators or instructors, to [fol. 6236] bind respondent or intervener was not shown; no knowledge, duty or power of the respondent to prevent or control the action of the employees in the premises was shown, all of same being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial for the reasons stated in the objections appearing therein and being insufficient in other respects to bind the respondent or intervener, and no inference can be drawn that respondent or anyone in its behalf, or with its knowledge or authority thereby encouraged or discouraged membership in any union, or induced or aided the organization of intervener union.

128. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive testimony offered by intervener with respect to the talk and excitement among the Donnelly employees with respect to the violence and commotion perpetrated by International Ladies' Garment Workers Union and other garment plants in Kansas City, and threats, reports and rumors of similar violence toward the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, all of said evidence being competent, relevant and material to prove its effect upon the Donnelly employees, and the state of mind created among them, and to show the state of mind, fear and hysteria among said employees that was a principal cause for their action in forming their own union, the objections to said evidence and the rulings thereon appearing at pages 1416-1425 (and elsewhere throughout the transcript) in the following language:

"Q. And wasn't it common talk around the Donnelly plant that there was a great deal of commotion out there around those Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial; wouldn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case, and opens up a new avenue for testimony. I think the Examiner has ruled that line out up to now.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: This question I have asked was what she [fol. 6237] heard about the Donnelly plant as to what was going on.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Lane, I would like to have your reaction on this: supposing, for the sake of argument, that there was a lot of this going on. Certainly, the respondent can't be charged with—I mean by that, unless the respondent or one of its agents passed on this information for the purpose of discouraging membership in this union, then it doesn't make any difference how much the employees may have heard.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: The purpose of my making this offer, or asking this question and similar questions, is to refute the charge that has been made here by counsel for the International and Board that this union we represent is a sham union, and my purpose is to show that atmosphere that surrounded the employees at that time, and their reaction; and attitude, as having some bearing upon why they took the action they did take on the part of the union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I will make the same ruling in that I did once before. That is this: if there were any actual threats or actual violence at this plant, that in any way can be chargeable to the respondent, I certainly want to receive it.

Now, I am not going into this organizational campaign that took in the City of Kansas City. Now, I am not going all over that again, and if you want to, you may make as complete an offer of proof on that, and, after all, that may be probably the best way to present the whole problem of this campaign that was going on by the union here in Kansas City, but I can say now that I am not going to receive it in this hearing.

At page 1419:

Trial Examiner Batten: As I remember it. Well, now, I am going to take that position very definitely with respect to the intervener on this entire campaign that went on here in Kansas City, and I think we can just as well determine now that you shall prepare a complete offer of proof on it, because I don't intend to receive it.

Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: May I understand the Examiner's ruling? Do I understand that you decline to permit us to show that the employees of the plant, as one of their reasons for choosing their own union, were affected by both fear of the campaign carried on by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at nearby shops, threats that it should be able to be applied to the Donnelly employees, and dislike of those methods, you decline to let us show those things as establishing one of the reasons why these employees decided to, of their own free will, form their own union? Is that correct?

[fol. 6238] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, not quite that broad. I said that if any threats were made against these Donnelly employees, or any violence there, I even question how material that may be, but I will receive that, but on the other, on your whole idea there that that was one of the reasons for the organization of a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and a valid reason, I want an offer of proof submitted on it.

Mr. Langsdale: I want to understand the Examiner's ruling on this particular matter. I have understood up to now you have permitted both respondent and the intervener to show threats made to any of the employees but not to go into disturbances that may have occurred at Gerney's or Gordon's, or anything of that sort.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. I want to eliminate everything by this offer of proof except direct threats and direct violence. I think I asked Miss Todd on several occasions, "Did anybody threaten you? Did anybody ever commit any violence as far as you were concerned?" I will receive that in this hearing; I don't want that in the form of an offer of proof.

* * * * * *

At page 1424:

Mr. Lane: I want to make this further observation with respect to the question I asked:

I desire to show the attitude or state of mind of the employees, whether that attitude was created by rumor or by ideas of terrorism, which may or may not be true, nevertheless it is the state of mind which I want to show, and to show further that that state of mind actuated to cause them to want to form their own union, and that would go to the bona fideness of their union and would be a good reason for the formation of their union, whether founded upon fact or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, Mr. Lane. And, even if founded upon information which was absolutely false, if it is relevant to these issues—I mean, the truth or falsity of these things is not in issue.

Mr. Lane: That was the purpose of my question, to show that fact.

Trial Examiner Batten: And that matter, of course, will be included in this offer of proof."

[fol. 6239] 129. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner receiving in evidence International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7, over objections of respondent and intervener, being purported ledger sheets of the Kansas City Chair Rental Company, for the reasons stated in the objections, said objections and ruling being as follows (Tr. pp. 1459-1460):

"Mr. Langsdale: We offer Exhibits 4, 5, 6 and 7 in evidence:

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that they are not the best evidence, and that the witness personally didn't make the entries; that there is no showing that any person authorized by the Donnelly Garment Company ordered any particular item on the list; that it is not binding on the respondent and constitutes hearsay, and is wholly immaterial to the issues.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, they are taken from the regular records used and maintained in the business of this witness, and are material for whatever they prove.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten.

Mr. Patten: Intervener objects for the reason that how the Chair Rental Company may have kept the books is a matter wholly beyond the control of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or the respondent, for that matter. There is no showing here, either the respondent or the intervening union directed these accounts to be mixed up and kept on one ledger sheet.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are overruled. They will be received."

130. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in receiving and considering, over the objections of respondent and intervener, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibits 8-A to 8-GG, purporting to be deposit slips of Kansas City Chair Rental Company, same being offered to prove from notations on said slips made by said Chair Company that respondent had paid chair rental bills of intervener, said exhibits being wholly incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, not shown to have been made with knowledge or authority of anyone connected with respond-[fol. 6240] ent and wholly insufficient to bind either respondent or intervener, for the reasons stated in the objections, the objections and ruling reading (Tr. pp. 1478-1480):

"Mr. Langsdale: I offer International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibits Nos. 8-A to 8-GG, inclusive.

Mr. Stottle: The respondent objects to the introduction of these exhibits for all the reasons that we have heretofore urged, including the fact that they are not the best evidence; that there is no showing by this witness—

. . . . . .

Mr. Stottle: Well that is one of the objections, that it is not the best evidence and hasn't any sufficient relation to this to have any probative effect or tend to prove or disprove any of the issues in this case. Furthermore, we object that the items on here were not made by this particular witness, and not shown to have been made by any person that would bind the respondent or the intervener, even bind this company; that it constitutes hearsay testimony and is so mixed up with other records and so mixed up between the parties here, charges to one and payment by another, that it is wholly impossible to be separated.

Trial Examiner Batten: That doesn't indicate that on these slips, does it?

Mr. Stottle: But the testimony taken together with these slips indicates that.

. . . . . .

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we wish to add, also, that it is not made from—it doesn't constitute the original entry made in this company. It is about 3 or 4 degrees off from that. The original records, entries, would be the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no further objection, they will be received.

Mr. Patten: Intervener makes the same objection as the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: They will be received."

131. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner overruling respondent's motion to strike the evidence of witness Milton Slotkin and all exhibits from the records of the Kansas City Chair Rental Company, for the reasons stated in said motion, the motion and ruling reading (Tr. pp. 1483-1485):

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, Respondent now renews its motion to strike out all of the evidence of this witness, including the exhibits introduced while he has been on the [fol. 6241] stand, for the reason that there hasn't been any showing that would make them probative evidence in this case. The items are all lumped together under one account, when the witness has stated that some of them might have been for other accounts. The deposit slips are all lumped together and there is nothing here that would enable the Examiner to give any credence to the statements because they are so mixed up and were kept in such a way that they don't show the true facts, and for the further objection that we have already made, it is not the best evidence, and not the original record entries, and not binding on the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion to strike is denied."

132. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in receiving and considering testimony of witness Greenhaw with respect to Board's Exhibit No. 17, and receiving and considering said Exhibit 17 over the objections of respondent and intervener, the said testimony and objections reading (Tr. pp. 1598-1600):

"Q. I show you what has been marked for identification as Board's exhibit No. 17 and ask you to state briefly what that document is.

A. It was a record of the amount of letters written by the department that day, and who dictated them, and who wrote them. A few were written by the girls themselves; that is, form letters or letters that were of a similar nature; some of the girls, of course, would transpose those themselves."

* * * * * * *

At page 1599:

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent objects to the introduction of Board's exhibit No. 17 for the reason that it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case. And, respondent moves that the witness' testimony be stricken out for the same reason.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection and motion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, what have you to say?

Mr. Leary: I believe there has been testimony regarding the membership of Miss Alexander and Miss Nobles in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Mr. Examiner, and I believe this goes to show these persons were of a supervisory nature. There is no better proof in the world than to have this daily check-off; it is somewhat like an efficiency system the company uses to check up on the work done by even the stenographers in the office daily, all handled by the persons Alexander and Nobles.

[fol. 6242] Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

133. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner receiving and considering in evidence Board's exhibit No. 18, being the purported minutes of witness Greenhaw, over the objections of respondent and intervener, for the reason that id document was not sufficiently identified and no showing was made that the document had been in the custody of the witness before the time of trial, the said objections and ruling reading (Tr. p. 1613):

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to the introduction of Board's exhibit 18 for the reason that it purports to be a copy of some minutes, and the original would be the best evidence.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, they have produced what they say is the original, and these minutes that we have had photostated I told the Examiner we proposed to show they "doctored" those minutes, and now we have what she says is a carbon copy of the minutes she turned over to Marjorie Green, and Marjorie Green produces what she says is the original.

Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to it on the ground that it is not identified.

Mr. Leary: In what particular?

Mr. Lane: It purports to be some copy of an original instrument which is supposed to be in existence.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

134. To the action and rulings of the Trial Examiner in receiving and considering the following testimony of witness Greenhaw over objections of intervener and respondent and in overruling motions of intervener and respondent to strike said testimony, the said testimony, objections and rulings reading (Tr. 1619-1624):

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) During the months of March and April and May, 1937, Mrs. Greenhaw, did you note anything unusual in the conduct of Miss Rose Todd while she was on the tenth floor?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion.

[fol. 6243] Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled."

. . . . . .

At page 1620:

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, now, you can just say "yes" or "no" to that question, whether you did.

A. Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Leary) What was it that you noticed, Mrs. Greenhaw?

Mr. Ingraham: I make the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

A. I noticed that she was more than usually active in contact with the executives of the company.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike the answer out as a mere conclusion of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Ingraham: Same objection. Respondent makes the same objection—the same motion to strike.

Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied.

. . . . . .

At page 1622:

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Did this occasion when you saw the representative group of employees with Miss Todd to the tenth floor occur after the meeting when the Donnelly Garment Workers' was formed—Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

Mr. Patten: Just a moment, please, I don't believe she has testified she saw a group of employees with Miss Todd. The question assumes she has so testified.

Mr. Leary: I submit her testimony was that it was a representative group from the employees all over the plant.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Was Miss Todd with this group?

A. I couldn't testify as to that, but I remember the occasion because it was rather unusual for people from the factory to be brought up on the tenth floor.

[fol. 6244] Q. Now, do you remember about when this was?

—A. I remember, because a meeting took place the same day.

Q. Well, what meeting?

A. I am assuming it was the meeting—

Q. (Interrupting) Well, tell me what occurred at the meeting that you say occurred the same day.

A. There was a committee was announced, who would represent the employees as—I don't remember how they were designated, but they were to be union representatives among the employe[illegible]

Q. (By Mr. Leary) Was it before that meeting, Mrs. Greenhaw, that you saw this group of employees up on the tenth floor?

A. Yes.

Q. In Mrs. Reed's office?

A. Yes.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike it out for the reason that the time is not fixed.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

[fol. 6245] 135. To the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to except the testimony of intervener's members that they were not dominated and that they did form the intervener union of their own free will, and in denying the respondent's motion, based upon said ruling, to dismiss the complaint that intervener is a dominated union, the said action and rulings being necessarily predicated upon the Trial Examiner's belief that each and all of said witnesses would testify falsely, the effect of said action and ruling being to deprive respondent and intervener of the opportunity to introduce competent, relevant and material testimony to disprove the charges made in the complaint and show the true wishes of intervener's members as to bargaining representation and union affiliation, and serving to deprive intervener and respondent of a fair and impartial trial, of the rights guaranteed to intervener's members under Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act, and of their freedom of association and property rights in their contracts with respondent within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, the said action, exceptions thereto, motion and ruling thereon reading (Tr. pp. 1655-1656):

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, do I understand that you are not going to allow witnesses to take the stand and testify that they were not dominated and that they did form this union of their own free will?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is exactly what I mean.

Mr. Ingraham: Of course, respondent excepts to the ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I assume that the intervener will, too.

Mr. Langsdale: You have nothing to except to.

Mr. Lane: Yes, we do. We assume we have an exception.

[fol. 6246] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want to make it very clear at this time to everybody, while I am not attempting to rule on the matter the point, as I said once before, if you want to bring some witnesses up here and offer it, I want you to do it. In other words, I don't want the respondent's attorney, or the intervener's attorney, to fail to do something that you think you should do to protect your record, but I do think I ought to tell you just exactly what my position is.

I am not going to receive it, and—

Mr. Stottle (interrupting): Mr. Examiner, don't you think you should make a ruling now striking out the charge that it is a dominated union, if you are not going to permit us—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Do you want to make that motion?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: It appears to me this is my offer; not yours.

Trial Examiner Batten: I say, does Mr. Stottle want to make that motion now? If so, he may do so.

Mr. Stottle: Well, in view of the Examiner's statement as to his position on the matter, the respondent does move that the charge in the complaint that the union is a dominated union should be dismissed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied.

136. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in overruling the objections of respondent and intervener to the following leading and suggestive questions, and in receiving and considering the answers of the witness Greenhaw thereto, said questions, objections and answers reading (Tr. pp. 1661-1666):

"Q. Now, Mrs. Greenhaw, let me ask you with reference to the meeting of April 27, 1937, which was the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, if you heard Miss Todd say anything at that meeting about the—

Mr. Ingraham (interrupting): I object—

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale, continuing)—officers of the Loyalty League meeting the night before and deciding the only thing to be done was to form this union?

Mr. Ingraham: I move the question be—I object to the question for the reason that it is leading and suggestive and an improper way to examine this witness. He can ask [fol. 6247] the witness what Miss Todd said, but I don't think it is proper for him to read from what purports to be some statement, and then ask if she heard that.

Mr. Langsdale: It seems to me it—

Mr. Patten (interrupting): The intervener makes the same objection.

Mr. Langsdale: The Examiner has many times said the attorney is responsible for the form in which he asks his questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I still say that is true, and, of course, if the attorney wants to ask a question such as this, why, of course, it will have to be weighed. If it has any value, it will receive it, and if it hasn't, of course, it won't.

Mr. Langsdale: I am willing to take that chance.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think under my ruling that is your privilege.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the question, please, Mr. Reporter.

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, the intervener further objects for the reason that that question was asked by counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by reference to some statement which, from his previous statement, was made by this witness in the presence of some stenographer, outside of the presence of anybody representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. The statement itself is hearsay and in no sense binding upon the intervener, and for that reason is an improper document to be used to refresh this witness' memory. The question itself calls for hearsay and cannot be binding on the intervener.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Mr. Langsdale: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. She did make such a statement.

* * * * * *

At page 1665:

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mrs. Greenhaw, referring to the meeting of March 18, you identified that meeting as the one at which the letter from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was read, and at which meeting Mrs. Nelly Don Reed spoke. I will ask you if at that meeting Mrs. Reed stated she would close her shop before she would permit it to be unionized.

Mr. Ingraham: I object to the question for the same rea- [fol. 6248] son that I have objected to the previous question that Mr. Langsdale asked when he was reading from this document that he has in his hand.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

A. Mrs. Reed did state she would close her factory before she would permit it to be unionized.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did Mrs. Reed state at that meeting that she would make plans to protect the employees from the union?

Mr. Ingraham: Same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

A. I don't remember the exact words, but it was definitely stated that the employees would be protected against the union, the union's activities."

137. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in denying the motions of respondent and intervener to strike the testimony hereinafter quoted of witness Greenhaw and in receiving and considering said evidence, the same being not responsive to the questions and stating conclusions not founded upon any fact testified to by the witness, and too vague and indefinite to be binding upon either respondent or intervener, said testimony, objections and motions to strike reading (Tr. pp. 1681-1682):

"Q. Now, who are some of the other department heads that were engaging in coercion?

A. Of course, that is a hard thing to answer.

Q. Well, you are testifying now. Just give the names, please, Mrs. Greenhaw, of these people that were engaging in coercion.

A. Because it was a general feeling—
Q. (interrupting) I am not—just answer—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Just a minute. Let her finish.

Mr. Ingraham: I object to it as not responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Don't stop her. Let her say what she wanted to. We have had witnesses here before and, certainly, no one stopped them yet when they wanted to explain an answer, or talk.

[fol. 6249] Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I don't object if she will answer and then explain.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let her answer. We can't tell, Mr. Ingraham, until she gets through.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) What were you saying?

A. Well, I have worked in a number of other places, you know, and then when I went to work there there was a very different atmosphere and a different attitude among the employees and toward them, and there was a feeling that they were held very closely in line at all times by the officials of the company, and I am sure that for years the company had been building up that sort of a thing.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move the answer be stricken out. It is not responsive.

Mr. Lane: The intervener moves it be stricken out as stating a conclusion, not founded upon any fact testified to by the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) I again ask my question: Will you name the department heads that were engaging in coercion?

A. I am sure that you couldn't have worked there and be a department head if you hadn't."

138. To the action and rulings of the Trial Examiner in overruling the objections and motion to strike of intervener to the following leading and suggestive questions, and in receiving and considering the answers of the witness Greenhaw thereto, said questions being a continuation of the questions excepted to in intervener's exception No. 136, the attorney for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union putting the answers squarely in the witness' mouth, and concerning facts as to which the witness' previous testimony showed that her memory could not have been refreshed, said questions, objections, answers, motion and ruling reading (Tr. pp. 1712-1714):

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mrs. Greenhaw, Mr. Ingraham asked you before the recess about your testimony that a group of employees visited Mrs. Reed's office on certain occasions. During the recess did you examine the statement that you gave to Mr. Walsh?

A. Yes.

[fol. 6258] Q. Did that refresh your memory?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell me who was in the group that went into Mrs. Reed's office on that morning?

A. There were some whose names I didn't know, but I recall that three whom I knew were Mr. Fred Brown, and I think Mr. Atherton was one, and Miss Todd.

Mr. Lane: Now, intervener objects and moves to strike that out for the reason that has been heretofore stated with respect to that type of examination and question, and for the further reason no date has been fixed.

Mr. Langsdale: I will get to that.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did this statement refresh your memory as to when you saw Miss Rose Todd, Mr. Fred Brown, and Mr. Hobart Atherton going into Mrs. Reed's office?

A. It was at the time of the formation of the union, I believe.

Mr. Lane: Just a moment. I object to that and move that it be stricken for the reason that she has stated in response to my questions that she has no recollection of the time when the union was formed.

Mr. Langsdale: I submit her recollection has been refreshed since reading this statement.

Mr. Lane: She has not read that since I examined her.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer the question. Or, has it been answered?

The Reporter: It has been answered.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Let me ask you, in the statement you gave to Mr. Walsh you stated:

"Either on the day or the day before the suggestion was first made that there should be a company union organized I saw a group of seven or eight employees going into Mrs. Reed's office." Is that right?

A. Yes.

Mr. Lane: Now, Mr. Examiner, may I have a continuing objection to all questions asked by counsel for the International with respect to the statement he holds in his hand, and questions where he reads from the statement, on the grounds I have heretofore stated?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may have a continuing objection.

* * * * * *

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Then, you also state: "I saw [fol. 6251] a group of seven or eight employees going to Mrs. Reed's office. They were in there at least an hour, and among the group I distinctly recall Rose Todd, Fred Brown, and Hobart Atherton, all of whom took an open and active part in urging the employees to form a company union, all of whom were subsequently selected as officers of the union."

You made that statement, did you not?

A. Yes.
Q. That was in the fall of 1937?
A. That is right."

139. To the ruling of the Trial Examiner receiving in evidence Trial Examiner's Exhibit 1, being a memorandum from which the question excepted to in Intervener's exceptions Nos. 136 and 138 were read, and in overruling intervener's and respondent's objection thereto, the record with respect to such actions and rulings reading (Tr. pp. 1714-1719):

" * * Of course, I want that marked as an exhibit. It has always been my practice, whenever an attorney examines a witness from a memorandum or statement they have previously made, to ask to have that made a part of the record.

* * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: I have only a copy here, Mr. Examiner, Shall I identify it and offer it?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think you had better have it marked as Trial Examiner's exhibit No. 1, and it will be received only in so far as you have asked these questions from it. In other words, I am not receiving the entire thing.

(Thereupon the document above referred to, having been marked "Trial Examiner's Exhibit No. 1" was received in evidence.)

Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to the document for the reason that it is not identified, and for the reason that it has been stated by counsel to be a mere copy, when there is apparently an original in existence; and for the further reason it is inadmissable for any purpose, the intervener not having been present when any statements contained therein were made; and for the further reason that they are self-serving and hearsay. Intervener objects to its being received for any purpose.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is received for whatever it purports to be.

Mr. Lane: Intervener further objects on the ground that it is highly prejudicial and improper to permit a memorandum of that kind to be used to refresh the recollection of a witness who has testified she has no independent rec- [fol. 6252] ollection of the matter. I say it is prejudicially erroneous to permit it to be used for that purpose.

* * * * * *

At Page 1717:

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects to the Examiner's Exhibit No. 1 for the reason that it is not taken under oath, not testified to under oath, that the witness who is purported to have signed it is here on the stand now, and her own testimony should be the testimony of this witness, and not any statement that she may have prepared at some prior time. It is not even signed by the witness, and is—purports to be a carbon copy of some statement which she may have signed.

Trial Examiner Batten: May I see it a moment?

Mr. Stottle: We also object that it is just immaterial and improper for any purpose whatsoever.

Mr. Langsdale: I submit that the witness's memory can be refreshed from a diary, or any other memorandum that the witness may have.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Mrs. Greenhaw, will you look this over and tell me whether or not that is a statement that you made, and if so, when?

A. Yes, this is a statement I made.

Mr. Langsdale: Read it through, will you, Mrs. Greenhaw, so you can testify from all of it.

Mr. Lane: I object to the Examiner's question for the reason that this document is not the best evidence, and whether this witness can, by reading it, refresh her recollection or not, could not supply the defect; it does not cure the defect that this is not the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled. I am merely trying to get into the record whatever it is. I don't know what it is, but whatever it is, she apparently testified from it, and as such, she is entitled to, whether it is an affidavit or a memorandum or whatever it is, and I merely want it in the record so that it will show what it was that refreshed her memory.

Mr. Stottle: The respondent adds to its objection that it would be prejudicial to have it in the record, the whole document, which—only a portion of it is purportedly received, because whoever reads the record to ascertain those portions must necessarily read the whole document.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, do you mean by that that it has always been a practice to cut part of something out which is introduced for a certain purpose, and that you never introduce the whole of anything?

[fol. 6253] Mr. Stottle: No, I don't mean that. I just say that it would be necessary for anyone, in reviewing the record, yourself or anyone else, to read this whole document in order to read the portions that you are admitting, and that it would be prejudicial to the respondent to have a document in there which is not the testimony of this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the objection is overruled.

* * * * * *

Continuing at page 1720:

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

(The document heretofore marked as "Trial Examiner's Exhibit No. 1" was received in evidence.)

Trial Examiner Batten: It is not received as evidence; merely as a memorandum that was used for that purpose."

140. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in overruling the motions of respondent and intervener to strike the following testimony of the witness Greenhaw, and in receiving and considering such testimony, the testimony, motion and ruling reading (Tr. pp. 1729-1730):

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did any incident occur while you were there in which Mr. or Mrs. Keyes was engaged that in your opinion was coercion?

A. There were so many incidents that I can hardly recall them.

Q. Can you recall any one?

A. There was hardly a day—

Mr. Shepard (Interrupting): Your Honor, I ask that these answers be stricken.

Mr. Leary: Why?

Trial Examiner Batten: I will not strike them.

Mr. Stottle: They are so general, Your Honor—

Trial Examiner Batten: But, Mr. Stottle, if you will just look back toward the beginning of this hearing you will find plenty of answers that are general. I am not going to start now—

Mr. Lane: (Interrupting) Intervener objects on the ground that it is not responsive to the question, and it is not a statement of any facts.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, do you mean an attorney who is not asking a question can object on the [fol. 6254] ground that it is not responsive? Are you, the attorney who does not ask the question, going to object that it is not responsive?

Mr. Lane: I think if the witness gives an answer to Mr. Langsdale's question that I think is not responsive, I have a right to object, and I do object.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that it calls for a conclusion. There was no definition of the word "coercion", and the answer she made was that it was of a general nature and did not state the facts, which you stated she should do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Mr. Langsdale: Read the question."

141. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in overruling intervener's objection, and in receiving and considering the following testimony of the witness Greenhaw, the question, objection and answer reading (Tr. pp. 1733-1734):

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you ever hear Mr. Keyes talk to the employees about loyalty to the company?

A. Yes.

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as leading.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Lane, you know my ruling on leading questions; I have made it so many times. You may have a continuing objection to leading questions.

Mr. Lane: The Board, of course, will not know what I consider leading questions unless I make my objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I thought it would save all of these interruptions.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I would be very glad not to make that objection at all if there were any way of making it known what I regard as leading questions but unless I make my objection, I don't see how the Board or anybody else can tell what I regard as leading questions."

[fol. 6255] 142. To the action and rulings of the Trial Examiner in overruling the objections of Intervener and Respondent to all testimony in regard to the Loyalty League, for the reasons stated in the objections hereinafter quoted and for the further reason that all testimony offered is insufficient to bind respondent or intervener. Said exception is taken to the following testimony of the witness Hartman and as a continuing exception to all other testimony pertaining to the Loyalty League even if the same be not herein quoted (Tr. p. 1769 and succeeding pages):

"Q. Showing you your bank statement for the month of March 1937, is [—] not a fact that a deposit of $1,000 was made on March 30, 1937? A. That is right.

Mr. Stottle: Just a moment, Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this question, and all questions relating to the Loyalty League, on the ground that it is immaterial. We understand the allegation in the complaint that there is a connection, but there has been no testimony indicating that the Loyalty League has anything to do with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. It is merely a social organization, and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is a separate organization.

We think it is encumbering the record to go into these activities of the Loyalty League.

We haven't objected a great deal to this, but we think the matter should be presented to the Examiner, and that we should have a continuing objection to any testimony regarding the Loyalty League.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have a continuing objection. As I recall it, you have, on about three occasions objected to it at the beginning of the hearing, and I at this time will make the same ruling I have in the past. I will overrule the objection, but you may have a continuing objection.

Mr. Stottle: And also on the ground it is not binding on the respondent, anything this witness may say, as well as being immaterial to the issues.

Trial Examiner Batten: That may be incorporated.

Mr. Patten: Intervener makes the same objection, and adds to it the testimony as to what may have happened in the Loyalty League prior to the organization of the union is immaterial and irrelevant.

[fol. 6256] Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled. You desire a continuing objection, Mr. Patten?

Mr. Patten: I do.

Q. (By Mr. Leary) Your testimony is, is it not, Miss Hartman, that in March, March 30th, you deposited $1,000?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In the name of the Nelly Don Loyalty League?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, where did that $1,000 come from?
A. Miss Rose Todd handled that entirely. She came to me and told me that a few employees had been talking to her—
Q. (Interrupting) No, I don't mean that. Where did the $1,000 come from, do you know?
A. I don't understand your question.
Q. Where did the Nelly Don Loyalty League obtain the $1,000 in order to deposit it in a checking account?
A. I am telling you that now. May I explain?
Q. Well, do you know where they got it?
A. Well, it was borrowed under the Loyalty League name.
Q. It was borrowed from the First National Bank?
A. That is right.
Q. Was an application for a loan of $1,000 to the First National Bank made?
A. That is right.
Q. And was a note given to the union in the amount of $1,000?
A. To the union?
Q. I beg your pardon. Was a note given to the bank by the union in the amount of $1,000?
A. No, not by the union.

Q. I beg your pardon. By the Loyalty League?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you have that note?
A. Yes, I do.
[fol. 6257] Q. May I see it, please?

(Whereupon, the document above referred to was handed by the witness to Mr. Leary)

Q. (Continuing) Do you have any objection, Miss Hartman, to our offering this note at this time for the record, and then having it photostated and withdrawn so that the original may be returned to you for your records?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I show you, Miss Hartman, what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 19, and ask you to state whether or not that is the note taken from the official records of the Nelly Don Loyalty League that you just referred to in your testimony?
A. That is right.

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 19" for identification.)

Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 19.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to the exhibit for the grounds already stated, that it is immaterial to the issues here, and also that it is not binding on the respondent in any way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I assume that your continuing objection applies to the note as well.

Mr. Stottle: Well, I thought it might, but I wasn't sure that it would.

Mr. Patten: The intervener desires its continuing objection to apply to the note.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received; subject to those objections.

(The document heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 19" was received in evidence.)

And continuing to page 1793:

"Mr. Langsdale: We offer these checks which have been identified as Board's exhibits Nos. 21-A to 21-O, inclusive.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes its continuing objection to these exhibits.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

[fol. 6258] Mr. Lane: We make our general objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is, the same continuing objection you have made?

Mr. Lane: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve decision on the offer.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Miss Hartman, I hand you this sheet of paper which has been marked by Board's exhibit No. 22, which purports to be a record of an account kept in the First National Bank.

A. That is right.

(Thereupon the statement above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 22.")

* * * * * *

And including the ruling of the Trial Examiner receiving in evidence Board's Exhibits 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25 (Tr. p. 1841-1842):

"Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, we have had prepared from the bank statements which were used during the testimony of Miss Hartman in regard to the Nelly Don Loyalty League this morning, the exhibit for which Board's Exhibit No. 20 was reserved. I now offer that exhibit.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, that is subject to our continuing objection as to materiality as to the Loyalty League matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received subject to the objections of the respondent and the intervener, both, that is, your continuing objections.

(The document heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 20" was received in evidence.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibit 21, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, and Board's Exhibit 25, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, subject to the same objections."

And including the ruling of the Trial Examiner receiving in evidence Board's Exhibits 22, 23, 24-A, 24-B and 24-C, [fol. 6259] [said] said offer, renewed objections of respondent and intervener reading (Tr. pp. 1856-1858):

"Mr. Leary: Board offers Exhibits 23 and 24-A, 24-B, 24C."

• • • • • •

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes its continuing objection to any of those exhibits that refer to the Loyalty League matters, and also, we haven't as yet had an opportunity to check the correctness of the figures.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I might say this: that any exhibits which are received, of course, are received subject to correction if there are figures or dates that are found to be incorrect.

Mr. Stottle: Then, our continuing objection was as to the materiality of that Loyalty League evidence.

Mr. Tyler: Intervener renews its objection to any evidence in connection with the Loyalty League on the ground that it is purely a social organization, having no connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and that any of its actions would not in any way be binding on the intervener, and that it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, they will be received.

• • • • • •

At page 1858:

"Mr. Leary: Board offers what purports to be Miss Hartman's memoranda of the Loyalty League and special account maintained at the First National Bank, identified as Board's Exhibit 22. I will have this photostated, and ask permission to insert the photostat.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received subject to the same objections by respondent and intervener as to Board's Exhibits 23 and 24."

143. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner refusing to admit in evidence respondent's Exhibit 2, being copies of contracts of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union with other garment manufacturers in Kansas City, Missouri, for the purpose of showing by comparison of provisions therein similar to provisions in the intervener's contracts, that intervener's contracts were the result of bargaining, containing provisions more advantageous to intervener, said Exhibit 2 being competent, relevant and material for said purpose, the offer, objec-[fol. 6260] tions and ruling reading (Tr. p. 1828-1829):

"Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 2 and ask you if these are photostatic copies of contracts which the International has with other garment manufacturers in Kansas City.

A. There are two contracts here, one for the Liberty, and one for the Mayfair, which were the contracts negotiated in 1937, but have since been renewed with exchanges. The others are the contracts that are in force now.

Q. What are the names of the other companies?

A. Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence exhibit No. 2.

Mr. Leary: Now, I object to that, Mr. Examiner, as being entirely incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant. It has no bearing on the issues in this matter that we are trying now.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, counsel for the Board and counsel for the International have called the Examiner's attention to various provisions in the Donnelly Garment contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. I want to show that similar provisions are in the contracts that the International makes with other garment manufacturers.

Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union objects to the exhibit for the reason that the only purpose of offering the contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment

Company and the only purpose of calling attention to any provisions thereof was upon the question of whether or not there was bargaining as provided by the Wagner Act. The provisions of these contracts are in no way material. The comparison between these and the contracts between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company are in no way material. The only question is, were the contracts made with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company the result of collective bargaining by a free and independent union, as provided by the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Act?

And continuing on page 1830:

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, do you agree with Mr. Langsdale that the only purpose of the Donnelly contracts and the questions with respect to them was for the purpose of showing what negotiations were conducted, and that is all?

Mr. Leary: That is it, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if that testimony is limited, as you say it is, I will reject the offer of these contracts, because any comparison of the contracts would be unnecessary."

[fol. 6261] 144. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner excluding the following question with reference to prices and minimum wages for piece workers in the Gernes Garment Company—International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union contract (Respondent's Ex. 2) said question being competent, relevant and material to show by comparison that intervener's contracts were obtained by genuine bargaining, the said offer and ruling reading (Tr. p. 1831):

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) I will ask you if that contract did not contain the provision that "Present prices for piece workers shall remain intact and shall be based on a basis that not less than 75 per cent of the workers in the different departments of the shop shall be able to earn not less than $15 per week capita."?

Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union objects to the question for all of the reasons heretofore stated as objections to the offer of the contract itself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

145. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner receiving in evidence Board's Exhibits Nos. 29A and 29B over the objection of respondent and intervener, the offer, objections and ruling reading (Tr. pp. 1845-1846):

"Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, I offer for the record what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 29-A and 29-B, which is a computation of the salaries received by certain individuals who are officers of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, such computations of these persons' salaries being from January 15, 1937 to and including December 31, 1938.

* * * * * *

At page 1846:

"Trial Examiner Batten: You want to proceed with your objection, Mr. Stottle?

Mr. Stottle: Yes. Respondent wants to object to the materiality of this, assuming that it is correct.

Mr. Tyler: Intervener makes the same objection. It has no tendency to prove or disprove any issues in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

[fol. 6262] 146. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner overruling respondent's and intervener's objections and motions to strike (NRA-JMC Ex. 2A, B and C) Board's N.R.A. testimony contained in Board's Offer of Proof (NRA-JMC Ex. 1A-BBBB), being the testimony of witnesses Ellen Fry, Thelma Owen, Glynn Brooks, Mamie Tubbesing, Elizabeth Gates Reeves, Lillian Wales, Frances Riedel, Pauline Lutz, Virginia Stroup, Dewey Atchison, Gladys Elledge Richardson, R. L. Blume, Meyer Perlstein, Lillian White, Marie Patton, Bessie Niemeyer, Ella Mae Guerrant Hyde, Mrs. James A. Reed, taken in the case styled "International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, complainant, vs. Donnelly Garment Company, respondent", No. 160, before the N.R.A. Regional Labor Board, Twelfth District, and receiving and considering said evidence, the said testimony, objections and motions to strike being incorporated herein by reference. The ruling complained of is further excepted to by intervener because of indefiniteness and uncertainty, making it impossible for intervener to determine what evidence is accepted and what excluded, said ruling reading (Tr. pp. 1861-1863):

"The objection is overruled and the motion to strike is denied, and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings, or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain objections.

I want to say that proviso is attached to all of the rulings and will be hereafter attached to all of the testimony by the intervener, for the reason that in reading over the testimony I notice there have been some questions included that refer to the so-called loyalty pledge which was signed by all of the employees, or refers to some other matters which during the course of the proceedings I have stated I would not entertain evidence on.

I didn't want any of the attorneys to think that because there were a few questions in there involving some of those matters that I was in any way reversing my rulings on those subjects.

Mr. Ingraham: Are you receiving in evidence the testimony of the different named individuals that testified in [fol. 6263] the N.R.A. case with regard to their discharge and these matters they testified to in the N.R.A. proceedings?

Trial Examiner Batten: I am receiving it in accordance with this ruling, the testimony in exhibit No. 1, subject to that proviso which I stated.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't understand what you are ruling out and what you are leaving in.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think if you take this and read it, Mr. Ingraham, you will understand just what I am receiving.

I have gone through the evidence and read it carefully and I find in some instances indirect references to some of the matters which I have said I would not receive evidence upon, and I just want to make it clear that I am not reversing my rulings in opening up those two or three subjects for receipt of further testimony.

If there is any question about it after you go over it I will be very glad to clarify it.

Mr. Ingraham: Of course it will be necessary to go over that before we proceed with [out] evidence."

147. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections and motions to strike (NRA-JMC Ex. 6A, B and C) Board's Judge Miller case testimony contained in Board's offer of proof (NRA-JMC Ex. 5A-5GG, consisting of 33 pages), exception here being taken to each and every ruling adverse to respondent or intervener made by the Trial Examiner throughout said exhibit, and in receiving and considering said evidence, the said testimony, objections and motions to strike being incorporated herein by reference. The ruling complained of is further excepted to by intervener because of indefiniteness and uncertainty, making it impossible for intervener to determine what evidence is accepted and what excluded, said ruling reading (Tr. P. 1864):

"N. R. A.-Judge Miller case exhibit No. 5-A to 5-GG is certain testimony offered by the Board from the Judge Miller case, consisting of 33 pages.

Exhibit No. 6-A, b and C, the objections and motions to strike, of the respondent and intervener.

Exhibit No. 5-A to 5-GG, the objection to such testimony is overruled, and the motion to strike is denied; and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse the rulings [fol. 6264] heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects."

148. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections and motions to strike Board's Judge Miller case testimony contained in Board's offer of proof (NRA-JMC Ex. 9A to 9CC) the objections of the respondent appearing to certain questions throughout the testimony of 29 pages, and the intervener's objections and motion to strike being a separate document (NRA-JMC Ex. 10A), exception here being taken to each and every ruling adverse to respondent or intervener made by the Trial Examiner throughout said exhibit, and in receiving and considering said evidence, the said testimony, objections and motion to strike being incorporated herein by reference. The ruling complained of is further excepted to by intervener because of indefiniteness and uncertainty, making it impossible for intervener to determine what evidence is accepted and what excluded, said ruling reading (Tr. p. 1865):

"9-A to 9-CC is certain testimony from the Judge Miller case, offered by the Board, being the testimony of Sylvia Hull.

In the case of Exhibit 9-A to 9-CC, the respondent has indicated on the exhibit objections to certain questions through the entire testimony of 29 pages. The intervener objects to all of the testimony.

The rulings of the Trial Examiner are indicated on the various pages where the individual objections of the respondent appear, and as to the intervener's objection, the objection is overruled and the motion to strike is denied and acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects. The objections being marked 10A, consisting of one sheet, and the rulings entered thereon."

[fol. 6265] 149. To the action and rulings of the Trial Examiner in denying the motions of respondent to dismiss (Board's C 1-FFFF, and 1-GGGG) made at the close of the Board's and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union case, for all the reasons stated in said motions, which are incorporated herein by reference, and for all the reasons stated orally and appearing in the transcript at pp. 1873-1891, the said motions having been made and offered (Tr. pp. 1872-1873-1874) as follows:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent desires to file its motion to dismiss the complaint in its entirety.

Trial Examiner Batten: That will be marked Board's exhibit No. 1-FFFF.

(Thereupon the motion above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 1-FFFF.")

Mr. Stottle: The grounds of the motion, Mr. Examiner, are that there has been no substantial evidence in the record to support any of the charges. In some instances there has been some evidence but it has been of a conjectural and speculative nature that would not be sufficient to constitute a case against the respondent.

* * * * * * *

At page 1874:

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we have another motion to dismiss that goes to each of the paragraphs separately.

Trial Examiner Batten: The first is a general motion and this is a specific motion.

Mr. Stottle: To practically all of the paragraphs, yes, but not every one of them. We will submit it at this time if you will give me a number.

Trial Examiner Batten: That will be Board's exhibit No. 1-GGGG.

(Thereupon the motion above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 1-GGGG."

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, do you want to make a statement with respect to the motion?

Mr. Stottle: Yes, I would like to.

Respondent is not making this motion to dismiss as a formal matter, either the one to the case as a whole or these to the second paragraph, but really thinks there has not been sufficient evidence to support a report by the Trial Examiner finding the respondent is guilty of any [fol. 6266] of the charges alleged, or any judgment against the respondent in this proceeding.

But, irrespective of the motion as a whole, as to the second paragraphs, respondent desires to call attention to certain ones of them."

and having been denied (except as to subparagraphs d, g, g-l, k, i, n, o and p of the amended complain) in the third paragraph of page 3 of the Intermediate Report.

150. To the action and rulings of the Trial Examiner in denying the Intervener's demurrer to the evidence of the Board and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Intervener's motion to dismiss the complaint, both made orally at the close of the evidence offered by the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, for the reasons stated therein, the said demurrer and motion reading (Tr. p. 1873):

"Mr. Tyler: If the court please, the intervener wishes at this point to demur to the evidence of the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and move to dismiss the complaint on the grounds that the evidence introduced, if taken as true, would not be sufficient upon which to base any finding which would affect the rights of the intervener; it would be insufficient to base an order on just establishing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as bargaining representatives; it would be insufficient to base an order upon which would in any way cancel or affect the contract which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have with their employers, or their contract rights; it would be insufficient in any way to use as a basis for any decree, order or judgment affecting the rights and interests of the intervener.

and continuing at Tr. pp. 1890-1891:

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Mr. Tyler, I think you said you had some motions to make orally.

Mr. Tyler: Yes. If the Court please, I wish to amplify the motion of the intervener heretofore made to dismiss by adding as a basis for that motion that no evidentiary basis for any finding that the union was organized by the company or is company dominated has been laid, and that therefore no finding could be made, because no evidence has been submitted as a basis;

That no basis has been laid for any finding that the company coerced or intimidated or influenced any em-[fol. 6267] ployee in joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union;

And that no basis has been laid for any possible finding that the company contributed, directly or indirectly, financial aid or other aid to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union;

No basis has been laid that the union is not a bona fide labor union, with all of the rights guaranteed such union under the Wagner Act;

And that no basis has been laid for any finding that the union is not a free will choice of the majority of the employees and is not entitled to representation of all of the employees in collective bargaining.

Trial Examiner Batten: Those additional reasons, I presume you call them, Mr. Tyler—

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: (Continuing)—will be considered in connection with the disposition of the motion."

and having been denied in the third paragraph of page 3 of the Intermediate Report.

151. To the action and rulings of the Trial Examiner in permitting the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to enter into the trial and attempt to prove the allegations of the complaint without affirmatively showing by direct affirmative evidence by witnesses and testimony produced by them, a prima facia case justifying the filing of the charges and the issuing of the complaint, and in permitting the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to proceed by attempting to secure evidence justifying said complaint and charge by entering at the trial upon a fishing expedition against respondent and intervener, subjecting respondent's employees and intervener's members to prolonged, minute and exhaustive cross examination, first by the Board's counsel and then by the counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and in refusing to hold the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to be bound by testimony adverse to them given by said witnesses upon the erroneous and [fol. 6268] prejudicial assumption that all such adverse testimony would be false and all favorable testimony true, the filing of such charge and issuing of such complaint without substantial evidence, and the method of procedure permitted in the attempt to secure the same, amounting to a persecution of respondent and intervener and a denial of due process of law guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Intervener excepts thereto and to the rulings of the Trial Examiner overruling the objections of respondent and intervener at Tr. pp. 227-229:

"Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I object to the leading form and cross-examination form of the questions and ask that proper form of direct examination be followed by the Board.

Trial Examiner Batten: He may proceed. I think I said on the opening day, Mr. Tyler, that I am not going to try to tell the attorneys how to ask their questions. You may proceed, and if you testify for the witness, why, it simply means that no weight can be given to the testimony, that is all, so you attorneys will have to assume the responsibility for the method in which you proceed on that. You may proceed.

Mr. Langsdale: May I suggest at this time, because this matter will come up, in view of the Examiner's thought about it, that this witness can certainly be classed as an adverse witness, and leading questions are always permissible in that character of witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, in my hearings I don't class any of the witnesses any way. I mean, after all, we are not bound by the rules of evidence and why be bound by any technical proceeding of the court. We are interested in getting all the facts we can get, and it is immaterial to me whether it is an adverse witness or your witness or the respondent's witness. If we get the information we need here, that is the thing we are interested in.

Mr. Langsdale: I wish to make my point, and I won't go back to it. The vice of a leading question is that when you have your own witness on the stand and put the answer in her mouth and she says "Yes, sir" or "No", then the Examiner has a right to, and should have a right to disregard that, but if an adverse witness is on the stand and gives an adverse answer, it goes to the credibility of the witness, which is on a different basis.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed on the basis I have just explained.

[fol. 6269] and at 488-490:

"Q. And who is Mrs. Nichols?

A. She works in the production department.

Q. Is that Lulu Nichols?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or Beulah Nichols?

A. Lulu.

Q. And is she an efficiency expert or does she work with time study or wage rates?

A. She is not an efficiency expert that I know of.

Q. Does her work consist of addressing and fixing piecework prices?

A. Yes, sir."

Mr. Lane: If your Honor please, I object to the leading nature of all these questions. I think he should let the witness testify to those things instead of framing the answers in his questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't know as I will interfere with it. You attorneys will have to assume the responsibility; if you ask her questions and answer them at the same time, then they don't mean anything.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, I object because I understood counsel to say he was going to examine this witness about minutes. Now, he is apparently putting this witness on to examine her about everything in connection with the case, and I don't think it is proper for the Board to take our witnesses and put them on the witness stand. I think they should first, at least, put on their case, the witnesses that they have. This is no more than cross-examination.

* * * * * *

Mr. Foster: Mr. Examiner, I believe I have the privilege of finding out who this witness is and what her duties are.

* * * * * *

Mr. Shepard: If your Honor please, this witness certainly couldn't testify to the duties of Mrs. Nichols.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I assume that unless a witness is shown to be qualified to testify about a matter they testify about, even if they do answer, probably it doesn't mean anything.

Mr. Ingraham: But inquiring about this witness' duties, I can't see how he is getting into that, about asking about Mrs. Nichols.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, he may proceed. This witness said she worked for Mrs. Nichols."

[fol. 6270] And at 491-492:

"Q. Were there any other stenographers on the committee?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Now, how did it happen that you were a member of this committee?

A. I was elected.

Q. And who elected you?

A. I was elected at a meeting.

Mr. Tyler: If the court please, I object to that. He is not laying any basis for these meetings, for the examination as to these minutes, which is the purpose for which he has called this witness out of turn. If he puts on witnesses, and cross-examines them by leading questions, I have no objection, providing he abides by the regular rules that he certifies the truthfulness of those answers, which is the circumstances of his proceeding. If he is putting this witness on solely for the purpose of examining as to the minutes, I submit what he is asking now is not any necessary or proper basis for that.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Examiner, I submit the Board is not bound by any of the answers of this witness. She is a hostile witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Just a moment. I said once in this hearing I am not going to try to determine what kind of witnesses there are. The thing the Board is primarily interested in are the facts. It don't make any difference to the Board or to the Examiner where we get the facts, and we want all the facts, whether they come from the Board or the union or the intervener or the respondent. I am not going to try to distinguish between witnesses."

and at 650-654:

"Mr. Lane: Now, if the Examiner pleases, before Mr. Langsdale begins any examination of this witness, I desire to object to counsel for the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union being permitted to interrogate this witness or to cross-examine this witness, for the reason that counsel for that organization, the claimant in this case, have during the entire progress of this hearing sat across the counsel table from the attorneys for the Board, have continuously and constantly consulted with the attorneys for the Board, have been in numerous conferences with them, have passed notes back and forth across the counsel table, have participated in directing the course of the examination made by the Board's counsel of this witness, to permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which has shown itself to be so identified with the Board in this case, it being the complaining party, as to have a unity of interest and to be essentially the same as the Board in this case, for the purposes of prosecuting this case. To permit counsel to interrogate this witness at this time would permit a double [fol. 6274] cross-examination by the same parties of this witness. This witness has, over our objection, been subjected to what we consider cross-examination for pretty nearly three days, and to now permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to take over examination [as] this point, and further cross-examine, or to cross-examine this witness at all, would be unfair to this witness, would be illegal examination and—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting): Now, just a moment. Whenever you say a thing is illegal, I want you to tell me why. I mean, I can't accept that.

Mr. Lane: On the ground that it is so far a departure from the rules of procedure and progress which obtain in courts of law, and which should obtain in administrative tribunals as to be a negation of the rules of fair play, as to deprive the intervener in this case of due process.

. . . . . .

At page 654:

I don't think there is anything to this argument, in any form or fashion. I am requesting all of you to cooperate with each other in every way possible to expedite the case.

I think it is very clear the rules permit a party to call witnesses, examine them, cross-examine them, and take part in the proceedings.

Mr. Langsdale, you may proceed."

And at 686-688:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I just can't see that we are going to have to go all over these meetings and these matters again.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, if it pleases the Examiner, I am not going to spend a lot of time on it, but I think that it is necessary for me to conduct this examination the way I think it ought to be conducted, at least, refer to some of those things very briefly to bring out what I have in mind.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no objection to you examining this witness on matters that were not covered in the examination by Mr. Leary. I have no objection to you asking one or two questions leading up to it, but I must say now that I don't propose in this hearing that we are going to have to go through all of these matters twice. So, I am asking you—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): I don't propose to attempt to do that, but if the Examiner—as the Examiner, of course, knows, that sometimes it is necessary to pick up a link here and there to get the point you have in mind.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no objection to your asking a question or two of that sort.

[fol. 6272] Mr. Langsdale: That is the sort this one is.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will appreciate it if you will confine it to that.

Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Well, did you get hold of Mr. Batty and go down to where Fern Sigler was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she was told to go to the office?

A. Yes, sir, she was asked to come to the office.
Q. And you and Mr. Batty went up to the office?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, again, at that time you were the President of the Loyalty League?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you do that as President of the Loyalty League?
A. I did not.
Q. In what capacity did you assume calling Mr. Batty, and go down to see Fern Sigler?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to, if your Honor please, as repetition. That has been gone over thoroughly.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think it has been gone over as thoroughly as I want to make it.

At page 688:

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. In what capacity, please,—I am sorry—
Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten, interrupting) Yes, in what capacity did you call Mr Batty to go down to see Mrs.—what is her name?
A. Fern Sigler. No, no capacity especially; just as an employee.
Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) It was just a "happen so" was it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Just like it was a "happen-so" that you took charge of the meeting on March 18th?"

[fol. 6273] 152. To the actions and rulings of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive and consider respondent's Exhibit 6, being a newspaper article from the Kansas City Star dated February 26, 1937, for the purpose of showing the actual motive and intent created by the circumstances to which the exhibit had reference in the minds of intervener's members that led to the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, the record with reference thereto reading as follows (Tr. pp. 1907-1911):

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Mrs. Reeves, I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 6, which is a newspaper article appearing in the Kansas City Star, February 26, 1937, setting out statements by Meyer Purlstein and Waye Tobin, and ask you if you have read that article.

A. I did.

Mr. Ingraham: The respondent offers in evidence Exhibit 6.

* * * * * * * * * *

At page 1909:

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, I will prove as to the truth of this statement from the Judge Miller testimony; but I would like to examine this witness in regard to whether or not she read this and what occurred. As far as the facts being true, I will prove that by the Judge Miller evidence.

* * * * * * * * * *

At page 1910:

"Mr. Tyler: If the court please, the intervener will also wish to use it on the ground that we are trying motives here, and inner intent, and you can't adequately try a question of that kind without showing the situation, to show what things would affect their intent, or their actual motive. There is no other way to get at motive and intent without showing the surrounding circumstances and things that would influence it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you expect me to be able to determine people's inner feelings?

Mr. Tyler: I think Your Honor is going to have to determine what the motive was, and you have got to base it on surrounding influences that would—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): I am perfectly willing that you should have a reasonable amount of background as the Board had in the NRA proceeding. They showed it almost entirely by transcript of that testimony. Now, if this means calling a large number of witnesses for that purpose, I don't want to have the background, as I [fol. 6274] have said so many times in this case, become the picture.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't think it will result in that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you want to offer it on that basis, I will receive it on that basis, that you offer it for, Mr. Ingraham, but not for the purpose which Mr. Tyler stated that he expected to use it for."

153. To the action and ruling of the Examiner in excluding respondent's exhibit No. 10, being an article in "Justice", a newspaper published by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and therefore properly admissible as an admission (Tr. p. 2076-2077):

"Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 10 and ask you to state what publication that is.

A. It is "Justice", published by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

(Thereupon the publication above referred to was marked for identification "Respondent's Exhibit No. 10.")

Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibit No. 10, the report of Sylvia Hull's speech.

Trial Examiner Batten: What date is that?

Mr. Langsdale: June 1, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, what is the purpose of this, if you care to disclose it? Is it to show the situation as it existed? It is not to prove the truth or untruth of anything in there, is it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, indeed. This is the official paper of the International.

At page 2077:

Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly won't receive it to prove anything, an article in a newspaper.

Mr. Ingraham: Even though it is published by the International?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't care whom it is published by.

Mr. Ingraham: Wouldn't that be considered as an admission?

[fol. 6275] Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe in trying any of these hearings on newspapers, trade papers, or anything of that kind. If you want to offer it on the same basis you offered the other newspaper articles, I will receive it on that basis.

Mr. Ingraham: I offer it, of course, for all purposes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am saying I will not receive it for all purposes. But if you want to offer it on the same basis as exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, although it restricts your general offer, I will receive it on that basis, on the basis of respondent's exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, and then you may have your exception."

154. To the action and ruling of the Examiner in allowing a question to stand implying without any evidence in the record to support it that the employees hid the fact of the organization meeting of April 27, 1937, from Mr. Baty (Tr. p. 2294-2295):

"Q. Was there any reason that you knew of why the employees or anyone else should hide it from you that they were going to form a union that night?

A. There was no reason why they would hide it.

Q. But either they did hide it or you just never found it out?

A. I wasn't interested in it in any way.

Mr. Lane: Now, the intervener objects to that for the reason it is argumentative. There is no testimony here that anything was hid from him. He testified that he didn't know it, and the question that it was hid from him is argumentative and not proper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

(Whereupon, the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that the question?

Mr. Lane: Yes, and the previous question contains an expression that they hid it from him.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

[fol. 6276] 155. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in sustaining the objections and in refusing to receive and consider the following competent, relevant and material testimony offered by intervener, and similar testimony offered by respondent, of strikes, violence, of the subject of conversations, the effect upon and state of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company produced thereby, as an important and moving cause leading them to employ attorneys and to the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and to disprove the allegations of the complaint of domination by respondent, the offers, objections and rulings reading (Tr. pp. 2500-2506):

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Mr. Atherton, was the subject of disturbances at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937, a subject of common discussion among the employees at the Donnelly Garment plant?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler) What was the state of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company in regard to conditions at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as being without a foundation, that this witness knows what the state of mind of the employees at the plant was; and immaterial, also.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will sustain it on the ground it is immaterial.

Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by this witness that the subject of the violence at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937, was one of almost continual conversation by the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company plant, and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, and that the condition of the employees' minds at that plant was one almost bordering on hysteria and continued to increase in intensity as the strikes went on at the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri plants, and that that was one of the main causes of their employing attorneys, and later on was one of the impelling reasons for them to organize their own labor union.

Mr. Leary: I will object to the offer on the same grounds.

[fol. 6277] Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused.

Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union objects to the offer upon the ground that it includes, a part of it, to permit this witness to pass upon the mental attitude of other employees, and he has shown no knowledge, laid no foundation to show that he is capable of passing on the mental attitude of those employees.

Mr. Tyler: The record shows that this witness was employed at the plant; that his duties caused him to circulate about the plant, and I submit that any employee in such circumstances is competent to tell what the subjects of discussion were which were uppermost, and what the general attitude of employees was.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I assume—I don't know—I wasn't here, but I assume that probably there was so much talk in the plant that it even interfered with production. In fact, I have never seen a case yet where two unions, or one union, in conducting an intensive organizational campaign that it doesn't affect production in the plant. I mean, it just goes without saying that it is a part of it. You can't separate it, so I don't suppose there is any argument but what in this plant and all the rest of the plants, if it was all material to this hearing, the production was reduced.

Now, my point on this is this: that if the respondent, or any of its officers formed this union or assisted in forming it, or after it was formed they sponsored it or in any way assisted it, even if you were to prove that all the 1,350 employees in here were ready to shoot the next International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union member which they met, it still wouldn't detract one ounce from the fact that the respondent had either formed, sponsored or dominated the union, and even though you were to definitely prove that and permit it on the record, if the Board hasn't proved that this union was either formed, sponsored or is now dominated by this company, the respondent is not guilty of an unfair labor practice, irrespective of what the employees do, because they can do whatever they please, I mean, within reasonable limits, and I thought I ought to make this statement just in explanation of my ruling.

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I intend to make no point as to reduction of production by these difficulties. I do say that there is no more important fact, and no fact approaching in importance the fact of what caused the employees of this company to form their own union. The Board is claiming that it was domination or fear or bribery, or some such influence by the employer.

I submit that the employees asserting that they formed the plant [—] of their own free will, will, in establishing that fact, have the right to refer to the causes which influenced them in making that choice, and undertake to show by this witness that one of the causes was not the employer [fol. 6278] domination, but was fear and dislike of what the International was doing in its campaign to organize garment workers in Kansas City.

I take it I have an exception to your Honor's ruling without—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, of course, you have an automatic exception.

Mr. Stottle: And, Mr. Examiner, you will recall that Mr. Ingraham asked similar questions as to violence down at the Gordon and Gernes plant, and whether it increased, and your Honor sustained the objection to those questions. Our position also is that that would show a motive or a reason for the formation of this union, and would tend to show that it was not company domination.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have an objection and I will make the same ruling, Mr. Stottle.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Ingraham didn't make an offer of proof. When he comes back, I will ask him if he desires to enter it, or let the question go.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let him decide when he comes back, and I will determine it, and I would make the same ruling, and I would say the same to the respondent. It isn't a question of whether these people had a motive to organize the union. The only question is, did the respondent have anything to do with it, and if they didn't, they can have any motive they please.

Mr. Shepard: Respondent makes the same offer of proof, and takes exception to your ruling."

[fol. 6279] 156. To the action and ruling of the Examiner in overruling the objections and motions to strike of respondent and intervener to the Board's offer (Board's Exhibit 30) of NRA testimony (Tr. p. 2552):

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, on the matter of Board's Exhibit 1-IIII, which is the objection and motion of the respondent and the intervener to the Board's offer, which is marked "Board's Exhibit 30", the objections are overruled and the motion to strike is denied, which means; Mr. Leary, that the NRA testimony which was in the offer will be accepted, and you will have one witness ready for presentation of her testimony, strictly limited to the point in your offer."

157. To the action of the Examiner in holding, stating and declaring that the testimony of employees on the witness stand as to what their choice of unions is, is no indication of the truth of such statement, because other employees and representatives of the Company were in the room at the time and such declaration and statement shows that the Examiner failed to give such competent, relevant and material testimony any weight in his findings and opinions (Tr. p. 2611):

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, I don't think that is any indication, to put these witnesses up on the stand in a hearing of this kind, in a "C" case, in front of all the other employees and representatives of the company, and ask them, "Is this your free choice?". I mean it may possibly have some remote bearing, but I don't think it has sufficient that we should spend the time necessary to listen to 1300 employees get on the witness stand and testify to that point.

Now, if that is your idea, you may make an offer of testimony with respect to these 1305 employees, or whatever it is, but certainly, we are not going to determine that in this hearing on that basis, at least.

Mr. Tyler: Could I ask you if the Examiner holds that there is any presumption that these people are being dominated by somebody in the court room in this matter, or any presumption that they would commit perjury?

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't even intimate such a thing.

Mr. Tyler: I understood you to say that their testimony, as to what they wished, would be either of no value or extremely little value.

At page 2612:

[fol. 6280] Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't say any such thing, I don't think.

Mr. Tyler: I misunderstood you, then.

Trial Examiner Batten: The record will state what I said in my remarks.

Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, don't you think we should have the testimony of this witness with the persons that you have referred to excluded from the court room?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I don't think it is of any value in the issues in this case, to parade these people on the stand. Now, if that is your idea, you may make as complete an offer as you care to with respect to that matter."

158. To the action and ruling of the Examiner in excluding testimony of witness Stites that no threat was made to her by the management in connection with joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and in indicating and declaring that though ninety-five percent of the employees voluntarily joined a union of their own free will absolutely, yet evidence of such fact would not establish it as the bargaining agency of the employees (Tr. pp. 2620-2623):

"Q. Was there any threat made to you by the management or anyone representing the management that if you didn't join this Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or organize a plant union of your own that you might lose your job, or make membership in that union a condition of employment?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you finish your offer, Mr. Stottle?

Mr. Stottle: Well, if Your Honor is going to let her testify on these matters, I think I need not make it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am not. I ruled it out, and it is still out. I have no intention of changing my ruling whatsoever.

Mr. Stottle: May I inquire, Mr. Examiner, if we will be permitted to ask other witnesses, employees down there, whether they were dominated, as we have of this witness, by the officers of the Donnelly Garment Company?

Trial Examiner Batten: Let me ask you: Isn't it possible that 1,200 employees might come in here and testify honestly that they were not coerced, and you might have two that would come in and say they were, if the 1,200 [fol. 6281] said No, and the two said Yes, the 1,200 wouldn't prove that the two were wrong, would they? In other words, you might have 1,200 that were not, and you might have two that were? Isn't that true?

Mr. Stottle: It is possible.

Trial Examiner Batten: The 1,200 that were not would not disprove that the two were; isn't that correct?

Mr. Stottle: I think in that case it would be.

Mr. Tyler: I think in that case the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union would still be the overwhelming choice of the majority.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am talking now about the question of coercion. You might have one who was coerced, and you might have every other employee who was not. That would not prove that the one was not coerced, would it?

Mr. Stottle: But, as Mr. Tyler said, it would disprove, in my mind at least, that the Donnelly Garment Company coerced the formation of the union.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is not a question of whether they coerced the formation of it. It is a question of whether they sponsored it or dominated it.

Mr. Tyler: Intervener wishes to suggest in that case there would be no basis laid for a decision that it was dissolving, displacing, or in any way interfering with the rights of this union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, let me ask you: Isn't it possible to have 95 percent of the employees in a company voluntarily join a union of their own free will, absolutely, and yet have it sponsored or assisted by a company?

Mr. Tyler: I think that is conceivable, although it would be so exceedingly improbable it would be very improbable that any such finding could be made in that case that the rights of 95 percent to their own union and their own contract could be dissolved, under the law, because some one or two or more had been coerced.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not talking about coercion. I say, isn't it possible for a company to form a so-called company union and support it, and yet have 95 percent of the employees join it of their own free will without any coercion on the part of the company.

Mr. Tyler: I think that is theoretically possible, but in a situation where the union has continued to operate for a period of over two years, and where no substantial testimony of any kind is offered by the persons upon whom the burden of proving that devolves, after two years for gathering it, and unlimited funds for gathering it, I submit no possible basis for that kind of a decision has been laid in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not ruling on this case. I am just asking you, isn't that possible?

[fol. 6282] Mr. Tyler: I think, theoretically, that is possible.

Trial Examiner Batten: And there is one further question I would like to ask in connection with your remark. I don't know whether you meant to imply it or not, but is it your thought that if, an independent union having been formed by a company or assisted by a company—admitting that to be true in the beginning—is it your idea that over a period of time that independent organization can purge itself of the control or the domination which it started out?

My Tyler: I will be glad to answer Your Honor's question. Let me begin by making it clear, I do not for one moment admit there was any fault or domination in the formation of this union—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): You do not need to answer it at all if you were not implying that in your answer to my former question.

Mr. Tyler: I want to answer it. I don't think there is any evidence in this case of domination of this union, or formation of it, by the company. But, if that had been true, I still believe the law to be—if that had been true and, nevertheless, at the present time the union actually represents the free will choice of the members, what Your Honor calls purging would have taken place and the employees would have the right to continue to operate that union and bargain for it. I believe that to be the law."

[fol. 6283] 159. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in excluding evidence of witness Stites, that she had talked to people who told her that they had met with violence at the Gordon and Gernes plants (Tr. p. 2650-2651):

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) You talked to people who told you they had met with violence at the Gordon and Gernes plants?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think I have indicated all through this hearing that I am not going into those matters, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: Then, intervener joins in the same offer of proof on this matter just offered by the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean page 5, Mr. Tyler? That is the page that applies to this matter.

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: With reference to the offer on page 5, it will be refused.

Mr. Tyler: And also, repeat the offer of proof which intervener made on the same subject heretofore.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused. In order to identify that, the respondent's offer of proof has been marked 1-JJJJ, and you are now referring to the fifth page of that?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, sir.

(Thereupon the offer of proof above referred to was marked "Board's Exhibit No. 1-JJJJ.")

160. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in excluding testimony of Mrs. Davis as to Mrs. Reed's talk at the meeting of March 18th, and further evidence concerning the meeting of March 18th (Tr. pp. 2675-2677):

"Q. Did you attend a meeting of employees on March 18, 1937?

A. I did.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, you indicated to me that you didn't want us to continue with that line of testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I think unless some testimony appears later in the proceedings with respect to the March 18th meeting, I see no need of continuing to have [fol. 6284] these people testify about that meeting.

Mr. Stottle: Well, I will ask the question and you can exclude it if you want to, and then that would raise the issue.

Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Mrs. Davis, did you hear any statement made at the March 18th meeting by Mrs. Reed or anyone else that she wanted the names of the Donnelly Garment Company employees reported to her or reported to the management of any employees who belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as cumulative.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Did you hear Mrs. Reed state that she would never let the International Union into her plant?

Mr. Leary: Same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we haven't prepared an offer of proof on that point, but we will prepare an offer of proof as to this witness and other witnesses on that subject.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I would suggest, Mr. Tyler, that you prepare it. Then you may offer it and as I arranged in the other instance, you may attach a list of people if you want to, and it will not be necessary to bring all those people here in order to make your offer."

161. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner to the effect that the state of mind, apprehension and fear of the employees at the Donnelly plant, caused by the violence committed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at the Gordon and Gernes plants, was not admissible in evidence as showing one of the motivating causes of forming a union of their own and thereby rebutting the Board's claim that such union was formed by domination or coercion of the employer. (Tr. p. 2712)

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten, on this question, which has come up frequently, I think about the first week, in fact, Mr. Tyler brought it up; this question of the mental attitude of these people, due to the organizational campaign of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and all that that goes along with it. I think I should tell you now that if there is any further testimony of that kind, you can put it in in an offer of proof, because I don't [fol. 6285] think it is material to the issues here, and I think I told Mr. Tyler one day when he spoke about it, said that he felt that it was a motive or would be one motive, that would explain the organization of the independent union, and I think at that time I disagreed with Mr. Tyler. So if you have any further evidence in that line, you will submit it in an offer of proof, and if you care to, of course, you may submit another witness and ask those questions, to make your record. If you don't care to do that, you may submit it without offering another witness."

162. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in refusing to hear further evidence as to the meeting of April 27, 1937 (Tr. p. 2766):

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, if you have finished your questions about the April 27 meeting, I don't care to listen to any further witnesses on it, unless it is something that has not yet been covered by the previous witnesses."

[fol. 6286] 163. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in overruling intervener's motion, made at the close of the respondent's case, to sustain the demurrer and dismiss the complaint, being a renewal of the demurrer and motion to dismiss made at the close of the Board's case, the same being overruled in the third paragraph on page 3 of the intermediate report, the renewal reading (Tr. p. 2813):

"Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, at the close of the respondent's case, intervener renews its motion to dismiss and the demurrer to the evidence of the complainant which was offered at the close of complainant's case.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve a decision, Mr. Tyler, on that motion."

164. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive and consider additional competent, relevant and material testimony by witnesses personally present at the trial and placed on the witness stand by intervener, and their testimony offered by intervener with respect to the meeting of March 18, 1937, the said refusal being prejudicial error in view of the fact the Trial Examiner's report showed that he refused to believe the evidence of any witness offered by respondent and intervener on material points with respect to such meeting. In view of such disbelief by the Trial Examiner it was material and extremely prejudicial error on his part to exclude any witness that respondent or intervener offered to produce and would have produced but for such ruling to be personally present and testify from the witness stand under the eyes of the Trial Examiner and such error was not cured by offering to receive such testimony in an offer of proof since the Examiner's findings and conclusions show he refused to believe the evidence so proffered in written offers of proof by witnesses whom he did not see and hear. The ruling excepted to in the case of the witness Jack McConaughey appears at Transcript page 2832 and [fol. 6287] reads as follows:

"Q. What happened at that meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, as far as this March 18 meeting is concerned, there is no need of any more witnesses testifying to it, unless you have something you want to go into that has not already been covered.

Mr. Tyler: All right. I will cover that by an offer of proof, unless I find some item which I believe has not been touched upon."

165. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive the competent, relevant and material testimony of witness Jack McConaughey proffered by intervener, said witness being personally present and on the witness stand with respect to negotiations culminating in Board's Exhibit No. 6, being the articles of agreement between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company, said evidence being offered to prove that said contract was the result of genuine bargaining between intervener and respondent, it appearing from the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner that he refused to believe the evidence of any witness proffered by intervener or respondent with respect to such bargaining. It was material and highly prejudicial error to refuse to receive all testimony that intervener or respondent chose to offer by witnesses personally present under the eyes of the examiner to establish that the said contract was the result of genuine bargaining, thereby disproving the allegations of the complaint in, establishing that intervener was free from the domination of respondent. Such error is not cured by the offer of the Trial Examiner to receive in writing the testimony of witnesses whom he did not allow to be presented and testify on the witness stand. The offer and refusal of the Trial Examiner in the case of witness Jack McConaughey appears in [fol. 6288] the following language at Transcript pp. 2833-2837:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) I hand you Board's exhibit No. 6, being the articles of agreement between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, and ask you what matters were discussed in those negotiations between the union and the companies on May 26, 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I want to make the same ruling on this that I just made on the other. There have been two members of this executive committee testify in detail about this, and either two or three of the respondent's witnesses. So, unless you are going to cover matters that have not thus far been covered, I don't want to go into it with this witness. Now, if there is anything else, anything new, I want you to cover it with this witness, but Miss Todd and Mr. Atherton, both of whom were at this meeting, testified quite extensively about these negotiations—and Mr. Baty, and I believe Mrs. Reeves. So, unless there is something new, I think it is cumulative.

Mr. Tyler: Your Honor has stated it is regarded by you as a matter of substantial importance as to whether there were real negotiations. I think the number of witnesses who were present and who recall matters of discussion or argument tends to establish genuine negotiations.

If Your Honor regards that fact as definitely established I will not offer further evidence on that point. If you do not consider it as definitely established, I certainly think I should go into it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You do not expect me to answer that question, do you?

Mr. Tyler: Well—

Trial Examiner Batten: As Trial Examiner of this case, do you expect me to answer that question now?

Mr. Tyler: I have no expectation one way or the other, but I do think that unless Your Honor feels that is definitely established, I should be allowed to present the evidence by the persons who were present at those negotiations.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may present it by an offer of proof.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent would say, in that connection, that your statement that unless some new matters were to be gone into—it could hardly be determined what the witness would testify to unless he is permitted to answer the questions and state what did occur.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I presume Mr. Tyler has interviewed this witness as to his testimony, and gone over it thoroughly, as every attorney should before [fol. 6289] examining his witness, so that he should be able to judge that. I can't. I am simply saying, if there is anything this witness can testify to about these negotiations that will add to the information in this record, certainly the Examiner wants it and the Board wants it. If it is simply a matter of repeating what at least four other witnesses have testified to, I don't think it is necessary.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent desires to show in an offer of proof that the witness is excluded from testifying, for the reason you have indicated, that is an important matter; and, for the reasons Mr. Tyler has stated.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is an exceedingly important matter. I agree with you on that.

Mr. Stottle: What is the ruling on the objection to this witness being excluded from testifying on it?

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve my decision.

Mr. Tyler: For the present the ruling is, this witness is not allowed to go into the negotiations of May 27, 1937?

Trial Examiner Batten: Excepting in so far as he testifies to matters that have not yet been covered.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Do you know, Mr. McConaughey, as to what matters have been described in this hearing as being covered by the negotiations of May 27?

A. I wasn't present at the time of the testimony of any other witnesses in this courtroom on that subject, so I don't know exactly what has been covered.

Q. Has anybody told you fully, in detail, as to what has been covered by the other witnesses?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you present at any negotiations of June 21 or June 22, 1937?

Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, in view of the witness' last two responses, respondent renews its objection to his being excluded from testifying, because it is apparent that no one could determine now whether he has any new matters or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, you have been present every day of this hearing, haven't you?

Mr. Stottle: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: And you, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: I have been absent a day or two.

[fol. 6290] Trial Examiner Batten: But you have had Mr. Patten or Mr. Lane, or someone, representing you every day of this hearing, have you not?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Mr. Stottle: But, Mr. Examiner, I have never discussed with Mr. McConaughey one word as to what his negotiations were—

Trial Examiner Batten: I want the record to show that while the witnesses have not been here all of the time, the attorneys have been."

166. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in excluding and refusing to receive and consider the testimony of witness Jack McConaughey in response to the questions hereinafter quoted, the evidence sought to be elicited being competent, relevant and material to show the fact that employees of respondent had reasonable cause to believe that threats were being made against them and the attitude of mind caused thereby, all showing a true, vital and moving cause leading them to consult attorneys as to means of protection and leading and causing ultimately the organization of intervener, tending to disprove allegations of the complaint.

Intervener further excepts to the prejudicial error shown by the Trial Examiner's comments with respect to the testimony excluded to the effect that he did not consider such evidence material, thereby showing that in reaching his findings and conclusions and recommendations he excluded from consideration all testimony offered by respondent and intervener showing that fear and the desire for protection motivated the action of respondent's employees in forming their union, thereby disproving the contention that the union was organized, dominated and sponsored by respondent.

The refusal to hear the testimony excluded is prejudicial error and not cured by an offer to receive testimony in the form of written offers of proof for all reasons stated in [fol. 6291] the previous two exceptions Nos. 164 and 165, and for the further reason that the comments of the Trial Examiner show his mind closed on the subject and that the reception of further testimony thereon would be of no avail.

The questions, objections, comments of the Trial Examiner, motion to strike and ruling sustaining the same with respect to witness McConaughey, read (Tr. pp. 2838-2841):

"Q. Did you hear of any threats that the same proceedings would be taken as to employees of the Donnelly companies as were being taken against employees at the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri plants?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler) What was the attitude of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company during March, 1937, in regard to the possible action of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against them.

A. Everyone felt that—I talked to numbers of them on my job in the service department at that time—I talked to hundreds of people every day, and they were all expressing concern over the happenings that were taking place all over town, and many of them told me of having heard directly from people they knew there, or else overheard people who were in the line of strikers, that we were going to be the next on the list, which naturally caused an agitated state of mind throughout the plant and no one could pursue his job with a great deal of peace of mind, because he didn't know at what time he was going to be kept from coming into the building himself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I think I have indicated previously on this matter of violence and this situation in Kansas City that I didn't think it was material, and therefore asked the respondent to make an offer of proof.

And I think yesterday I indicated, on this attitude of mind of the employees as a result of this situation, that I didn't consider it material.

Therefore, I will ask that you prepare an offer of proof on it, because I don't think the respondent can be held responsible for a situation that is a matter of employees' organization by unions and matters of that kind.

I think I have stated before, I don't think it is material to the issue as to whether or not the respondent formed this union, dominates it, or sponsors it. Therefore, I would ask that you prepare an offer of proof on that question.

[fol. 6292] Mr. Tyler: I wanted to make it clear I wasn't waiving my point heretofore made on that matter. Hereafter, then, I will offer a written offer of proof on that point, without endeavoring to go into it with individual witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. And I want to say, as I said to Mr. Ingraham yesterday, the offer of proof which you make will have the same force and effect as though you had presented the witness here and offered it that way.

Mr. Langsdale: What about this answer he just made to the last question? Does that stand, so that it will be the subject of cross-examination?

Trial Examiner Batten: I permitted the questions to be asked up to the point where I could tell what it was all about. I thought Mr. Tyler was going into that subject matter.

Mr. Langsdale: There is one phase of the answer I want to cross-examine on if the answer stands.

Trial Examiner Batten. Of course, I do not expect to have cross-examination on a matter which I have asked for an offer of proof on and stated that I don't consider it to be material. Therefore, I wouldn't consider the witness' answer or the question material.

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner has already ruled that it is, in his opinion, incompetent and not admissible, and therefore when I offer this written proof I may expect you to make the same ruling, I would see no ground for cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe I said it was incompetent. I don't think I used that term.

Mr. Tyler: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: But any offers of proof the parties offer, Mr. Tyler, when they are offered I intend to make a ruling, as I stated at the beginning of this hearing, that will be served on all of the parties. You cannot assume that I will make the same ruling, because I might change my mind and want to hear all of that testimony.

Mr. Langsdale: I move to strike the answer of the witness to the last question.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

[fol. 6293] 167. To the action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to hear witnesses on behalf of intervener, who would testify on the witness stand under the eyes of the Trial Examiner, on the subject of freedom from domination and the exercise of the witnesses free will and choice in the matter of bargaining representatives and union affiliation on the subject of the meeting of April 27, on the subject of the meeting between March 27 and April 5, it being material and prejudicial error on the part of the Trial Examiner to refuse to hear any and all evidence of witnesses personally present and testifying on said subjects in view of the fact that the Trial Examiner's findings, conclusions and recommendations show that he did not believe the testimony that he did hear and did not believe the testimony offered in written offers of proof of witnesses who were not permitted to testify, and whose testimony might have been sufficient to overcome the belief of the Trial Examiner that the witnesses he did hear testified falsely, and to change his findings and conclusions on the points involved. The consideration of the testimony proferred by intervener and respondent on such subjects, if the same was considered, would not cure the error excepted to since the Trial Examiner refused to believe the evidence of any and all witnesses in behalf of respondent and intervener, whether the same was given on the witness stand or merely offered in the offer of proof of absent and excluded witnesses. The action and rulings, and exceptions thereto, of the Trial Examiner so excluding and refusing to hear additional competent, relevant and material testimony on such subjects appears in the following portion of the record (Tr. 2857-2859):

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, on the three matters this witness has testified to, one being the last question you just asked, of his own free will, if you call a witness [fol. 6294] for some other purpose—I don't know as there is any objection to asking that question, although I don't consider it material to ask a witness that on the stand. From the respondent yesterday I asked for an offer of proof on that, so I don't want you to think that by passing the matter up—In other words, if you contemplate calling 1,200 employees and asking them that question, it is an entirely different matter.

On the meeting of April 27, which this witness testified to unless you have witnesses that can add something to what has already been testified to, I don't want you to offer any further witnesses on it. You may make it in an offer of proof.

As to the March 27 to April 5 meeting, I permitted this witness to testify, because I thought perhaps he would be able to definitely place the date. Now, unless other witnesses have something to add to the testimony we have already received on this meeting, you may make an offer of proof as to that.

Mr. Tyler: I understand, then, as to any testimony regarding the April 27 meeting, unless I have some item about it hitherto not touched upon it is your ruling that I need not ask succeeding witnesses those questions, but to make an offer of proof on it?

Trial Examiner Batten: You do not need to present another witness for the purpose of having the witness sworn and ask the question and then have the witness stopped. You may make your offer the same as if the witnesses were here and sworn.

Mr. Tyler: And the same ruling as to the meeting held about the last of March or first of April?

Trial Examiner Batten: As to any offer of proof you make.

Mr. Tyler: And as to the other matter, the free will of the witnesses, of course Your Honor understands my position, that that is as much a fact as his indigestion or whether he has a broken leg, and the best way to get that is to ask him about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You say it is an objective like a broken leg. I can see a broken leg, but I can't see this witness' mental reaction to that question.

Mr. Tyler: The best way you can is to hear him testify about it. As to that question, shall I put that in an offer of proof?

Trial Examiner Batten: If you intend, as Mr. Ingraham indicated to me that he did, calling a very large number of witnesses to testify to that point, I say you had better submit it in the form of an offer of proof. If you submit witnesses on other matters and you incidentally ask them that question, I have no objection, although I still don't consider it material, for the reasons I have previously stated in the record, but I wouldn't have any objection to it."

[fol. 6295] 168. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner excluding testimony of threats of violence against employees of the Donnelly Company if they did not join the International as evidence of one cause of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union (Tr. p. 2996):

"Mr. Patten: Mr. Examiner, the intervener offers to prove by this witness, and others, that threats were made in their presence in connection with physical acts of violence, which they personally witnessed, to the effect that these acts of violence were only circumstances to show what would be done to the Donnelly Garment Company employees when the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union started its drive to organize the Donnelly plant.

Trial Examiner Batten: And the other witnesses' testimony would be substantially the same as this testimony?

Mr. Patten: And that those threats were made in connection with the International Ladies' Garment Workers'

Union. The other witnesses' testimony would be substantially the same or similar to that we have offered—that this witness has testified to and Your Honor has ordered stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused."

169. To the action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive in evidence the affidavits of 1165 individual employees of the Donnelly Garment Company as to their free choice and preference of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and their desire that the National Labor Relations Board hold an election to prove that fact as filed with the National Labor Relations Board on June 7, 1939, as evidence of such free-will choice of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and in response to the Examiner's ruling that offer of proof might be made of the testimony of individual employees as to their voluntary membership in such union by choice. (Tr. pp. 3041-3042 and 3045):

"Mr. Tyler: It is admitted by attorneys for the Board, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the respondent, and the intervener, that Arch S. Welch, if present in court, would testify that the 37 photographs which I now hand the stenographer are photographs taken [fol. 6296] by him on the afternoon of Friday, July 9, 1937, of 37 sheets of paper, each containing an affidavit signed by a number of individuals and acknowledged before a notary public, the whole bound together under a cover which was stamped indicating that it had been filed with the National Labor Relations Board on June 7, 1939; and that he made photographs of such sheets of paper bound together under that exhibit stamp; and that these photographs are photographs of each page, and nothing else, and that there are no alterations, substractions, additions, or changes.

I now offer in evidence the exhibit, which I will ask the stenographer to mark intervener's exhibit No. 18, lettering it from A to whatever that results in.

(Thereupon the photographs above referred to were marked for identification "Intervener's Exhibit No. 20-A to 20KK, inclusive.")

Mr. Tyler: That is an affidavit for an election.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are offering these?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: Any objection?

Mr. Leary: I don't understand the purpose of the offer.

Mr. Tyler: It goes to the choice and free will of these employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and as to whether they were dominated by their employer or not in forming the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Leary: I submit, Mr. Examiner, that is an improper way of trying to show such testimony. There is no showing that the witnesses are not available.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't suppose that the witnesses are available, because I did advise the respondent and the intervener I didn't want them to call all of the employees down here and ask them the very questions that are in these exhibits. I presume that is why the witnesses are not here.

* * * * * * *

At page 3045:

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is refused now as an offer of proof."

170. To the action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to strike out the testimony of Mrs. Gray as to a meeting [fol. 6297] concerning which no evidence was offered as to any connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Donnelly Garment Company or that anything said or done thereat could in any way bind either organization: (Tr. 3062)

"Mr. Tyler: I would like to move to strike out all of the rebuttal testimony offered by Mr. Langsdale from Mrs. Gray, on the ground that there is no evidence that she was acting on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Donnelly Garment Company, and that nothing said or done at that meeting could in any way bind the respondent or the intervener.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied."

171. To the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive competent, relevant and material evidence proferred by intervener as to the reasons why the members of intervener union prefer it as their bargaining representative to any other union they know about, and to give their reasons for such preference, the said testimony so excluded being competent, relevant and material to show that intervener's members do genuinely, of their own free will, prefer intervener union, and that their membership therein is not the result of domination, coercion or influence of the employer. The error in refusing to hear, except and consider said testimony from witnesses testifying in the presence and hearing of the Trial Examiner is not cured by the Trial Examiner's offer to receive a written offer of proof as to what the testimony of absent and unseen witnesses would be upon said subjects for the reason that the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner indicate that he did not believe or consider relevant and material the testimony on such subjects offered by intervener and respondent, and under such circumstances his refusal to receive and hear further witnesses whose testimony might have changed his mind, [fol. 6298] was prejudicial error against respondent and intervener.

Intervener further excepts to the error of the Trial Examiner indicated in his statement in the material hereinafter quoted that the evidence of witnesses testifying upon said subject would be immaterial and worthless, and to his error in assuming, as is necessarily implied from his statement hereinafter quoted, that all witnesses proferred upon said subject would commit perjury, and to his error in assuming and prejudging, as shown by said statement, that the witnesses offered by intervener and respondent were in fear of the management of the company, and in assuming that the testimony would be worthless because of such assumed fear.

The rulings referred to excluding such testimony, and the objections of the intervener thereto, appear in the following extract from the record (Tr. 2922-2924):

"Q. Do you personally prefer the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as your bargaining representative to any other union you know about?

A. Yes, sir, I certainly do.

Q. What are your reasons for preferring the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Well, in the first place—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Mr. Tyler, I don't think it is material what her reasons are. She has a perfect right, as an employee of this company, to select any union she wants.

Mr. Tyler: I submit, one of the questions involved here is whether she does prefer it or whether the company is so dominating her that she has to belong to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean by that, you contemplate calling all of the employees to testify to this question?

Mr. Tyler: I contemplate calling a large number.

Trial Examiner Batten: I can tell you now, I do not intend to listen to them.

[fol. 6299] Mr. Tyler: Well, on the present question—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): She may answer this. I just don't think you should call these employees and put them on the stand and say, "Now, is this the union you want?" And so on, and so forth. This is no place to determine what the employees want. An election is the place to determine that. The thing we are trying to determine in this hearing is, did this company have anything to do with forming this union, or sponsoring it? That is the question we are trying to determine.

Mr. Tyler: We are not, also, endeavoring to determine whether the employer is now dominating it or dominating these employees?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, but you couldn't determine it by having these girls get up on the stand and testify here, in front of the management. The place to determine that is by secret election, where they can vote and no one know how they vote. If you have a large number of witnesses to offer on that, you may make an offer of proof, because I don't intend to sit here and let you call all of these girls up here to testify whether they want this union to represent them.

Mr. Tyler: Does that ruling go into effect immediately preceeding this witness?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

Mr. Tyler: You may answer.

A. In the first place, we are able to be independent and manage our own affairs. We think we understand the needs of our plant better than anybody outside can understand them. What affects somebody in New York or Los Angeles doesn't affect us here.

And not only that, it is much more economical.

It gives us the right to bargain with our employer rather than through someone else."

172. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive and consider the testimony of Effie Weigand, a witness produced by the intervener, to the effect that she had heard the testimony of Velma Dowdy in the trial of the injunction suit between respondent, intervener and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union before Judge Miller; that a portion of that testimony concerned dues, assessments, fines and costs which the said Velma Dowdy was required to pay as a condition of her membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, that the said testimony so heard was one [fol. 6300] of the reasons for said witness Weigand's preference for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union over any other union and, all of said testimony being competent, relevant and material to show that the respondent's employees were not motivated by fear or favoritism of their employer, but by their own free will choice founded upon the consideration of financial saving. The reception of said evidence by the Trial Examiner did not cure the error in excluding the testimony by this witness and other witnesses, it appearing from the Trial Examiner's findings, conclusions and recommendations that the evidence received on said subject was disbelieved or considered insufficient to overcome the Trial Examiner's finding that intervener was a dominated union and did not represent the free will choice of said employees.

Intervener further excepts to the error manifested by the Trial Examiner in his statement with respect to the evidence referred to that he did not consider it material to the issues.

The offer of said evidence, the rulings of the Trial Examiner and objections thereto; appear in the following portion of the record. (Tr. 2939-2944):

"Q. Did you ever hear Velma Dowdy testify in that case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did her testimony have any affect upon your choice as to what union you wanted to belong to?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not tending to prove or disprove any issue in this case. In the Miller case this witness testified how much dues were paid by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and I suppose that is what you want her to testify to here.

Mr. Tyler: That is what I am leading up to.

Mr. Langsdale: And I say it is immaterial to this case, the difference between the dues paid by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the dues paid by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 6301] Trial Examiner Batten: If that is the purpose, I want to ask you, Mr. Tyler, how you think it is material. As I have previously stated, the employees can select their own union, one where the dues are nothing, or one where they are $10 a week. The Board has nothing to do with the union the employees select. As long as that union is not dominated or influenced by the company, the employees have a right to select any union they want to select, and pay any dues they want to pay.

Mr. Tyler: I agree with you. And I think that is the purpose of the Wagner Act, to do that.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the only prime purpose.

Mr. Tyler: My theory is, it must be determined whether these employees are operating the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union out of either fear or favoritism of their employer, or whether they are doing it by their own wish. And, in order to show they are doing it by their own choice, they should be allowed to state the reasons for that choice, and whether those reasons are probable or improbable should throw some light on whether they are telling the truth.

If this witness testifies she saves a substantial amount of money by belonging to this union over which she would be forced to pay if she belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): She wouldn't be forced to pay it unless she joined it, would she?

Mr. Tyler: No, but it has been shown that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union wanted to organize these people.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is not in this case. Wouldn't it be possible to have a union which was absolutely dominated by the employer, and they, not knowing it, would freely join it and pay their dues?

Mr. Tyler: No, I don't think that is possible. If the employees, in their own minds, desired to belong to that union, their reason might be bad, and they might be even deceived by the employer, yet they have a right to that union.

Q. They have a right to the union, but the union hasn't any right to represent the employees if it is formed by the employer, sponsored by the employer, or dominated by the employer.

Mr. Tyler: I submit, the reason for the employees choosing this union is the most vital kind of evidence as to whether the company does dominate it or not.

Mr. Langsdale: The objection I want to make to this testimony—This witness testified she joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in 1937, April 27, I assume. She didn't hear the Dowdy testimony until 1939, so manifestly, [fol. 6302] it couldn't have had any effect on her joining a union.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material to the issues in this case. I think this lady has a personal right to join any union she wants to join, and if she prefers the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union she doesn't have to give the Labor Board or anybody else any reason for joining it. She doesn't have to show the Labor Board she has a reason. She may join it because the first name of it starts with a D and the last word in the name starts with a U.

Mr. Tyler: I agree, she doesn't have to give the Labor Board any reason, but I submit she has a right to give a reason in sustaining that it was her own free choice.

Trial Examiner Batten: Nobody is questioning Mrs. Weigand's reason for joining this union.

Mr. Tyler: The Board is questioning the reason for the majority of employees joining this union.

Trial Examiner Batten: No the Labor Board is not questioning her reason for joining this union.

Mr. Tyler: Is it questioning that of any employee whatever?

Trial Examiner Batten: We are not interested in the reason for joining.

Mr. Tyler: But we are interested in the reason the great bulk of them have for joining, are we not?

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think so.

Mr. Tyler: I have not included this lady's testimony in the offer of proof in the Judge Miller case.

Trial Examiner Batten: We are interested in it to this extent, whether or not she knows whether any executive or officer of this company influenced her to join it, or whether she was told by any such person to join it, or if she knows of any officer of the company who helps operate it or helped form it.

Mr. Tyler: I will ask her those questions but before doing so, I understand Your Honor excludes her answering the questions as to the effect the testimony of Velma Dowdy had on her?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove, this witness, if permitted to testify, would testify as follows:—I am going to read her testimony in the Judge Miller case.

* * * * * * *

At page 2944:

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler said he is offering it to show the financial difference.

[fol. 6303] Mr. Langsdale: As to the amount of dues.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that it?

Mr. Tyler: For her reason for the choice of this union.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think, on that basis, Mr. Tyler, it would be better if you make a written offer, and then we will know what you are offering. You undoubtedly have several other witnesses on this same matter you contemplate using?

Mr. Tyler: I will prepare a written offer, and I will include this witness in that offer."

173. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in excluding the evidence of witness Mabel Riggs and all other witnesses proferred by intervener on the subject of her free will and freedom from domination in joining intervener union, said evidence being competent, relevant and material to prove said union to be the free will, said union to have been organized and maintained without promotion, domination, interference or assistance of the respondent, but as the genuine free will choice of the employees, the exclusion of said evidence being prejudicial error against respondent and intervener and for all of the reasons set forth in intervener's exception No. 167 hereinabove. The portion of the record excluding said evidence and refusing to receive any further evidence on said subject, and the objections of intervener thereto appear in the following portion of the record (Tr. pp. 2964-2965):

"Q. You belong to that association by your own free will and accord?

A. I do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, I don't want to have to, with every witness you put on— That is on the list I asked you to make an offer of proof on. I don't want to have to be in the position of having to say, as you put these witnesses on, "No, that is included in your offer of proof." I like to assume the attorneys know, if I call for an offer of proof, as the respondent's attorneys did—they furnished the offer of proof, and then they didn't try to go any farther with it. That amply protects your interests, it seems to me.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Is your ruling now that the question, ". . . of your own free will and accord?" shall be included only in the offer of proof?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is better if it is, Mr. Tyler."

174. To the denial of due process of law to intervener and respondent involved in the matters excepted to in exceptions Nos. 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169 and 171 hereinabove stated, the errors in said exceptions complained of, for all of the reasons stated in said exceptions, having operated to deprive intervener's members of a fair hearing and of their freedom of association and property rights and contract guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

175. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner in permitting the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to cross-examine witness Mabel Riggs on the subject to which the Trial Examiner had refused to receive further evidence in behalf of respondent and intervener, the said error, objections and rulings thereon appearing in the following portion of the record, (Tr. 2966-2969):

"Q. Who is the supervisor in that department?

A. The head of the department is Miss Spilsbury.

Q. Who was the supervisor there in 1937?

A. Miss Spilsbury—Well, I don't know. We always call her the head of the department. I suppose you mean by that, supervisor.

Q. Did you have anyone you called supervisor in April, 1937?

Mr. Tyler: Did I understand the Examiner to rule he would restrict the cross-examination to any new matters brought up?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. I said I was requesting that.

[fol. 6305] Mr. Tyler: Then, I object—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting): Here is a witness that has not been available to me yet. This is something I think is important.

Trial Examiner Batten: The thing is this—and it is very certain: I am not going to ask for offers of proof from the respondent and the intervener, and then permit the Board's or the union's attorney to cross-examine these witnesses on everything they please. We have to have some sort of understanding on this, or I am not going to attempt to make any restrictions at all. I don't think it is fair for me to ask the respondent to make offers of proof on these matters—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): I don't think this matter—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Let me finish.—and ask the intervener to make offers of proof on many matters, and then turn these witnesses over to the Board's or the union's attorney for cross-examination on anything they want to cross-examine them on. I do not consider that fair at all.

Mr. Langsdale: If I have something that in my mind is important and has not been gone into before, you mean I am foreclosed?

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't say that.

Mr. Leary: Is it your position, Mr. Examiner, that we are foreclosed only on the matters you are requiring offers of proof on?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

* * * * * * *

At page 2968:

Trial Examiner Batten: As I understand it, the purpose of this is to show the relationship of the person that is in the department who was over this lady, and so forth. I think I understand your purpose.

Now, of course, you have placed me in an exceedingly embarrassing position in this way, I hesitate to say to any attorney who is cross-examining the witness, and can't say, as you well know, that I want you to make an offer of proof on the matter you propose to examine this witness about. I think all of you attorneys know that when it comes to cross-examination I cannot say to any attorney, "Make an offer of proof." I can only say this—I am not going to stop you, Mr. Langsdale. You may proceed."

[fol. 6306] 176. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner (Board's Ex. 1-SSSS, par. 2, subparagraph (a)) receiving in evidence Board's Exhibit 28, said exhibit being a statement reflecting the facts and figures of respondent's time-workers' payroll records as to certain employees for the period from April 15, 1937, to July 15, 1937, said exhibit being irrelevant and immaterial to prove any issue in the case, so limited in the period covered as to be prejudicial to intervener and respondent, opening up collateral issues, the facts disclosed being insufficient and too speculative to prove any charge of the complaint, and not binding upon respondent or intervener.

Intervener further excepts to the ruling in said paragraph overruling respondent's objection to Board's Exhibit 28.

177. Intervener excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner contained in paragraph 2, subparagraph (g) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS, refusing to receive and consider certain proffered evidence in respondent's offer of proof (Board's Ex. 1-JJJJ) because the said ruling is indefinite and uncertain and it is impossible to tell what portions of said evidence in said offer were received and what portions were barred.

Intervener further excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner on paragraph 1 of intervener's motion to clarify the ruling in said paragraph (g) of Exhibit 1-SSSS, which said motion was filed with the Board on September 8, 1939.

178. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner contained in paragraph 2 (h) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS, refusing to receive and consider certain unspecified evidence in respondent's offer of proof, Board's Exhibit 1-OOOO, it being impossible to determine from said ruling what portions of said proof were excluded and what portions received.

[fol. 6307] Intervener further excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner overruling paragraph 2 of the intervener's motion to clarify rulings filed September 8, 1939, said motion to clarify being directed to paragraph 2 (h) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS.

179. To the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner contained in Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS, subparagraph (i) of paragraph 2, refusing to receive and consider portions of evidence contained in intervener's offer of proof (Board's Ex. 1-RRRR), said ruling, because of indefiniteness and uncertainty, making it impossible to determine what portions of said evidence were received and what excluded.

Intervener further excepts to the Trial Examiner's ruling denying paragraph 3 of intervener's motion to clarify rulings with respect to said ruling referred to in the previous paragraph.

180. Intervener excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner (Board's Ex. 1-SSSS, par. 2 (j)), excluding unspecified portions of the evidence proffered in respondent's exhibit (NRA-JMC Ex. 3), said ruling making it impossible to determine what portions of evidence so proffered were received and what portions excluded.

Intervener further excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner on paragraph 4 of intervener's motion to clarify, filed September 8, 1939, with respect to the ruling complained of in the preceding paragraph.

181. Intervener excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner (Board's Ex. 1-SSSS, par. 2 (k)), excluding unspecified portions of intervener's exhibit (NRA-JMC Ex. 8), it being impossible to determine from said ruling what portions of said proffered testimony were [fol. 6308] accepted and what portions rejected.

Intervener further excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner overruling intervener's motion to clarify paragraph 5, filed September 8, 1939, with respect to the ruling complained of in the previous paragraph.

182. Intervener excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner (Board's Ex. 1-SSSS, par. 2 (l)), overruling respondent's objection (Board's Ex. 1-UUUU, par. 4); to Board's and Union's NRA-JMC Ex. 17, and accepting portions or all of said testimony, it being impossible to determine from said rulings whether all, or if not all what part of said proffered testimony was received.

Intervener further excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner overruling paragraph 6 of intervener's motion to clarify, filed September 8, 1939, with respect to the ruling complained of in the previous paragraph.

183. Intervener excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner (Board's Ex. 1-SSSS par. 2 (m)), it being impossible to determine from said ruling for what purpose the evidence referred to was accepted and for what purpose the same was excluded.

Intervener further excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner denying paragraph 7 of intervener's motion to clarify, filed September 8, 1939, with respect to the ruling referred to in the preceding paragraph.

184. Intervener excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner denying paragraph 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 of intervener's motion to clarify, filed September 8, 1939.

Wherefore, intervener prays the Board that its except-[fol. 6309] tions be sustained, the intermediate report be disapproved and the complaint dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,

[fol. 6319]

32.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to accept or consider Respondent's Offer of Proof (Board's Exhibit 1-QQQQ) as to paragraph 2, Section A, of Respondent's Answer.

33.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to sustain each and all the defenses and grounds for dismissal of the Complaint set forth in Part A of Respondent's Answer herein.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial [fol. 6320] Examiner to sustain each and all the defenses and grounds for dismissal of the Complaint set forth in Part B of respondent's Answer herein.

35.

Respondent excepts to the statement of the Trial Examiner in paragraph 2 (f) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS that the respondent stated in the record that no offer of proof would be made on Part A of the Answer, for the reason that said statement overlooks respondent's offer of proof (Board's Exhibit 1-QQQQ) as to part A of its Answer.

36.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner contained in paragraph 2 (j) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS in so far as the effect or consideration of the evidence contained in respondent's NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 is limited by the following language in said ruling: "Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects".

(a) Respondent further excepts to said part of said ruling because the same is so vague and uncertain as not to apprize respondent as to what parts of the evidence in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 the Trial Examiner by said ruling considers or excludes or refuses to consider. Respondent is thereby de[illegible]ed and has been denied a fair and impartial [fol. 6321] hearing herein and due process of law, as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(b) Respondent further excepts to said quoted part of said ruling of the Trial Examiner in so far as same constitutes a rejection, refusal or failure to consider any part of the testimony of Elizabeth Reeves contained in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 upon any of the issues or "subjects" referred to in said ruling. (Respondent is unable to make this exception more specific because of the vagueness and uncertainty of said ruling of the Trial Examiner).

(c) Respondent further excepts to said quoted part of said ruling of the Trial Examiner in so far as same constitutes a rejection, refusal or failure to consider any part of the testimony of witnesses Bachofer, Reeves, Keyes, Stites, Rosenfield, Gordon, Ruden, Dowdy, Kilby, Sprofera, Ball, Jeters, Rickett, Cauthen, Smith, Redish, Shartzer,

Warren, Ingraham, Hull, Perlstein, Fry, Dubinsky, Tobin, Mrs. Reed, Allison, Atchison, Wales, Owen, Rutherford, Reidel, Lutz, Patton, Neimoyer, Perkins, Richards, Stroup, White, or any of them, contained in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 upon any of the issues or "subjects" referred to in said ruling. (Respondent is unable to make this exception more specific because of the vagueness and uncertainty of said ruling of the Trial Examiner.)

[fol. 6322] 37.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in Paragraph 2 (k) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS in so far as the effect or consideration of the evidence contained in NRA-JMC Exhibit 8 is limited by the following language in said ruling: "Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects".

(a) Respondent further excepts to said part of said ruling because the same is so vague and uncertain as not to apprize respondent as to what parts of the evidence in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 8 the Trial Examiner by said ruling considers or excludes or refuses to consider. Respondent is thereby denied and has been denied a fair and impartial hearing herein and due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(b) Respondent further excepts to said quoted part of said ruling of the Trial Examiner in so far as same constitutes a rejection, refusal or failure to consider any part of the testimony of any of the witnesses contained in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 8 upon any of the issues or "subjects" referred to in said ruling. (Respondent is unable to make this exception more specific because of the vagueness and uncertainty of said ruling of the Trial Examiner.)

[fol. 6323] 38.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in paragraph 2 (l) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS overruling respondent's objections (Board's Exhibit 1-UUUU, part 4) to Board's and Union's NRA-JMC Exhibit 17.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner contained in paragraph 2 (m) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS in so far as the effect or consideration of the evidence contained in respondent's NRA-JMC Exhibit 17 is limited by the following language in said ruling: "Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects".

(a) Respondent further excepts to said quoted part of said ruling because the same is so vague and uncertain as not to apprize respondent as to what parts of the evidence in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 17 the Trial Examiner by said ruling considers or excludes or refuses to consider. Respondent is thereby denied and has been denied a fair and impartial hearing herein and due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(b) Respondent further excepts to said quoted part of said ruling of the Trial Examiner in so far as same constitutes a rejection, refusal or failure to consider any part of the testimony of any of the witnesses contained in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 17 upon any of the issues or "subjects" [fol. 6324] referred to in said ruling. (Respondent is unable to make this exception more specific because of the vagueness and uncertainty of said ruling of the Trial Examiner.)

Respondent further excepts to said rulings of the Trial Examiner contained in paragraphs 2 (j), 2 (k), and 2 (m) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS, because the Trial Examiner's conclusions and findings in the Intermediate Report show that he failed and refused to consider material evidence favorable to respondent contained in said NRA-JMC Exhibits.

Respondent makes this exception on the ground that all of the NRA, Loyalty League, or other testimony concerning conditions or events existing or occurring prior to the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act is irrelevant and immaterial and does not tend to prove that respondent, after the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act, did any act prohibited by the Act and that therefore none of such evidence should have been received or considered, but that (without waiving said objection) if such evidence offered by the Board or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is received or considered, then such evidence offered by respondent should be received and considered.

40.

Respondent excepts to the action and ruling of the Trial Examiner on October 2, 1939, denying motion of respond-
[fol. 6325] ent herein, entitled "Motion to Clarify Rulings of Trial Examiner" filed with the Trial Examiner on or about September 6, 1939; and severally excepts to the denial of each and every the several motions and requests for clarification set forth in said Motion.

Respondent also excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner denying a like Motion for Clarification filed by Intervener herein.

41.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner, on October 2, 1939, denying Motion of Respondent herein, filed with the Trial Examiner on or about September 12, 1939, for leave to file herein and make a part of the record, a certain petition for investigation and certification of representatives (which respondent had attempted to file with the National Labor Relations Board), and copy of the letter of the Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region to Donnelly Garment Company, dated September 8, 1939, refusing to file and docket said petition.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6426] 168.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of Paragraph 3 of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK) because none of the allegations therein contained is proved or supported by the evidence.

169.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of the following allegation in Paragraph 4 of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK): "* * * and its predecessor, Donnelly Loyalty League", is a "labor organization", because said allegation is not proved or supported by the evidence and said allegation does not charge or tend to charge any violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

198.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on Pages 130, 131 of the transcript of the record denying the application for an election made by the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and refusing to entertain in this proceeding a petition for an election.

199.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on Page 194 of the transcript of the record denying the motion of the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, for a continuance of this proceeding for the purpose of the Board's holding an election to determine the representatives of the majority of the employees of respondent and until the results of such election are known.

200.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on Page 214 of the transcript of the [fol. 6436] record denying, except as to paragraphs (o) and (p), respondent's Motion (Exhibit 1-ZZZ) to Strike Portions of the Complaint as set forth in said Motion.

201.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and comment of the Trial Examiner set forth on Page 228 of the transcript of the record that he was "not bound by the rules of evidence and why be bound by any technical proceedings of the Court", and to his comment on Page 229, to wit, "We will proceed on the basis I have just explained".

202.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner overruling objection to testimony regarding the Donnelly Loyalty League and admitting testimony concerning same, which ruling and action is set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Pages 272, 273:

"Q. Are you still a member of the Loyalty League?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Mr. Tyler: Just a moment, Mr. Examiner. I object to any testimony or questions in regard to the Donnelly Loyalty League, for the reason it is purely a social organization that has no connection whatever with the matters involved in this case or with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Tyler, they allege it is a labor organization, and I presume the only way I could determine that is to get some facts that will enable me to do it. So, I will overrule the objection."

[fol. 6437] 203.

4. Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit 2 over the objection of respondent and intervener, which ruling and action are set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 305, 306, as follows:

"Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 2.

"Mr. Ingraham: I object for the reason that there has been no showing that the Donnelly Company Athletic Club —what is the name of this? The N.D.A.A. represents the company in any shape, way, shape or form, and nothing that it publishes in any way is binding upon the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you are offering it in its entirety?

"Mr. Leary: I am, Mr. Examiner; yes, sir.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener desires to object to it on the ground that nothing done or said by the Athletic Association would be binding on the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any of their members; also, that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, at this stage in the proceeding, it is pretty difficult for me to determine what, if anything, has any relevancy. So I will receive it subject to the connection with later testimony. In other words, the first day this hearing starts, I certainly can't tell what relevancy anything has.

(The document heretofore marked as 'Board's Exhibit No. 2' was received in evidence.)"

204.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on Page 360 of the transcript of the record as follows:

[fol. 6438] Q. Your memory is a complete blank on this matter of a stenographer and how she was obtained and who she was and so forth?

Mr. Tyler: Well, I object to that as repetition and argument with his witness. She said she doesn't remember. I object to the method of cross-examination and browbeating of this witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, there is no browbeating or even indication of it thus far, not even a semblance of it thus far. I think Mr. Leary has been very gentlemanly, and that is what I expect all counsel to be in this hearing. Now, I am here for some purposes and if it got to the point in this hearing where anybody attempts to browbeat a witness, I will see that they are amply protected.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit that repeating the question with emphasis after she once answered it amounts to improper cross-examination, and it is not proper at this time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer".

205.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner striking of the answer of witness Rose Todd as set forth in the transcript of the record at Pages 428, 429, 430, as follows:

"Q. Well, did you know on April 22d that Fern Sigler was in the union?

"A. Mr. Leary, I am not clear on the date of that.

"Q. Well, that would be the day before this meeting.

"A. In the evening; possibly that night.

"Q. April 22d?

"A. It was either the 22d or the 23d. I don't know which it was. Whatever date that you say will have to stand, because I couldn't remember the date. It was the first time that I knew anything about Sylvia Hull. I didn't know anything about Fern Sigler until this morning. So, what,—in that conversation there, I don't think I am referring to Fern at the time. It was just a general discussion of different people, about their feeling toward people that belonged to the International Union. As you [fol. 6439] will remember, that feeling was created by the disturbance that was going on around town, and particularly up at 26th and Grand.

"Mr. Leary: I move, Mr. Examiner, that be stricken as not responsive.

"Mr. Leary: Let the whole answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The entire answer may be stricken,**."

206.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner overruling objection of respondent and intervener to the cross-examination by Mr. Langsdale, attorney for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of witnesses in this proceeding, which objections and ruling are set forth at pages 514, 515 of the transcript of the record as follows:

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, prior to Mr. Langsdale's cross-examination, I renew my objection as to his right to cross-examine this witness on the ground that he is taking the position adversary to that of the Board, which he, being counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which is the claimant in this case.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are overruled.

"Mr. Langsdale: Shall I proceed?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, sir."

Respondent excepts the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner concerning the witness Rose Todd and her testimony appearing on Pages 557 to 559 of the transcript of the record for the reason that same show the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against the [fol. 6440] respondent, and show his failure and refusal to consider testimony favorable to respondent and show that respondent was denied a fair and impartial hearing herein by the Trial Examiner and for the reason that the Trial Examiner was thereby attempting to intimidate and confuse the witness and inject into the record a highly prejudicial conclusion and statement concerning the said witness for the purpose of misleading the Labor Board and any Court that might review the evidence, and for the reason that said bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner were and are highly prejudicial to respondent in that same were carried forward into, and permeate, the findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner which comments and action of the Trial Examiner are set forth in the following excerpts from the record (pp. 557, 558, 559), to wit:

"Q. Did you discuss any one of the points that you recall?

"A. I surely did. I think I probably discussed—I think I probably should say, then, that I particularly discussed with her these piecework guarantees. Now, there were operators there, and they may have said something, too. No doubt they did.

"Q. Now, Miss Todd, 'may'—of course, 'may' anything. I don't want what may have happened or what might have happened. If you don't know anything about this meeting, just tell me you don't remember anything about it, and we will let it go.

"A. I just told you, Mr. Batten, that I could never forget that meeting the longest day I live.

"Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I want to except to your remarks. This witness hasn't said she knows nothing about this meeting. She said they discussed every single point.

[fol. 6441] "Trial Examiner Batten: I said as to specific things that transpired at the meeting. Now, when she says she discussed everything, Mr. Ingraham, surely you don't think that means anything from the standpoint of evidence, do you?

"Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think when she says they discussed every point, that that is about as far as anybody can go. You mean that she is to tell some conversation?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No, but I think that a person who attended one of these bargaining meetings, if that is all she can tell about it, I think she has a very, very faint recollection of what happened, not sufficient to accept in any way, in any form, as evidence of anything.

"Mr. Ingraham: I except to Your Honor's remarks.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may except, but I am saying that I don't think it amounts to anything.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener wishes to except, also, and calls your Honor's attention to the fact that this meeting occurred more than two years ago, attended by many people, that the results of it were principalized (crystallized) in written form, which is the summary of the witness' memory of what was done; that there is no provision or presumption that she doesn't remember conversations connected with it, any further than that, that her evidence is, you say, worthless.

If the court will recall, she has testified that these demands were submitted as demands of the union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, my only position about this witness is this: that either she has an extremely poor memory or else she doesn't want to remember some of these things. Now, you may take exceptions to that, because that is clearly, Mr. Tyler, my impression thus far of this witness' testimony, and I think, as the Examiner in this hearing, I have a perfect right to express such an opinion, and instead of expressing it in my report, I express it now so you may take the necessary exceptions to it.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts to the remark.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener excepts.

"Mr. Ingraham: As highly prejudicial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is incorrect, I think it is, Mr. Ingraham.

[fol. 6442] "Mr. Ingraham: I think it is incorrect.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I doubt if anyone present could state what question Mr. Leary last asked, and that occurred less than an hour ago.

208.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner appearing on Pages 640, 641 of the transcript of the record, overruling respondent's objections to the witness being permitted to interpret a written contract and permitting the witness to give her interpretation of said contract, which said objections and rulings are disclosed by the following excerpts from the record, to wit:

"Q. Let us take in this same person with the $18 guarantee, who worked during certain weeks only 20 hours, but who during those 20 hours of work earned only $9, or rather $8.50, on a piecework basis. What would be the person's pay check for that week.

A. I am not very good at mathematics.

"Mr. Stottle: The respondent doesn't object to the witness telling what she can about that, but we do object to a witness trying to interpret a written contract, which is here in evidence, and  allow those interpretations of a written contract to be deemed as binding on the respondent. We don't believe that is proper.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, don't you think, Mr. Stottle, a person who is a party to the contract has a right to give their idea of how it should be interpreted; whether it is binding, I am not passing on that, but surely the person who signed it ought to be in a position to say what they think about it.

"Mr. Leary: I will withdraw the questio., if Mr. Stottle will point that portion out in the contract to me.

"Mr. Stottle: I say, there is a written contract that provides, that all of that is provided about the guarantee:

[fol. 6443] "Mr. Leary: Will you point that particular part out to me now?

Trial Examiner Batten: The witness may answer the question. I have said she is qualified as a party to this contract to give her idea of what it is.

209.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner permitting the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to cross-examine the Board's witnesses and other witnesses over the objection of the respondent and the intervener appearing on Page 650 through Page 654 of the transcript of the record, which objections and rulings are disclosed by the following excerpt from the transcript, to wit:-

"Mr. Lane: Now, if the Examiner pleases, before Mr. Langsdale begins any examination of this witness, I desire to object to counsel for the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union being permitted to interrogate this witness or to cross examine this witness, for the reason that counsel for that organization, the claimant in this case, having during the entire progress of this hearing sat across the counsel table from the attorneys for the Board, have continuously and constantly consulted with the attorneys for the Board, have been in numerous conferences with them, have passed notes back and forth across the counsel table, have participated in directing the course of the examination made by the Board's counsel of this witness, to permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which has shown itself to be so identified with the Board in this case, it being the complaining party, as to have a unity of interest and to be essentially the same as the Board in this case, for purposes of prosecuting this case. To permit counsel to interrogate this witness at this time would permit a double cross-examination by the same parties of this witness. This witness has, over our objection, been subjected to what we consider cross-examination for pretty nearly three days, and to now permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to take over examination at this point, and further cross-examine, or to cross-examine this witness at all, would be unfair to this witness, would be illegal examination, and—[fol. 6444] "Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, just a moment. Whenever you say a thing is illegal, I want you to tell me why. I mean, I can't accept that.

"Mr. Lane: On the ground that it is so far a departure from the rules of procedure and progress which obtain in courts of law, and which should obtain in administrative tribunals as to be a negation of the rules of fair play, as to deprive the intervener in this case of due process.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes the same objection.

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is very clear the rules permit a party to call witnesses, examine them, cross-examine them, and take part in the proceedings.

Mr. Langsdale, you may proceed."

210.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting Mr. Langsdale, as counsel for the International Union, to read into the record and interrogate the witness concerning a purported affidavit of Mrs. Reed given in another proceeding, over the objection of the Intervener and the Respondent as disclosed by the transcript of the record, pages 674 through 680, and from the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

"Q. Let me ask you if you have read or heard read the affidavit filed in that suit, signed by Nell Quinlan Reed, dated November 5, 1937, in which she stated, 'In the first place, a group of employees—

"Mr. Lane (Interrupting): Just a moment. I am objecting, of course, to his reading the affidavit made in that trial as not being proper cross-examination of this witness and an improper way of trying to get that into this record.

"Q. (Mr. Langsdale) Have you heard this part of Mrs. Reed's affidavit read:—

"Mr. Lane (Interrupting): Just a minute. The witness' testimony, as I understand it, is she has not read or heard read any portion of that affidavit.

[fol. 6445] "Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, there is no objection to asking her if she has? You don't mean this has anything to do with the evidence, because an attorney reads it in here? I suppose if you got up and read this whole case in here, line by line, then when you got through you asked the witness if she had ever heard it read before —It doesn't mean anything when the attorney reads it.

"Mr. Lane: I object to it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

"Q. (Mr. Langsdale) Let me ask you if you heard read in that lawsuit this part of Mrs. Reed's affidavit: "In the first place, a group of employees on or about March 18, 1937, came to my office and told me that all of the employees were going to meet and discuss ways and means to protect themselves against any assaults or acts of violence on the part of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.'

"A. I did not know that.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, if your Honor please, Mr. Langsdale asked this witness if she had read or heard read, rather, Mrs. Reed's affidavit, and then he proceeded to read from that affidavit, and he is still referring to some record and I think the inference is that he is still reading from an affidavit of Mrs. Reed, which would be confusing to the witness, when, in fact, he is not reading from Mrs. Reed's affidavit.

211.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's objection on Page 696 (697) of the transcript of the record to the examination by Mr. Langsdale of the witness upon matters gone into in chief by the Board's counsel and as to why the witness said certain things in the Exhibit referred to in the objection and to the Examiner's permitting the International Union to proceed as a separate and independent party in this proceeding, which rulings and action appear in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 696 (697), 698, 700, 703:

[fol. 6446] "Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this whole line of testimony on this exhibit for the reason that Mr. Leary went through the same exhibit and asked the same questions, and it is repetition, for one thing; and, for another thing, the transcript speaks for itself. As to why she said a certain thing or didn't say it is immaterial to any issue in the case. I believe the examiner in his own statements made some such remarks as that when this was gone into before.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume you are referring to this entire line of questioning, are you not?

"Mr. Stottle: As to this exhibit, yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am going to sustain the objection unless you take the position that you are an entirely independent and separate party to this action, Mr. Langsdale. If you are, then I will permit you to proceed as an entirely separate and independent party.

"Mr. Langsdale: I have taken that position, and I take it now.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we object to his being accorded the right to take that position.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not according it. The rules so provide. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is mentioned in this complaint. And if that is Mr. Langsdale's position, he may proceed as a separate and independent party and assume the responsibility for the conduct of his case independent of the Board's attorneys.

"Mr. Ingraham: If the Examiner please, if Mr. Langsdale is representing a separate party he should also apprise all other parties of the position he takes, and all other parties should have pleadings setting forth his position.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to complicate this question I have raised by the matter of pleadings. I will permit you to raise it when I get my point settled.

"Mr. Lane: We do not agree with your Honor's position. Our position is, if the Examiner please, this witness is produced by the Board, and that the I.L.G.W.U., by rule 5, is made a party to the proceeding, the complaint being filed in the name of the Board, and that in attempting to cross-examine this witness Mr. Langsdale is in effect attempting to cross-examine his own witness.

"There is not anything in rule 25 which gives the Board or Mr. Langsdale the right to cross-examine his own witness."

[fol. 6447] 212.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting counsel for the International Union to examine and cross-examine the witness, Rose Todd, concerning matters already gone into in chief by the Board's Counsel which repetition and examination appears in the transcript beginning at Page 730 and extending through Page 742, over the repeated objections of the respondent and the intervener appearing on said pages.

213.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 743, 744, to wit:

"Q. Now, despite the fact that you said on the 23d day of April that 'we're going to run an open shop', you presided at a meeting four days later where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I object to that for the reason the question omits certain important additions made in the statement as shown by the transcript. The full statement attributed to Miss Todd being 'We're going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way. The majority is going to rule, as always.'

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, now I object to his incorporating anything in my question. I have a right to take such parts of the statement as I desire to examine her about and not use her self-serving—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Read the question, please.

"(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter).

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer."

[fol. 6448] 214.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner overruling the objection of respondent to the question as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 750, to wit:

"Q. If you should have some person who had had years of experience in negotiating contracts with garment companies similar to yours who should go to work for the Donnelly Garment Company and you should want them to represent you, even though they had only been there a week—

"Mr. Stottle (Interrupting): Respondent objects to the question as being wholly argumentative and speculative as to what might happen in the future and what might happen.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If you will permit him to finish the question, Mr. Stottle.

"Mr. Stottle: I did wait a while.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale)—would you think you should be limited in your right to employ that person or any one else to represent you?

"Mr. Stottle: Now, Mr. Examiner, we renew the objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

215.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting counsel for the International Union to examine the witness concerning her interpretation of a written contract over the objection of the respondent and the intervenor and requiring the witness to testify to said matters, as shown by excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 754, 759, 760, 761, 762:

[fol. 6448-a] "Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the contract speaks for itself, whatever it may say, and we object to asking the witness to interpret something that is perfectly plain in whatever it says. If it wasn't plain I don't believe this witness would have the right to interpret a written contract.

* * * * * *

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Miss Todd, paragraph 11 of the working agreement entered into on May 27, 1937,

* * * * * *

'The employer agrees that the individual who may be chosen as general chairman of the union shall be entitled to spend the necessary time on the affairs of the union and to continue her employment with the company at the proportionate rate of pay hitherto received by the company in the time thereafter given to the company.'

"Will you tell me why you as a member of this contracting committee submitted to paragraph 11, placing a limitation upon the activities of the representatives of that union as paragraph 11 does limit them?

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as it does or if it does?

"Mr. Langsdale: As it does.

"Mr. Patten: Mr. Examiner, intervener objects to the question, adopting for that purpose the objection heretofore made by Mr. Stottle, and sustained, and the objection made by Mr. Lane; and further—

* * * * * *

"Mr. Patten: * * * We further object because the question assumes, as other questions have assumed, that this committee submitted to it. There is no evidence whatever that they submitted to anything. For that reason we ask that the question be excluded.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

"Mr. Langsdale: The union makes an offer to prove that this witness, if permitted to answer the question, would testify she intentionally desired to limit the activities of the representatives of the union for the purpose of crippling that representation, and, in addition to that, the further motive was developed by propaganda indulged in by the management of this company against union representation and the necessity therefor.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6448-b] "Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if this witness will answer as you have just said, I will permit you to ask the question, because you have said if she is permitted to testify she would testify in a certain way. On the basis of that you certainly can proceed.

"Mr. Patten: If the Examiner please, I suggest that Mr. Langsdale agree to be bound by the witness' answer. Otherwise his offer is improper.

* * * * * *

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Now, then, will you say why you did submit to the limitation of paragraph 11 upon the activities of the representatives of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

* * * * * *

"A. There are no limitations on the committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

They all take an active interest. They all have time at noon or after work, the same as I have, and you will find continuously through these minutes where they have done a lot of work and taken an active interest in it. I couldn't dominate those people if I wanted to.

"Mr. Langsdale: I move that the answer be stricken out as not responsive.

The question was, why did she submit to paragraph 11, which puts a limitation upon the activities of the members?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects in that the offer of proof is not being made, and asks that it be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

[fol. 6449] 216.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's objection and permitting the witness Rose Todd to testify to her interpretation of written by-laws and contract as disclosed by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 774, 775, to-wit:

"Q. But under your by-laws, in your contract, no one can continue to work for the Donnelly Garment Company who joins the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; is that correct?

"Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, we object to this question for the reason, as we have several times, this just involves an interpretation of the by-laws and contract. If this witness gave an answer, your Honor wouldn't feel bound by it, if you thought the contract meant something else, and what is the materiality of having her answer something that wouldn't bind you and bind Mr. Langsdale and not bind the respondent. It possibly might be binding on the intervener, I don't know that it would be, with a written contract made by the intervener.

"Mr. Langsdale: The question is provoked by the long answer of this witness that anyone could join any organization anyone wanted to with the Donnelly Garment Company, and of course, this is very plainly written that cannot be done.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think it isn't so much a question of interpretation of the contract. It is a question of this witness on the basis of her volunteering a statement that anybody can join anything they please.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Now, the question, Miss Todd, is this, or at least, my question: How can a person join any union they please under the restrictions in these contracts?"

217.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as disclosed by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 784, 785, 786, 787, to-wit:

[fol. 6450] "Q. But who passed upon who belonged to that classification, group 1 operators, performing their work efficiently?

"A. Who passed on this, at this time?

"Q. Yes, under this contract.

"Mr. Stottle: If the Examiner please, respondent objects to the question as to who passed upon it. There is nothing to indicate the question has ever arisen as to whether the operator was efficient or otherwise.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course Miss Todd is reading this. Apparently someone has to pass on it if the question arises. I think the witness should testify who. The statement is there, as Mr. Langsdale has read it—I haven't read it.

It seems to me that this witness should state that. That apparently is the sum and substance of the paragraph.

"Mr. Stottle: How could the witness state who passed on something if it never has been passed upon?

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Miss Todd, in those classifications, where it states "who efficiently performs . . .' who would determine that efficient performance?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I think we should make our objection to your own question, also—"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): You are perfectly free to.

"Mr. Stottle: —for the reason that you are asking the witness to interpret a provision of the contract which does not say who is to, and you are asking her to say who is to do something that is not provided for.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is why I cannot possibly determine it myself by reading the contract, it does not say who it is.

"Mr. Stottle: There are lots of things that contract has not mentioned; that is one of them. If it isn't stated in the contract it is not a part of the contract.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As far as the Examiner is concerned, I would like to know what this witness, who was a party to the contract, representing this organization, says as to who performs efficiently.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Who determines that?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6451] "Trial Examiner Batton: Your objection is overruled. I didn't say so, but by the following question I asked I supposed it was understood.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may respondent have a continuing objection to this kind of questioning as asks for an interpretation of provisions of the contract?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I prefer that you not have if, because I don't know that I am going to make the same ruling on all of the questions that may be asked. I would prefer that you make your objections, Mr. Stottle, as the questions are asked; that is, on this matter."

218.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting evidence not subject to further identification of ILGWU Exhibit 2 over the objection of the respondent, as disclosed by the excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 821, 822, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to the introduction of this exhibit at this time because there hasn't been any identification that would show that it has any materiality on the case.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, now, there are two objections in one. You object to it once because it isn't identified and another because it isn't material.

"Mr. Stottle: Yes. I am making both of them, neither identified properly or material if it were identified properly.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, I think it has been sufficiently identified and certainly it is material.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't see; I will receive it subject to further identification. I don't think this witness' statement, Mr. Langsdale, is sufficient to receive it without qualification. * * *

"I said I would receive it subject to further identification".

[fol. 6452] 219.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in excluding competent and material evidence offered by respondent through the witness Rose Todd concerning the threats of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against the respondent's employees and the violence of the strikes and other activities of the I.L.G.W.U. at other garment factories for the purpose of showing the effect of said activities upon the respondent's employees as being a motivating cause for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and as disproving the allegations in the amended complaint that respondent dominated said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or caused its formation.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 839, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Miss Todd, you had read in the paper what was going on at the other garment company plants, had you not?

"A. The papers were full of it, and I could see what was going on at Twenty-Sixth and Grand as I came to and from work.

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not material, and if it is material we want to be permitted to show that when A. A. Ahner hired strikebreakers it was to prevent most of the violence she claims she saw.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We are not going to try out the newspaper in this case and have all of those articles brought in, and then have the reporters brought in and prove that it is true or not true. If there were threats and violence, bring the people in here that were threatened, and the people violence was done to, and let them testify.

"I will sustain the objection as far as that part of it goes. We are not going to try out all of those matters."

[fol. 6453] 220.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit the respondent to show the provisions contained in working agreements between the International Union and other garment manufacturing companies in Kansas City, Missouri, as tending to show the bona fides of the negotiations between respondent and intervenor as to the bargaining contracts between respondent and intervener, and as tending to refute testimony offered by the Board and the International Union that said contracts between respondent and intervener were not bona fide and did not show genuine bargaining.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 857, 858, 862, 864, 865, 866, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Stoetle) Miss Todd, do you know what the minimum wage provision is in the Gernes, Gordon, and other contracts—* * * in this city with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Leary: Let the record show my objection, Mr. Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: What is your objection?

"Mr. Leary: On the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

"Mr. Langsdale: The union wants to further object upon the ground it is immaterial and doesn't bear upon any of the issues before the Examiner unless we want to go into all of those contracts and show where they started from, how they built them up, and even go into some of them as early as 1933 to show that they were then getting $3 and $4 a week, and the union came along and built them up to their present contract. That hasn't any bearing upon whether or not this is a company dominated union or any of the charges in the complaint.

[fol. 6454] "Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, Mr. Langsdale asked this witness in regard to the terms and conditions of the contract which she negotiated with the company, and his questions were directed at showing that the contract was not a good contract for the employees. Now, I think we have a right to come in and show that it is a far better contract for the employees than any contract that the International has entered into with any other garment company in this part of the [county]. It is competent for that purpose.

* * * * * * * * * *

"The point has been raised that Miss Todd and other members of the committee didn't really negotiate.

"Here is a company that has been paying good wages, here is a company that treats its employees fairly, here is a company that does not try to beat down the wages. These employees come in and say they want to bargain collectively and want to enter into a written contract.

"The company enters into a written contract, and in doing that, because it doesn't get into a fight with the employees, and because it doesn't haggle, and because they do arrive at a fair kind of a contract and the employees have better wages than are contained in any of these other contracts. I think that is very conclusive evidence that this union is properly representing the employees.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think, Your Honor, that since Mr. Langsdale has gone into the question of the negotiations, and he said, 'Now, do you think this was good for your people? Do you think that provision was good for the members of your union?' I think in view of that examination of this witness we are certainly entitled to show just what contract was obtained, and of course it will show that the company gave up a great deal. The company signed a contract ———

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Mr. Ingraham, you may go ahead on the basis you are now talking just as fully as you desire. In fact, I want you to show the negotiations, the bargaining, and the process that was gone through in arriving at it. You may go into that as fully as you care to, but I am not going to go into this matter from the standpoint of comparison with other companies here or any other place.

"Mr. Lane: It has been asserted here by Mr. Langsdale from time to time that he expects to offer evidence to establish that the intervener union is merely a sham union, that it is not in fact and under the law a representative of the employees. Now, in that connection the intervener [fol. 6455] asserts that the establishment of the results that were obtained in the contract which was entered into is an important point to be considered in determining the bona fideness of the intervener union, and in connection with determining the results that were obtained by that contract the prices and the minimum wages guaranteed by other garment concerns, the same industry, in the same community, is a point to be taken into consideration, so that a comparison of those figures will at least tend to show one of the results obtained by this contract.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it would be well now to settle this question so that everyone will know, as I have done once or twice already, what my position is.

"I want you to be prepared for it, although the evidence is not submitted. I can tell you now, Mr. Lane, I do not propose to go into that matter. The only reason I tell you that is this, that you may be making your preparation and preparing an offer of proof. I want to advise the attorneys now that I am not going to try this case by comparison with other plants in this town or in other towns. It is not material to the issues in this case."

221.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining the motion of the Board's attorney and striking answers of the witness Rose Todd as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 872, 873, to-wit:

"Q. Miss Todd, it is alleged in the complaint that the company caused a violent demonstration against Fern Sigler and others as a means of causing the employees either to join the Donnelly Garment Workers Union or to refrain from joining the International Union. I hand you here a paper which is marked Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, and will ask you if that is one of the notices in the newspapers that you have referred to that caused the incident at the plant that you testified about?

(Thereupon, the newspaper clipping above referred to was marked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 1" for identification.)

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as an improper question. She is merely handed the document and asked to identify it, and he tacks onto that question, 'Was it some-[fol. 6456] thing that caused the incident about Fern Sigler at the plant'.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Have you seen that before, or read it? A. Yes.

"Q. At the time it was in the paper, is that it?

"A. Yes, sir. That is very definitely what caused that disturbance that morning.

"Mr. Leary: What was that?

"The Witness: That article in the paper, Sylvia saying she was going to represent the employees—

"Mr. Leary: I move that the witness' statement be stricken out. I asked the reporter what the witness' answer was.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

"Mr. Leary: I move that it be stricken as not responsive.

"The Witness: Why, yes, it is, Mr. Leary, isn't it?

"Mr. Leary: I said I move that the last statement of the witness be stricken as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be stricken."

And in refusing to admit respondent's Exhibit No. 1 for the purpose of showing that the matters recited in said exhibit were the cause of the alleged demonstration against Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937 which ruling and action appear on Pages 873 through 878 of the transcript of the record.

222.

Respondent further excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit the witness Rose Todd to answer the following question appearing on Page 874 of the transcript of the record, to wit:

"Q. And is that, the printing of that article in the paper and the seeing of it by the employees, is that what caused the demonstration against Fern Sigler on the morning of April 23d?".

and in refusing to permit the witness Rose Todd to testify that the matters in the paper referred to in said question, [fol. 6457] to-wit, respondent's Exhibit No. 1, was the cause of the demonstration against Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937.

223.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner sustaining the objection of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to a portion of the answer of the witness Rose Todd set forth on Page 887 of the transcript of the record, as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 886, 887, 888, to-wit:

"Q. Miss Todd, there has been some question raised here as to whether there was real bargaining between your union and the company with regard to your union contracts. I will ask you to state if there were any provisions in the contracts that were favorable to the company, did you feel that they were more than offset by the provisions which you obtained favorable to the union?

"A. Yes, we felt like that is a good contract. We have certain things that we had to give—

"Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): I object to this part of the answer as voluntary and not responsive. Her answer to the question was 'Yes'.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection.

224.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner excluding evidence of the witness Rose Todd concerning violence and activities at other garment plants in Kansas City, which rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 908, 909, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Had you or had you not seen notices in the papers of physical violence at the Gernes plant?

[fol. 6458] "Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not proving any issue in this case, as to what occurred at the Gernes plant.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit what is endeavored to be shown here is whether these people of their own volition desired to form their own labor union, and in so doing they are entitled to give reasons for taking that action. If the actions are probable they are persuasive; if they are not probable they are not persuasive. But they are entitled to give such reasons as they say they had to stay out of the International and join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and if they did understand violence was being exerted by the International, that might well be a reason—whether it was true or not, if they so understood, that might well be a reason for their choice, and they are entitled to show good faith for their choice by citing their reasons.

"Mr. Langsdale: That speech might be proper at some other stage of the proceedings.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will forget about speeches. I will sustain the objection. As I said yesterday, I am not going into all of these rumors. If you have any evidence of anyone who was threatened personally, they may come up and testify to it personally and I will receive that testimony, but I am not in this hearing going into all of the rumors that fly around during an organizational campaign of unions.

"Mr. Tyler: It is not the truth of the violence I am establishing. It is merely the reason these people had for staying out of the International and forming their own union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material for the purpose for which you have offered it."

225.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in excluding similar evidence, which rulings and action are set forth in the transcript of the record at Pages 910, 911, 913, to-wit:

"Q. Did you see any of the banners or signs the pickets carried? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what they said on them?

[fol. 6459] "Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Tyler. I do not intend to receive any of that, either, unless it is something which was unlawful or illegal. If these pickets picketed this plant in the way in which they are permitted to under the law and there was nothing unlawful about it which amounted to actual coercion, I do not intend to go into all of those matters.

"Mr. Tyler: I expect to show, if the Court please, that these signs contained untruthful statements, and that that had some effect on the choice these people made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest you embody that all in an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit to your Honor that in showing what their real choice of labor unions was they have a right to refer to any conduct, lawful or unlawful, of the International to show why they didn't want to join it. That is the vital crux. If the International had a habit of wearing red neckties and they didn't like red neckties and they didn't want to join the union for that reason, I submit they have a right to give their reasons for preferring their own union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As I say, I do not propose to go into it with this witness, and if that is your theory on this particular matter you may submit it as an offer of proof.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, you have stated every party has an exception without asking for it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

"Mr. Stottle: In order that it might be clear, would the respondent be granted an exception to a question asked by the intervener when it is overruled?

"Trial Examiner Batten: All parties receive exceptions to all adverse rulings.

"Mr. Stottle: You might not deem it adverse to us.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to pass on that. If the parties deem it adverse you may have the exception. In other words, I do not intend to go through the record and determine whether it is adverse to certain parties or not.

"Mr. Stottle: I am not objecting to the intervener—I asked if I would have an exception to the Examiner's [fol. 6460] ruling, even though the ruling was made to a question asked by the Intervener.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would say yes.

"Mr. Langsdale: Even if he does not make an objection?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, if it is adverse."

226.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive evidence concerning the violence and activities of the International Union at other garment factories in Kansas City and the effect thereof upon the employees of respondent and in refusing to accept the offer of proof made thereon by the intervener at Pages 913, 914, 916 of the transcript of the record, as follows, to wit:

"Mr. Tyler: I wish to make an offer of proof.

"Intervener offers to prove by this witness that for months before the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the employees had seen numerous accounts of violence by the International against employees of other garment plants in Kansas City and had, many of them, seen such violence with their own eyes, and had, many of them if not all, heard reports of such violence, that they were in a state of almost hysteria from constantly overheard statements that the same tactics were to be applied to the employees at the Donnelly Garment Company, and that this was a reason which affected them in their choice as to forming their own union or joining the International or staying out of all unions.

"Mr. Leary: I object to the offer of proof, Mr. Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is denied."

227.

Respondent excepts to the comments of the Trial Examiner on Pages 956, 957, of the transcript of the record with reference to the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union because such comments show the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner and his intention to disregard the [fol. 6461] minutes as evidence in this proceeding, in so far as same are favorable to respondent.

228.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in striking the answers of the witness Rose Todd as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 966, 967 as follows, to wit:

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Now, what was the situation before the contract?

"A. The situation before had been that the employer had the right to increase or reduce his working force, but this contract gives the union also the right to interfere if he feels so—if we feel that someone is being allowed to go unnecessarily.

"Q. You mean because of the union activity?

"A. Well, no, not necessarily that. We certainly would do that if they were being let go because of union activity, but if they were being let go and we felt it was not right, the union still has the right to go to the employer and see if these people couldn't be retained.

"Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to that answer and ask that it be stricken out as an explanation for paragraph 14; because there isn't anything in paragraph 14 upon which to base that statement or conclusion, not anything. That says, 'The employer shall have the right to discharge.'

"Trial Examiner Batten: I was just getting ready to ask another question or two, but in view of your motion I will have it stricken. I was going into that some more. You may proceed."

229.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner and his comments upon the testimony of the witness Rose Todd as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Page 970, to wit:

[fol. 6462] "* * * This Group 1 operators gives these operators a much higher guarantee than they had ever been guaranteed before. Forty per cent of them receiving—

"Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): Now, I object to that answer as a conclusion upon the part of the witness. The evidence ought to be as to what the increase is.

"Mr. Tyler: I think it is desirable that she should give the figures as she knows them, but I think that if she can say as a fact that the figures are higher, she is entitled to state that, even if she can't give the figures.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it means a thing in the way she answered, much higher. If she doesn't know, let's get somebody here that does. I mean, there is no use trying to have a witness answer questions that they can't answer. Now, surely there is somebody in the organization or with the respondent who could very definitely state, Mr. Tyler."

220

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner excluding and refusing to hear or consider evidence comparing the wages and other working conditions provided for in the contract between the respondent and Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in comparison with like wages and conditions existing under contracts between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and other garment manufacturing companies in and about Kansas City, Missouri.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the rulings, comments and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Pages 981, 982, 983, to wit:

"Q. Miss Todd, did you hear the testimony of Velma Dowdy in the injunction suit tried before Judge Miller?

"A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 6463] "Q. Have you had occasion to use the figures she testified that she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union for a period of a year—* * * the figures she testified she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union with the figures which the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid to their union, each for a period of one year?

"Now, don't answer yet.

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issues in this case. It involves a lot of collateral issues which will greatly prolong this hearing, as we should be entitled to show what we do with that money and why we need it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I now rule it is absolutely immaterial and irrelevant to this hearing. I do not intend to have a comparison between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Unions. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is not on trial here, neither is the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. It is the respondent who is here answering to charges of unfair labor practices. That is the thing we are going to try. If you have any further testimony of any kind pertaining to this matter you can present it in the form of an offer of proof, but I do not intend to receive it."

231.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner refusing to hear or consider evidence concerning the application of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that the Labor Board hold an election by respondent's employees as to the bargaining agency or union which they desired to represent them.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Pages 1000, 1001, to wit:

[fol. 6464] "Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ever petition the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election of employees?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner, and move the answer be stricken. I think if there is any petition they might have filed, it would be the best evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think that it is immaterial whether they have or haven't, so far as this hearing is concerned. ****

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I don't see it has anything to do with this hearing at all. Any matter connected with the petition or anything with relation to it.

"Mr. Tyler: Then, I wish to make an offer of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may make an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by this witness that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has filed two petitions with the National Labor Relations Board for an election of the employees as to bargaining representatives and labor unions, both recently, before the beginning of this hearing; that the reason they did not file any such petition earlier was because they had a contract with their employer and were operating satisfactorily under it through representatives of their own choosing, and they felt that their situation was satisfactory and that if any outsider disputed the claim that they were being represented by representatives of their own choice, it was devolved upon such outsider to ask for such an election to change the status quo. Also, that the union on several occasions authorized their attorney to agree to submit to an election of the employees and abide by the result, and that that was done in the record and the three-judge court hearing and again during the hearing before Judge Miller."

232.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner striking portion of the answer of the witness Rose Todd as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Page 1018, to wit:

[fol. 6465] "Q. Have any request been made by the union from the company for permission to use those bulletin boards?

"A. No, sir. Anybody uses them, and we have just used them.

"Mr. Leary: I move to strike all except the first two words of her answer as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

233.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner upon testimony of the witness Rose Todd as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1018, 1019, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Now, at the time you received what I believe you have testified to as the only raise you have had from the company, is it or is it not a fact that a large number of employees received raises at the same time?

"A. It is a fact.

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to this constant leading of this witness, his own witness, his own client, and I suggest that the payroll is the best evidence of that. How does this woman know what was on everybody's envelope or everybody's check?

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) She has not testified to everybody's envelope or everybody's check.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I think your objection goes to the weight that may be given this testimony. If that remains as it now stands, without any cooperation, or anything of the kind, certainly the Examiner nor the Board could give a great deal of weight to it."

234.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner striking a portion of the answer of the witness Rose Todd as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1037, to wit:

[fol. 6466] "Q. Had you prior to March 18, 1937, ever been required to show an identification card in order to gain admittance to the plant?

A. No, sir, I don't recall any need for one before that.

"Mr. Langsdale: I ask that the latter part of the answer be stricken out as not responsive, and voluntary.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting evidence and exhibits concerning the Nelly Don Country Club, which testimony and exhibits are set forth and referred to on Pages 1158 to 1167 of the transcript of the record, for the reason that same are wholly immaterial to any of the issues herein.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner in admitting the testimony and refusing to sustain respondent's and intervener's objections, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Pages 1158, 1159, 1160, 1161, 1163, to wit:

"Q. Is there another association, I mean different from any of those that have up to now been mentioned, to which you pay $2 a year dues?

"Mr. Stottle. Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to getting into still additional organizations, if there are any. Certainly the respondent has a right to provide a country club for its employees if they want to, and let them pay so much a month. There is no showing that it is done for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't suppose there is any argument that the respondent could furnish the employees a country club for nothing if they wanted to."

[fol. 6467] "Mr. Stottle. And of course it would not be material to these issues.

"Trial Examiner Batten. I can't determine whether it is material or not until I find out about this matter of these rentals Mr. Langsdale is inquiring about.

"Mr. Langsdale. Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter)

"A. I haven't mentioned all of the ones there are.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) To whom do you pay this $2 a year?

"A. I think that card says "Nelly Don Country Club."

"Q. I hand you this card which has been marked International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union's Exhibit No.

3 and ask you state what it is—not what is on it, but what it is.

"A. It is a membership card of the club out there.

(Thereupon the card above referred to was marked "International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union's Exhibit No. 3")

"Mr. Langsdale: I offer Exhibit No. 3.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that it is wholly immaterial to any of the issues in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Thus far I don't see that it has any bearing.

"Mr. Langsdale: I want to ask some questions about it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to International's Exhibit No. 3 for the reason that it is not material—it is not within any of the pleadings in this case, and for the reason that it opens up ramifications that are wholly outside of any proper inquiry in this investigation.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed until I can determine. And if when he completes t is matter, Mr. Lane, if it is not connected up with the issues in any way you may make a motion to have it stricken and it will be stricken.

"Well, has the membership, the club membership, anything to do with whether or not members of the Loyalty League have the privilege of going to the club house to a Loyalty League party?

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to that as being speculative as to whether there was a Loyalty League party [fol. 6468] or what Loyalty League party, wholly immaterial or any issues. It has been testified heretofore that the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, a great many of them, belong to the Loyalty League, that a great many of them belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that a great many of them belong to this club business, a great many of them belong to the Athletic Association. If anything is done down there that involves employees, there is bound to be certain overlapping."

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting counsel for the International Union to prove his offer of proof by the witness Rose Todd and in doing so to ask the questions to which the Examiner had sustained objections, and in failing and refusing to strike said offer of proof when it appeared that the International Union was unable to prove such offer by the witness, as appears from the transcript of the record, Pages 1189 to 1193.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner referred to in the foregoing exception as same further appear in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1189, 1192, 1193, to wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: All right, I offer to prove that, and also offer to prove that she examined all of this data during working hours, and that sometimes it amounted to 1,300 different employees or thereabouts, and that it took, many, many hours of the company's time to make the examination. That is the offer of proof I make.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will permit you to prove that by this witness.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent, if Mr. Langsdale is finished with that offer of proof, moves that [fol. 6469] the latter part be stricken from the record as not made in good faith, because he hasn't asked the witness to go ahead and state that she spent hundreds of hours, or whatever this offer of proof was, on this matter.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, I—

"Mr. Stottle (interrupting): It was just—it is not fair to have it appear in the record that he made an offer of proof by this witness—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Stottle, I think—I think that Mr. Langsdale's offer of proof, and the questioning of the witness subsequent thereto speaks for itself."

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's objection and receiving evidence as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1196, 1197, to wit:

"Q. I note that in January, 1938, Fred Brown got another raise, from $97 to $108.54 every two weeks. Do you know whether or not that is a fact?

"A. No, Mr. Langsdale, I don't.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this evidence as being immaterial, what different employees, of which there are 1,200 or 1,300 down there—what raises in pay they may have received. The answers have all been in the negative and there is probably no evidence on it as yet, but it seems to me it is immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, in the first place, I don't suppose she knows about these matters. And, in the second place, I cannot tell now whether it is material or whether it isn't. If Mr. Langsdale has the records and that is what they show—

"Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): We will bring them in, but I think I have a right to inquire whether or not the president of the union knew about these matters.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not telling you to discontinue.

[fol. 6470]

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth on Page 1199 of the Transcript of the record, to wit:

"Do you know whether or not Mr. McConaughey's change from the mechanical department to the bookkeeping department was because he was a member of your board of chairmen?

"Mr. Lane: I object to that as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I presume the president of the organization, Mr. Lane, ought to know or not know. As far as she knows, she may state whether that was the reason."

239.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting the witness Rose Todd to testify to her interpretation of the written contract between respondent and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union over the objection of the respondent, which objection and the ruling of the Examiner thereon is set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1203, 1204, to wit:

"Q. Now, are those percentages invariable? Are they fixed or do they vary?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I make the objection that the written contract provides concerning that, and it is binding, and that this is asking the witness to interpret the contract.

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, if it is applied to this question, I have no objection. I would overrule the objection."

[fol. 6471] 240.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's motion to strike answer of the witness May Fike, which answer, motion and ruling are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1256, 1257, to wit:

"Q. Who would tell you to lay off when your vacation was coming?

"A. Well, I don't remember how we knew our vacation was coming. I suppose our instructor would tell us when it came time for our vacation or when our vacation time was up.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken. She 'supposes' that that was done.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will permit it to stand. I have permitted a lot of others to stand that were apparently supposing or thinking. It may stand for whatever value it has."

241.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving in evidence over the objections of the respondent and intervener Board's Exhibit No. 14, purporting to be the pledge signed for the Loyalty League which objection and the rulings of the Trial Examiner thereon appear in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1267, 1268, to wit:

"Mr. Lane. I object to exhibit No. 14 for the reason that it has not been properly indentified. There has been no showing as to where it originated, how it originated, or who was responsible for getting it up, and for that reason it could be in no way binding here on anybody.

"Trial Examiner Batten. It will be received.

"Mr. Ingraham. Respondent makes the same objection, and the further objection that it is immaterial to any issue in this case."

[fol. 6472] "Trial Examiner Batten. It is received."

242.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner overruling the objections of the respondent to testimony of the witness May Fike as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1269, to wit:

"Q. Do you know whether or not she said anything at the time?

"A. She said we should sign and pass that to the next girl, if I remember right.

"Mr. Ingraham. Mr. Examiner, I move the answer be stricken out as not binding on respondent, what the instructor said.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Objection overruled. By overruling the objection I am not saying it is binding, but I am overruling the objection.

"Mr. Stottle. We further object because it is not identified as to what instructor said that.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may proceed."

243.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling the objections of respondent and intervener and receiving testimony of the witness May Fike as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1269, 1270, 1271.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in failing to sustain the objections to the testimony above referred to and the continuing objection of the respondent and intervener to said line of testimony, and further excepts to the action of the Trial Examiner in permitting [fol. 6473] said witness to continue to testify to said matters.

244.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Pages 1288, 1289, to wit:

"Q. Now, Mrs. Fike, do you know whether or not the instructor can see any papers that pass down the table which the girls read and sign?

"A. There is never no papers come into that section that she don't know about it before the girls get them, and—

"Mr. Lane. I move to strike the answer as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Let her finish.

"Mr. Lane. I thought she had finished.

"Trial Examiner Batten. She was saying something else there.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten). What were you saying?

"A. She is notified of what comes into that section before the girls get it. Sometimes she personally brings it to us. At that time it was started up at the other end of the machine.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Can she see—

"Mr. Lane. (Interrupting) Just a moment. If the witness has now finished her answer, I move that it be stricken for the reason that it is not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten. It may stand.

"Mr. Ingraham. Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Objection overruled.

"Mr. Lane. I object to it further for the reason that it calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Objection overruled."

245.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's and intervener's [fol. 6474] motions to strike testimony of the witness May Fike as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1292, 1293 to wit:

"Q. What, if anything, did Fern Sigler say to you about the union button?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to that as hearsay.

"Trial Examiner Batten. You may answer.

"A. She told me that she had on her pin that morning and that she was going to wear it into the shop, and I told her she had better not or she would lose her job.

"She said, well, she was going to wear it anyway. And I said, "Well, I will lose mine too'. And she said, well, she didn't think I would—I don't remember her exact words, but something to that effect.

"She told me to go on up and not stay with her at all, so I went upstairs. Her locker wasn't in the same place mine was. That is the last I talked to her until the evening of the 23d.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out—I object to the part of the answer that relates to what Fern Sigler said; and I move that the balance of the answer be stricken out as self-serving.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection and the same motion to strike.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled—  and the motion to strike is denied."

246.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and actions of the Trial Examiner admitting the evidence of the witness May Fike and refusing to strike same upon motions of respondent and intervener concerning remarks alleged to have been made by a group of employees to Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937, for the reason that the witness was unable to state who made the alleged remarks, which objections, motions and rulings appear on Pages 1296, 1297, 1298, [fol. 6475] 1299, of the transcript of the record.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1305, 1306, 1307, to wit:

"Q. Now, can you identify any of the individuals that you heard say any of those things, Mrs. Fike?

"A. Well, of course they were all hollering. I couldn't describe now which ones did say which.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is all.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener renews the motion to strike this testimony for the reason that the persons alleged to have made such remarks have not been identified.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same motion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

"Q. Have you told the Examiner all of the things that you heard said to Fern Sigler by this crowd of girls?

"A. They told her she couldn't belong to the International Union and work in their shop.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection that has been heretofore made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection heretofore made.

"Mr. Lane: To this same line of testimony. I made an objection to the nature of it, and I am renewing it now.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

"Mr. Lane: In order not to burden the record, may I have a continuing objection?

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as to this incident of April 23?

"Mr. Lane: Yes, sir.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent moves to strike the answer out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony; and for the further reason that anything the employees said is not binding on the respondent.

[fol. 6476] "Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied.

"Mr. Ingraham: And, Your Honor, may I have a continuing objection to this incident?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, to this incident."

247.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1309, to wit:

"Q. Do you know whether or not the instructors made any effort to stop the second or third demonstration?

"A. No, sir, they didn't.

"Mr. Lane. I move to strike that out as a conclusion. She may state what she observed but not the conclusion that they made no effort.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand as it is."

248.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1310, 1311, 1312, to wit:

"Q. Did you hear any threats made to Fern Sigler?

"A. The last bunch that came in there threatened to throw her out of the window. They said they didn't want her in there, and kept hollering at her to go home, that she couldn't work with them and belong to that union—to our union—the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and kept suggesting they throw her out of the window.

"Mr. Ingraham. I move that the answer be stricken out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony, not binding on the respondent; and for the further reason, the witness has not identified a single individual in this third group, and has not identified anyone as making the remarks she has just stated.

[fol. 6477] "Trial Examiner Batten: I will deny it as to the second reason. As to the third reason, the matter of identification, Mr. Leary, I think you should further identify this group.

. . . . . .

"Trial Examiner Batten: The third objection, Mr. Ingraham, is overruled."

249.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to strike the answer of the witness May Fike and denying the motion of respondent therefor as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1312, 1313, to-wit:

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Can you identify any of the people in the third group who said any particular thing, Mrs. Fike?

"A. Well, Ethel Carpenter and Mary Sprofera told her they didn't want her in there. I am not sure about who said 'throw her out the window'. I think that was Mary Sprofera, but I am not sure about it.

"Mr. Shepard: I ask that her answer about throwing the girl out the window be stricken out for the reason that she is not sure who said it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied."

250.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting the witness May Fike to testify to the conversations and incident relating to Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937 and in overruling respondent's and intervener's various objections thereto, including the continuing objections to said testimony, some of which objections and rulings appear on Pages 1319, 1320 of the transcript of the record as follows, to-wit:

[fol. 6478] "Mr. Ingraham (interrupting): Now, just a minute. Your Honor, is my objection standing that it is hearsay and not binding?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I understood both Mr. Lane and Mr. Ingraham had a continuing objection to the incident of April 23, 1937.

"Mr. Ingraham: That is all—this, yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, concerning all of this incident.

"Mr. Shepard: If your Honor please, I object to all of this as being absolutely irrelevant and immaterial, doesn't tend to prove anything in the case as to what these other operators have told her what they would do if Fern Sigler were her sister.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may proceed. I think we should have the whole story about these instances, irrespective of who said it."

251.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner overruling the objections and motions of the respondent and intervener as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1355, to-wit:

"Q. Did you consider that second floor company property? A. Yes, sir.

"Mr. Lane: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Mr. Leary, it certainly calls for a conclusion. If you want to let it stand, however, as it is, I will overrule the objection.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent moves that all statements as to what Pearl Atchison said be stricken out as not binding on respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Denied. I think the objection goes primarily to the weight that can be given such testimony."

[fol. 6479] 252.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and actions of the Trial Examiner in permitting the witness May Fike to read the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting of April 27, 1937, prior to the examination of said witness by counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1341, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345, to-wit:

"Q. Now, I show you, Mrs. Fike, what have been identified as Board's Exhibits Nos. 8-1 to 8-11 inclusive, which purport to be notes on a meeting held April 27, 1937, and ask you to read those notes or minutes and, at the conclusion of your reading them will you state to the Examiner whether the things related in those minutes actually happened, to the best of your recollection?

"Mr. Ingraham: Now, Your Honor, I submit that is highly improper procedure for an examination. He can ask this witness what took place at this meeting, or what she heard, but to hand her minutes and have her read the minutes and refresh her memory or put some ideas into her head, and then have her answer the question Yes or No about the minutes I say is improper.

"Mr. Shepard: Further, Your Honor, there has been no showing that the witness' memory needs to be refreshed. She says she attended that meeting. She should be questioned from her memory of that meeting.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener desires to object on the ground it is an illegal and improper method of examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, as I stated, if Mr. Leary wants to proceed this way, you may go ahead and read it and answer the question.

"Mr. Leary: Now, I will withdraw the question.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Who presided at that meeting, Mrs. Fike? A. Rose Todd.

[fol. 6480] "Mr. Tyler: I would like to ask if the witness has finished reading the minutes.

"The Witness: I haven't finished looking through them.

"Mr. Tyler (interrupting): I think the record ought to show—

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: I objected, that the record will show that Mr. Leary has handed the witness what purports to be, and I presume is, copies of the minutes of the first meeting, and asked her to read it, and then tell him whether that expresses what happened, and then after waiting long enough for her to almost read all of them, he then withdraws the question and presents another question as to what happened. Now, that destroys the possibility of ruling on whether it is a proper method of examination to ask her to read the minutes first, and then ask her what happened.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Tyler, I have already ruled that as far as the Examiner is concerned, Mr. Leary's question was proper. I said it was not improper and I overruled the objection and permitted him to proceed in that manner if he wanted to, and he chose to withdraw the question, which he has a perfect right to do."

253.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner overruling the objections of the respondent and the intervener to Mr. Langsdale, as counsel for the International Union, being permitted to cross-examine the Board's witness, May Fike, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1359, 1360, to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Go ahead, Mr. Langsdale.

"Mr. Lane: Before Mr. Langsdale begins his examination, I desire to renew the objection I made at the time he began his examination of Miss Todd. I don't want to burden the record by being compelled to make that objection with respect to every witness' examination, but I do renew it here so the record is clear that I am not waiving that objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just what was that objection?

[fol. 6481] "Mr. Lane: I objected to his examination of Miss Todd for the reason that his position as counsel for the International is one in unity with interest of that of the Board, and in view of that fact, he should not be permitted to have a separate examination of the witness the Board produces, separate from that of the Board itself.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Supposing that you be allowed a continuing objection.

"Mr. Lane: I would like the record to show that that objection will continue throughout the trial as to the witnesses the Board produces.

"Trial Examiner Batten: On that matter—and I will make the same ruling.

"Mr. Shepard: Your Honor, may the record show that the respondent makes the same objection and requests the same objection throughout the trial?

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have the same objection and the same ruling, and a continuing objection."

254.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining the objection of Mr. Langsdale to the witness May Fike testifying concerning the activities around the Missouri, Gernes and Gordon Garment Companies, and a discussion thereof around the Donnelly plant around April, 1937, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1416, 1417, 1418, 1419, 1420, 1422, 1424, 1425, to-wit:

"Q. And wasn't it common talk around the Donnelly plant that there was a great deal of commotion out there around those Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial; wouldn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case, and opens up a new avenue for testimony. I think the Examiner has ruled that line out up to now.

[fol. 6482] "Mr. Lane: The purpose of my making this offer, or asking this question and similar questions, is to refute the charge that has been made here by counsel for the International and Board that this union we represent is a sham union, and my purpose is to show that atmosphere that surrounded the employees at that time, and their reaction and attitude, as having some bearing upon why they took the action they did take on the part of the union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I will make the same ruling that I did once before. That is this: if there were any actual threats or actual violence at this plant, that in any way can be chargeable to the respondent, I certainly want to receive it.

"Now I am not going into this organizational campaign that took in the city of Kansas City. Now, I am not going all over that again, and if you want to, you may make as complete an offer of proof on that, and, after all, that may be probably the best way to present that whole problem of this campaign that was going on by the Union here in Kansas City, but I can say now that I am not going to receive it in this hearing.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As I remember it. Well, now, I am going to take that position very definitely with respect to the intervener on this entire campaign that went on here in Kansas City, and I think we can just as well determine now that you shall prepare a complete offer of proof on it, because I don't intend to receive it.

"Mr. Tyler: May I understand the Examiner's ruling? Do I understand that you decline to permit us to show that the employees of the plant, as one of their reasons for choosing their own union, were affected by both fear of the campaign carried on by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at nearby shops, threats that it should be able to be applied to the Donnelly employees, and dislike of those methods, you decline to let us show those things as establishing one of the reasons why these employees decided to, of their own free will, form their own union? Is that correct?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, not quite that broad. I said that if any threats were made against these Donnelly employees, or any violence there, I even question how material that may be, but I will receive that, but on the other, on your whole idea there that that was one of the reasons for the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and a valid reason, I want an offer of proof submitted on it.

[fol. 6483] "Mr. Langsdale: I want to understand the Examiner's ruling on this particular matter. I have understood up to now you have permitted both respondent and the intervener to show threats made to any of the employees but not to go into disturbances that may have occurred at Gerney's or Gordon's, or anything of that sort.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. I want to eliminate everything by this offer of proof except direct threats and direct violence. I think I asked Miss Todd on several occasions, 'Did anybody threaten you? Did anybody ever commit any violence as far as you were concerned?' I will receive that in this hearings, I don't want that in the form of an offer of proof.

"Mr. Lane: I want to make this further observation with respect to the question I asked:

I desire to show the attitude or state of mind of the employees, whether that attitude was created by rumor or by ideas of terrorism, which may or may not be true, nevertheless it is the state of mind which I want to show; and to show further that that state of mind actuated to cause them to want to form their own union, and that would go to the bona fideness of their union and would be a good reason for the formation of their union, whether founded upon fact or not.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, Mr. Lane. And, even if founded upon information which was absolutely false, if it is relevant to these issues—I mean, the truth or falsity of these things is not in issue.

"Mr. Lane: That was the purpose of my question, to show that fact.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And that matter, of course, will be included in this offer of proof.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting evidence of the witness Slotkin over the objections of the respondent as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1437, 1438, 1439, to wit:

[fol. 6484] "Q. Now, I wonder, Mr. Slotkin, if you would turn to your books and state for the record the date, and the number of chairs delivered since 1935.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects to this upon the ground that it is immaterial as the way the question reads. Certainly, the company has a right to order chairs, and I don't see that it would have any tendency to prove or disprove any issue in this case, unless it is identified as certain times and places that would give it some relevancy.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I presume after we get the record of deliveries we can determine whether or not it has any relevancy or whether it has anything to do with this hearing. I will overrule the objection. You may state.

. . . . . .

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten, interrupting) You mean, those are the original sheets, or those are copies?

"A. No, these are the original sheets from my ledger, as far back as I could go.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we object on the ground those are not the books of original entries, but his original entries have been transferred to these sheets, and, further, on the ground that the entries there have not been shown to have been made by this particular witness.

. . . . . .

"Q. (Interrupting) Pardon me, Mr. Slotkin. Can you tell who ordered those chairs?

"A. I can't tell you that at all. I have no invoices going back to this particular year. The only record I have is from 1938, August, until now, when I had a regular system installed by an auditor.

"Mr. Stottle: Now, Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects further on the ground there is no showing as to who ordered the chairs that he is purporting to testify about.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, he can read into the record what this ledger sheet shows. Now, if there are any further questions, Mr. Foster, I would suggest that you wait until he has read into the record just what this ledger sheet shows."

[fol. 6485] 256.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting the testimony of the witness Slotkin concerning chairs furnished by that company and in permitting said witness to testify concerning the account books and records of that company relative to chairs furnished and in admitting said accounts, ledger sheets and records as exhibits in this proceeding over the repeated objections of the respondent and intervener for the reason that said evidence is and was incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial to the issues herein, and because their was no showing as to what person or company ordered the chairs referred to in said testimony or paid for same, and because the records and entries testified from were not the original entries and there was not sufficient identification to show the authenticity of such entries or by whom same were made, and because said testimony and said entries and records did not constitute the best evidence, and because it affirmatively appeared that the witness did not know what person, union or company was chargeable with ordering the chairs referred to, and because it appeared from said witness's testimony that the entries concerning chairs ordered by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and chairs ordered by the Donnelly Garment Company and chairs if any ordered by the Donnelly Loyalty League and by the Nelly Don Athletic Association and any other chairs furnished to the address of respondent in the Corrigan Building were all entered under the same general account and no proper or sufficient [fol. 6486] designation made therein to show which of said organizations ordered or paid for the chairs referred to, for each and all of which reasons said testimony is not binding upon the respondent and is prejudicial to respondent and does not support the findings, conclusions or recommendations of the Trial Examiner and does not constitute proper or competent evidence upon which the Trial Examiner or the Board should base findings or conclusions or any order against respondent.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner contained in the Intermediate Report for the reason that same are based in part upon the incompetent and indefinite evidence of the witness Slotkin.

257.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting the evidence of the witness Slotkin over the repeated and continued objections of the respondent which objections were directed to the whole line of testimony of said witness and which objections and rulings of the Trial Examiner are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1444, 1449, 1450, 1458, 1459, 1460, 1475, 1476, 1478, 1479, 1480, to wit.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may it be understood our objection continues to all of this testimony, on the same ground, the witness did not make the entries, doesn't know who ordered the chairs—

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection, Mr. Stottle.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6487] "Q. I wonder if you would read whatever information is on those deposit slips pertaining to the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. All the way through?

"Mr. Stottle: Do I understand, Mr. Examiner, our objection continues as to this testimony, also?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, it may.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Foster: I want to find out, if I can, who paid for these invoices for the use of these chairs; if there is anything on those deposit slips tending to show that, I want it read into the record.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, we add to our objection that this would not be the best evidence of whether the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid for them, as to what they might have written on the deposit slips.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I can't tell until I see what he is going to read, Mr. Stottle.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Patten: I want to make a further objection and ask a qualifying question, that is, a preliminary question.

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Mr. Slotkin, did you prepare the deposit slips yourself?

"A. Well, a few of them when the girl happened not to be at work or on vacation.

"Q. Is the person present who prepared the deposit slips?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Is she still in the employ of your company?

"A. Well, part of these were prepared before she ever came to work at our company.

"Mr. Patten: Now, the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, objects to the reading or introduction of these deposit slips for the reason that they are not the best evidence. Mr. Slotkin did not prepare them himself, and what somebody, some absent person unknown to [fol. 6888] this intervener may have put on there is not binding on this intervener.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled. (p. 1451)

* * * * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale?

Cross-Examination

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mr. Slotkin, I hand you these pages which have been marked 'I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits 4, 5, 6 and 7' and ask you to state just what they are.

"A. They are the ledger sheets taken from the accounts receivable ledger.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Langsdale: We offer Exhibits 4, 5, 6 and 7 in evidence.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that they are not the best evidence, and that the witness personally didn't make the entries; that there is no showing that any person authorized by the Donnelly Garment Company ordered any particular item on the list; that it is not binding on the respondent and constitutes hearsay, and is wholly immaterial to the issues.

"Mr. Langsdale: Of course, they are taken from the regular records used and maintained in the business of this witness, and are material for whatever they prove.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener objects for the reason that how the Chair Rental Company may have kept the books is a matter wholly beyond the control of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or the respondent, for that matter. There is no showing here, either the respondent or the intervening union directed these accounts to be mixed up and kept on one ledger sheet.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are overruled. They will be received.

. . . . . .

"Q. Let me have those deposit slips you testified from

(The deposit slips referred to were handed by the witness to Mr. Langsdale.)

"A. Those are the ones I testified to.

[fol. 6489] "Mr. Langsdale: Will you mark these as exhibits, please?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that you mark those exhibit No. 8, 8-A, B, C, and so forth.

(Thereupon the deposit slips above referred to were marked 'I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits Nos. 8-A to 8-GG, inclusive.')

. . . . . .

"Mr. Langsdale: I offer International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibits Nos. 8-A to 8-GG, inclusive.

"Mr. Stottle: The respondent objects to the introduction of these exhibits for all the reasons that we have heretofore urged, including the fact that they are not the best evidence; that there is no showing by this witness—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, just a minute, on that point. What would be the best evidence?

"Mr. Stottle: The best evidence I would say, or some of the best evidence, would be an invoice that had been sent to these different persons and the payment of this. This is just a deposit slip in the bank.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the payment—you mean the check it was paid with?

"Mr. Stottle: Well, an invoice that it had been paid with. This is not even the check. It is just a notation on a bank slip.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is true, but I assume that what we are trying to do here is get a complete record. I presume we will have to take it in part.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, that is one of the objections, that it is not the best evidence and hasn't any sufficient relation to this to have any probative effect or tend to prove or disprove any of the issues in this case. Furthermore, we object that the items on here were not made by this particular witness, and not shown to have been made by any person that would bind the respondent or the intervener, even bind this company; that it constitutes hearsay testimony and is so mixed up with other records and so mixed up between the parties here, charges to one and payment by another, that it is wholly impossible to be separated.

[fol. 6490] "Trial Examiner Batten: That doesn't indicate that on these slips, does it?

"Mr. Stottle: But the testimony taken together with these slips indicates that.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we wish to add, also, that it is not made from—it doesn't constitute the original entry made in this company. It is about 3 or 4 degrees off from that. The original records, entries, would be the best evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no further objection, they will be received.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener makes the same objection as the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: They will be received."

258.

In connection with the foregoing exception of the respondent, respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling the motion of the respondent to strike the evidence of the witness Slotkin, which motion and ruling are set forth in the transcript of the record, Pages 1483, 1484, as follows, to wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: I think that is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, Respondent now renews its motion to strike out all of the evidence of this witness, including the exhibits introduced while he has been on the stand, for the reason that there hasn't been any showing that would make them probative evidence in this case. The items are all lumped together under one account, when the witness has stated that some of them might have been for other accounts. The deposit slips are all lumped together and there is nothing here that would enable the Examiner to give any credence to the statements because they are [fol. 6491] so mixed up and were kept in such a way that they don't show the true facts, and for the further objection that we have already made, it is not the best evidence, and not the original record entries, and not binding on the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion to strike is denied."

259.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's motion to strike I. L. G. W. U. Exhibits 4, 5, 6, and 7, which motion and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1489, 1490, 1491, to wit:

"Q. Isn't it a fact that these ledger sheets, I. L. G. W. U. Exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7, were made up from those invoices or from other records of your company?

"A. They were supposed to have been made up from the invoices.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) When you have a person call in for some chairs you immediately write out an order, is that it?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Is that written out in triplicate, duplicate, or—

"A. In triplicate.

"Q. Then it is from that record that the entries are made on this sheet, is that right?

"A. That is right.

"Q. Then, you do have an invoice down there for each one of these items?

"A. I don't know, for all of them. You see, our records were destroyed, a lot of them, when I came to work there. After a year I managed to get myself lined up so I could install a regular system.

[fol. 6492] "Q. You mean, up to a year ago you had no regular invoice records?

"A. Nothing I could go to like I can now.

"Q. Have you anything—

"A. I might have some old invoices, a few of them, pertaining to those ledger sheets, and I might not.

"Q. What records were destroyed?

"A. The invoices. You see, they are all mixed up.

"Q. You say you destroyed the invoice records?

"A. They were destroyed. I didn't destroy them myself.

"Q. Someone representing your company destroyed them?

"A. Yes.

"Q. In other words, then, you do not have the invoices or the carbons for these invoices running back over a year ago?

"A. No, sir.

"Mr. Stottle. Mr. Examiner, respondent now renews its objection to strike I. L. G. W. U. exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7 for the reason that they are not the original entries but are made up from some other records which were not the original entries.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think I denied the same motion awhile ago.

"Mr. Stottle: I understand, Mr. Examiner, but this fact has been brought out since then.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You certainly wouldn't expect him to produce invoices that had been destroyed, would you?

"Mr. Stottle: No. But he says these are not the original entries.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that would go to the weight to be given to these.

[fol. 6493] "Mr. Stottle: May I explain the point is, those original entries might have had Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on the invoice. If we had those it would show who was the person who ordered them.

"Trial Examiner Batten: But, Mr Stottle, they are destroyed. If the record is destroyed it is impossible to get it."

260.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting the witness Slotkin to testify concerning Board's Exhibits Nos. 16-A to 16-E inclusive and in admitting said Exhibits 16-A to 16-E in evidence over the objections of the respondent, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1508, 1512, 1513, 1514, to wit:

"Redirect Examination

"Q. (By Mr. Foster) Mr. Slotkin, I hand you what has been marked for the purpose of identification as Board's exhibits Nos. 16-A to E, inclusive, and ask you what these are.

"A. They are invoices made out to the Donnelly Garment Company.

(Thereupon the invoices referred to above were marked 'Board's Exhibits Nos. 16-A to 16-E, inclusive'.)

"Q. Are they carbon copies of invoices that were sent to the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. They are supposed to be. They are carbon copies.

"Q. What do you mean by 'They are supposed to be'? Are they or are they not?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this as not proper redirect examination. It should have been gone into in chief.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6494] "Mr. Foster: Then, the Board will offer in evidence at this time what has been marked for identification Board's exhibits Nos. 16-A to 16-E, inclusive.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects to the introduction of Exhibits 16-A to 16-E, for the reason that they are testified to be carbon copies of Intervener's Exhibits 11 and others, whereas, an examination of Intervener's Exhibit 11 shows that they are written in ink and that this is not a carbon copy of it.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Well, the objection is that it is purportedly testified that these are carbon copies of Intervener's Exhibits and an inspection of it will show they are not carbon copies at all of this, because the handwriting is entirely different. This is in ink and it doesn't show through on the same wording that is on the alleged carbon copy at all, and for the further reason they haven't been identified in such a way as to make them admissible, or to show they are original records.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener objects on the ground the witness ought to be allowed to examine the original rather than what is alleged to be a carbon copy before he is asked to testify whether they are carbon copies or not.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness has already testified these are carbon copies, which he has taken out of his office, and if there are any discrepancies I presume this would be the place to explain them, if there is any explaining to do. They will be received."

261.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to sustain respondent's motion to strike answer of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1596, to wit:

"Q. Did Miss Alexander have an assistant?
"A. Yes.
"Q. Who was that?
[fol. 6495] "A. Miss Elizabeth Nobles, who, I think, would be called her assistant.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move the answer be stricken out, as the witness says she thinks Miss Nobles would be an assistant.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I presume on cross-examination Mr. Ingraham, you may go into that and see whether there is any basis for the statement. I hardly think at this stage that I would strike out or sustain an objection when the witness says she has an opinion, because I think we have had quite a few of them thus far.

"You may proceed, Mr. Leary."

262.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 17 over the objection of the respondent which objection and ruling are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcripts of the record, Pages 1598, 1599, 1600, to wit:

"Q. I show you what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit No. 17 and ask you to state briefly what that document is.

"A. It was a record of the amount of letters written by the department that day, and who dictated them, and who wrote them. A few were written by the girls themselves; that is, form letters or letters that were of a similar nature; some of the girls, of course, would transpose those themselves.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Leary: The Board offers its exhibit No 17.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent objects to the introduction of Board's exhibit No. 17 for the reason that it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case. And, respondent moves that the witness' testimony be stricken out for the same reason.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection and motion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, what have you to say?

[fol. 6496] "Mr. Leary: I believe there has been testimony regarding the membership of Miss Alexander and Miss Nobles in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union Mr. Examiner, and I believe this goes to show these persons were of a supervisory nature. There is no better proof in the world than to have this daily check-off; it is somewhat like an efficiency system the company uses to check up on the work done by even the stenographers in the office daily, all handled by the persons Alexander and Nobles.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

263.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence and refusing to strike answer of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw as set forth in the following excepts from the transcript of the record, Page 1603, to wit:

"Q. Now, with reference to this meeting where Mrs. Reed talked to the employees, I ask you to state in what manner you were advised that the meeting would be held?

"A. I think we were informed by the head of our department.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move the answer be stricken out as speculative.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

264.

Respondents excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 18 also referred to as Board's Exhibits 18-A to 18-J inclusive, over the objections of the respondent and intervener; which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1610, 1611, 1613, to wit:

[fol. 6497] "Q. I show you what has been marked as Board's Exhibit 18, Mrs. Greenhaw, and ask you to state briefly what that is.

"A. This is a copy of the minutes of the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on May 25, 1937.

* * * * * *

"(Thereupon, the documents above referred to were marked as 'Board's Exhibits Nos. 18-A to 18-J, inclusive' for identification.)

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Leary: The Board offers its Exhibit 18-A to 18-J.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to the introduction of Board's exhibit 18 for the reason that it purports to be a copy of some minutes, and the original would be the best evidence.

"Mr. Langsdale: Of course, they have produced what they say is the original, and these minutes that we have had photostated I told the Examiner we proposed to show they 'doctored' those minutes, and now we have what she says is a carbon copy of the minutes she turned over to Marjorie Green, and Marjorie Green produces what she says is the original.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to it on the ground that it is not identified.

"Mr. Leary: In what particular?

"Mr. Lane: It purports to be some copy of an original instrument which is supposed to be in existence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

265.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence and refusing to strike upon motions of the respondent answers of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1615, 1616, to wit:

"Q. Do you know what Mr. Marvin Price's work was?

"A. Yes.

[fol. 6498] "Q. Will you please state what it was?

"A. I think he was called custodian, and I believe he was in charge of the ordering of materials of all sorts for that building.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out as a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) And when you say 'materials for the building' do you distinguish in your answer from other materials that are ordered in the operation of the business?

"A. Yes. He had no connection with the ordering of piece goods and that sort of thing.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out as a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

266.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting testimony of the witness Mrs.

Greenhaw and in overruling the objections and motions to strike of the respondent and intervener thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1619, 1620, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) During the months of March and April and May, 1937, Mrs. Greenhaw, did you note anything unusual in the conduct of Miss Rose Todd while she was on the tenth floor?

"Mr. Lane: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

. . . . . .

[fol. 6499] "Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, now, you can just say 'yes' or 'no' to that question, whether you did.

"A. Yes.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) What was it that you noticed, Mrs. Greenhaw?

"Mr. Ingraham: I make the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

"A. I noticed that she was more than usually active in contact with the executives of the company.

"Mr. Lane: I move to strike the answer out as a mere conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

"Mr. Ingraham: Same objection. Respondent makes the same objection—the same motion to strike.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied."

267.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner admitting in evidence testimony of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1622, 1623, 1624, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Did this occasion when you saw the representative group of employees with Miss Todd to the tenth floor occur after the meeting when the Donnelly Garment Workers' was formed—Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

"Mr. Patten: Just a moment, please. I don't believe she has testified she saw a group of employees with Miss Todd. The question assumes she has so testified.

"Mr. Leary: I submit her testimony was that it was a representative group from the employees all over the plant.

[fol. 6500]. "Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Was Miss Todd with this group?

"A. I couldn't testify as to that, but I remember the occasion because it was rather unusual for people from the factory to be brought up on the tenth floor.

"Q. Now, do you remember about when this was?

"A. I remember, because a meeting took place the same day.

"Q. Well, what meeting?

"A. I am assuming it was the meeting—

"Q. (Interrupting) Well, tell me what occurred at the meeting that you say occurred the same day.

"A. There was, a committee was announced, who would represent the employees as—I don't remember how they were designated, but they were to be union representatives among the employees.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Was it before that meeting, Mrs. Greenhaw, that you saw this group of employees up on the tenth floor?

"A. Yes.

"Q. In Mrs. Reed's office? "A. Yes.

"Mr. Lane: I move to strike it out for the reason that the time is not fixed.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

268.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence testimony of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw over the objections of the respondent and intervenor, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1624, 1625, to wit:

[fol. 6501] "Q. Did you have occasion to talk with Mr. Green some time in March or April, 1937?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you remember any particular conversation that you had with him?

"A. We had a short discussion of the strike that was being held at Gordon's at that time.

"Q. And what, if anything, was said by Mr. Green—

"Mr. Ingraham (interrupting): I object. It calls for hearsay—

"Mr. Leary (interrupting): Wait until I finish my question, please.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) What, if anything, was said by Mr. Green at that time with regard to the strike at Gordon's?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object. It calls for hearsay testimony.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will overrule the objection as to hearsay, but the thing I am concerned about, I don't want to get into all these other strikes. Now, she may answer the question and then I will determine whether or not it may be stricken.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection, that it is hearsay.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling."

269.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence and permitting the witness Mrs. Greenhaw to answer question over respondent's objections as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1641, to wit:

[fol. 6502] "Q. When you first went to work for the Donnelly Company you stated that you were in the returns department. Who was your superior in that department?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to that as repetition.

"Mr Langsdale: She hasn't stated that.

"Mr. Ingraham: It calls for a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't make any note of it—You may answer. I don't think she mentioned anybody."

270.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, comments and action of the Trial Examiner announcing his purpose and refusal to permit testimony of respondent's employees to the effect that they selected the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of their own free will or to tell the circumstances under which they signed petition marked I. L. G. W. U. exhibits Nos. 11-A to 11-MM inclusive, and in refusing to admit said exhibits in evidence, and in stating and announcing that the Trial Examiner would not allow respondent's employees to take the stand and testify that they were not dominated and that they did form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of their own free will, over the objections of the respondent and intervener, and in overruling respondent's motion to strike from the complaint and dismiss the charge that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is a dominated union, which rulings, comments, objections and motions are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1651, 1652, 1653, 1654, 1655 and 1656, to wit:

[fol. 6503] "Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mrs. Greenhaw, I show you a document which has been marked I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 11-A to No. 11-MM, inclusive, and call your attention to the first page and ask you if you ever saw that document before.

"A. Yes, I have seen it.

"Q. That is a document that purports to have been signed on the 8th day of July, 1937.

I call your attention to that page of the document which has been marked I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 11-H and ask you if you find a photostat of your signature on there.

"A. Yes, I do

* * * * * * *

"Q. This document reads—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting) Now, are you going to offer it?

"Mr. Langsdale: Yes, I am. Is re any objection?

"Mr. Ingraham: No.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. I may have. "Is that an affidavit signed by all of the Donnelly Garment Company employees that they want the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Langsdale: You can read it better than I can tell you. (Handing I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 11-A to 11-MM, inclusive, to Trial Examiner Batten.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly will not receive it.

"Mr. Langsdale: On what ground do you object to it?

"Trial Examiner Batten. I won't receive it, at least if it is offered for any purpose to show that these people have selected this union, that it is their free selection, or anything of that kind. I positively won't receive it for that purpose.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Langsdale: I am offering it for the purpose of showing under what circumstances this witness was induced to sign this document, which states that 'Each of us formed our own union and selected our own representatives.'

[fol. 6504] "Trial Examiner Batten: I won't receive it for that purpose, because I am not going to have 1,200 employees come up here and tell me the circumstances under which they signed this petition; and it wouldn't mean anything if they did.

"Mr. Langsdale: Then, are you going to permit them to cross-examine her with reference to her signature on there?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly am not.

"Mr. Langsdale: I have no object in offering it except—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting). Well, Mr. Langsdale, my position on this situation is just this—and I have had it come up in about six cases where I have been presented either with a petition or with membership cards of a large number of employees in a plant, stating that they joined of their own free will, and so forth. Now, I don't consider that testimony, if it were given, of any value when they are put up here on the stand and testify under oath, with the respondent, and in some cases, the foreman and the superintendent present. It might result in coercion, and it might not.

"There is only one way to determine this question of majority, and that is by an election, which is not involved in this hearing. I am not going to have a parade of witnesses here on this stand testifying, and for that reason I will not accept it.

"Now, I am making that as a very definite statement now, so that all of you, if you have any offer to make on this particular matter, may prepare your offer and I will receive it at any time before the close of the hearing, but I want it thoroughly understood that I am not going into this matter.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, do I understand that you are not going to allow witnesses to take the stand and testify that they were not dominated and that they did form this union of their own free will?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is exactly what I mean.

"Mr. Ingraham: Of course, respondent excepts to the ruling.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I assume that the intervener will, too.

[fol. 6505] "Mr. Langsdale: You have nothing to except to.

"Mr. Lane: Yes, we do. We assume we have an exception.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want to make it very clear at this time to everybody, while I am not attempting to rule on the matter the point, as I said once before, if you want to bring some witnesses up here and offer it, I want you to do it. In other words, I don't want the respondent's attorney, or the intervener's attorney, to fail to do something that you think you should do to protect your record, but I do think I ought to tell you just exactly what my position is.

"I am not going to receive it, and—

"Mr. Stottle (interrupting): Mr. Examiner, don't you think you should make a ruling now striking out the charge that it is a dominated union, if you are not going to permit us—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Do you want to make that motion?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Mr. Langsdale: It appears to me this is my offer; not yours.

"Trial Examiner Batter: I say, does Mr. Stottle want to make that motion now? If so, he may do so.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, in view of the Examiner's statement as to his position on the matter, the respondent does move that the charge in the complaint that the union is a dominated union should be dismissed.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied."

271.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting the witness Mrs. Greenhaw to answer questions and admitting in evidence the testimony of said witness over the objections of the respondent and intervener as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1661, 1662, and 1664, to wit: [fol. 6506] "Q. Now, Mrs. Greenhaw, let me ask you with reference to the meeting of April 27, 1937, which was the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, if you heard Miss Todd say anything at that meeting about the—officers of the Loyalty League meeting the night before and deciding the only thing to be done was to form this union?

"Mr. Ingraham: I move the question be—I object to the question for the reason that it is leading and suggestive and an improper way to examine this witness. He can ask the witness what Miss Todd said, but I don't think it is proper for him to read from what purports to be some statement, and then ask if she heard that.

"Mr. Langsdale: It seems to me it—

"Mr. Patten (interrupting): The intervener makes the same objection.

"Mr. Langsdale: The Examiner has many times said the attorney is responsible for the form in which he asks his questions.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I still say that is true, and, of course, if the attorney wants to ask a question such as this, why, of course, it will have to be weighed. If it has any value, it will receive it, and if it hasn't, of course, it won't.

"Mr. Langsdale: I am willing to take that chance.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think under my ruling that is your privilege.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, the intervener further objects for the reason that that question was asked by counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by reference to some statement which, from his previous statement, was made by this witness in the presence of some stenographer, outside of the presence of anybody representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. The statement itself is hearsay and in no sense binding upon the intervener, and for that reason is an improper document to be used to refresh this witness' memory. The question itself calls for hearsay and cannot be binding on the intervener.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

[fol. 6507] "Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

"Mr. Langsdale: Read the question, please.

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

"A. She did make such a statement."

272.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in permitting the witness Mrs. Greenhaw to answer questions, and admitting in evidence her testimony in response thereto, over the objections of the respondent and intervener, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1665, 1666, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mrs. Greenhaw, referring to the meeting of March 18, you identified that meeting as the one at which the letter from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was read, and at which meeting Mrs. Nelly Don Reed spoke. I will ask you if at that meeting Mrs. Reed stated that she would close her shop before she would permit it to be unionized.

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to the question for the same reason that I have objected to the previous question that Mr. Langsdale asked when he was reading from this document that he has in his hand.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten. I will overrule the objection.

"A. Mrs. Reed did state she would close her factory before she would permit it to be unionized.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did Mrs. Reed state at that meeting that she would make plans to protect the employees from the union?

"Mr. Ingraham. Same objection.

[fol. 6508] "Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

"A. I don't remember the exact words, but it was definitely stated that the employees would be protected against the union, the union's activities."

273.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, comments and action of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1673, 1674, to wit:

"Q. Do you recall at that time the International was conducting a strike at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri Garment Companies?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, is this just for the purpose of establishing a time?

"Mr. Ingraham: I think, in view of this witness' testimony as to what was said by Mrs. Reed at this March 18th meeting, that we have the right to show what was going on.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't propose to go into it, Mr. Ingraham. I have said before that on that matter, in the first place, supposing that Mrs. Reed did say that, supposing that Mrs. Reed got up and said other things about it, I still can't see, as I asked you this morning, why you should be permitted to show it, whether it is true or untrue. The thing is, did Mrs. Reed get up in this meeting and make certain statements. Are the statements she made—are they of such a nature that they intimidate, coerce or restrain the employee. It isn't a question of whether they are true or not. They may be true and they may still have the same effect. I still can't see by your explanation this morning how it can be material. The only thing is, what did Mrs. Reed say at this meeting.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, it is our theory that we are entitled to show what the situation was, and the purpose, or one of the purposes of the March 18th meeting, and that Mrs. Reed did make a speech, and the reason she had for making the speech:"

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner and to the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner against respondent indicated thereby, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1681, 1682, to wit:

"Q. Now, who are some of the other department heads that were engaging in coercion?

"A. Of course, that is a hard thing to answer.

"Q. Well, you are testifying now. Just give the names, please, Mrs. Greenhaw, of these people that were engaging in coercion.

"A. Because it was a general feeling—

"Q. (Interrupting) I am not—just answer—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Just a minute. Let her finish.

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to it as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Don't stop her. Let her say what she wanted to. We have had witnesses here before and, certainly, no one stopped them yet when they wanted to explain an answer, or talk.

"Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I don't object if she will answer and then explain.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let her answer. We can't tell, Mr. Ingraham, until she gets through.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) What were you saying?

"A. Well, I have worked in a number of other places, you know, and then when I went to work there there was a very different atmosphere and a different attitude among the employees and toward them, and there was a feeling that they were held very closely in line at all times [fol. 6510] by the officials of the company, and I am sure that for years the company had been building up that sort of a thing.

"Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move the answer be stricken out. It is not responsive.

"Mr. Lane: The intervener moves it be stricken out as stating a conclusion, not founded upon any fact testified to by the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

275.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving and admitting in evidence and into the record the document referred to as Examiner's Exhibit No. 1, and to the Examiner's comments upon same, and in permitting the witness Mrs. Greenhaw to testify from and refresh her memory from said document and admitting such testimony herein, which rulings, action and comments are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1713, 1714, 1715, 1716, 1717, 1718, 1719, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Let me ask you, in the statement you gave to Mr. Walsh you stated:

'Either on the day or the day before the suggestion was first made that there should be a company union organized I saw a group of seven or eight employees going into Mrs. Reed's office.' Is that right?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Lane: Now, Mr. Examiner, may I have a continuing objection to all questions asked by counsel for the International with respect to the statement he holds in his hand, and questions where he reads from the statement, on the grounds I have heretofore stated?

[fol. 6511] "Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may have a continuing objection.

"Of course, I want that marked as an exhibit. It has always been my practice, whenever an attorney examines a witness from a memorandum or statement they have previously made, to ask to have that made a part of the record.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Langsdale: I have only a copy here, Mr. Examiner. Shall I identify it and offer it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think you had better have it marked as Trial Examiner's exhibit No. 1, and it will be received only in so far as you have asked these questions from it. In other words, I am not receiving the entire thing.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to the document for the reason that it is not identified, and for the reason that it has been stated by counsel to be a mere copy, when there is apparently an original in existence; and for the further reason it is inadmissible for any purpose, the intervener not having been present when any statements contained therein were made; and for the further reason that they are self-serving and hearsay. Intervener objects to its being received for any purpose.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is received for whatever it purports to be.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener further objects on the ground that it is highly prejudicial and improper to permit a memorandum of that kind to be used to refresh the recollection of a witness who has testified she has no independent recollection of the matter. I say it is prejudicially erroneous to permit it to be used for that purpose.

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects to the Examiner's Exhibit No. 1 for the reason that it is not taken under oath, not testified to under oath, that the witness who is purported to have signed it is here on the stand now, and her own testimony should be the testimony of this witness, and not any statement that she may have prepared at some prior time. It is not even signed by the witness, and is—purports to be a carbon [fol. 6512] copy of some statement which she may have signed.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: We also object that it is just immaterial and improper for any purpose whatsoever.

* * * * * * *

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Mrs. Greenhaw, will you look this over and tell me whether or not that is a statement that you made, and if so, when?

"A. Yes, this is a statement I made.

"Mr. Langsdale: Read it through, will you, Mrs. Greenhaw, so you can testify from all of it.

"Mr. Lane: * I object to the Examiner's question for the reason that this document is not the best evidence, and whether this witness can, by reading it, refresh her recollection or not, could not supply the defect; it does not cure the defect that this is not the best evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled. I am merely trying to get into the record whatever it is. I don't know what it is, but whatever it is, she apparently testified from it, and as such, she is entitled to, whether it is an affidavit or a memorandum or whatever it is, and I merely want it in the record so that it will show what it was that refreshed her memory.

"Mr. Stottle: The respondent adds to its objection that it would be prejudicial to have it in the record, the whole document, which—only a portion of it is purportedly received, because whoever reads the record to ascertain those portions must necessarily read the whole document.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, do you mean by that that it has always been a practice to cut part of something out which is introduced for a certain purpose, and that you never introduce the whole of anything?

"Mr. Stottle: No, I don't mean that. I just say that it would be necessary for anyone, in reviewing the record, yourself, or anyone else, to read this whole document in order to read the portions that you are admitting, and that it would be prejudicial to the respondent to have a document in there which is not the testimony of this witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the objection is overruled."

[fol. 6513] In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the receipt of the document referred to as Trial Examiner's Exhibit No. 1 and to the testimony received concerning same and based upon same from the witness Mrs. Greenhaw, for the reason that same wrongfully and erroneously injected into the mind of the Trial Examiner prejudice against respondent, which prejudice and bias later manifested itself in the Trial Examiner's findings, conclusions and recommendations in the Intermediate Report.

276.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner in refusing to strike answers of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections to the questions propounded to said witness, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1729, 1730, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did any incident occur while you were there in which Mr. or Mrs. Keyes was engaged that in your opinion was coercion?

"A. There were so many incidents that I can hardly recall them.

"Q. Can you recall any one?

"A. There was hardly a day—

"Mr. Shepard (Interrupting): Your Honor, I ask that these answers be stricken.

"Mr. Leary: Why?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will not strike them.

[fol. 6514] "Mr. Stottle: They are so general, Your Honor—

"Trial Examiner Batten: But, Mr. Stottle, if you will just look back toward the beginning of this hearing you will find plenty of answers that are general. I am not going to start now—

"Mr. Lane (Interrupting): Intervener objects on the ground that it is not responsive to the question, and it is not a statement of any facts.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, do you mean an attorney who is not asking a question can object on the ground that it is not responsive? Are you, the attorney who does not ask the question, going to object that it is not responsive?

"Mr. Lane: I think if the witness gives an answer to Mr. Langsdale's question that I think is not responsive, I have a right to object, and I do object.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that it calls for a conclusion. There was no definition of the word 'coo[illegible]ion', and the answer she made was that it was of a general nature and did not state the facts, which you stated she should do.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled."

277.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1733, 1734, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you ever hear Mr. Keyes talk to the employees about loyalty to the company?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Lane: That is objected to as leading.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Lane, you know my ruling on leading questions; I have made it so many times. You may have a continuing objection to leading questions.

"Mr. Lane: The Board, of course, will not know what I consider leading questions unless I make my objection.

[fol. 6515] "Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I thought it would save all of these interruptions.

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I would be very glad not to make that objection at all if there were any way of making it known what I regard as leading questions, but unless I make my objection I don't see how the Board or anybody else can tell what I regard as leading questions.

"Mr. Langsdale: The Board is supposed to have some intelligence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume the persons who have to pass on this will know what weight should be given a question, irrespective of whether you think it is leading or not. If the Examiner and the Board feel it is the attorney who is doing the testifying, no weight will be given to it."

278.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner throughout the hearing in permitting counsel for the Board and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to ask leading questions and place the answers desired in the mouth of the witness, and stating and announcing that testimony in response to such questions would not be given weight, and thereafter in the findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations, the Trial Examiner based same upon the testimony so elicited.

279.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's objection as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1742, to wit:

[fol. 6516] "'Q. Prior to 1933 was there any minimum wage scale at the Donnelly plant?'

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to that question as being immaterial and relating to a time so remote as not to have any bearing on this issue here.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As to the remoteness, the objection is overruled."

280.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence testimony concerning the Loyalty League and in overruling objections of the respondent and intervener thereto, and in overruling continuing objections of respondent and intervener to all testimony concerning the Loyalty League and permitting the witnesses to continue to testify thereto, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1769, 1770, 1771, to wit:

"Q. Showing you your bank statement for the month of March, 1937, is it not a fact that a deposit of $1,000 was made on March 30, 1937?

"A. That is right.

"Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this question, and all questions relating to the Loyalty League, on the ground that it is immaterial. We understand the allegation in the complaint that there is a connection, but there has been no testimony indicating that the Loyalty League has anything to do with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. It is merely a social organization, and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is a separate organization.

"We think it is encumbering the record to go into these activities of the Loyalty League.

"We haven't objected a great deal to this, but we think the matter should be presented to the Examiner, and that we should have a continuing objection to any testimony regarding the Loyalty League.

[fol. 6517] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have a continuing objection. As I recall it, you have, on about three occasions objected to it at the beginning of the hearing, and I at this time will make the same ruling I have in the past. I will overrule the objection, but you may have a continuing objection.

"Mr. Stottle: And also on the ground it is not binding on the respondent, anything this witness may say, as well as being immaterial to the issues.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That may be incorporated.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener makes the same objection, and adds to it the testimony as to what may have happened in the Loyalty League prior to the organization of the union is immaterial and irrelevant.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled. You desire to continuing objection, Mr. Patten?

"Mr. Patten: I do."

281.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence throughout the hearing over the objections and continuing objections allowed to respondent and intervener of testimony of the various witnesses concerning the Loyalty League and in failing and refusing to exclude said testimony and in taking said testimony into consideration in the findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner and in refusing to strike same from the record, for the reason that the evidence shows that the Loyalty League, as such, had no part in the formation or administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and did not assist it in any way, and for the further reason that the evidence shows that the respondent did not participate in the formation or ad-[fol. 6518] ministration of the Loyalty League and did not act through it in any way, and for the further reason that the evidence affirmatively shows that the Loyalty League's activities were purely of a social character and that all evidence concerning the Loyalty League is immaterial to any of the issues involved in this proceeding and should not have been taken into consideration by the Trial Examiner in making his findings of fact, conclusions or recommendations set forth in the Intermediate Report.

282.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 19 and in overruling respondent's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages ~~1773~~, 1774, to wit:

"Q. I show you, Miss Hartman, what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 19, and ask you to state whether or not that is the note taken from the official records of the Nelly Don Loyalty League that you just referred to in your testimony?

"A. That is right.

"Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 19.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to the exhibit for the grounds already stated, that it is immaterial to the issues here, and also that it is not binding on the respondent in any way.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I assume that your continuing objection applies to the note as well.

[fol. 6519] "Mr. Stottle: Well, I thought it might, but I wasn't sure that it would.

"Mr. Patten: The intervener desires its continuing objection to apply to the note.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received, subject to those objections."

283.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibits Nos. 21-A to 21-O inclusive, and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1793 and 1842, to wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: We offer these checks which have been identified as Board's exhibits Nos. 21-A to 21-O, inclusive.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes its continuing objection to these exhibits.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

"Mr. Lane: We make our general objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is, the same continuing objection you have made?

"Mr. Lane: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve decision on the offer.

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibit 21, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis; and Board's Exhibit 25, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, subject to the same objections."

[fol. 6520] 284.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 25 and in overruling the objections of the respondent thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1800, 1801, 1809 and 1842, to wit:

"Q. Now, I hand you this, what has been marked as Board's Exhibit 25, and ask you to state what it is, if you know.

"A. That is a statement from the First National Bank, the balance of our loan plus the interest.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Langsdale: The Board offers its Exhibit 25.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes the same continuing objection to this exhibit.

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: On Board's Exhibit 25, I will reserve my decision.

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibit 21, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, and Board's Exhibit 25, in which I reserve a decision, will be received on the same basis, subject to the same objections."

285.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 26 and in overruling respondent's objections thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1807, 1808, to wit:

"Q. I show you what has been marked for identification Board's exhibit No. 26 and ask you to state briefly what that is.

"A. A list of the dates of meetings, the first one beginning May 11, 1937, and ending with April 5, 1938.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6521] "Mr. Leary: The Board offers its exhibit No. 26.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects that it is immaterial and does not seem to throw any light upon the issues in this case.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener has no objection

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

286.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in rejecting and refusing to receive in evidence Respondent's Exhibit No. 2 and in sustaining the objections of the Board and I. L. G. W. U. thereto, and further excepts to the rulings, comments and action of the Trial Examiner relative to the exclusion of said exhibit and similar testimony as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1828, 1829, 1830, to wit:

"Cross-Examination

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Mrs. Tobin, you are familiar with the contracts the International has made with garment companies located in Kansas City?

"A. I am.

"Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 2 and ask you if these are photostatic copies of contracts which the International has with other garment manufacturers in Kansas City.

"A. There are two contracts here, one for the Liberty, and one for the Mayfair, which were the contracts negotiated in 1937, but have since been renewed with exchanges. The others are the contracts that are in force now.

"Q. What are the names of the other companies?

"A. Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence exhibit No. 2.

[fol. 6522] "Mr. Leary: Now, I object to that, Mr. Examiner, as being entirely incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant. It has no bearing on the issues in this matter that we are trying now.

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, counsel for the Board and counsel for the International have called the Examiner's attention to various provisions in the Donnelly Garment contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. I want to show that similar provisions are in the contracts that the International makes with other garment manufacturers.

"Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union objects to the exhibit for the reason that the only purpose of offering the contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company and the only purpose of calling attention to any provisions thereof was upon the question of whether or not there was bargaining as provided by the Wagner Act. The provisions of these contracts are in no way material. The comparison between these and the contracts between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company are in no way material. The only question is, were the contracts made with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company the result of collective bargaining by a free and independent union, as provided by the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Act?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, do you agree with Mr. Langsdale that the only purpose of the Donnelly contracts and the questions with respect to them was for the purpose of showing what negotiations were conducted, and that is all?

"Mr. Leary: That is it, yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if that testimony is limited, as you say it is, I will reject the offer of these contracts, because any comparison of the contracts would be unnecessary."

287.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit the witness Wave Tobin to testify in response to question asked by counsel for respondent and in sustaining the objection of the I. L. G. W. U. there[fol. 6523] to, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1831, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) I will ask you if that contract did not contain the provision that 'Present prices for piece workers shall remain intact and shall be based on a basis that not less than 75 per cent of the workers in the different departments of the shop shall be able to earn not less than $15 per week per capita.'?

"Mr. Bringsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union objects to the question for all of the reasons heretofore stated as objections to the offer of the contract itself.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

288.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence the stipulation set forth on pages 1834 and 1835 of the transcript of the record with reference to the portions of the building at 1828-30 Walnut Street which was leased or occupied by respondent and in overruling respondent's and Intervener's objections thereto, for the reason that while the parties stipulated as to what the facts were, the respondent and intervener objected to said facts being admitted in evidence because same were immaterial to any of the issues herein, which said objections and ruling of the Trial Examiner are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1836, to wit:

"Mr. Tyler: It is agreeable to me, of course, subject to the objection that it is incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant.

[fol. 6524] "Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent also objects that it is immaterial. We are stipulating as to the facts.

"Trial Examiner Batten: When asking you about the stipulation I am not asking you to forego any objection. All you are agreeing to is the facts; whether or not they are relevant is an entirely different matter.

"We will proceed."

289.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 20 and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1841, 1842, to wit:

"Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, we have had prepared from the bank statements which were used during the testimony of Miss Hartman in regard to the Nelly Don Loyalty League this morning, the exhibit for which Board's Exhibit No. 20 was reserved. I now offer that exhibit.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, that is subject to our continuing objection as to materiality as to the Loyalty League matter.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received subject to the objections of the respondent and the intervener, both, that is, your continuing objections."

290.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 27 and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1843, 1844, 1845, to wit:

[fol. 6525] "Mr. Leary:  Now, I offer, Mr. Examiner, what has been identified as Board's Exhibit No. 27; a newspaper clipping from the Kansas City Times under date of May 11, 1937. Is it not a fact, Mr. Ingraham, that you agree that the reporter who took this statement, if called to testify, would testify that the statements that were attributed to Senator Reed were made to that reporter by Senator Reed?

"Mr. Ingraham: That is correct. I am not admitting that Senator Reed made the statements, but just that the reporter would so testify.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener admits that the reporter would so testify, and objects that nothing that Senator Reed said could in any way be binding on the intervener.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

. . . . . .

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it will be received on the basis of the allegations that you have in your complaint. As to what bearing it has on the issues, I think would be a matter for the Examiner to determine."

291.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 29-A and 29-B and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of record, Pages 1845, 1846, to wit:

"Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, I offer for the record what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 29-A and 29-B, which is a computation of the salaries received by certain individuals who are officers of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, such computations of these persons' salaries being from January 15, 1937 to and including December 31, 1938.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Stottle: Yes. Respondent wants to object to the materiality of this, assuming that it is correct.

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener makes the same objection. It has no tendency to prove or disprove any issues in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

292.

[fol. 6526] Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit 23 and 24-A, 24-B and 24-C and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1856, 1857, to wit:

"Mr. Leary: Board offers Exhibits 23 and 24-A, 24-B, 24-C.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibits 23 and 24 were those accounts; 23 was the special fund account of the Donnelly Loyalty League and 24 was the general fund account.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes its continuing objection to any of those exhibits that refer to the Loyalty League matters, and also, we haven't as yet had an opportunity to check the correctness of the figures.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I might say this: that any exhibits which are received, of course, are received subject to correction if there are figures or dates that are found to be incorrect.

"Mr. Stottle: Then, our continuing objection was as to the materiality of that Loyalty League evidence.

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener renews its objection to any evidence in connection with the Loyalty League on the ground that it is purely a social organization, having no connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and that any of its actions would not in any way be binding on the intervener, and that it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, they will be received."

293.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 22 over the objections of the respondent and intervener as set forth in the following excerpts from the [fol. 6527] Transcript of the record, Page 1858, to wit:

"Mr. Leary: Board offers what purports to be Miss Hartman's memoranda of the Loyalty League and special account maintained at the First National Bank, identified as Board's Exhibit 22. I will have this photostated, and ask permission to insert the photostat.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received subject to the same objections by respondent and intervener as to Board's Exhibits 23 and 24."

294.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to exclude Board's Exhibit No. 30 and in failing and refusing to sustain respondent's and intervener's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1858 and 1859, and in later accepting the N.R.A. testimony contained in said Board's Exhibit 30 and permitting the Board to offer evidence under said offer of proof (Transcript of Record, Page 2552):

"Mr. Leary: Yes, I have several matters. I have the offer of proof that I desire to make at this time, in connection with certain sub-sections of paragraph 11.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That will be marked Board's Exhibit 30.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, the respondent objects to the exhibit 30 for the reason it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case, and refers to matters that occurred prior to the passage of the Wagner Act.

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve the decision on it."

[fol. 6528]

295.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence testimony taken in the so-called N. R. A.-Judge Miller cases, and excepts separately and severally to the admission in evidence of each and every part of such testimony offered by the Board or by the I. L. G. W. U., and excepts in particular to the admission in evidence of N.R.A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit No. 1-A to 1-BBBB, and to the Examiner's ruling and action in overruling the several objections to said testimony and the several motions to strike said testimony made by the respondent and intervener (and contained in N.R.A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit No. 2-A, 2-B and 2-C), as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1861, 1862, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: In accordance with the stipulation, which is marked Board's exhibit No. 1-DDDD, the Board has served upon all of the parties certain testimony taken from the N. R. A. proceeding and the so-called Judge Miller case.

* * * * * * *

"The first exhibit, N. R. A.-Judge Miller case exhibit No. 1-A to BBBB is certain testimony which is offered by the Board from the N. R. A. proceedings and it consists of 80 pages.

"N. R. A.-Judge Miller case exhibit No. 2-A, B, and C are the objections and motions of the respondent and intervener to strike the N. R. A. testimony offered by the Board. That is exhibit No. 1-A to BBBB, containing 80 pages, and the following ruling is made, endorsed on exhibit 2-A, B, and C, on sheet 2-C:—

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten:  The objection is overruled and the motion to strike is denied, and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings, or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain objections."

[fol. 6529] 296.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections and motions to strike the testimony contained in N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit No. 1-A to 1-BBBB and to the following limitation included in said ruling; to wit: "* and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings, or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain objections (subjects)", which ruling is set forth on Pages 1861-2 of the record, and further excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to clarify said ruling and designate what parts of said testimony were being received and what parts were being excluded by the above quoted ruling over the objections of respondent, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1862, 1863, to wit:

"Mr. Ingraham: I don't understand what you are ruling out and what you are leaving in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think if you take this and read it, Mr. Ingraham, you will understand just what I am receiving.

* * * * * * *

"If there is any question about it after you go over it, I will be very glad to clarify it."

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent calls attention to the fact that the Trial Examiner later refused to clarify the above quoted ruling and overruled respondent's motion therefor.

[fol. 6530] 297.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving in evidence N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit 5-A to 5-GG inclusive, and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto and motions to strike same (as contained in N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit 6-A, 6-B and 6-C), as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1864, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten:  N. R. A.-Judge Miller case exhibit No. 5-A to 5-GG is certain testimony offered by the Board from the Judge Miller case, consisting of 33 pages.

"Exhibit No. 6-A, B and C, the objections and motions to strike, of the respondent and intervener.

"Exhibit No. 5-A to 5-GG, the objection to such testimony is overruled, and the motion to strike is denied; and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects."

298.

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the limitation contained in the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner that "the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects", for the reason that said ruling and limitation renders it vague and indefinite what portions of the testimony referred to the Examiner intended to and did receive or exclude and what portions of said testimony the Examiner considered in arriving at his findings of fact, [fol. 6531] conclusions and recommendations, and respondent makes this exception to each and every ruling of the Trial Examiner to which said above quoted limitation was appended.

299.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit 9-A to 9-CC inclusive, and in overruling the objections of the respondent and intervener thereto, and in denying the motions to strike said testimony of the respondent and intervener, and further excepts to the limitations contained in said ruling, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1865, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten:  9-A to 9-CC is certain testimony from the Judge Miller case, offered by the Board, being the testimony of Sylvia Hull.

"In the case of Exhibit 9-A to 9-CC, the respondent has indicated on the exhibit objections to certain questions through the entire testimony of 29 pages. The intervener objects to all of the testimony.

"The rulings of the Trial Examiner are indicated on the various pages where the individual objections of the respondent appear, and as to the intervener's objection, the objection is overruled and the motion to strike is denied and acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects. The objections being marked 10-A, consisting of one sheet, and the rulings entered thereon."

300.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving in evidence N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibits 13-A to 13-R inclusive, and in overruling the objections of the respondent thereto (contained in Ex-[fol. 6532] hibit 14), and further excepts to the limitation included in said ruling, as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1866, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: • • • NRA-Judge Miller Case Exhibits 13-A to 13-R, consisting of 18 pages, is certain testimony from the Judge Miller case offered by the Board.

"Exhibit 14 is the objections by the respondent to 13-A to 13-R, and the following ruling:

"Objection is overruled and acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings, and, further, it is not the purpose in accepting the testimony to reverse any rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects."

301.

Respondent excepts to the ruling of the Trial Examiner sustaining the Board's motion of June 21 to amend the complaint, which ruling is set forth on page 1870 of the transcript of the record.

302.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner set forth on page 1870 of the transcript of the record permitting the Board to present the witness referred to in Board's exhibit No. 30.

303.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to sustain or rule upon respondent's motion to dismiss the Complaint in its entirety (Board's Exhibit 1-FFFF) submitted at the close of the Board's case (Page 1872), and in failing and refusing to sustain or rule upon the oral demurrer or motion to [fol. 6533] dismiss of the intervener made at the close of the Board's case (Page 1873), and further excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in requiring respondent to proceed with its case prior to a ruling upon its said motion to dismiss, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1872, 1873, 1889, 1890, 1891, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent desires to file its motion to dismiss the complaint in its entirety.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That will be marked Board's exhibit No. 1-FFFF.

Mr. Stottle: The grounds of the motion, Mr. Examiner, are that there has been no substantial evidence in the record to support any of the charges. In some instances there has been some evidence but it has been of a conjectural and speculative nature that would not be sufficient to constitute a case against the respondent.

"Mr. Tyler: If the court please, the intervener wishes at this point to demur to the evidence of the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and move to dismiss the complaint on the grounds that the evidence introduced, if taken as true, would not be sufficient upon which to base any finding which would affect the rights of the intervener; it would be insufficient to base an order on just establishing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as bargaining representatives; it would be insufficient to base an order upon which would in any way cancel or affect the contract which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have with their employers, or their contract rights; it would be insufficient in any way to use as a basis for any degree, order, or judgment affecting the rights and interests of the intervener.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Stottle: * * * Of course, Mr. Examiner, we would like to have a ruling on these matters so that we might know—

[fol. 6534] "Trial Examiner Batten: I will tell you now, I am not going to rule on them today or tomorrow; I may not even rule on them until all of the evidence is in.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: Yes. If the Court please, I wish to amplify the motion of the intervener heretofore made to dismiss by adding as a basis for that motion that no evidentiary basis for any finding that the union was organized by the company or is company dominated has been laid, and that therefore no finding could be made, because no evidence has been submitted as a basis;

"That no basis has been laid for any finding that the company coerced or intimidated or influenced any employee in joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union;

"And that no basis has been laid for any possible finding that the company contributed, directly or indirectly, financial aid or other aid to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union;

"No basis has been laid that the union is not a bona-fide labor union, with all of the rights guaranteed such union under the Wagner Act;

"And that no basis has been laid for any finding that the union is not a free will choice of the majority of the employees and is not entitled to representation of all of the employees in collective bargaining.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Those additional reasons, I presume you call them, Mr. Tyler— * * * will be considered in connection with the disposition of the motion."

304.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in failing to sustain or rule upon respondent's motion to dismiss each of the separate paragraphs of the Complaint which motion was marked Board's Exhibit 1-GGGG and was made and filed at the close of the Board's case (Page 1874) (and argued at Pages 1874 to 1889 inclusive), and further excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in requiring respondent to proceed with its case and evidence prior to a ruling upon said motion,

[fol. 6535] as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1874, 1889, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we have another motion to dismiss that goes to each of the paragraphs separately.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The first is a general motion, and this is a specific motion.

"Mr. Stottle: To practically all of the paragraphs, yes, but not every one of them. We will submit it at this time if you will give me a number.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That will be Board's exhibit No. 1-GGGG.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: * * * Of course, Mr. Examiner, we would like to have a ruling on these matters so that we might know—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will tell you now, I am not going to rule on them today or tomorrow; I may not even rule on them until all of the evidence is in."

305.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to strike from the record all the evidence upon each and all of the various paragraphs of the Complaint and in failing and refusing to sustain respondent's motions therefor, contained and set forth at the bottom of respondent's motion to dismiss, and in requiring respondent to proceed with its case and evidence prior to a ruling upon said motion to strike, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1889, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Then, at the bottom of our motion we have moved that the Examiner strike from the record all evidence upon the various paragraphs which the Examiner does dismiss.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6536] "Mr. Stottle: The motion goes to striking all evidence on the other paragraphs that you may dismiss, as well as (s).

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve decision on that.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: * * * Of course, Mr. Examiner, we would like to have a ruling on these matters so that we might know—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will tell you now, I am not going to rule on them today or tomorrow; I may not even rule on them until all of the evidence is in."

In connection with the foregoing exception, respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in later failing and refusing to sustain respondent's said motion to strike all the evidence introduced under each and all of the paragraphs of the Complaint and in permitting said evidence to remain in the record, and further excepts to the action of the Trial Examiner in taking said evidence into consideration in his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations set forth in the Intermediate Report.

306.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to clarify his rulings upon the N. R. A.-Judge Miller case testimony and in denying respondent's request for such clarification, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1891, 1892, to wit:

[fol. 6537] "Trial Examiner Batten: * * * Mr. Stottle, you have something further?

"Mr. Stottle: This has reference, Mr. Examiner, to your ruling made this morning on the N. R. A. and Judge Miller case testimony submitted by the Board.

"In substance the ruling was the same on all of them, and reads: '. . . the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings. It is not the purpose in accepting the testimony to reverse any rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects.'

"Of course we are somewhat in a dilemma to understand just what we are required to meet there.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would say, Mr. Stottle, if there is the least doubt in your mind, you submit your evidence and then I will tell you whether it is material or not.

"Mr. Stottle: You mentioned that there are certain subjects you do not want to go into. If you could just tell us what subjects you mean—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think the record is clear on that. If it is not, I will clear it up as we go along."

307.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in limiting and excluding evidence offered by the respondent as set forth on Pages 1903 and 1904 of the transcript of the record, and further excepts to the ruling and comment of the Trial Examiner therein set forth to the effect that the testimony in N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibits Nos. 1 to 16, with reference to the discharge of certain employees (except Tubbesing, Fry and Brooks) should be stricken, and in thereafter considering said testimony so stated to be stricken, and basing his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations thereon, for the reason that said rulings and action of the Trial Examiner were highly misleading, unfair and prejudicial to respond-[fol. 6538]-ent, and in preventing respondent from putting in evidence concerning the matters stated by the Trial Examiner to be stricken by the said witness then on the stand, to wit, Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves, and by other witnesses which respondent might have called if said misleading ruling had not been made, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1903, 1904, to wit:

"Q. I will ask you, Mrs. Reeves, if among the 300 employees that were laid off there was Ellen Fry, Tillie Shirlie, Pauling Lutz, Mamie Tubbesing, Thelma Owen, Glynn Brooks, Nora McKee, Olive Thompson—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Now, are we interested in that entire list?

"Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, the next question I intend to ask Mrs. Reeves is whether or not over half of these people were called back to work.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, well, then, I thought perhaps you—

"Mr. Langsdale: If he is permitted to ask that we certainly want to disprove it on rebuttal.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You go ahead and make your objections and I will pass upon the objections when they are made.

"Mr. Ingraham: That is just what I don't understand. I understood Mr. Langsdale and the Board have offered evidence regarding these people, and their offers have been received.

"Mr. Leary: Not regarding all of the persons you have named. I suggest you read Board's exhibit No. 30 and note that it includes only three names.

"Mr. Igraham: But you submitted evidence on more than those three people, and the evidence has been received, as I understand it. You submitted evidence on about ten of them.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean in some of those other exhibits this morning?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

[fol. 6539] "Trial Examiner Batten: Of course if there is other evidence there with respect to their discharge it should be stricken out, shouldn't it, Mr. Leary?

"Mr. Leary: If it is limited strictly to their discharge, yes, but as to discriminatory remarks, and so forth, made to these persons, I don't think it should be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will say now, if there is any such testimony, Mr. Ingraham, in the exhibit, it certainly wasn't my intention that any of that testimony should remain in there with respect to the discharge of these people except those three, and in the N. R. A.-Judge Miller case exhibits Nos. 1 to 16 if there is any testimony of that nature it may be stricken, with respect to the discharge of all of the persons except—what were those three, Mr. Leary?

"Mr. Leary: Tubbesing, Fry, and Brooks."

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to admit in evidence Respondent's Exhibit No. 6 for the purposes for which same was offered by respondent and in limiting its admission in evidence, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Mrs. Reeves, I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 6, which is a newspaper article appearing in the Kansas City Star, February 26, 1937, setting out statements by Meyer Purlstein and Wave Tobin, and ask you if you have read that article:

"A. I did.

"Mr. Ingraham: The respondent offers in evidence Exhibit 6.

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: For what purpose?

"Mr. Ingraham: For the purpose of showing the situation at this time, and I will offer other articles up until April 23d, when Sylvia Hull and May Fike had their difficulty at the plant.

* * * * * *

[fol. 6540] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I might say that I don't like trying these Labor Board cases in the newspapers.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, Mr. Leary offered a long article of Senator Reed's, and it set out the background and the history, and I am showing our side of this background. Now, I am asking this witness—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is this all contained in the Judge Miller testimony?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, then, I will say you had better submit it as a transcript from that.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, I will prove as to the truth of this statement from the Judge Miller testimony, but I would like to examine this witness in regard to whether or not she read this and what occurred. As far as the facts being true, I will prove that by the Judge Miller evidence.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Ingraham: I am setting it up for the purpose of showing the situation.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The general situation?

"Mr. Ingraham: At that time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, background?

"Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

"Mr. Tyler: If the court please, the intervener will also wish to use it on the ground that we are trying motives here, and inner intent, and you can't adequately try a question of that kind without showing the situation, to show what things would affect their intent, or their actual motive. There is no other way to get at motive and intent without showing the surrounding circumstances and things that would influence it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you expect me to be able to determine people's inner feelings?

"Mr. Tyler: I think Your Honor is going to have to determine what the motive was, and you have got to base it on surrounding influence that would—[fol. 6541] "Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): I am perfectly willing that you should have a reasonable amount of background as the Board had in the NRA proceeding. They showed it almost entirely by transcript of that testimony. Now, if this means calling a large number of witnesses for that purpose, I don't want to have the background, as I have said so many times in this case, become the picture.

"Mr. Ingraham: I don't think it will result in that.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you want to offer it on that basis, I will receive it on that basis, that you offer it for, Mr. Ingraham, but not for the purpose which Mr. Tyler stated that he expected to use it for."

309.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner concerning Respondent's Exhibit No. 7, and to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to give consideration to said exhibit, and to his comments that said exhibit "doesn't prove anything", as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1917, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: On the basis I received the other one, and this one, it doesn't open up anything, because I am not receiving it to show the truth or the untruth of any statements in the article, merely as an article from the newspaper for whatever it is worth.

"Mr. Langsdale: If it is worth anything, it is worth rebutting.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, there is nothing to rebut if it doesn't prove anything. If it doesn't prove the truth or the untruth of any statement contained in it, I don't think it opens up anything.

"Mr. Leary: For all of your reasons, I don't think it should be admitted, Mr. Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am admitting it, Mr. Leary, as I told Mr. Ingraham, and he is offering it for the purpose of showing the background of what was occurring about that time, and on that basis I will receive it."

[fol. 6542] 310.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to admit in evidence Respondent's Exhibits 8-A and 8-B for the purposes for which same were offered by respondent and stated by counsel for intervener, and in refusing to consider same for such purposes or upon such issues, and in limiting the purposes for which same were admitted, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1918, 1919, 1920, to wit:

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, then respondent offers Exhibits 8-A and 8-B.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Langsdale: Now, I assume that this letter is admitted that it will be admitted as one of the newspaper articles, not as a matter in controversy that we have a right to prove was true, or they would have a right to prove was false, unless the matters are within the issues as have been defined by this complaint and by the Examiner? This letter goes into a great many matters that are not before the Examiner here, and if they are going to try to offer—set up an automaton and knock him down, we want to be permitted to prop him up again.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, if Your Honor please, the Board and Mr. Langsdale have offered evidence that Mrs. Reed read this letter to a meeting, and they have brought the letter into issue.

"Mr. Langsdale: We didn't read the contents.

* * * * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I don't propose to try the truth or the untruth of any of the statements in the letter.

"Mr. Langsdale: That is all I want to know.

[fol. 6543] "Trial Examiner Batten: I think I said at one stage in this case that, granting that everything that was said in the answer were true, it still wouldn't answer the charge of an unfair labor practice. In other words, everything that is said might be true and still there would be an unfair labor practice. I will receive it on the same basis that I received the others, and for the additional reason that it is the letter referred to in the meeting of March 18, 1937, which has been testified to here, I think by two or three different people.

* * * * * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: Well, I ask your Honor to receive it also on the ground that it would throw some light on the question of whether these employees were dominated by their employer and forced to form a labor union, or whether this letter and the effect it had on them was not a cause of their forming a labor union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will reserve my decision on that, Mr. Tyler, because I assume that you will want to go over a good many of these and make an offer all together. Wouldn't you prefer to do that, without waiving any of your rights?"

311.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting evidence referred to as the "N. R. A. Testimony" offered by the Board and I. L. G. W. U. at various times and in various forms during the hearing, and over the continuing objections of the respondent and intervener, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1978, 1979, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent, of course, objects to this N. R. A. testimony as being immaterial because it related to matters long before the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and before the passage of the National Labor Relations Act, and we would object to these questions on the same basis that we have to the N. R. A. testimony.

[fol. 6544] "Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I don't know whether the record is clear or that it is understood, but, as I recall, you made a continuing objection to all testimony that refers to a time prior to the passage of the Wagner Act. And, if I am not mistaken, Mr. Tyler, you joined in that objection.

"Mr. Tyler: I intended to.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think the record is quite clear.

"Mr. Stottle: May it be understood, if it isn't clear our objection is made?

"Trial Examiner Batten: If it isn't clear, it is understood that you have an objection; and Mr. Tyler, also.

312.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, comments and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit respondent or intervener to introduce evidence relating to a comparison of the contracts between respondent and intervener union with contracts made between the I.L.G.W.U. and other garment manufacturing companies in Kansas City and vicinity, and in refusing to permit testimony as to the terms and conditions contained in such contracts between the I.L.G.W.U. and other garment companies in Kansas City and vicinity, which rulings and comments are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcripts of the record, Pages 2033, 2034, 2035, to wit:

"A. * Then the vacation schedule came up, and while I, individually, of course, learning this from Mrs. Reed when I came out here nearly 7 years ago, believed in vacations, inasmuch as this clause is the only kind that I know of in the needle work industry contract, I wasn't sure that the company should bind itself to give vacations with pay, which prior to that time had been optional and in the discretion of the management.

[fol. 6545] "Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment, Mr. Keyes. Mr. Keyes, volunteering that statement there, I thought that we had the understanding that—I mean, I advised you, rather—I don't know as you all agree with me—that I didn't want to get into a comparison of this contract with other contracts, and I limited the Board's testimony the other day, when I asked them the direct question, if all the questions which they asked applied only to how the contract was negotiated.

"Now this, of course, being up—Mr. Keyes volunteering this statement that no needle contract has such a phrase any place, you are beginning to compare the contracts.

"The important thing with this contract, and with this union, is not what is in this contract. The important thing is, did the union, in good faith, and the respondent, sit down and negotiate a contract?

"Now, a union can negotiate any terms they see fit in a contract. So, the only question here is, did Mr. Tyler and the committee representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union negotiate in good faith, did the respondent negotiate in good faith? And, having arrived at an agreement, they put it in writing and signed it. Therefore,

Mr. Keyes' statement about this particular paragraph in comparing it with some other contract, I don't consider that it should be accepted, in accordance with my prior ruling. Therefore, I won't receive it.

"Mr. Tyler: Your Honor has in mind that the intervener asserts that comparison with other contracts is valid and admissible evidence to show the genuine negotiation of this contract and the genuineness of the desires of the employees to negotiate in this matter, and have their own union, and we except to your ruling that comparisons are not proper.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I understand your position, Mr. Tyler, and I only say in answer to that, this: that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any other union can negotiate any contract they want. I mean, they could go out here and negotiate a contract for less wages, less salaries, no vacations, and abominable conditions, if the union wanted to do it. So I say that I am not concerned about comparison of these contracts. I am concerned about, did they actually negotiate, and agree on these things, and when they agreed, sign the contracts; and, of course, as I understand it, that is the matter, Mr. Tyler, which you except to?

"Mr. Tyler: Yes.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts."

[fol. 6546] 313.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objections to the testimony offered by respondent, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2071, 2072, to wit:

"Q. Did Fern Sigler leave after that conversation?

"A. She left. I think it was some 30 minutes, or something like that, after she got to the office.

"Q. State whether or not she then performed services for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Do you know whether or not she called on the customers of the Donnelly Garment Company in Kansas City?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. This is not an 8 (3) case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

314.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in denying to respondent the right to examine witness with respect to Sylvia Hull's being in Atlantic City, and to the Examiner's comments that said testimony was not material, and to his action in striking same from the record, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2073, 2074, to wit:

[fol. 6547] "Q. Did you later learn that Sylvia Hull was in Atlantic City attending the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union convention?

"A. I did.

"Q. Was there a newspaper article in the papers regarding that?

"A. There was.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) You mean, she was there at the time these calls were made?

"A. No: She was there after the calls were made trying to locate her.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Then, I don't see what that has to do with it. I don't think it has anything to do with it if it was after these calls were made.

"Mr. Ingraham: If Your Honor please, I want to show that we not only called but later learned she was in Atlantic City, and therefore there wouldn't have been any use to call, if she was there.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think that is material at all. The testimony about her being in Atlantic City, if it was after your attempts to call, may be stricken out."

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to admit in evidence Respondent's Exhibit No. 10 for all purposes as offered by respondent and in limiting its admission in evidence, and in ruling and stating that the Examiner would receive same "for just what they are worth as newspaper articles and that is all", as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2076, 2077; 2078, to wit:

[fol. 6548] "Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 10 and ask you to state what publication that is.

"A. It is 'Justice,' published by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

"Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibit No. 10, the report of Sylvia Hull's speech.

"Trial Examiner Batten: What date is that?

"Mr. Langsdale: June 1 1937.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, what is the purpose of this, if you care to disclose it? Is it to show the situation as it existed? It is not to prove the truth or untruth of anything in there, is it?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes, indeed. This is the official paper of the International.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly won't receive it to prove anything, an article in a newspaper.

"Mr. Ingraham: Even though it is published by the International?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't care who it is published by.

"Mr. Ingraham: Wouldn't that be considered as an admission?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe in trying any of these hearings on newspapers, trade papers, or anything of that kind. If you want to offer it on the same basis you offered the other newspaper articles, I will receive it on that basis.

"Mr. Ingraham: I offer it, of course, for all purposes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am saying I will not receive it for all purposes. But if you want to offer it on the same basis as exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, although it restricts your general offer, I will receive it on that basis, on the basis of respondent's exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, and then you may have your exception.

"Mr. Ingraham: I am still offering it for all purposes, and you are not allowing it to be received for all purposes?

[fol. 6549] "Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. But my question still is, do you want me to receive it on the same basis I did receive exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, having refused to receive it for general purposes?

"Mr. Ingraham: Oh, yes.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may it not also be received to show that she said these things, even though the things she did say were not true?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I assume this article is in the same class as the other two, it speaks for itself.

"Mr. Stottle: You let Senator Reed's statement in to show that he said certain things, didn't you?

"Trial Examiner Batten: It was stated, in connection with that, that if the reporter were here he would testify Senator Reed said those things. I will receive it on that basis, although that is not Mr. Ingraham's offer. I am not going to receive these newspaper articles as proving or disproving anything that is said in them. I will receive them for just what they are worth as newspaper articles, and that is all."

316.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit the witness Baty to answer the question, "Did you do all you could to stop the demonstration", referring to the alleged demonstration at the Donnelly plant on April 23, 1937, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2153, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Was any other official of the company there at the time?

"A. There was not.

"Q. Did you do all you could to stop the demonstration?

"Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment. I still think that his answer should be based upon the question as to whether or not he knows. The fact that no other executive was there at the time doesn't show that it wasn't planned the night before or the night before that.

[fol. 6550] "Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand for whatever value it has. What was the last question?

"(Whereupon, the last question was read by the reporter.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: That certainly is repetition. You went into quite some detail yesterday about what he did when he went up on the floor with these different girls, and sent the others back, and so forth. Of course, if you want him to just categorically deny everything that is in the complaint, just read it to him and then I have no objection to him denying it, Mr. Ingraham."

317.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving testimony concerning I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 17 over the objections of the respondent as shown on Pages 2306 to 2310, inclusive, of the transcript of the record, and in considering said evidence in arriving at his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations contained in the Intermediate Report.

318.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 30 and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto and their motions to reject said offer of proof, and to the Examiner's ruling and action in accepting said offer of proof and the N. R. A. testimony in said offer, and in permitting witness to testify under said offer of proof, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2367, 2368 and 2552, to wit:

[fol. 6551] "Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the Board has filed an exhibit, marked 30, which is an offer of proof concerning Ellen Fry, Glynn Brooks, and Mamie Tubbesing. The respondent has prepared an objection and motion to reject that offer of proof, which we now wish to present to you.

"I might say that this objection was made in the name of the respondent only but that this morning Mr. Tyler, representing the intervener, has added a clause at the bottom stating that he joins in the objection and motion, and that appears upon the paper which we are presenting.

"Trial Examiner Batten: This will be marked Board's exhibit No. 1-HHHH. I will take the original with me.

"Mr. Tyler: I wish to state I have gone over this paper and considered it, and wish to join in it, as indicated by the signature at the bottom.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be taken under advisement.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, on the matter of the Board's Exhibit 1-IIII, which is the objection and motion of the respondent and the intervener to the Board's offer, which is marked 'Board's Exhibit 30', the objections are overruled and the motion to strike is denied, which means, Mr. Leary, that the NRA testimony which was in the offer will be accepted, and you will have one witness ready for presentation of her testimony, strictly limited to the point in your offer."

319.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, comment and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit respondent to call and examine witnesses concerning the circulation and signing of the petition of March 2, 1937, and in limiting the number of witnesses which might be called to testify concerning same and in requiring respondent to make an offer of proof thereon as to other witnesses, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2457, 2458, to wit:

[fol. 6552] "Q. Did you sign the petition that was circulated March 2d?

"A. I did.

"Q. Did any officer of the company ask you to sign that petition?

"A. No.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, Mr. Ingraham, do I understand that you intend to call a large number of individual employees?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes, your Honor.

"Trial Examiner Batten: To testify?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, of course, I don't propose to have a large number called to testify to this point. You may call a reasonable number, and use your own judgment as to what is reasonable.

"Mr. Ingraham: All right, your Honor.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And make an offer of proof on the entire balance, if you want to, but I am not going to listen to all of them, but you use your own judgment as to what you think is a reasonable number, and at that time I think we can probably determine what will be done."

320.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objection to the following question asked by respondent of the witness Atherton, as shown in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2463, to wit:

"Q. Mr. Atherton, did you witness any violence at the Missouri, Gernes, or Gordon plants during the month of March, 1937?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

[fol. 6553] 321.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining the Board's objection to question asked by respondent of the witness Atherton, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2466, 2467, to wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: Is that the March 18th meeting?

"Mr. Ingraham: March 18th.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Did the employees take any action at that meeting?

"A. They did not.

"Q. Did the violence at the Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants increase from that date on?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

322

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objections of the Board and I. L. G. W. U. to question asked of the witness Atherton by counsel for the intervener on Page 2500 of the record, and in refusing the offer of proof made by counsel for the intervener on Page 2501 of the record, concerning the disturbances at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes factories prior to March 18, 1937, and to the question asked of said witness by counsel for intervener on Page 2501 of the record as to the state of mind of employees of the Donnelly Garment Company in regard to said conditions at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants, [fol. 6554] and to the comments of the Trial Examiner concerning said matters, and to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in making the same ruling upon respondent's objection to said ruling and to respondent's offer of proof on said matters, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2500, 2501, 2502, 2503, 2504, 2505, 2506, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Mr. Atherton, was the subject of disturbances at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937, a subject of common discussion among the employees at the Donnelly Garment plant?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) What was the state of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company in regard to conditions at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as being without a foundation, that this witness knows what the state of mind of the employees at the plant was; and immaterial, also.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will sustain it on the ground it is immaterial.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by this witness that the subject of the violence at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937, was one of almost continual conversation by the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company plant, and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, and that the condition of the employees' minds at that plant was one almost bordering on hysteria and continued to increase in intensity as the strikes went on at the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri plants, and that that was one of the main causes of their employing attorneys, and later on was one of the impelling reasons for them to organize their own labor union.

"Mr. Leary: I will object to the offer on the same grounds.

[fol. 6555] "Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused.

"Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies Garment Workers' Union objects to the offer upon the ground that it includes, a part of it, to permit this witness to pass upon the mental attitude of other employees, and he has shown no knowledge, laid no foundation to show that he is capable of passing on the mental attitude of those employees.

"Mr. Tyler: The record shows that this witness was employed at the plant; that his duties caused him to circulate about the plant, and I submit that any employee in such circumstances is competent to tell what the subjects of discussion were which were uppermost, and what the general attitude of employees was.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I assume—I don't know—I wasn't here, but I assume that probably there was so much talk in the plant that it even interfered with production. In fact, I have never seen a case yet where two unions, or one union, is conducting an intensive organizational campaign that it doesn't affect production in the plant. I mean, it just goes without saying that it is a part of it. You can't separate it, so I don't suppose there is any argument but what in this plant and all the rest of the plants, if it was all material to this hearing, the production was reduced.

"Now, my point on this is this: that if the respondent, or any of its officers formed this union or assisted in forming it, or after it was formed they sponsored it or in any way assisted it, even if you were to prove that all the 1,350 employees in here were ready to shoot the next International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union member which they met, it still wouldn't detract one ounce from the fact that the respondent had either formed, sponsored or dominated the union, and even though you were to definitely prove that and permit it on the record, if the Board hasn't proved that this union was either formed, sponsored or is now dominated by this company, the respondent is not guilty of an unfair labor practice, irrespective of what the employees do, because they can do whatever they please, I mean, within reasonable limits, and I thought I ought to make that statement just in explanation of my ruling.

"Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I intend to make no point as to reduction of production by these difficulties. I do say that there is no more important fact, and no fact approaching in importance the fact of what caused the employees of this company to form their own union. The Board is claiming that it was domination or fear or bribery, or some such influence by the employer.

[fol. 6556] "I submit that the employees asserting that they formed the plant of their own free will, will, in establishing that fact, have the right to refer to the causes which influenced them in making that choice, and undertake to show by this witness that one of the causes was not the employer domination, but was fear and dislike of what the International was doing in its campaign to organize garment workers in Kansas City.

"I take it I have an exception to your Honor's ruling without—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, of course, you have an automatic exception.

"Mr. Stottle: And, Mr. Examiner, you will recall that Mr. Ingraham asked similar questions as to violence down at the Gordon and Gernes plant, and whether it increased, and your Honor sustained the objection to those questions. Our position also is that that would show a motive or a reason for the formation of this union, and would tend to show that it was not company domination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have an objection and I will make the same ruling, Mr. Stottle.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Ingraham didn't make an offer of proof. When he comes back, I will ask him if he desires to enter it, or let the question go.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Let him decide when he comes back, and I will determine it, and I would make the same ruling, and I would say the same to the respondent. It isn't a question of whether these people had a motive to organize the union. The only question is, did the respondent have anything to do with it, and if they didn't they can have any motive they please.

* * * * * *

Mr. Shepard: Respondent makes the same offer of proof, and takes exception to your ruling."

323.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit testimony offered by intervener concerning the visit of employees of respondent [fol. 6557] to Chief Higgins of the police force or to call and examine witnesses with reference thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2523, 2524, to wit:

"Q. Was there any particular incident that you know of that brought about the visit of the employees to Chief Higgins of the police force?

"A. Yes; the rumored threats that we would be next on the list—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. I think that is covered entirely by the offer of proof that I have asked for, Mr. Tyler.

"Mr. Tyler: Very well.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, in those paragraphs which Mr. Langsdale has asked to have stricken, as I recall it, those matters are covered.

"Mr. Tyler: Your Honor rules this witness cannot testify as to the visit of the employees to Chief Higgins and what it was for?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I have merely said, when I receive those offers of proof, which includes this matter, I will then determine how much, if any, of that we will take testimony upon."

324.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner overruling respondent's objection to questions asked the witness Atherton by Mr. Langsdale, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2572, 2573, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) I will ask you if you heard Mrs. Reed make this statement this is contained in the affidavit on page 861:

" 'In the first place, a group of employees on or about March 18, 1937, came to my office and told me that all of the employees were going to meet to discuss ways and means to protect themselves'.

"And then skipping—

[fol. 6558] "Mr. Ingraham (Interrupting): I object to Mr. Langsdale skipping. If he is going to read from this affidavit, he ought to read it so it is connected up.

"Mr. Langsdale: I am merely asking this witness if he heard this statement made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think that thus far in the hearing, there have been many instances where a witness has been asked whether they heard a certain thing, and, certainly, they haven't read the entire affidavit or the entire testimony, either.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Skipping down to the last sentence of that paragraph, taking it up with that sentence, in which she says:

"' * * * I went to the meeting and told them that the Company's attorneys would consider what legal steps might be advisable in the event the union carried out its threats.'

"Did you hear Mrs. Reed make that statement?"

325

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to sustain respondent's objection to question asked the witness Atherton, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2573, 2574, to wit:

"Q. Now, you have been here in the court room waiting to testify how long, Mr. Atherton?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to that. It is immaterial to any issue in this case. He has a perfect right to be in the court room.

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, and I will determine whether it has anything to do with it."

326.

[fol. 6559] Respondent excepts to the ruling and action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit respondent to produce further witnesses or testimony concerning the March 18 meeting and forcing respondent to make offers of proof as to other witnesses concerning same, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2607, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I will permit this witness to testify, but I certainly don't intend to listen to any more witnesses of what occurred at the March 18th meeting, because thus far in the record, there is apparently no dispute. I mean, there is no use of going on with an unlimited number of witnesses telling about a meeting. So if there is any further witness to be offered on the March 18th meeting, it will have to be in the form of an offer of proof.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, of course, the respondent's position is that if that matter is controverted, we are entitled to show by any number of witnesses as to what did happen.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well,—

"Mr. Stottle (Interrupting) And we are willing to make an offer of proof as to this witness, or succeeding witnesses.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, you may proceed with this witness, but I am telling you now that if you had in mind offering any further witnesses about this March 18th meeting, I don't propose to go into it.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, in view of your Honor's ruling, we will make offers of proof as to other witnesses."

327.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner sustaining objections to question asked the witness Nellie Stites, and to the comments, rulings and action of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit respondent to introduce testimony that the Donnelly Garment [fol. 6560] Workers' Union and its executive committee represent the free choice of respondent's employees as their bargaining agency concerning wages, hours and working conditions in the Donnelly plant and requiring respondent to submit offers of proof concerning said matter, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2610, 2611, 2612, to wit:

"Q. Does that union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and its bargaining committee represent your free choice in that matter?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: What was the ruling, Mr. Examiner?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, we are charged with preventing the employees from exercising their free will in the choice of bargaining representatives. That is one of these three complaints or charges in the complaint, and we submit that one of the best ways of finding out whether a person did a thing of their own free will is to ask that person whether they did, and it is our purpose to ask this witness, and as many other witnesses—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, I don't think that is any indication, to put these witnesses up on the stand in a hearing of this kind, in a "C" case, in front of all the other employees and representatives of the company, and ask them, 'Is this your free choice?'. I mean it may possibly have some remote bearing, but I don't think it has sufficient that we should spend the time necessary to listen to 1300 employees get on the witness stand and testify to that point.

"Now, if that is your idea, you may make an offer of testimony with respect to these 1305 employees, or whatever it is, but certainly, we are not going to determine that in this hearing on that basis, at least.

[fol. 6561] "Mr. Tyler: Could I ask you if the Examiner holds that there is any presumption that these people are being dominated by somebody in the court room in this matter, or any presumption that they would commit perjury?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't even intimate such a thing.

"Mr. Tyler: I understood you to say that their testimony, as to what they wished, would be either of no value or extremely little value.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't say any such thing, I don't think.

"Mr. Tyler: I misunderstood you, then.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The record will state what I said in my remarks.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, don't you think we should have the testimony of this witness with the persons that you have referred to excluded from the court room?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No, I don't think it is of any value in the issues in this case, to parade these people on the stand. Now, if that is your idea, you may make as complete an offer as you care to with respect to that matter."

328.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner sustaining objection to question asked the witness Mrs. Stites, and refusing to permit respondent to introduce evidence concerning strikes and disturbances caused by the I.L.G.W.U. at the Gordon, Gernes and other garment factories in Kansas City and the effect thereof upon the employees of respondent and requiring respondent to make offers of proof concerning said matters, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2612, 2613, to wit:

[fol. 6562] "Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Mrs. Stites, had you heard of the strikes and disturbances down at the Gordon and Gernes plants at about that time in March and April, 1937?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that for the reason that it is immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, we want to go into that matter to show that it did affect the employees and that that was one of the reasons why they formed his union, as tending to show that it was not due to the domination of the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think, Mr. Stottle, that I don't need to make any statement with respect to that ruling, because I have indicated on several occasions in this hearing just what my position is about that matter.

You may make such offer as in your opinion is necessary to protect the interests of your client."

329.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner made while the witness Nellie Stites was on the stand, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2615, 2616, 2617, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, as to the two matters which you have excluded his witness from testifying to, respondent desires to make this offer of proof:

"Respondent offers to prove by this witness that if permitted to answer appropriate questions, she would testify that at or prior to the time of the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on April 27, 1937, there was no coercion, intimidation, pressure or suggestion of any kind, directly or indirectly, brought to bear upon her by the management of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company through any of its officers, executives or supervisory officials, or anyone representing the management, to cause or influence her, or which did cause or influence her to join or support the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, that is with respect to what ruling? The one on the meeting of March 18th?

[fol. 6563] "Mr. Stottle: No, as with respect to the ruling that she joined this of her own free will, if your Honor will permit her to testify that she did, and other witnesses to testify on the question of whether she did join of her own free will, of course, we would prefer to call the witnesses.

"Trial Examiner Batten: 'Well, what do you mean, reverse my ruling? Is that what you mean?

"Mr. Stottle: Well, I thought you were intimating that I was making a different offer of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I do think it is different than even my ruling. You say to this witness 'You join of your own free will.' Now, [you] offer is to show that the respondent in no way coerced or intimidated this witness. I don't think that is quite the same thing, do you?

"Mr. Stottle: Well, I will ask the question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, do you think it is the same?

"Mr. Stottle: I do think so. If she joined of her own free will, I don't think she was coerced by the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, if you think it is the same thing, and that is what you mean by what you just said, then I will reject the offer.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, I would rather ask the question and have your Honor rule it out or let it in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't care to pass upon it. If you think it is the same thing, I will reject that part of the offer."

330.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in striking the answer of the witness Nellie Stites to the question asked, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2617, to wit:

[fol. 6564] "Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Well, Mrs. Stites, I will ask you whether at the time of the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, on April 27th, or prior thereto, there was any coercion, intimidation, pressure or suggestion of any kind, directly or indirectly, brought to bear upon you by the management of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company through any of its officers, executives, or anyone representing the management, to cause or influence you, or which did cause or influence you to join or support the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. None.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now just a minute. .. The answer may be stricken."

331.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit the witness Nellie Stites to testify concerning the domination of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by the respondent and concerning coercion upon or interference with the respondent's employees concerning their free choice of a union or bargaining agency and requiring respondent to make offers of proof concerning said matters and when respondent proceeded to make offers of proof thereon, stating and ruling that such offers are outside said matters and in requiring as a condition precedent to the making of such offers of proof that the respondent prepare "appropriate questions", as appears in the transcript of the record, Pages 2620 to 2631, and in later rejecting the offers of proof made by respondent and joined in by intervener (Page 2652) as to said witness Nellie Stites and as to other witnesses.

[fol. 6565] 332.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit respondent to ask the witness Nellie Stites questions regarding strikes and disturbances at other garment plants and in refusing the offer of proof made by respondent concerning said matters as to said witness Nellie Stites contained on Page 5 of Board's Exhibit No. 1-JJJJ, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2637, 2638, to wit:

"Q. Mrs. Stites, I will ask you to state whether you knew or heard of strikes—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, Mr. Stottle,—that finishes that offer?

"Mr. Stottle: That finishes that part of it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think it is at all necessary for her to answer any questions about the strikes and trouble in the other plant, because that, if you have an offer ready on that, I can pass on that one now.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, it is the last page of what I have given you.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is all in one, is it?

"Mr. Stottle: I put it all together as an offer of proof by this witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * Now, as to the last page, which is page 5, of the offer of proof on the Gernes and Gordon factories, and that other matter, that offer, as in accordance with my rulings, several rulings during the hearing, is refused."

[fol. 6566] 333.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in striking out the answers of the witness Nellie Stites made in response to questions asked her by counsel for the intervener, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2648, 2649, 2650, to wit:

"Q. Did you have knowledge of the disturbances down at the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri Plants in the spring of 1937?

"A. Yes, sir, I did.

"Q. What was the effect on the Donnelly Garment Company employees of these disturbances at the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri plants in the spring of 1937?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may ask your questions, but then I will ask you to present an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: We will be very glad to join in the offer of proof, if the Examiner doesn't want to hear that.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't overlook that you were asking the questions, but I thought, in order to have the record indicate it, your question and the answer could go in, but then I intended to ask for an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: Your Honor rules that she may answer this question?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

"Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union wants to object on the ground that it calls for a conclusion of the witness and is invading the province of the Examiner, without any basis for showing that this witness knew what the effect was upon any other employee than herself.

"Mr. Tyler: I think it is a matter of fact which one constantly in a plant can testify to, as to the general attitude in the plant as to certain things—if she knows.

[fol. 6567] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if she knows, that is always different.

"Mr. Langsdale: He didn't put that in his other questions.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"A. We had been reading all of these articles in the paper about the strikes over there—

"Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): I object to that and ask that it be stricken as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"A. (Continuing) —and we had talked to a lot of the girls, and a lot of them had been talked to by people who worked over at these other plants, and of course we were told that they were coming over to our plant—the expression they used was 'to get us next.' And there was quite a bit of fighting over there, and tearing of clothes off. Naturally, we felt we needed some protection of some kind.

"Mr. Langsdale: I ask that all of that part of the answer about what had been going on over there be stricken out as not responsive to the question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

334.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit the witness Nellie Stites to answer question propounded by counsel for the intervener and in refusing the offer of proof made by intervener thereon and in sustaining objection to subsequent question asked said witness, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2650, 2651, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) You talked to people who told you they had met with violence at the Gordon and Gernes plants?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think I have indicated all through this hearing that I am not going into those matters, Mr. Tyler.

[fol. 6568] "Mr. Tyler: Then, intervener joins in the same offer of proof on this matter just offered by the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean page 5, Mr. Tyler? That is the page that applies to this matter.

"Mr. Tyler: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: With reference to the offer on page 5, it will be refused.

"Mr. Tyler: And also, repeat the offer of proof which intervener made on the same subject heretofore.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused. In order to identify that, the respondent's offer of proof has been marked 1-JJJJ, and you are now referring to the fifth page of that?

"Mr. Tyler: Yes, sir.

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Mrs. Stites, did any officer of the company, or representative of officers of the company, tell you about these things you have said you heard about, or did you hear them from other people?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained."

335.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objections to questions asked the witness Mrs. Lynn Davis by counsel for respondent, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2676, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Mrs. Davis, did you hear any statement made at the March 18th meeting by Mrs. Reed or anyone else that she wanted the names of the Donnelly Garment Company employees reported to her or reported to the management of any employees who belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as cumulative.

[fol. 6569] "Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Did you hear Mrs. Reed state that she would never let the International Union into her plant?

"Mr. Leary: Same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

336.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objections to question asked the witness Mrs. Martin by counsel for intervener and striking the answer made thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2702, 2703, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Have you ever heard any employee complain that they didn't want to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. No, sir.

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as calling for hearsay, and also, that it is immaterial.

"Mr. Patten: I asked what she heard.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection. It is immaterial, and I will overrule the matter of hearsay.

"Mr. Leary: I move the answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

337.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objections to questions asked Mrs. Martin by counsel for intervener, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2703, 2704, to wit:

[fol. 6570] "Q. Do you know of any employee that is dissatisfied with the committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as their bargaining agent?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"The witness: May I answer that question?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No.

Q. (By Mr. Patten) Are you afraid of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Were you afraid of that union in the spring of 1937?

"Mr. Leary: Same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling."

388.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 2712, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten, on this question, which has come up frequently, I think about the first week, in fact, Mr. Tyler brought it up; this question of the mental attitude of these people, due to the organizational campaign of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and all that that goes along with it. I think I should tell you now that if there is any further testimony of that kind, you can put it in in an offer of proof, because I don't think it is material to the issues here, and I think I told Mr. Tyler one day when he spoke about it, said that he felt that it was a motive or would be one motive, that would explain the organization of the independent union, and I think at that time I disagreed with Mr. Tyler. So if you have any further evidence in that line, you will submit it in an offer of proof, and if you care to, of course, you may submit another witness and ask those questions, to make your record. If you don't care to do that, you may submit it without offering another witness."

[fol. 6571] 339.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit respondent to offer further witnesses concerning the meeting of April 27, 1937, and requiring respondent to submit offers of proof thereon, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2731 and 2766, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I think after this witness covers the meeting of April 27, unless there are some new matters, I will not hear from any further witnesses about it, because I think there has been sufficient testimony about that meeting. As I said in other instances, you might call another witness and ask the questions and show that the witness was not permitted to answer, or you may submit your offer of proof as though the witnesses were here and present.

* * * * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, if you have finished your questions about the April 27 meeting, I don't care to listen to any further witnesses on it, unless it is something that has not yet been covered by the previous witnesses."

340.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 16 over the objections of respondent and intervener, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2771, 2772, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent is not objecting to the lack of identification, but respondent does object that it does not tend to prove or disprove any issue in the case and would therefore be immaterial.

* * * * * * * * *

[fol. 6572] "Mr. Tyler: We have no objection to the offer of the picture, but we do object if the picture is offered with the inference that it is of the meeting of April 27, because the context shows it refers to a meeting of May 11.

* * * * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received for whatever value it has."

341.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's motion to strike out answers of the witness Glynn Brooks Yarnell, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2809, to wit:

"A. I told her I had been informed that the old Donnelly girls, that is, the union girls were being reinstated, and I told her I would like to come back to work if that was true.

"She said, 'Glynn, we have a lot of old girls out we would have to place before we place you.'

"I said, 'Well, I would like to work if there is any chance for me to.'

"She said, 'If you do we will not recognize your union. You will have to join ours.'

"I said that was all right, I didn't expect her to.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out. It goes beyond the allegations of the complaint.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled."

342.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to sustain motion to dismiss and demurrer to the evidence made by intervener at the close of respondent's case (Page 2813 of transcript of record) and in later overruling said motion and demurrer.

[fol. 6573]

343.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit intervener to offer further witnesses or testimony concerning the meeting of March 18, 1937, as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 2822, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, as far as this March 18 meeting is concerned, there is no need of any more witnesses testifying to it, unless you have something you want to go into that has not already been covered."

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit intervener to offer further witnesses or testimony concerning the negotiations between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and respondent concerning the contract of May 27, 1937, and to the Examiner's action, ruling and comments that further witnesses will not be permitted on said subject unless they can testify to new matters, and the Examiner's refusal to permit the offering and questioning of witnesses upon said matter to determine whether such witnesses can testify as to matters not theretofore covered by other witnesses, and in overruling respondent's objections thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2833, 2834, 2835, 2836, 2837, to wit:

[fol. 6574] "Q. (By Mr. Tyler) I hand you Board's exhibit No. 6, being the articles of agreement between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, and ask you what matters were discussed in those negotiations between the union and the companies on May 26, 1937.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I want to make the same ruling on this that I just made on the other. There have been two members of this executive committee testify in detail about this, and either two or three of the respondent's witnesses. So, unless you are going to cover matters that have not thus far been covered, I don't want to go into it with this witness. Now, if there is anything else, anything new, I want you to cover it with this witness, but Miss Todd and Mr. Atherton, both of whom were at this meeting, testified quite extensively about these negotiations—and Mr. Baty, and I believe Mrs. Reeves. So, unless there is something new, I think it is cumulative.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent would say, in that connection, that your statement that unless some new matters were to be gone into—it could hardly be determined what the witness would testify to unless he is permitted to answer the questions and state what did occur.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I presume Mr. Tyler has interviewed this witness as to his testimony, and gone over it thoroughly, as every attorney should before examining his witness, so that he should be able to judge that. I can't. I am simply saying, if there is anything this witness can testify to about these negotiations that will add to the information in this record, certainly the Examiner wants it and the Board wants it. If it is simply a matter of repeating what at least four other witnesses have testified to, I don't think it is necessary.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent desires to show in an offer of proof that the witness is excluded from testifying, for the reason you have indicated, that is an important matter; and, for the reasons Mr. Tyler has stated.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is an exceedingly important matter. I agree with you on that.

"Mr. Stottle: What is the ruling on the objection to this witness being excluded from testifying on it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve my decision.

[fol. 6575] "Mr. Tyler: For the present the ruling is, this witness is not allowed to go into the negotiations of May 27, 1937?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Excepting in so far as he testifies to matters that have not yet been covered.

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Do you know, Mr. McConaughey, as to what matters have been described in this hearing as being covered by the negotiations of May 27?

"A. I wasn't present at the time of the testimony of any other witnesses in this courtroom on that subject, so I don't know exactly what has been covered.

"Q. Has anybody told you fully, in detail, as to what has been covered by the other witnesses?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Were you present at any negotiations of June 21 or June 22, 1937?

"Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, in view of the witness' last two responses, respondent renews its objection to his being excluded from testifying, because it is apparent that no one could determine now whether he has any new matters or not.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, you have been present every day of this hearing, haven't you?

"Mr. Stottle: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And you, Mr. Tyler?

"Mr. Tyler: I have been absent a day or two.

"Trial Examiner Batten: But you have had Mr. Patten or Mr. Lane, or someone, representing you every day of this hearing, have you not?

"Mr. Tyler: Yes.

"Mr. Stottle: But, Mr. Examiner, I have never discussed with Mr. McConaughey one word as to what his negotiations were—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I want the record to show that while the witnesses have not been here all of the time, the attorneys have been."

[fol. 6576] 345.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining the objection of the Board to questions and answers of the witness Jack McConaughey, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2838, to wit:

"Q. Were you familiar with the principal subjects of discussion among the employees of the two companies during the months of March and April, 1937?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What were the principal subjects of discussion?

"A. Strikes at the Gernes plant, and what we might be able to do to protect ourselves from the apparent danger that was due us in a short while.

"Q. Did you hear of any threats that the same proceedings would be taken as to employees of the Donnelly companies as were being taken against employees at the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri plants?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained."

346.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit evidence concerning strikes and violence at other garment plants in Kansas City and the effect thereof upon respondent's employees, and in striking the answer of the witness Jack McConaughey, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2838, 2839, 2840, 2841, 2843, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) What was the attitude of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company during March, 1937, in regard to the possible action of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against them.

[fol. 6577] "A. Everyone felt that—I talked to numbers of them on my job in the service department at that time—I talked to hundreds of people every day, and they were all expressing concern over the happenings that were taking place all over town, and many of them told me of having heard directly from people they knew there, or else overheard people who were in the line of strikers, that we were going to be the next on the list, which naturally caused an agitated state of mind throughout the plant and no one could pursue his job with a great deal of peace of mind, because he didn't know at what time he was going to be kept from coming into the building himself.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I think I have indicated previously on this matter of violence and this situation in Kansas City that I didn't think it was material, and therefore asked the respondent to make an offer of proof.

"And I think yesterday I indicated, on this attitude of mind of the employees as a result of this situation, that I didn't consider it material.

"Therefore, I will ask that you prepare an offer of proof on it, because I don't think the respondent can be held responsible for a situation that is a matter of employees' organization by unions and matters of that kind.

"I think I have stated before, I don't think it is material to the issue as to whether or not the respondent formed this union, dominates it, or sponsors it. Therefore, I would ask that you prepare an offer of proof on that question.

"Mr. Tyler: I wanted to make it clear I wasn't waiving my point heretofore made on that matter. Hereafter, then, I will offer a written offer of proof on that point, without endeavoring to go into it with individual witnesses.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Langsdale: What about this answer he just made to the last question? Does that stand, so that it will be the subject of cross-examination?

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I do not expect to have cross-examination on a matter which I have asked for an offer of proof on and stated that I don't consider it to be material. Therefore, I wouldn't consider the witness' answer, or the question, material.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3578] "Mr. Langsdale: I move to strike the answer of the witness to the last question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent does except to the striking of this answer."

347.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit further witnesses or testimony on the question of interference with the free will of respondent's employees in regard to their labor union affiliations and in regard to the meeting of April 27, 1937, and in regard to the meeting of approximately March 27 to April 5, 1937, and in commenting that evidence on said matters is not deemed material by the Trial Examiner, for the reason that such comments show the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner and show that he did not intend to consider such evidence and that he did not consider such evidence in arriving at his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations, and for the further reason that said rulings deprived the respondent and intervener of material and competent evidence and of a fair trial upon the charges contained in the Complaint, which rulings, action and comments are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2857, 2858, 2859, to wit:

"Q. Do you know of any employee in the plant ever complaining that pressure was brought on him or her with regard to his or her affiliation with any labor union?

"A. No, sir.

[fol. 6579] "Mr. Tyler: That is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, on the three matters this witness has testified to, one being the last question you just asked, of his own free will, if you call a witness for some other purpose—I don't know as there is any objection to asking that question, although I don't consider it material to ask a witness that on the stand. From the respondent yesterday I asked for an offer of proof on that, so I don't want you to think that by passing the matter up—In other words, if you contemplate calling 1,200 employees and asking them that question, it is an entirely different matter.

"On the meeting of April 27, which this witness testified to, unless you have witnesses that can add something to what has already been testified to, I don't want you to offer any further witnesses on it. You may make it in an offer of proof.

"As to the March 27 to April 5 meeting, I permitted this witness to testify, because I thought perhaps he would be able to definitely place the date. Now, unless other witnesses have something to add to the testimony we have already received on this meeting, you may make an offer of proof as to that.

. . . . . .

"Mr. Tyler: And as to the other matter, the free will of the witnesses, of course Your Honor understands my position, that that is as much a fact as his indigestion or whether he has a broken leg, and the best way to get that is to ask him about it.

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: If you intend, as Mr. Ingraham indicated to me that he did, calling a very large number of witnesses to testify to that point, I say you had better submit it in the form of an offer of proof. If you submit witnesses on other matters and you incidentally ask them that question, I have no objection, although I still don't consider it material, for the reasons I have previously stated in the record, but I wouldn't have any objection to it."

348.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner overruling the objections of respondent and intervener to question asked the witness by Mr. Langsdale on cross-examination, as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 2864, to wit:

[fol. 6580] "Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you know at the Judge Miller hearing the position of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was that Judge Miller of the District Court had no right to pass upon whether or not the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was legally formed, and for that reason defendants put in no testimony tending to show it was legally formed?

"Mr. Tyler: I object to the question as calling for a conclusion of law by this witness.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: He may testify, if he knows."

349.

Respondent excepts to the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit the offer of further witnesses or testimony upon the question of domination of respondent's employees in regard to their union affiliations, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2922, 2923, 2924, to wit:

"Q. What are your reasons for preferring the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. Well, in the first place—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Mr. Tyler, I don't think it is material what her reasons are. She has a perfect right, as an employee of this company, to select any union she wants.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit, one of the questions involved here is whether she does prefer it or whether the company is so dominating her that she has to belong to it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean by that, you contemplate calling all of the employees to testify to this question?

"Mr. Tyler: I contemplate calling a large number.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I can tell you now, I do not intend to listen to them.

[fol. 6581] "Mr. Tyler: Well, on the present question—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): She may answer this. I just don't think you should call these employees and put them on the stand and say, 'Now, is this the union you want?' And so on, and so forth. This is no place to determine what the employees want. An election is the place to determine that. The thing we are trying to determine in this hearing is, did this company have anything to do with forming this union, or sponsoring it? That is the question we are trying to determine.

"Mr. Tyler: We are not, also, endeavoring to determine whether the employer is now dominating it or dominating these employees?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, but you couldn't determine it by having these girls get up on the stand and testify here, in front of the management. The place to determine that is by a secret election, where they can vote and no one know how they vote. If you have a large number of witnesses to offer on that, you may make an offer of proof, because I don't intend to sit here and let you call all of these girls up here to testify whether they want this union to represent them.

"Mr. Tyler: Does that ruling go into effect immediately preceding this witness?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is right."

350.

Respondent excepts to the ruling, action and comments of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit the witness Mrs. Weigand to answer questions propounded to her by counsel for intervener, and in sustaining objections of counsel for the I. L. G. W. U. thereto, and in ruling and announcing that such evidence is not material to the issues in this case, and in refusing to receive further testimony from said witness or other witnesses upon said matters, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2939, 2940, 2941, 2942, 2943, to wit:

[fol. 6582] "Q. Did you ever hear Velma Dowdy testify in that case?

"A. Yes, I did.

"Q. Did her testimony have any effect upon your choice as to what union you wanted to belong to?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not tending to prove or disprove any issue in this case. In the Miller case this witness testified how much dues were paid by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and I suppose that is what you want her to testify to here.

"Mr. Tyler: That is what I am leading up to.

"Mr. Langsdale: And I say it is immaterial to this case, the difference between the dues paid by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the dues paid by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If that is the purpose, I want to ask you, Mr. Tyler, how you think it is material. As I have previously stated, the employees can select their own union, one where the dues are nothing, or one where they are $10 a week. The Board has nothing to do with the union the employees select. As long as that union is not dominated or influenced by the company, the employees have a right to select any union they want to select, and pay any dues they want to pay.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: My theory is, it must be determined whether these employees are operating the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union out of either fear or favoritism of their employer, or whether they are doing it by their own wish. And, in order to show they are doing it by their own choice, they should be allowed to state the reasons for that choice, and whether those reasons are probable or improbable should throw some light on whether they are telling the truth.

"If this witness testifies she saves a substantial amount of money by belonging to this union over which she would be forced to pay if she belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): She wouldn't be forced to pay it unless she joined it, would she?

"Mr. Tyler: No, but it has been shown that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union wanted to organize these people.

[fol. 6583] "Trial Examiner Batten: That is not in this case. Wouldn't it be possible to have a union which was absolutely dominated by the employer, and they, not knowing it, would freely join it and pay their dues?

* * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: I submit, the reason for the employees choosing this union is the most vital kind of evidence as to whether the company does dominate it or not.

* * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material to the issues in this case. I think this lady has a personal right to join any union she wants to join, and if she prefers the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union she doesn't have to give the Labor Board or anybody else any reason for joining it. She doesn't have to show the Labor Board she has a reason. She may join it because the first name of it starts with a D and the last word in the name starts with a U.

"Mr. Tyler: I agree, she doesn't have to give the Labor Board any reason, but I submit she has a right to give a reason in sustaining that it was her own free choice.

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: We are not interested in the reason for joining.

* * * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: I will ask her those questions but before doing so, I understand Your Honor excludes her answering the questions as to the effect the testimony of Velma Dowdy had on her?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes."

351.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in excluding evidence by the witness Lyle Jeter concerning violence to employees at other garment companies in Kansas City and threats that similar violence would be done at the Donnelly plant and as to the effect thereof upon the respondent's employees and further excepts to the comments of the Trial Examiner concerning the materiality of such evidence, and to his action [fol. 6584] and rulings in sustaining objections thereto, and in striking answers given, and refusing intervener's offer of proof thereon, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2993, 2994, 2995, 2996, 2997, to wit:

"A. One morning I was standing up there and Miss Tobin went back and forth across the street—I was standing in front of the plants—and an elderly lady started in the building and five or six ladies jumped on her and beat her up—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Tell me how you were threatened.

"Mr. Langsdale: I move that that part, the last part of his answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken. Tell me how you were threatened.

"A. I have to tell a little bit about this first part, if I may.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Did somebody threaten you personally?

"A. Tnreatened the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Q. Tell me what they said, and who it was.

"A. As this old lady got up and started in the building somebody said, 'Isn't that awful, the way they are treating her?' And Miss Tobin said, 'That's just a sample of what we are going to do down at Donnelly's.'

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Did you report that at the plant?

"A. I talked it over with the employees.

"Q. Mr. Jeter, did you take any part in the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

"A. I did.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Patten—

"Mr. Patten (Interrupting): This is a point that has not been covered.

[fol. 6585] "Trial Examiner Batten: The point you have finished covering, I don't think that is material to this case.

"Mr. Patten: I understood you had said if we had cases involving actual threats to persons employed by the Donnelly Garment Company we could put that in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, if you have any actual threats of violence committed as to any employee of the Donnelly Garment Company, that should be in here. I don't think this sort of testimony has anything to do with it.

"Mr. Patten: That was a personal threat. He was an employee of the Donnelly Garment Company, standing around and heard this remark.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I do not consider that as a personal threat to him. That is something that may have occurred a thousand times. If somebody personally threatened this man, or something of that sort, I think that testimony would be relevant.

"Mr. Langsdale: Is this answer to be stricken then, so that it is not subject to cross-examination or rebuttal?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I want to hear the attorneys first.

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Mr. Jeter, did you interpret that as a threat to the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as calling for a conclusion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

"Mr. Patten: The only thing lacking, apparently, under your definition of a threat, was for them to address him personally and say, 'You, Mr. Jeter, are going to be—'

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Now, Mr. Patten, if a Donnelly employee was threatened personally, or any violence committed, I will receive that testimony. The fact that this man happened to be down there where something was going on and heard some remarks—I think there were some remarks like that in the paper, too, but I don't consider that matter an issue in this case. I think that is a matter between the employees. I don't see how the company can be held responsible for that situation.

[fol. 6586] "Mr. Patten: It shows the circumstances leading up to the formation of this union. If we can show the circumstances, that the union was inspired by the employees and did not rise out of the action of the company—In so far as we show these circumstances which motivated them we negative the contention of the Board and the International.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That might be possible, remotely. It may be stricken. I am not going to receive that type of testimony on that question.

"Mr. Patten: Mr. Examiner, the intervener offers to prove by this witness, and others, that threats were made in their presence in connection with physical acts of violence, which they personally witnessed, to the effect that those acts of violence were only circumstances to show what would be done to the Donnelly Garment Company employees when the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union started its drive to organize the Donnelly plant.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And the other witnesses' testimony would be substantially the same as this testimony?

"Mr. Patten: And that those threats were made in connection with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. The other witnesses' testimony would be substantially the same or similar to that we have offered—that this witness has testified to and Your Honor has ordered stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent excepts to the striking of the answer and to the refusal of the offer."

352.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in sustaining objection to and striking answer of the witness Lyle Jeter, as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 2998, to wit:

"A. Miss Todd said as she called the names of the ones to be on the nominating committee, to stand up, and she called my name.

"Q. Were you surprised or not when that happened?

"Mr. Leary: Oh, I object to that as immaterial.

[fol. 6587] "Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Leary: And I move that the answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

353.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to admit in evidence Intervener's Exhibit No. 20-A to 20-KK inclusive (also referred to as Intervener's Exhibit No. 18), and in refusing same as an offer of proof, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 3042, 3044, 3045, to wit:

"(Mr. Tyler) I now offer in evidence the exhibit, which I will ask the stenographer to mark intervener's exhibit No. 18, lettering it from A to whatever that results in.

"(Thereupon the photographs above referred to were marked for identification 'Intervener's Exhibit No. 20-A to 20-KK, inclusive.')

"Mr. Tyler: That is an affidavit for an election.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You are offering these?

"Mr. Tyler: Yes, sir.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will not be received. You may incorporate it in the offers of proof if you want to.

"Mr. Ingraham: We have made an offer—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): I say, this is refused, and if any of the parties want to incorporate the material in an offer of proof, you may do so.

"Mr. Tyler: Very well.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is refused now as an offer of proof."

[fol. 6588] 354.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in admitting in evidence I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 19 over the objections of the respondent and intervener, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 3057, 3058, 3059, 3060, 3061, 3062, to wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: I offer from the February 16th issue of the Liberty magazine the only editorial in that magazine. I do not offer anything except the one-page editorial.

"Mr. Ingraham: We object. It is immaterial to any issue in this case. There is no showing that this is the editorial referred to.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: We object. There is no showing this is the editorial that was read.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Mr. Lane: There is no showing who wrote this article, Board's exhibit No. 2, or that it was accurate.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: There is no evidence that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Nelly Don Loyalty League had anything to do with that publication, regardless of who got it out.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there is the allegation in here, I believe, that the Loyalty League is a labor organization—in the complaint.

"It will be received for whatever value it has.

"(Thereupon the editorial above referred to was marked for identification 'I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit No. 19,' and received in evidence.)

* * * * * * * * * *

"Mr. Langsdale: * * * I offer I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 19.

"Mr. Shepard: Respondent is making the same objection previously made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Subject to the objection both parties have made, it is received."

[fol. 6589] 355.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in denying the motion of intervener to strike out all the rebuttal testimony offered by Mr. Langsdale from Mrs. Gray, as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 3062, to wit:

"Mr. Tyler: I would like to move to strike out all of the rebuttal testimony offered by Mr. Langsdale from Mrs. Gray, on the ground that there is no evidence that she was acting on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Donnelly Garment Company, and that nothing said or done at that meeting could in any way bind the respondent or the intervener.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied."

356.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling the motion of respondent to strike Board's Exhibit No. 18 (18-A to 18-J) as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 3068, to wit:

"Mr. Ingraham: I move to strike exhibit No. 18. There has been no showing that the exhibit was in the possession of the Witness Greenhaw up to the time that she testified, and it now appears it has been in the possession of other parties, who have not appeared and testified it is the document which Elsa Grahajn Greenhaw transcribed.

"Mr. Langsdale: Of course Elsa Graham Greenhaw had the exhibit in her hands when she testified, and said this was the carbon of the minutes she took and turned over to Mr. Walsh's office.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled."

[fol. 6590] 357.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in denying respondent's motion to strike the answers of the witness Bucker set forth on Pages 3069 and 3070 of the transcript of the record.

358.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling the objections of respondent and intervener to question asked the witness Mrs. Fike and in permitting her to answ same, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 3077, 3078, to wit:

"Q. Was there ever any change, as far as you knew; in the duties of the instructors at the Donnelly Garment Company plant from the time you went to work there in 1926 or 1927 up to the time you left there in May, 1937?

* * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: I object that she is not in a position to testify to what the duties were of the instructors at the Donnelly Garment Company plant.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer. Objection overruled."

359.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling objection of intervener to question asked the witness Mrs. Fike and permitting her to answer same, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 3084, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Was there any change, as far as you observed, in the authority of the instructors from the time you went to work there in 1933 until you left on March 8, 1937?

[fol. 6591] "A. No, sir.

"Mr. Tyler: I object that this witness cannot tell by observation whether there was any change in the authority of the instructors.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume she is answering us to what she knows."

360.

Respondent excepts to the action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to sustain respondent's motion to dismiss the entire compiaint and also its motion to dismiss each and all of the paragraphs of the complaint which motions were renewed at the close of the case, and also excepts to the action of the Trial Examiner in failing and refusing to sustain intervener's motion to dismiss the complaint which motion was renewed at the close of the case, which motions appear in the transcript of the record at Pages 3102, 3103, as follows, to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we desire to renew our motion to dismiss, which I think was marked Board's Exhibit No. 1-FFFF, and related to the whole complaint; and, also, renew our motion to dismiss each and all of the paragraphs in the complaint, which is Board's Exhibit No. 1-GGGG.

* * * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener renews its motion to dismiss as heretofore filed."

. . . . . .

[fol. 6594] 366.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal [to] the Trial Examiner to accept respondent's and intervener's offers of proof or evidence and each of same, to wit: Board's Exhibits Nos. 1-JJJJ, 1-OOOO, 1-QQQQ, 1-RRRR, and the various other offers of proof made during the hearing, excepting thereto severally and separately as to each and every part of such offers and as to each and every witness therein named, and further excepts to the Trial Examiner's failure and refusal to permit the respondent and intervener to produce witnesses and intro-[fol. 6595] duce testimony in accordance with such several offers of proof and to his failure and refusal to consider said offered evidence in making his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations set forth in the Intermediate Report:

367.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit respondent to introduce evidence upon the conspiracy and other matters set forth in Section B of Respondent's Answer including evidence of violence to employees of other garment companies caused by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and threats that similar violence and tactics would be used upon respondent's employees, and that such facts were the motivating cause for the formation by respondent's employees of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, as their voluntary action and not as the result of any domination, interference, influence or assistance by or on the part of respondent.

368.

Respondent excepts to the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner to consider and/or give effect to the findings of fact, conclusions and decree of the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, made and rendered (by Judge Andrew Miller) in Case No. 2924 entitled "Donnelly Garment Company, et al., vs. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, et al.," and offered in evidence by respondent in this proceeding.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 6596] 371.

Respondent excepts to the Trial Examiner's failure and refusal to strike the evidence introduced by the Board upon each of the paragraphs of the Complaint, as moved by the respondent at the close of the Board's case (Board's Exhibit No. 1-GGGG) and renewed by respondent at the close of the entire case (Transcript of Record, Page 3102).

[fol. 6597] 372.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving in evidence and considering the testimony offered by the Board and/or International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union from the transcript of the evidence taken before the NRA Regional Labor Board, Twelfth District, Case No. 160, styled "International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Complainant, vs. Donnelly Garment Company, Respondent", and the several excerpts therefrom, hereby excepting separately and severally to the testimony and each and every part thereof or excerpt therefrom of each and every witness, so offered, including Ellen Fry, Thelma Owen, Glynn Brooks, Mamie Tubbesing, Elizabeth Gates Reeves, Lillian Wales, Frances Riedel, Pauline Lutz, Virginia Stroup, Dewey Atchison, Gladys Ellege Richardson, R. L. Blume, Meyer Perlstein, Lillian White, Marie Patton, Bessie Neimoyer, Ella Mae Guerrant Hyde, Mrs. James A. Reed, contained in N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit Nos. 1-A to 1-BBBB inclusive, pages 1 to 80, and including Tillie Shirley, Lillian Rutherford, Elizabeth Reeves, Lou Perkins and Thelma Owen contained in N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit No. 17.

373.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling the objections and denying the motion to strike of respondent and intervener (said objection and motion being N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit Nos. 2-A to [fol. 6598] 2-C inclusive), which objections and motion were directed to the testimony contained in N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit Nos. 1-A to 1-BBBB inclusive.

374.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving in evidence and considering the testimony offered by the Board and/or International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union from the transcript of the evidence taken before Judge Andrew Miller in Case No. 2924, in the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, entitled "Donnelly Garment Company, et al., vs. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, et al., Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Intervener", and the several excerpts therefrom, hereby excepting severally and separately as to the testimony and each and every part thereof or excerpt therefrom of each and every witness, so offered, including David Dubinsky, Meyer Perlstein, Thelma Owen, Lillian Wales and Frances Riedel, contained in N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit Nos. 5-A to 5-GG inclusive, Pages 1 to 22, and Sylvia Hull contained in N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit Nos. 7-A to 7-CC inclusive.

375.

Respondent excepts to the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling the objection and denying the motion to strike of respondent and intervener (said objections and motion being N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit 6-A to 6-C inclusive), which objections and motion were directed to the testimony contained in N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit Nos. 5-A to 5-GG inclusive.

[fol. 6599] 376.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling the several objections made by respondent and/or intervener to the testimony and excerpts thereof from the old N.R.A. Case No. 160 and the Judge Miller Case No. 2924, which said objections and rulings were made or endorsed upon the exhibits containing said offered testimony.

377.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in receiving in evidence N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibits

Nos. 9-A to 9-CC inclusive, and in overruling respondent's and intervener's objections thereto, including each of those endorsed on the exhibits and those contained in N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit No. 10-A.

378.

Respondent excepts to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in overruling respondent's objections (N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibit No. 14) to N.R.A.-J.M.C. Exhibits Nos. 13-A to 13-R inclusive.

379.

Respondent excepts to the Intermediate Report and to the several findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner therein, for the reason that same thwart and violate the prime purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act (to wit: that employees have the right to bargain with their employer through representatives of their own choosing and that employers are re-[fol. 6600] quired to deal exclusively with such representatives of a majority of their employees), in that the evidence clearly and overwhelmingly shows that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and its executive committee was at all times the free choice of a majority (in fact 100%) of respondent's employees as their bargaining agency and by reason of which the contracts of May 27 and June 22, 1937, between respondent and that union were valid, and the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Trial Examiner being contrary thereto are, and any order of the Board in accordance therewith would be, in contravention of the National Labor Relations Act and illegal.

Wherefore respondent prays that its exceptions be sustained and the Complaint dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,

[fol. 3117] (Transcript of Testimony and Proceedings before National Labor Relations Board taken from the Transcript of Record in Case No. 12,641.)

United States of America

Before the National Labor Relations Board
Seventeenth Region.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. C-1382.

District Court Room,
U. S. Courthouse,
Post Office,
Kansas City, Missouri.

July 6, 1942.

The above entitled matter came on for further hearing pursuant to notice, at 10:00 a.m.

Before:

James C. Batten, Trial Examiner.

Appearances:

Ruth Weyand, Shoreham Building, Washington, D. C., appearing for the National Labor Relations Board.

James A. Reed, R. J. Ingraham, James J. Shepard, Jr., and Burr S. Stottle, 1900 Telephone Building, Kansas City, Missouri, appearing for the Donnelly Garment Company.

Frank E. Tyler and Lucian Lane, 1008 Dwight Building, Kansas City, Missouri, appearing for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 3118] Cliff Langsdale, 922 Scarritt Building, Kansas City, Missouri, appearing for the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union.

[fol. 3121] Proceedings.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think we will proceed.

[fol. 3122] Miss Weyand: I would like to introduce first, as Board's Exhibit 1-YYYY, the order of the Board, dated April 21, 1942, vacating the decision and order, reopening record, referring proceedings to Regional Director, and directing further hearing. I take it there is no objection.

As Board's Exhibit 1-ZZZZ I would like to introduce the notice of further hearing.

As Board's Exhibit 1-AAAAA I would like to introduce the affidavit as to service and proof of service upon the Donnelly Garment Company, through Reed and Ingraham, its attorneys; upon the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, through Mr. Cliff Langsdale, its attorney; upon Donnelly Garment Workers Union, through Mr. Frank Tyler, its attorney; as Board's Exhibit 1-BBBBB I would like to introduce the order designating Trial Examiner.

[fol. 3137] Trial Examiner Batten: All right. Now, I think we are ready to proceed.

I think the record should indicate that Mr. Hoggsett is appearing for the Respondent, who did not appear in the prior proceedings.

Are there any motions?

Miss Weyand: Before we proceed, I wish to call to the Trial Examiner's attention a motion which has just been filed with the Regional Director, and which the Regional Director feels should be referred to the Trial Examiner, because the Trial Examiner has taken jurisdiction of this case. The Regional Director feels he has no further jurisdiction to act on this motion, which is the application for the designation of another Trial Examiner, and an affidavit of prejudice. I move that it be referred to the Board for action. I think that such matters, as I understand it, should be decided by the Board itself.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3138] Mr. Tyler: If the Court please, may I ask whether that paper has been given an exhibit number, or what the filing mark is?

Trial Examiner Batten: It has not as yet.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Has it been marked filed?

Trial Examiner Batten: It is filed. It has been presented to me, and copies will be sent to the docket clerk. The number will be Board's Exhibit 1-CCCCC, if you want to refer to it. Just a moment, Senator Reed.

[fol. 3139] (Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 1-CCCCC," for identification.)

Mr. Tyler: If the Court please, the Intervener would like to join in the application for a different Trial Examiner and suggest to Your Honor that after the vigorous and repeated statements of Your Honor as to the weight and lack of weight of the evidence which you are now asked to consider, you naturally have not the fair, open and impartial mind to which the Interveners are entitled.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand you are joining in the motion, based upon the statements in the affidavit?

Mr. Tyler: That is correct.

* * * * * *

Mr. Reed: Miss Weyand made some statement at the beginning of this session I was absolutely unable to hear, and I am going to ask the reporter to please read me that.

(Record read by the reporter.)

Miss Weyand: I moved that it be referred to the National Labor Relations Board for action. It was my position that an application for the designation of another Trial Examiner, as I understand the law, should not be passed on by the Trial Examiner himself, but should be referred to the three members of the Board in Washington, or a quorum thereof, to act upon.

[fol. 3140] Mr. Reed: That was your motion?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Mr. Reed: That was what I wanted to understand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do I understand, Senator Reed and Mr. Tyler, that it is also your desire that this matter be referred to the Board? Do you concur in this motion?

Mr. Reed: We do.

Mr. Tyler: We do, Your Honor.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3143] Mr. Reed: I want it entered of record.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will receive it as Board's Exhibit 1-CCCCC, which makes it a part of Board's Exhibit 1, which contains all of the pleadings, motions, and formal papers.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3144] (The document heretofore marked "Board's Exhibit No. 1-CCCCC," for identification, was received in evidence.)

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3146] Trial Examiner Batten: This morning I was presented with an application that I presume was directed to the Board, for the designation of another Trial Examiner, which was filed by the Respondent, and a motion by the Board's counsel that the matter be referred to the Board. The matter was concurred in by the Respondent and the Intervener, and opposed by the Union. It is customary when affidavits of this type are submitted, either to the Court or to the Trial Examiner, that the person to whom they are presented passes upon them, but in view of the history of this matter, and the fact that the Court at least has passed on some of these matters, I assume that is not a statement of fact, however. I have concluded that I will concur in the request of those three parties, that this matter be referred to the Board for determination. However, that reference is with the understanding that the hearing may be reconvened upon 48 hours' notice to the parties. Now, is there anything further that counsel has to say?

* * * * * *

[fol. 3147] Mr. Reporter, will you see there is prepared today a copy of the record thus far, including the exhibits which have been received at this hearing and the motion of the Respondent, that they are forwarded to the Board today by air mail?

Now, is there anything further? If not, then we will adjourn, subject to 48 hours' notice.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3151] Trial Examiner Batten; I think we are ready to proceed.

* * * * * *

Miss Weyand: Board's Exhibit No. 1-DDDDD, notice of hearing before the board for oral argument on the application for another Trial Examiner; Board's Exhibit No. 1-EEEEE, the application for continuance filed by the respondent; Board's Exhibit No. 1-FFFFF, the answer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union in opposition to the application for continuance; and Board's Exhibit No. 1-GGGGG, the order of the board, dated July 28, 1942, denying the applications for continuance and for a new Trial Examiner.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3152] (Thereupon the documents above referred to, previously marked for identification "Board's Exhibits Nos. 1-DDDDD to 1-GGGGG, inclusive, and 1-HHHHH to 1-PPPPP, inclusive," were received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 3155] Mr. Ingraham: Respondent desires to file written exceptions to the rulings of the board on the application for designation of a new Trial Examiner and on the application for continuance. I would like to have the exceptions identified and put in the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: That will be No. 1-QQQQQ.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3156] Is there any objection to the receipt of Board's Exhibit No. 1-QQQQQ, being exceptions of the respondent to the denial of the application for designation of another Trial Examiner and denial of its application for continuance?

If not, it will be received.

---

* * * * * *

[fol. 3162] Proceedings.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you ready to proceed?

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Examiner, may we have an understanding now as to whether the Board will offer any further evidence?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I presume the Board's attorney had better answer that question. Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I do not know definitely whether we will or not. I took it, if the respondent should adduce evidence which needed rebutting, I expected to put on rebuttal evidence. What evidence I put on would be purely rebuttal in nature to what is put on by the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I presume we had better have, also, a statement from you.

Mr. Langsdale: My thought is the same as Miss Weyand's. We are here to meet whatever they bring in. If they bring in nothing, we have nothing.

Mr. Hogsett: That is all I wanted to know.

Mr. Lane: I have now written exceptions of the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers Union, to the orders of the Board made on July 28th, with respect to the application for the designation of another Trial Examiner, and with respect to the application for continuance.

The Board's order filed yesterday was Exhibit No. 1-GGGGG.

Trial Examiner Batten: This will be Board's Exhibit No. 1-RRRRR.

[fol. 3163] Is there any objection to the receipt of the exceptions by the intervener?

Mr. Ingraham: No objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

(Thereupon the exceptions above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 1-RRRRR" and received in evidence.)

Q. Did you personally manage the production of that business for many years? A. I did.

Q. Can you tell approximately when that period was?

A. I founded the business in 1916 and—well, I have always managed the business, and for probably the first 15 or 18 years I was very directly in the factory. That has been my biggest responsibility.

Q. And since that time you have, of course, kept in touch with and are acquainted with what was going on in the factory? A. I have.

Q. Mrs. Reed, are you familiar with the customs and practices in the garment industry generally? A. I am.

[fol. 3165] Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, I understand we are here for the purpose of adducing evidence under certain offers. Offhand, I am unable to identify the offer under which Mrs. Reed's testimony is being adduced. I would like to have counsel for the company point out that offer, if I might ask for that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I may not understand this matter. You say "under certain offers." What do you mean by that, under certain offers of proof?

Miss Weyand: Yes. The Court directed that the Board take testimony which had been offered by the company and which they urged upon the Court as having been improperly denied. As I understand this hearing, it is limited to receiving such evidence. I do not at the immediate moment say Mrs. Reed's evidence does not come under any such offer. I am asking, however, that it be pointed out which offer her testimony comes under.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I assume, had Mrs. Reed been here before, she undoubtedly would have testified, as the head of this company, concerning it in general. I do not believe that, with the first witness, and particularly the president of the company, I am going to restrict the testimony, Miss Weyand, at this time.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, do you recall there was a previous hearing in this case? A. I do.

[fol. 3166] Q. What was the condition of your health at that time?

A. My health was in very bad condition at that time.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, why did you not testify at the last hearing?

A. Because I was too ill. My doctor insisted that I go [fol. 3167] away and sent with me a trained nurse, who was in attendance the entire summer.

Q. Otherwise, you would have been here and testified?

A. Indeed, I would have.

Q. You desired to testify? A. I did.

Q. Mrs. Reed, there has been testimony offered in the record in this case regarding the Loyalty League. Were you a member of that organization? A. I was not.

Q. When did you first learn that there was such an organization as that?

A. I don't remember exactly. I had no contact with the organization. No one ever officially notified me of such an organization.

Q. Did you ever suggest or request of any employee of the Donnelly Garment Company that he or she should form such an organization?

A. I did not. My remembrance now is that it was formed shortly after the N. R. A. hearing, when there was a great deal of discussion in the papers and in the churches about sweatshop conditions in Kansas City.

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, I am wondering if any of the people in the room are witnesses. If they are, the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union would [fol. 3168] like to have a ruling enforced against the presence of other witnesses in the courtroom.

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Examiner, I think it is a little late for that request to come. This case was fully heard, 3,000 pages of oral testimony were taken, and no such request was made by any party. Mr. Langsdale's witnesses were then present in the courtroom, and it is out of line, coming at this point.

I make that point.

I make the further point, if Your Honor is interested, it is the practice in the United States Courts here not to enforce that rule, because it slows up the production of proof. When a witness is excused and you are ready for him, then you have to hunt him, and the judges, as a matter of expediency, have discarded that rule.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: I join in Mr. Hogsett's position. I think this case is the same as that heard in 1939, and at that time that rule was not in force, and I think it too late to enforce the rule now. I submit it would be improper to enforce the rule at the time when the company and the intervener expect to put on their testimony, when it has not been enforced heretofore.

Mr. Langsdale: If it please the Examiner, I do not recall whether we had the rule in force during the last hearing or not.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3170] Trial Examiner Batten: I am going to follow the practice I have always followed in these hearings. When the matter is brought up as an issue at the beginning of the hearing, and determined at that time, I have on one or two occasions enforced such a rule, but I do not propose to do so now.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: State whether or not at that time any union was making charges against the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. Yes. The I. L. G. W. U. was sending out leaflets [fol 3171] and giving newspaper interviews, intimating that we had a sweatshop and that working conditions were very bad in our place. They also had representatives at some church meetings to spread the false idea that we had a sweatshop and very bad conditions in our place.

[fol. 3172] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, did you at any time suggest to any employee that they should or should not join the Loyalty League? A. I did not.

Q. Did you at any time ever suggest to the Loyalty League or any of its officers or members that the Loyalty League should influence employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, so they would not join the ILGWU?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear of such a thing being done by anybody representing the management? A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever know of any inference that the Loyalty League did influence any employees against joining the ILGWU? A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever suggest or request the Loyalty League, it officers or members to cause the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to be organized? A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever hear of anything like that being done by any representative of the management? A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend any meeting of the Loyalty League? A. No.

Q. Now what dealings did you have with the Loyalty League?

[fol. 3173] A. I absolutely had no dealings whatever.

Q. Did you ever discuss any matters concerning wages or conditions of employment with the representatives of the Loyalty League?

A. I absolutely had no contact or discussion with them on any subject, with the Loyalty League.

Q. What did you understand that the Loyalty League did do?

A. In a general way, I understood they wanted to refute the charges that had been made about the conditions in our plant.

Q. By whom?

A. Well, by the ILGWU and by other people here. There were a number—it was sort of a movement in the city against sweatshops, and I believe that our girls resented the fact that we were put in the same class as these other shops that were paying $2.00 and $3.00 a week wages, and had very bad conditions.

Q. What wages were being paid in the Donnelly shop at that time?

A. I testified in a three-judge court to the effect that my work prices were still based upon the price I had made back in the war days, when the very highest wages were paid that were ever being paid in this country, and Mr. Walsh made the point didn't I ever raise, hadn't I raised wages since that time, and I explained to him I had never lowered wages since the high wages paid in the old war [fol. 3174] days. At that time my piece rates were based on a good average operator making $25.00 a week. We then worked forty-six and a quarter hours a week.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, pardon me for the interruption. Have you finished, Mrs. Reed?

A. No, I haven't. We then worked forty-six and a quarter hours a week, but that now we were working our regular week, working forty hours, and that the improvement in my management and the installation of new or modern machinery made it possible in most cases for the same people that made $25.00 a week, the same class of workers to make the $25.00 a week, and in the instances where they couldn't, I have increased the week's work prices, so that a good, average operator in my plant has always been able to make $25.00 a week; and if she was an unusual operator, unusual along the same line of work, they often made $35.00 a week, and we put into evidence pay rolls that show some of the girls were making $50.00.

Now, we had operators that were slower, and perhaps didn't have the urge to turn out so much work or the skill to do it, and they made less than $25.00. I had established, a great many years ago, I think probably in 1919—I am not sure as to the exact year—a minimum of $15.00 a week, but I expected an operator to make more than that. My piece rates were based, were on a basis where a good operator should make more than that.

[fol. 3175] Trial Examiner Batten: I was going to suggest, Mr. Ingraham, your question, "What were you paying at that time," what time?

Mr. Ingraham: During the spring of 1935, when the I.L.G.W.U. made these charges.

A. Well, it's hard to say, just saying what I was paying, because the majority of our employees are on a piece rate. They make various wages.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Can you tell us about what the average was, the average operator would make?

A. Well, they make — as I said, a good, average operator makes $25.00 a week. For a very short time, and I don't remember the exact time, but I remember it was sometime previous to the N.R.A., I had reduced the piece rate, 10 per cent, but that was not kept into effect, I don't think even one season.

Q. Well, then, your answer would be, in substance, that the average operator would make about $25.00 a week, is that right?

A. My piece rates were based on an average operator making $25.00 a week.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, you have mentioned the N.R.A. hearing. Will you explain what occurred with reference to certain girls that had made charges to the N.R.A. Board?

A. Well, we received a letter from the N.R.A. Board, that was the N.L.R.B. Board, wasn't it?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 3176] A. Yes.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What was that, N.L.R.B.?

A. Well, the N.R.A.B., the N.R.A. Labor Board, wasn't it?

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me just a moment. I don't know whether I understood the Examiner or not, regarding you were not going to restrict this testimony in regard to hearsay testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I don't believe I would get technical at this time, this early in the hearing; I don't believe I would get technical now.

Mr. Langsdale: It is evident that the testimony is entirely from hearsay, and I don't know what your ruling will be. I want to know what the Examiner's rulings are. I don't want to be bobbing up here all the time.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest this to all counsel. Any of you who feel the time has arrived that you should make an objection, you should do it. I think that is what your client is paying you for. I don't intend, with this witness, who is the president of the company, to restrict her. Certainly not at the present time. I feel that she is entitled to some lattitude.

Mr. Langsdale: I thought I understood you to make that ruling with reference to the Court of Appeals order, that they should not be restricted on what the Court of Appeals said should be taken.

[fol. 3177] Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think I said that.

Mr. Langsdale: What I said is, I understood, I certainly didn't understand you to say that the witness was to give hearsay testimony and conclusions.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are objecting on this ground, hearsay?

Mr. Langsdale: I don't want to be objecting, if the Examiner has got his own ruling, that he has already made up his mind to make.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, you don't expect me to anticipate the testimony and rule upon it, do you? I suggest we proceed, and if you have an objection to a line of questioning, you make your objection and I will rule upon it. Do you recall the question?

A. About the — will you please phrase it again?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. We received a letter from the N.R.A. Board, saying that 15 girls had been laid off, and I believe they charged that they had been laid off because of their union activities. Now, before the letter was received by me, eight of these girls had been called back to work. We had, in that summer — I needn't go into reasons — been compelled to lay off 300 people, and sometime during the fall we had called back — I don't remember whether it was 112 or [fol. 3178] perhaps not more than 150; we hadn't called back half of them. I think 112 in that number of the 300 girls had been called back.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, you said that you didn't have to — there was no use going into it. Now, why the lay-off occurred, I wish you would state the reason for laying off the 300 employees.

A. Well, back in '31, when the depression was pretty bad, we had the usual extra run of spring orders, and at that time there were so many people out of work, that it was reported to me hundreds of women came to our place and were turned away every day, and Mrs. Reeves asked me if I wouldn't put some extra machines, and rent an outside place where they could give employment to some of these people. She knew we had more orders than we could possibly fill with our regular factory. As a matter of fact, my entire experience in the spring of the year — I have never been able to fill all my orders in the spring, and I have had to work awfully hard to keep my plant going during the fall of the year.

The way, I usually did, was just let the orders go in the spring, only keeping my plant large enough to keep it going the year around, but this year the pressure was so great to give employment to people, that we finally opened another outside room at the time. I felt that it was to be a great burden on Mrs. Reeves and her assistant to do that, but they seemed to be entirely willing to do it. As a [fol. 3179] matter of fact, Mrs. Reeves had already been out looking for a building, and Mr. Shukert had said he had an unrented building he would let us have, and simply pay rent as we used it, in other words, if we were only able to use it for a month, we wouldn't have to do anything except pay him rent for the time that we used it; so I opened that plant and employed a hundred extra women. That fall we had a rather unusually good business, and by our own girls sharing the work with the newcomers, we were able to keep most of them going during the entire year.

The next spring we had another great number of spring orders and we did the same thing. We put on another hundred machines, and some of those machines I had rented and some of them I had accumulated by having replaced them with special machines or perhaps more up-to-date machines, so in the spring of 1933 we did the same thing all of the time, my old employees sharing the work in the fall. That is, some of them that were able to and had a husband working, or someone else working in the family, they might take off a few extra weeks, and some of them would take off a few days each, so that by sharing the work, they gave everybody some work to do. Now, in the summer of '34, I had a great many trips to Washington, in regard to the N.R.A. It was the classification they had in mind for my plant, and it would throw practically half of my people out of work.

I spent a great deal of time in Washington. At that [fol. 3180] time I was doing quite a lot of designing myself, and working on the line, and I think that the work suffered. Anyhow, we had a very great slump in our business, so that we had much less fall business than we had had for a long time. There was nothing to do but to lay off this large number of people, which we did.

Now, as soon as we were able to get more business, we started putting them back to work, and as I said before, we put back over a hundred, maybe 125, I don't remember the exact number, but in that number we had put back eight of these 15 that they said had been laid off on account of their union activities. Well, inasmuch as not half of all of the girls had been put back to work,—now I suppose I am showing a conclusion, when I feel that certainly demonstrated that we had no idea of putting anybody back on account of their union activities. I didn't know whether they belonged to a union or didn't, until we got this letter saying these girls had joined, and we didn't get the letter until after eight of them had been put back to work.

Q. Mr. Reed, will you explain what you meant by saying that the N.R.A. would classify you so that half of your — might classify you so that part of your people might be laid off?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Ingraham —

Mr. Ingraham: She mentioned this classification, and I [fol. 3181] thought you wouldn't understand what she meant by that. She said the N.R.A. would classify — might classify the business so that half of the people would be forced to be laid off, and I just want her to answer the question, if she can answer it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us.

A. They were planning to make a classification that anyone who made merchandise that sold for over — well, they had different amounts at different times — over $2.95 retail price, one time, or sold it for more than $3.95 another time, then they went over $5.95 at the last time.

Now, Mr. Batten, in my field I make a very high class garment; I use unusually good material. I think we make a good garment. We sometimes get a little more money for it. There was a great deal of discussion and a great deal of — well, they had many hearings, how they would classify different people of the dress industry. Now, if they had put me in a classification where I couldn't make anything for or above $5.95, that would probably cut off a great part of my business for the following fall, which was the most important business to keep my plan of year around work.

Trial Examiner Batten: The point is, then, Mrs. Reed, they wanted to classify your plant in such a way that it would have meant the closing down of part of your operations?

A. A great part of it, Mr. Batten. May I say this: this was discussed in meetings with General Johnson. Gen- [fol. 3182] eral Johnson finally sent his administrator and two accountants into my plant, and they spent a week in Kansas City investigating my operation, and they reported to General Johnson that the conditions, the rates of pay and everything in my plant warranted him in making a special code for me which General Johnson did.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, do you think we have answered that question?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, I do. That answers what I wanted.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, did you know that any of the 15 girls belonged to the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. I did not, until I got the letter from the Union.

Q. Did you care whether they belonged to the I.L.G.W.U.?

A. I did not and do not.

Q. What was the policy of the company with reference to joining or not joining a labor union?

A. Its policy was that anybody could belong to any union they wanted to. That was their own personal affair.

Q. Had the company employed members of a union?

A. All during my career in business, we had employed, at different times, people who belonged to different unions, and there was never any questions asked, and I think many of them worked there for many years belonging to different unions.

Q. Mrs. Reed, I want to next call your attention to a petition circulated by employees and presented to you. [fol. 3183] When did you learn about that petition?

A. When the two young ladies brought it to my home on the evening of March 2nd.

Q. 1937?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you ever heard of that petition before?

A. I had not.

Q. Did you ask any employee or anyone else to circulate or cause to be circulated such a petition?

A. I did not.

Q. Did the Loyalty League have anything to do with the circulation of the petition to your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge, it hadn't.

Q. Did anybody ever say to you the Loyalty League was circulating that petition?

A. They did not.

Q. I want to ask you if you read this newspaper article which is Respondent's Exhibit No. 6?

A. Yes, I read that.

Q. When was that in the paper, with reference to this petition?

A. Well, that was about a week before, this was February 26, 1937.

Q. There had been a previous article in the paper in connection with the union campaign against the Donnelly Company?

A. Yes.

[fol. 3184] Q. When was that?

A. In November, 1936, David Dubinsky gave out an interview, I believe, in Washington, where he was coming out to organize the Middle West, and he was particularly going to give Jim Reed a break.

Q. Was that in the Kansas City paper?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what took place when the two girls brought the petition out to your house — strike that, please.

Who were the girls, Mrs. Reed, that brought the petition out?

A. Mary Sprofera, I believe.

Q. Who else?

A. And Inez Warren.

Q. What positions did they hold in the Donnelly Company, if you know?

A. They were in the shipping department.

Q. In what capacity?

A. They filed orders, assembled orders in the shipping department.

Q. Did they have any position of authority?

A. No.

Q. With the company?

A. No.

Q. Now, will you just state what took place when they [fol. 3185] came out to the house?

A. They came in and had a paper all rolled up and handed it to me, and I opened it, and they said, "Mrs. Reed, we want you to know how we feel down at the plant," and I opened it up, I opened the petition, and I saw this little heading and I was greatly pleased. They said that I had been very nice to them, and they were thankful for the humane treatment I had given them, and naturally I was quite delighted that a number of my employees would take the trouble to let me know it, especially when so many unpleasant things were being said about me, and untrue things.

Q. Mrs. Reed, did you ask the girls who had signed the petition, or who had not signed the petition?

A. Mr. Ingraham, I did not. Those girls only stayed three or four minutes. They had a car waiting for them outside, and I didn't [illegible] them to discuss it. I simply looked at it, and there were a thousand or more names, and I wouldn't be able to know which names were there or which weren't.

Q. Did you ever cause a check to be made to see who had signed the petition and who had not signed it?

A., I did not.

Q. Did you make any further statement to the girls about the petition?

A. I read it and I did say that I was so pleased that I would put it in the cornerstone of the building we were con- [fol. 3186] templating putting up at that time.

Q. Did you request the girls to obtain the signatures of any other employees that had not signed the petition?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you intend, through any statement that you had made to them, to convey the idea that they should go back and get other employees who had not signed the petition?

A. I did not, I had no idea what names were on there. There were just a number of names, the list had names mostly written in pencil, and I didn't know who was on and who wasn't on. They only stayed a few minutes.

Q. Mrs. Reed, there has been reference made in cross-examination in this hearing, to a photograph in the paper, in connection with the girls coming out to your house. Will you explain about that?

[fol. 3187] A. These petitions were rather bulky. I placed them on my living room table, and Roy Roberts came out—

Q. Who was Roy Roberts?

A. He was from the Kansas City Star.

Q. Is he the editor?

A. He is the editor of the Kansas City Star. He came out to talk to Mr. Reed about something else—I don't remember what, but before he left he saw these petitions on the table and remarked about them.

He said, "Why, these are front-page news. Can't we have them in the Star?"

I said, "I don't see any reason why you shouldn't."

He said, "Well, then, I will send a reporter to get pictures, and I would like to have the girls there handing them to you."

I said, "All right."

I don't remember whether it was the next day, or the next day or two, they came out, and the reporter and the photographer took pictures of the girls handing me those petitions.

Q. Did you have the girls come out?

A. Oh, no, I didn't ask them to come out.

Q. How did they happen to be there?

A. I don't remember exactly. I know that Mr. Roberts asked to have them out there, and I said that I would—that it was all right.

[fol. 3188] Q. Mrs. Reed, did you ask that any other employees who had not signed the petitions do so?

A. I did not.

Q. After you received that petition, what was the effect of it on you, with respect to any dealings with the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. When the girls first handed me that petition, I particularly noted they had said they had appreciated my kind treatment, and I was very much delighted with that. Then, I, naturally, that evening looked them over and read the whole thing, the statement, more carefully, and I found they stated in that that they didn't want to have anything to do with any outside union. I felt that when that group of employees, which looked like it was practically all of them, had sent me a statement saying that they didn't want to have anything to do with an outside union, that that was notice to me that I wasn't to get them involved in any outside union and force them into any contracts that a union might try to make me do.

Q. Previous to this time, Mrs. Reed, had there been strikes in Kansas City, with reference to garment companies?

A. Yes. There had been several strikes, and a great deal in the newspaper about them. And particularly about that time there was a very bad strike just a few blocks from our place, the Gernes, Missouri, and Gordon companies here, in a building a very few blocks away from our building.

Q. Had there been other strikes previous to that?

[fol. 3189] A. Yes. There had been strikes over on Broadway. Some of them, the newspapers had said, a great deal of violence had attended. They showed pictures of the police and pickets apparently fighting each other.

Q. State whether or not employers had signed up with the I. L. G. W. U. and forced their employees to join the I. L. G. W. U.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3190] Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know of your own knowledge that they had?

* * * * * * *

Mr. Hogsett: May I say, Mr. Examiner, in this case there is inherently involved the attitude of the employer in this whole subject matter, and thereby and for that reason it becomes competent to show the understanding of the witness, who is president of the employer. In other [fol. 3191] words, the situation is different with this witness, with respect to this class of proof, than it would be with another witness. The mental attitude of the employer is a factor here, and this is the executive head of the employer.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I assume from what Mrs. Reed has said, that that, in substance, was the testimony—that you had heard that that was the practice?

The Witness: Mr. Gernes told me, and Mr. Brand told me. Mr. Brand told me that the union boycotted his merchandise—

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mrs. Reed, just a moment. I do not want to get into the whole subject matter.

The Witness: But I believed Mr. Brand, when he told me that. I didn't see any reason why he should have told me otherwise.

[fol. 3192] Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mrs. Reed.

Will you restate your question, Mr. Ingraham?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you understand, Mrs. Reed, that employers had signed up with the I. L. G. W. U. and caused their employees to become members of that union when they didn't want to? Just answer Yes or No.

A. I did understand that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3193] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you base your opinion upon information you had received from Mr. Brand and Mr. Gernes? A. I did.

Q. And others? A. Yes.

Q. Mrs. Reed, I want to next direct your attention to a meeting of employees on about March 18, 1937. Did you go to that meeting? A. I did.

Q. How did you learn of such a meeting?

A. A small group of employees came to my office and told me the employees were having a meeting on the second floor to discuss and determine what, if anything, they could do to protect themselves if the I. L. G. W. U. moved in on them like they were on the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri garment companies, and wouldn't I come down and talk to them and see if I could tell them anything the company was going to do, because they were in a very excited and very bad state of mind. They were frightened about what might happen to them.

I went with that little group down to the meeting.

* * * * * * *

Q. I will hand you Respondent's Exhibit No. 16, which [fol. 3194] is the front page of the Kansas City Times of the morning of March 18, 1937, and ask you if you saw the pictures that are on the front page of that paper?

A. I did.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you see the pictures on the front page of that paper? A. I did.

Q. And did you read the article on the back of the front page? A. I did.

Q. Had there been other articles in the newspapers about the strikes at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants? A. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence Exhibit No. 16.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3195] Miss Weyand: If it is offered solely for the purpose of showing what Mrs. Reed saw and read, and what her state of mind was at the time, I have no objection. If it is offered for the proof of the facts that are stated therein, I do object.

Mr. Ingraham: I am limiting it to what Mrs. Reed saw and read in the paper, and what the effect of it was on her state of mind.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, it will be received for that purpose.

(Thereupon the portion of newspaper above referred to, previously marked for identification, "Respondent's Exhibit No. 16, Witness Reed," was received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 3196] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you have any other knowledge, Mrs. Reed, of the strikes going on at Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri, than what you read in the paper?

A. I heard all of our people discussing them. In going up and down on the elevator there was nothing else talked of. They were constantly asking me how soon I thought they would come. The general conversation at the Donnelly Garment Company was constantly about these strikes up there.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3197] Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Reed, did it come to your knowledge that threats had been made that the I. L. G. W. U. was moving in on the Donnelly Garment Company next?

A. The knowledge of those threats did come to me. Also, that they were—

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, were those threats the general subject of conversation at the Donnelly Garment plant among the employees? A. They were.

[fol. 3198] Q. And what was the effect of this activity of the I. L. G. W. U. on the employees?

A. They were frightened.

Q. Well, on yourself?

A. On me? I don't like to admit that I was frightened, but I was very much upset. I had a friend in St. Louis, a very dear friend, who is a designer there, and they had torn her clothes off, and she had to spend a day in the back alley hiding.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, did you understand that the I. L. G. [fol. 3199] W. U. tore the clothes off of the executives and employees of the company that they were attacking?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you apprehensive that that might be done at the Donnelly plant? A. I was.

Q. Did you have information of a specific case of where that was done? A. I did.

Q. And that was a personal friend of yours? A. Yes.

Q. What was that?

A. The woman who was designer for Ely-Walker, Mrs. Moody, told me, herself, of the experience she had when she tried to go to work. She had nothing to do with the union, she was merely a designer at Ely-Walker's, and when she tried to go into the plant they pulled her clothes off, all of them, to such an extent that she had to go into a back alley and hide until clothes were brought to her.

Miss Weyand: I would like to ask if this evidence is limited to what she understood, and not that such things did occur.

Mr. Hogsett: It is so understood.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true of this line of questioning, Mr. Hogsett?

[fol. 3200] Mr. Hogsett. Yes. I think that is a fair request of Board's counsel, and that is the way it is.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you understand employees of a company in Memphis, Tenn., had had their clothes stripped off of them in a strike of the I. L. G. W. U.?

A. I did.

Trial Examiner Batten. Now, just a moment, Mr. Ingraham. I want to ask you with respect to the court's decision covering the matter of the union's actions in Kansas City—I wonder if you feel that included the actions all over. I rather gathered from reading this that—

Mr. Hogsett. May I make a general observation on that point?

Trial Examiner Batten. Yes.

Mr. Hogsett. I revert and return to the suggestion I made to Your Honor awhile ago, that this case inherently involves the attitude of two groups, one, the employer—the management of the employer, and second, the employees. Now, any facts within the knowledge of either at the time in question, I submit to you, is relevant. Why? Because knowledge of facts, or supposed facts, characterize and give weight to the attitude of those groups.

Now, I will come directly to the point—

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Hogsett, I am not disagreeing with your position. I am merely asking Mr. Ingraham—[fol. 3201] Mr. Hogsett. I am coming to that right now, because it hooks up with this.

Now, if the employer had knowledge of the customary incidents, to use an euphonistic phrase, of the I. L. G. W. U.'s drives, whether those incidents occurred in Kansas City, in Memphis, in St. Louis, in Dallas, or in Minneapolis, or at any other place, I submit that it is relevant. If there is a characteristic set of circumstances accompanying this I. L. G. W. U. regular drive, whether it occurred in latitude Kansas City, or latitude Memphis, or latitude Dallas, or latitude Minneapolis, it is a factor of some value in characterizing the attitude of the employer.

Miss Weyand: Mr. Trial Examiner, I would like to express a disagreement with the position that we are concerned with the attitude of the employer. We are concerned with the objective acts which the employer does which affects its employees.

It is the Board's position in this case that, while the Circuit Court of Appeals has directed that certain evidence which was offered relating to how and why the employees formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union should be in this record, nevertheless the Board believes that insofar as that evidence relates to the mental attitude of the employer, as expressed through subjective evidence, it is immaterial.

The Board, in ordering this hearing, in compliance with the court's remand, is going to allow to be put into the [fol. 3202] record the evidence which the Circuit Court of Appeals has directed. Nevertheless, the Board feels that that evidence, insofar as it concerns attitude, subjective testimony of employees of how and why they felt about something, rather than what they did, is immaterial, for various reasons which I will state later. But in talking about the attitude, I did not want any acquiescence in Mr. Hogsett's statement that the attitude of the employer or employees is believed by the Board to be relevant.

I am, however, willing at this time to have Mrs. Reed continue with the expression of her attitude, reflecting the reasons for what she did.

Mr. Reed: Are we to understand the Board has already prejudged this evidence the court has said shall come in, and instructed their counsel not to give it any consideration, except this limited one? Is that what we are to understand in this hearing?

Miss Weyand: I am stating, as counsel for the Board, in the prosecuting, if you may so term it, capacity of the Board, I wish to make the record that the Board feels that the attitude of the employees is immaterial and that such evidence of subjective attitude is not relevant. However, the Board has agreed to comply with the remand of the court.

The court itself did not state specifically in its opinion or, I believe, by any implication, that the Board must [fol. 3203] necessarily give any large weight. It did say the Board must receive this evidence so that the court could review it.

As to the subjective evidence, the Board, in its prosecuting function, wants it stated in the record that this evidence is not material.

Mr. Reed: I am glad to have that statement, and I want the record to show what counsel has said, and of course it will, which amounts to a declaration that, while the Court of Appeals said they must receive this evidence, they do not propose to consider it and give it weight.

Miss Weyand: I do not acquiesce in Senator Reed's statement.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the record is very clear on the matter, and that will end it.

[fol. 3204] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. And did you understand that the same thing had been done in other places?

A. I did.

Q. Where, Mrs. Reed?

A. In Dallas and St. Louis.

Q. What else did they do besides stripping clothes off, as you understood?

A. They threw red pepper in the girls' eyes and put razor blades in the toes of their shoes and kicked the girls on the shins.

Q. What was the condition in Kansas City at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants at, on or about March 18, 1937?

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: With reference to the strikes that were going on.

A. They were at about the worst. The I. L. G. W. U. pickets had taken possession of the hallways and put cots in there to sleep on, and there were constant fights. The girls would go to work in taxicabs, and they were met and handled.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What did they describe the taking possession of the hallways as?

[fol. 3205] A. As a sit-down strike.

Q. How long did they stay in the building, if you know?

A. They stayed in there several days, until the health authorities forced them to move out on account of sanitary conditions.

Q. What effect did those matters have on you, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, I had been informed and believed that they were going to try to do the same thing to us. We had a similar lobby in our building. I felt so strongly about it, I went down to see the chief of police to see if I couldn't do something to keep that same thing from happening to us, and he didn't give me very much satisfaction. He asked me if there was a way our girls could come and be unloaded on our own property. He said that was a help. But the situation had gotten out of his hand, where they just came up to the sidewalk and had to pass over the sidewalk going into the building. So he suggested that we might rent buses, which we did, from the street railway company. We had buses meet our girls in different parts of the city. We had a private dock in back of the building where we unloaded our girls. And we locked our doors and no one could come in except through a ticket which we gave out to our employees. And we had three or four watchmen in the lobby. It was so bad that I had night and day watchmen at my home, because I had been informed that they were going to "take me for a ride."

[fol. 3206] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Over how long a period of time, Mrs. Reed, did this go on, approximately?

A. Well, it went on, this very bad condition, for a few weeks.

Q. Was that the period during which you had the buses you mentioned?

A. Yes. We kept our buses going for, I think, three or four months.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. How long did you have watchmen at your home?

A. I had watchmen at my home until after we got a temporary injunction against the I. L. G. W. U.

Q. What date was that, do you recall?

A. I don't recall that date.

Mr. Hogsett: May it be agreed that that was July 5, 1937? The record so shows.

The Witness: I believe we had them a little longer than that, but—

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Langsdale, you know that, don't you?

Mr. Langsdale: I think that is the date the temporary restraining order was issued, July 5, 1937.

Miss Weyand: It is subject to check.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be understood, if it is found to be incorrect on checking, it may be cleared up.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, getting back to the meeting of March [fol. 3207] 18th, did you know in advance of when you were requested to go to that meeting, that the meeting was to be held?

A. I did not. I had been down town shopping with Miss Frances during the afternoon. We were leaving for a short vacation in Florida that night.

Q. Why were you going to Florida, Mrs. Reed?

A. I was going for a very much needed rest.

Q. When did you return to the plant that afternoon?

A. Well, it was quite late in the afternoon. I don't remember whether— It wasn't before 4:30; sometime about that time, probably. I simply stopped in on the way home to see if anything very special had come up that I should take care of before I left.

Q. What occurred, Mrs. Reed, when you did get to your office?

A. I went directly to my office, and in a very few minutes a small group of employees came and asked me if I wouldn't go to this meeting they were having, where they were going to discuss ways and means of protecting themselves against the violence of the I. L. G. W. U.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Who were in this group, Mrs. Reed?

A. Mr. Batten, I don't know. You know, there are 1,300 people down there, and I don't remember specifically. [fol. 3208] Q. Do you remember any of them?

A. At this moment I don't remember any of them specifically. It seems to me that— Well, I don't remember, right this minute. There were three or four of them. I didn't particularly pay attention, except I simply went down immediately to the meeting. They asked me if I wouldn't tell them—

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, just a minute. Did they tell you why they wanted you to go to the meeting?

A. Yes. They wanted me to tell these employees what, if anything, we were going to do to help protect them.

Q. Did you then go to the meeting?

A. I did.

Q. Did you take anybody with you to the meeting?

A. I took Miss Frances, my secretary.

Q. Where is your office, Mrs. Reed, in the building?

A. It is in the northwest corner, on the 10th floor.

Q. Do you recall where this meeting was held?

A. Yes. It was on the second floor.

Q. Did the company at that time rent the second floor?

A. No.

Q. What occurred, Mrs. Reed, when you got to the meeting?

A. Someone introduced me, or said they didn't have to introduce me, and said Mrs. Reed would say something to the meeting. I don't remember exactly what they said. I know, as soon as I got there I was given the floor. They [fol. 3209] asked me to discuss or tell them what I was going to do.

Q. Did you make any remarks, Mrs. Reed?

A. I did.

Q. Did you make any statement to the effect that you would close your shop if it was unionized?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you make a remark to the effect that you would not let Dubinsky tell you how to run your business?

A. I did not.

Q. I will show you Respondent's Exhibit No. 12, and—

A. I think that question was, I said, "Dubinsky or any other buttinsky could not tell me what to do."

Q. Did you say that?

A. I did say something to the effect that "Dubinsky or any other buttinsky could not tell me what to do." I don't remember the exact text of it.

Q. Will you look at Respondent's Exhibit No. 12 and see if that refreshes your memory about what you said?

(Witness refers to Respondent's Exhibit No. 12)

A. This is what I said. (Referring to Respondent's Exhibit No. 12)

Q. Did you make any other remarks—

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me. Is that—

Mr. Ingraham: That is the transcript of Mrs. Reed's speech that Mrs. Strine testified about.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, you mentioned in that speech something [fol. 3210] about buses. What was the situation with respect to that?

A. Well, at that time we were negotiating with the street car company to employ buses so that the girls could come to work in the buses, so that they wouldn't have to cross over the sidewalk in getting into the building. The buses were unloaded at our docks in back of the building, on our property.

Q. Did you make any other remarks that are contained in Respondent's Exhibit No. 12 at that meeting?

A. From what I see here (indicating Respondent's Exhibit No. 12), this is what I said; this is the context of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You had better look it over carefully, Mrs. Reed, if you haven't. The question is, did you say anything other than contained in that document?

The Witness: No. This is just what I said.

Mr. Ingraham: Read it carefully, Mrs. Reed.

The Witness: All right. (Reading Respondent's Exhibit No. 12.)

Mr Batten, this is exactly what I said at that meeting (indicating Respondent's Exhibit No. 12).

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, a minute ago you stated that you did say something about Dubinsky not telling you what to do, or something to that effect. What were your exact words?

A. My exact words—I will read them, right here (indicating Respondent's Exhibit No. 12). You can't remem- [fol. 3211] ber exact words for five years.

(Reading from Respondent's Exhibit No. 12.) "Many of you have been here for a number of years, and you know you have never been asked whether or not you belonged to a union. The company has not discriminated against anyone on that account, and Mr. Dubinsky is not going to make me discriminate against employees because they did not belong to his union."

I still believe that and feel that way.

Q. Mrs. Reed, in that meeting did you read a letter from the I. L. G. W. U. to the company?

A. I did not.

Q. Was there a letter read while you were at that meeting?

A. Not in my presence; not that I heard or knew anything about.

Q. Had the I. L. G. W. U. on or about that time handed out circulars at the plant containing the letter that the I. L. G. W. U. had sent to the company?

A. They did.

[fol. 3212] Q. But, so far as you reading any letter or hearing any letter read, that did not occur?

A. It did not occur and I am sure it did not occur. I certainly would not have been putting over any of Dubinsky's propaganda.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean at the meeting?

A. At that meeting there would have been no occasion for me to send out his letter. He did it himself later, in several hundred thousands of them, I understand.

Mr. Ingraham: You are referring to circulars he distributed to your customers?

A. He had a circular made of the letter, copy of the letter he sent to me, he had that made and distributed to my employees, shortly after the letter came to me; I don't remember what date. I also know that he tried to put it in the newspaper and they wouldn't put it in.

Mr. Langsdale: I ask that that be stricken out as hearsay.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Later, did he try distributing a copy of that letter to your customers?

A. He did.

Q. Was that circular, was there on the front page of the circular that was distributed to your customers the language, "We do not patronize Nelly Donnelly?"

[fol. 3213] A. Yes.

Q. We are looking for this exhibit. I think we offered it, and I am sure we did, but we are looking. While we are looking for that circular, I would like, Mrs. Reed, for you to state what you did say, with reference to employees joining or not joining a union. Now, I am referring to that March 18th.

A. Didn't I just read this?

Q. I don't think that you covered everything that you did say when you read it.

A. Do you want me to read the entire paragraph again?

Trial Examiner Batten: All right.

A. "Many of you have been here for a number of years, and you know you have never been asked whether or not you belong to a union. The company has not discriminated against anyone on that account, and Mr. Dubinsky is not going to make me discriminate against employees because they would not belong to his union. If you want to belong, that is your own business, and it is up to you to decide. I will say that neither Dubinsky or any other buttinsky is going to intimidate me or the company into forcing you to join the International Union against your will." Those are still my sentiments.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, how long were you at that meeting?

A. Just long enough to talk; as soon as I finished this [fol. 3214] little talk I left. I suppose probably not over 10 minutes.

Q. Did you leave the city that evening?

A. Yes, I went to Florida that night.

Q. How long were you in Florida, approximately how long were you in Florida?

A. I would say a little over two weeks.

Q. Did you have any knowledge, Mrs. Reed,—strike that—

When did you first learn that the employees had organized a union?

A. Miss Todd came to my office,—let me see, I think toward the end of April, the very end of April.

Q. What took place when Miss Todd came to your office?

A. And told me that the employees had formed a union and she wanted to make an appointment with me to meet with their committee so that they could arrange to make a contract.

Q. Now, just a minute. Do you recall how soon, or when, Miss Todd stated the employees had organized this union?

A. My remembrance is it was April 27th.

Q. How long before she had this talk with you did she say they organized?

A. A day or so, probably the very next morning, I am sure it was.

Q. Did she make any reference to how many employees were in the union?

A. She told me that they had unanimously voted to [fol. 3215] form the union, and she brought a great number of cards with her to show me they were signed, and she said they had a majority, although I remember, I believe, she said they had a unanimous vote on it.

Q. Did she request you to check the cards?

A. She did, and I turned them over to Miss Frances to check.

Q. And as I understood you to testify, she asked if you would meet with the committee?

A. Yes.

Q. About how long after that was it, before you met with the committee?

A. Well, it was several days.

Q. What occurred at that meeting?

A. Well, this group came up and Miss Todd introduced them to me; most of them I didn't know except having seen them in the elevator, and so I asked them if they wouldn't, each one of them, tell me a little about themselves and how long they had been there, and what department they worked in, and what they did and what they had done before they came to our place. I felt, if I were going to have to have dealings with them, I would like to know them a little bit. That was the first thing that was done; and then we began. She said they wanted a contract and wanted to talk over with me having this contract, that the girls there felt that they could have a union of their own that would do more for them than any outside union.

[fol. 3216] Anyhow, they had had their meeting, and voted to have one, and they had been informed by their lawyer that was their right, that this Wagner Act had been declared constitutional, and earlier they had discussed something about getting an injunction to protect them from having sit-down strikes in our building, and being kept from coming to work. As they worked along with him, this Wagner Act had been made constitutional; then he had advised them the sensible thing to do was form their own union, and they were of the opinion they could form a union. There were things very nice down there, but there were a number of things they had had as a matter of privilege for a number of years, and if anything happened to me, they didn't know whether they would have them or not. The first thing they wanted, was to make sure of some of these things, as a matter of privilege, as part of the contract. So that, if anything happened to me, they would be assured of having them. We had a sick insurance, and I had paid half of it, and they had had paid vacations over a period of 25 years, and of course that was a very unusual thing in a garment industry or in any industry where workers had paid vacations, and particularly piece workers. So they said that the first thing they wanted to do was to make sure they were going to have these privileges, and they were going to be made into rights. Then they seemed to feel it was very important to keep from having unpleasant quarrels, and so forth; they should have [fol. 3217] a closed shop. I always had a little feeling that I wanted to be able to employ anybody that I wanted to, and there was a little discussion about whether I give up that right and they were very insistent they have a closed shop, because if they didn't have, they would probably be having upsets, more or less, and I said well, I would discuss that with Mr. Reed and Mr. Ingraham, and as a matter of fact, we were just talking back and forth about these paid vacations and sick insurance and paid holidays, and the closed shop, all in a rather general way. I didn't commit myself, but I said, well, for them to get together with their lawyer and get up a contract, and then I would have my lawyers, and we would all discuss it; and we would see what could be done,

Q. Mrs. Reed, do you recall making any remark about industrial peace?

A. Well, I suppose I had been reading that Wagner Act, like everybody else had, and emphasized the fact that closed shops brought on or made for—I don't remember the words of it—anyhow, they made for industrial peace, and I probably did make a remark of that kind.

Trial Examiner Batten: You felt that from reading it or is that some advice you had received, that the Wagner Act meant that, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, there was a great deal of discussion, whether the Wagner Act was constitutional or not. After it was [fol. 3218] declared constitutional, it was a law.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, prior to this time do you recall, or prior to the time the plant union was organized, had there been any discussion down at the plant, demonstrations with respect to the girls?

A. Yes, there was a couple of girls that came down one morning with I.L.G.W.U. buttons on, the more I have heard about it the bigger the buttons got; but they must have been a good size, and the girls in the section refused to work there with these two girls.

Q. You were not there that day?

A. No, I was not there.

Q. When did you learn about these demonstrations?

A. Oh, very shortly after it happened, they reported it to me.

Q. And were instructions given, Mrs. Reed, about getting in touch with these girls, these two girls that wore the I.L.G.W.U. buttons?

A. My understanding was that our girls refused to work while they were there, and Mr. Baty was anxious to avoid any unpleasantness.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Yes, did you give any instructions about calling [fol. 3219] these girls back?

A. I said that they should be called back to work when things quieted down a little bit.

Q. And do you know whether or not an attempt was made to get in touch with Sylvia Hull?

A. I was informed by our personnel director she had attempted to call and get in touch with both of those girls.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Reed, did Donnelly Garment or [fol. 3220] anybody representing the management have anything to do with the demonstration that took place on April 23rd, in connection with Sylvia Hull?

* * * * * * *

A. So far as I know, no one in the management had anything to do with that.

Q. Did you state the attitude of the company with respect to whether or not employees would be discriminated against or discharged because they belonged or did not belong to a union at that time?

A. I emphatically stated in my talk to a group of the employees that it was their affair whether they belonged or whether they did not belong to the union.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, I asked you about the meeting at which the employees had formed a union, which occurred about April 27th, 1937. Did you or anybody representing the management, to your knowledge, ever suggest to any person that the employees should form a plant union?

A. To my knowledge they did not.

Q. Did you ever hear of anybody representing the management suggesting or influencing any employees in any way?

[fol. 3224] A. I have not.

Q. Do you know of any contributions that have been made by the company to the Donnelly Workers' Union?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the employment of Mr. Tyler as attorney for the Donnelly Workers' Union?

A. I had nothing to do with the employing of Mr. Tyler.

Q. Has the company, to your knowledge, ever paid Mr. Tyler any money for his employment for the Donnelly Garment Workers? A. It has not.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3223] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, you have stated that you met with the group chairman of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union a week or so after it was organized. Now, when was the next time that you met with the representatives of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union?

A. It was May 27th.

Q. How did you happen to meet with them on that day? [fol. 3224] A. I was told that they had a contract, and that they had been working on a contract, and had gotten something up that they wanted to discuss with me, and wanted to have a meeting with me.

Q. Let me go back to another matter, just a minute. After the meeting of May 6th, with the group chairman, what occurred? What did you do with reference to their request for further meetings and considerations of a contract which they said they would present?

A. Well, I took this matter up with you, and with Mr. Reed, and discussed with you about the terms of the contract and what we were going to do.

Q. What did you expect them to ask for, just from your talk?

A. Well, I know that they were quite stirred up about the incident of these girls wearing a big button down to work, and making trouble, and they were determined to have a closed shop, and I discussed with you and Mr. Reed about whether that was legal, to have a closed shop agreement.

Q. Did you ask that we look up the law? A. I did.

Q. Getting back, then, to the meeting of May 27th, who representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, requested a conference, if you recall?

A. Well I think Mr. Tyler did.

Q. Do you recall when the meeting took place, what [fol. 3225] time of day?

A. Well, I believe it was in the morning, started in the morning.

Q. What place? A. At my office.

Q. Who was there?

A. Mr. Tyler and Miss Todd and their committee, Mr. Reed and you and Mr. Green, and Mr. Baty, and I believe Mr. Keyes was there.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you recall the other people on the committee, Mrs. Reed?

A. Fred Brown and Jack McConaughey, and Mamie Riddle. Let me see. I have to think of each department, who was representing them. That will help me to remember. The dividers were represented by Miss Sprofira, and I don't remember the other members of the committee right now.

Q. Did the cutters have a representative?

A. Fred Brown would have represented the cutters, and Jack McConaughey the mechanics, and I believe Mamie Riddle the pressers. I don't remember the others.

Q. Do you remember how many were there?

A. I think two or three more.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What occurred at that meeting, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, Mr. Tyler made a little speech about the union [fol. 3226] and what they wanted in their contract, and read as a document—it was a contract, draft of a contract. Then there was an oral discussion of these privileges becoming rights, and in the discussion with the committee—before I had felt that I should have to make those duties, or put them in a contract, I didn't think they had the right to ask them of me, because they cost me a lot of money, and conditions were pretty uncertain then, and I didn't intend to necessarily withdraw them, but I didn't feel like I wanted to make them a part of the contract. That was brought up and discussed between ourselves then.

Q. What are you referring to as privileges, Mrs. Reed?

A. The vacations with pay and holidays with pay, and my paying part of their sick insurance, group insurance; that was discussed and some of the committee felt very strongly that they should have that. They should have them written in the contract so if anything should happen to me they then would be in no danger of their losing that. They felt, so they said, making this contract, that they shouldn't lose anything they already had, and they ought to be able to get some more things.

Q. Well, what other points were discussed, so far as you recall? A. Well, the minimum wage there.

Q. Did you have an objection to that?

[fol. 3227] A. Well, not to $15 a week. That is what I had been paying.

Q. Did you object to putting it into a contract?

A. Well, I felt that an actual minimum for everybody that I would have to pay, when the minimum in the trade generally was only $13 a week, and I didn't feel that I should have to make $15 the minimum.

Q. An obligation. You had paid that minimum?

A. Yes. I had paid it always, but I didn't know what new restrictions might come up in running the plant and it is a different thing to be doing something from day to day, or sign a two-year contract that you are going to do it.

Q. Mrs. Reed, what was discussed with regard to the closed shop?

A. Well, the closed shop, there was quite a lot of discussion about that. The committee felt that they should have a closed shop, and I thought if we were going to have a union at all, we possibly would be better off in having a closed shop. I didn't want a closed shop in the sense that I didn't have anything to do with employing people, and the contract that we made with the union gives me the privilege, doesn't restrict me from employing anyone I want to. If they work there, I don't remember how many weeks, but a few weeks, they have to join the Donnelly Workers' Union, but the union doesn't select the employees, and I felt at least I had some choice in the matter of selecting my own employees. If I could employ them [fol. 3228] myself, and then the Union—later they could join the Union.

Q. Mrs. Reed, when Mr. Tyler finished reading his proposed contract, and the discussions were finished about it, what did you do then? Did you request Mr. Tyler to do anything?

A. I didn't feel that I ought to sign a contract that was as important as that just right off, with simply listening to someone talk about it, and I suggested that Mr. Reed and Mr. Ingraham and myself take the draft that they had made, or contract they had made, and go to Mr. Reed's office, and let us look it over, and we would meet with Mr.

Tyler and his committee later in the afternoon, and that is what we did.

We went to Mr. Reed's office, and spent several hours in going over this contract.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you identify this document, please, and mark it?

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Respondent's Exhibit 17, Witness Reed," for identification.)

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Reed, I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 17, and ask you to state what part of this document you meant was the proposal of Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. Is that a document which was offered in the last hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: No, this is a new document.

[fol. 3229] Mr. Langsdale: You did offer the contract and it was finally accepted in the last hearing?

Mr. Ingraham: We offered the contract that was finally entered into. I don't recall any proposed contract, unless Mr. Tyler offered it. We didn't offer i

Mr. Langsdale: This is something that we know nothing about up to now, nothing has ever been said about it.

Mr. Ingraham: That's right, I don't mean just that. We haven't offered this before, Mr. Langsdale. This was the draft of a contract that Mr. Tyler presented us with. There has been testimony about what took place at this first meeting, and that a proposed contract was presented.

Mr. Langsdale: You never produced this before.

Mr. Ingraham: No, that's right.

Mr. Hogsett: This particular paper has not heretofore been produced. It has the original work sheets attached to it, and that set of papers has never been produced.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to the offer of it, as it is beyond the scope of this hearing. The contract was entered into and negotiations that took place with reference to that contract were testified to, and testified to fully, and for a number of days, and is is something that has not been mentioned up to now. Miss Todd and Mr. Brown and the others talked about what they proposed, and what Mrs. Reed said, and it was finally accepted and nothing said about any such document as this until now, and I [fol. 3230] object to it for the reason it isn't within the scope of the hearing as ordered by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and entirely something new, and something that has been gone into fully with the exception of this document which is now produced, three years after the other hearing had been had.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale, at the previous hearing, we offered the contract and it was our theory that when we offered the contract it showed the terms of the contract and the testimony and we had a discussion of those terms, and that was all; that was sufficient, but the Board in its decision seems to think that the negotiations were very important, and at that time it was you that wanted to go into it; and you wanted to know what each person said. Now, we have the principal party from our side here to testify what took place, just in line with what you wanted at the last trial.

[fol. 3231] Mr. Langsdale: We had Mr. Tyler here before, and we had Miss Todd, and all of the people who were supposed to have participated in that, and all of the negotiations that took place were gone into fully.

My position is that this is an afterthought, and I object to it as not being within the scope of the hearing as ordered by the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Hogsett: I might say, because of the very nature of the thing, Miss Todd or Mr. Tyler could not have known or testified to what Senator Reed did in the presence of this witness in interlining, adding to, changing, and in other ways modifying the Tyler draft. Here now, for the first time, with a witness competent to testify to it, is the respondent able to give that to you. We are here with the original document Mr. Tyler gave the company, and this witness, if permitted, will identify this as such, and will identify the interlineations, of which there are many, in that draft, as being in the handwriting of Senator Reed. I submit, nothing could possibly be more competent than this.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3233] Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think we need spend any further time on it, except I don't want to exclude other counsel. Have any other counsel anything to say with respect to this? If not, you may proceed, Mr. Ingraham.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you state what pages in that document were presented by Mr. Tyler?

A. Pages 1, 2, and 3 were submitted, but the crossing-out and interlining and all of the pencil corrections were made by Mr. Reed.

Q. Well, Mrs. Reed, the pages you are referring to, are they in black type?

A. Yes.

Q. I don't believe you went clear through the document.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment, Mr. Ingra[fol. 3234] ham. I notice some slips on the front of that.

Mr. Ingraham: That's right.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that you have the reporter mark it— It is Exhibit No. 17. She had better mark it 17-A, B, C, and so forth, and then have the witness tell us what pages she is referring to.

Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

(Thereupon the document previously marked for identification "Respondent's Exhibit No. 17, Witness Reed," was remarked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 17-A to 17-J, inclusive, Witness Reed.")

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, I hand you Exhibit No. 17-A through J, inclusive, and ask you to state which particular exhibits were submitted by Mr. Tyler.

A. 17-D, 17-E, 17-F, and 17-J.

Q. Now, do you recognize who wrote 17-A?

A. Yes. I wrote that, 17-A, and I wrote 17-B, in pencil writing.

Q. Who wrote 17-C?

A. Mr. Reed dictated that and interlined corrections. 17-G Mr. Reed also dictated, and wrote in pencil corrections. 17-H Mr. Reed dictated. 17-I, pencil writing, I wrote.

Miss Weyand: I believe there are some interlineations on D, E, F, and J.

Mr. Hogsett: The Tyler draft, in other words, was [fol. 3235] interlined.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I will ask you if there are any interlineations on 17-D, and if so, who made them?

A. There are interlineations on 17-D, and they are made by Mr. Reed, in his own handwriting.

Q. Are some lines scratched out?

A. Yes; Mr. Reed also did that.

Q. That is 17—

Mr. Reed: Read what the interlineation is and what is stricken out, so that the record will show.

Mr. Ingraham: Will you read the paragraph marked "Paragraph 1," and read the way it was as presented and with the interlineation?

Trial Examiner Batten: May I see it?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, certainly. (Handing exhibit to the Trial Examiner.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Perhaps the Senator would like to have it read in, but it is very obvious what it is. You didn't strike it out sufficiently so that it is unreadable, Senator. Unless you want that entire matter read—

Mr. Reed: This is all I want. I want the record to be clear as to what that document was when it came under my hand and what I did to it. I thought the best way to do would be to read the words that I added and the words that I struck out in that paragraph. Mr. Ingraham asked her to [fol. 3236] read it as Mr. Tyler submitted it, and then to read it as I corrected it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you look at it, Senator? It appears to be entirely clear. However, I have no objection. Do you care to look at it?

(Thereupon Exhibit No. 17-A to 17-J, inclusive, was handed to Mr. Reed by Mr. Ingraham.)

Mr. Reed: Now, Mr. Batten, I want this to show in the record, that I interlined those particular words (indicating on exhibit), and those particular words (indicating on exhibit), and that I struck this out (indicating on exhibit), and said "See slip X," and then what slip X is.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will have Mr. Ingraham proceed.

Mr. Reed: Otherwise it would be bungled up.

Mr. Ingraham: Could I shorten it by this:

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, every word that is scratched out on Exhibit No. 17-D, was that done by Mr. Reed?

A. Yes, it was. I remember very distinctly that it was.

Q. And the interlineations of new words, were they put in there by Mr. Reed?

A. They were put in by Mr. Reed, in his own handwriting. Where he says, "See slip"—we have the slip.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The slip is now marked as Respondent's Exhibit—what, Mrs. Reed?

A. Exhibit 17-A.

[fol. 3237] Q. Exhibit 17-A, then, refers to that notation on 17-D?

A. I will see if it does. (Referring to exhibit.)

Yes. The slip, 17-A, refers to the notation "See slip" on 17-D.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I wish you would look at those slips, Mrs. Reed, and see which—

A. That one (indicating) belongs there (indicating). I will see where the other one belongs. (Looking through exhibit.)

The 17-B slip was not incorporated any place. My remembrance is we did not put it in.

Q. Why wasn't it put in, Mrs. Reed?

A. Mr. Reed didn't think it ought to be put in. It was a notation I made.

Q. Was there any objection made in discussing it with the representatives of the union?

A. There was some discussion about everything being absolutely fair.

Mr. Batten, may I just tell you what this slip is?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

The Witness: You will know what it is, but so that we will have it here,— I said, "Nothing in this contract shall prohibit Donnelly Garment Company or Donnelly Garment Sales Company from making money allowances, bonuses, or extra vacations to any employees, the same as heretofore." I was at that time, and still am, giving the Pio[fol. 3238] neers— They have a Pioneers Club that the employees organized, where they have been at our place over 15 years, and I have given them 3-weeks' vacation instead of 2 weeks.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. How long have you done that, Mrs. Reed?

A. Ever since it was organized. It was organized a number of years ago.

Q. Long before this contract was drawn up?

A. Oh, yes, long before this.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. So, the purpose of your making that was to retain that; is that right?

A. Yes. I had a plan in my manufacturing that, if an operator fell down a lot in her work, in her earnings, I would make up to her a certain amount of that. Very often it wasn't her own fault, or it was new work, or bad cutting, or for different reasons. Now, the $15.00 a week didn't always take care of that, because sometimes the girl who was in the habit of making $30.00 a week might fall down to $20.00, and then I felt that I ought to do something for her. I had done it through the years, and I hated to give up some of these things—

Q. In other words, you wanted to retain some of these special privileges?

A. Yes.

Q. And you wrote this for the purpose of incorporating it in the contract?

[fol. 3239] A. Yes. And I think Mr. Reed thought it was very foolish. Anyway, I didn't put it in. But this was a part of what we were writing, and when we found this document, this was with it, and to have it complete we have it in here.

I do not want to be understood that I made those allowances because I favored any particular person. It was a policy I had that—Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think there is any charge of that kind here.

The Witness: Well, when you have piece-workers to deal with, sometimes you have things like that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, Respondent's Exhibit No. 17-C, will you state where that went into the Tyler contract?

A. Well, that would go in the first part, 17-D.

Q. Did it take the place of the paragraph marked "Paragraph 1" in Respondent's Exhibit No. 17-D?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what change was made?

A. The main change was that it took into consideration both the Donnelly Garment Sales Company and the Donnelly Garment Company. That was the particular point in the paragraph. 17-C took the place of part 1 in 17-D.

Q. Mrs. Reed, beginning with the paragraph marked [fol. 3240] (4) on Respondent's Exhibit No. 17-D, and continuing over on Respondent's Exhibit No. 17-E, were changes made in that paragraph?

. . . . . .

A. Yes, there were changes made in that.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What were they? Read the paragraph as Mr. Tyler presented it, and then read it with the changes that Mr. Reed made.

A. (Reading) "The employer recognizes the election—" This is as Mr. Tyler had it: "The employer recognizes the election of a committee to represent the union by the union and agrees to negotiate and deal with such committee in regard to conditions of employees and all matters properly within the jurisdiction of such committee."

Now, Mr. Reed changed that to read:

"The employer recognizes the election of a committee of the union to represent it and agrees to further negotiate and deal with such committee in regard to the working conditions, wages, and hours of labor of employees, and all other matters properly within the jurisdiction of such committee."

Q. Do you recall, Mrs. Reed, whether I made a suggested further change in that paragraph?

A. I remember your making the suggestion that any-[fol. 3241] one on that committee would have to have worked at the company a year before they would go on the committee—before they be elected on the committee.

Q. Now, take the paragraph marked "(7)" of Respondent's Exhibit 17-E. Will you read what changes were made in that paragraph?

A. As was written by Mr. Tyler, No. (7), "Complaints And Grievances: Any employee considering himself or herself unjustly disciplined or unjustly treated shall have the right to present such matter to the committee elected to handle the affairs of this union, and such committee by a majority vote may elect to take the matter in question up with the employer for the purpose of securing redress for any proper grievance or injustice which the committee may believe to exist. Nothing in this agreement, however, shall prevent any employee from taking up any matter of dissatisfaction directly with his or her immediate superior, in substitution for or in addition to, presenting such complaint to the committee representing the union."

Now, Mr. Reed changed this to read—No. (7):

"Complaints And Grievances: Any employee considering himself or herself unjustly disciplined or unjustly treated shall have the right to present such matter to the duly authorized committee of this union, and such committee by a majority vote may elect to take the matter in-[fol. 3242] question up with the employer for the purpose of securing redress for any proper grievance or injustice which the committee may believe to exist. Nothing in this agreement, however, shall prevent any employee from taking up any matter of dissatisfaction directly with his or her immediate superior or the managerial officers of the company, in substitution for or in addition to, presenting such complaint to the committee representing the union."

Mr. Reed inserted ". . . or the managerial officers of the company . . ."

Q. Now, in referring to paragraph (9) on Respondent's Exhibit No. 17-E, how is that paragraph marked?

A. That paragraph is marked out.

Q. How about the next—

Mr. Reed. What is the paragraph that is marked out?

The Witness: "Closed shop."

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. The continuation of that paragraph (9), contained on Exhibit No. 17-F, is that marked out?

A. That is also marked out.

Q. Who marked it out?

A. Mr. Reed did.

Q. Were you present when Mr. Reed discussed the matter with me and we decided upon what we would do when we conferred with Mr. Tyler?

A. I was.

[fol. 3243] Q. Were we then to sit down and discuss the closed shop provision with Mr. Tyler?

A. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: To shorten this I am only referring to the paragraphs that have considerable changes made in them.

Q. Now, calling your attention to paragraph (12) on Respondent's Exhibit No. 17-F, how is that paragraph marked?

A. That is also scratched out.

Q. By whom?

A. By Mr. Reed.

Mr. Reed: What does it refer to?

A. Strikes. That paragraph ends on Exhibit No. 17-J, and that is also scratched out.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, what was inserted in place of paragraph (12), and by whom?

A. By Mr. Reed. He dictated paragraph (12) with regard to strikes.

Q. Read that, Mrs. Reed, as changed by Mr. Reed.

A. (Reading) "Strikes, lockouts, and arbitration." That is the way he headed it, instead of just "Strikes." "The union agrees that it will not call or instigate or support any strikes during the period of any wage scale adopted in conformity with or in furtherance of this contract, and the employer agrees that so long as the union faithfully keeps its part of this contract there will be no [fol. 3244] lockout of employees by the company.

"It is further agreed that in the event the union and the employer are unable to agree with reference to any matter of dispute, that the question in dispute shall be submitted to a board of arbitration, one to be chosen by the union, one by the employer, and the third by the two above referred to, and if the two cannot agree as to the third arbitrator, then such third member shall be chosen by a judge of the United States District Court for this district. And it is further agreed between the parties that during the time of such negotiations or such arbitration there shall be neither a strike nor a lockout, and the parties hereto agree to accept and abide by any decision made by a majority of such board of arbitrators."

Q. Did Mr. Tyler's proposal contain any provision for arbitration?

A. No, it did not. That is what Mr. Reed thought was very necessary to have in there.

[fol. 3245] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. That paragraph contained Respondent's Exhibit 17-H, dictated by Mr. Reed?

A. It was.

Q. What does it relate to, Mrs. Reed?

A. To the right to reduce the number of employees in accordance with the judgment as to business requirements, and discharge any employees whose services are unsatisfactory to the company for any reason, which the employer shall deem sufficient.

Q. Did Mr. Tyler have anything to do with that?

A. No.

Q. Did he have anything like that?

A. My remembrance is he hadn't.

Q. Mrs. Reed, the papers with the blue ribbon on them were written in Senator Reed's office, were they not?

A. They were.

Q. And the papers with black ribbon were the papers that Mr. Tyler presented?

A. Yes.

Q. What changes were made on 17-J?

A. Well, they are in regard to vacations, No. 13 was scratched out; do you want me to read this notation?

Q. Yes, 17-I, yes.

A. "Vacations and employees after six months' consecutive employment at regular pay shall be entitled to one [fol. 3246] week's paid vacation, and after two years of such, same shall have two weeks vacation with pay each year."

Q. In whose handwriting is that 17-I?

A. Mine.

Q. Mrs. Reed, how long did Senator and you and myself go over this proposed contract of Mr. Tyler's?

A. Well, the greater part of the day after we had met with Mr. Tyler and the committee in the morning, and we went to Mr. Reed's office and had lunch, that is, we worked a while and then we had lunch, and we kept on going until late in the afternoon, and then we met with Mr. Tyler. I don't remember, but I know it was late in the afternoon, because we didn't get home until very late that evening.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3247] Q. And were these proposed changes then discussed with Mr. Tyler?

A. Very much, yes, each one of them were.

Q. And did Mr. Tyler disagree about certain changes in the language that were proposed?

A. He did.

Q. And finally did we agree on a form of contract that was then written up?

A. Yes, we did.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't remember, Mr. Ingraham. Was the contract prepared that day, and signed, or was it later?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, it was prepared late that afternoon and signed.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, you refer to being at Senator Reed's office and having lunch. Was lunch sent in that day?

A. Yes.

Q. And we continued working on this draft of contract?

A. Yes.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I now offer in evidence Respondent's Exhibit 17-A, B, C, D, E, F, G, I, and J.

Trial Examiner Batten: There is no objection. It will be received.

[fol. 3248] (The documents heretofore marked "Respondent's Exhibits 17-A to J inclusive, Witness Reed," for identification, were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. I think this question has been answered, but I am going to ask it again, Mrs. Reed. Were all the changes that were made on Respondent's Exhibit 17-D and J, — wait a minute — D, E, F and J, made by Mr. Reed?

A. They were all made by Mr. Reed in my presence, in his handwriting, and the dictation on these was all made by Mr. Reed, and corrected.

Q. Who wrote the writing on Respondent's Exhibits A and B, 17-A and B?

A. I did.

Q. Who wrote the writing on Respondent's Exhibit 17-I?

A. I did.

Q. And who dictated Respondent's Exhibit 17-C?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, I have no objection to going over that, but I have a note in which I made a notation after you made the same question on each one of those exhibits.

Mr. Ingraham: This finishes it.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Who did dictate the writing that is on 17-C, G, and H?

A. Mr. Reed.

Q. And the pencil notations that were made were made by whom?

A. By me.

[fol. 3249] Q. No, on the last 17-C, G and H?

A. Pencil notations, by Mr. Reed.

Q. Mrs. Reed, after this, or after the agreement was entered into with the union on May 27th, 1937, what next was done in connection with the working agreement?

A. Well —

Q. (Interrupting) Or wage agreement, I mean.

A. This first contract did not include any provision for wage scales, wages other than a minimum, and so during the following month there were discussions and meetings and thinking about what those scales would be, because they told us this was just an agreement with the union, and they wanted a scale of wages and more detailed contract, which would be worked out a little later.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I recall, Mr. Ingraham, wasn't there introduced in the prior hearing a supplemental contract?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. That is what Mrs. Reed is referring to.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Was there a meeting with Mr. Tyler in connection with that?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was present in addition to Mr. Tyler at those meetings?

A. Well, usually Miss Todd and usually the committee.

Q. Do you recall where most of those meetings were held?

[fol. 3250] A. Well, in Mr. Tyler's office. I know I went over to his office several times.

Q. And have you been requested to go there by the committee? A. I have been.

Q. Mrs. Reed, in connection with this contract, dated May 27th, 1937, and the supplemental contract that was entered into on June 22nd, was the union pushing the making of those contracts?

A. Yes, they were. They wanted to get the contracts made, and get something definite settled about them.

Q. Was there a controversy about what the minimum would be in the supplemental agreement?

A. Yes. I had a minimum of $15 a week for a number of years, and Mr. Tyler and some of his committee wanted an actual minimum of $16.50, and I thought at the time and under the circumstances, what other contracts had as minimums, that that $16.50 was a little high for a bundle boy and beginners, and everybody, and I didn't want to give it. That was one of the last things I did, and I remember Mr. Reed saying, "Go ahead: You have to give up something in these contracts, whenever you make an agreement, and let's get it finished up," and I said, "All right".

Q. Was there considerable work on the various classifications that was contained in this supplemental agreement? A. Yes.

[fol. 3251] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, I will hand you Board's Exhibit 7, and ask you to state if that was a supplemental contract that was entered into between the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Workers' Union?

A. That is the wage agreement.

Q. Mrs. Reed, I notice that it provides for various classifications? A. Yes.

Q. And each classification has a sub-division with minimums? A. Yes.

Q. How much time was spent in arriving at the different classifications as provided for?

A. They were worked on every day after the 27th until the 22nd, when the agreement was signed.

Q. 22nd of what month?

A. June; and in between that time a very great amount of time was spent to get those classifications.

Q. Did you have various people working at the plant on getting the figures that would be necessary for you to have before these classifications would be made?

[fol. 3252] A. Yes.

Q. Then on June 22nd—strike that.

Prior to the time that the contract was actually executed, had these various classifications been taken up and discussed with Mr. Tyler and the union committee?

A. They had.

Q. Do you have any idea how many meetings were held in connection with this contract?

A. Well, I had so many meetings with so many different people making up this contract I couldn't tell you about, there was hardly a day that went by that I didn't have some sort of a meeting with either Miss Todd or with Mr. Tyler, or with the committe, or some of them altogether; sometimes, Miss Todd herself would come up and get notations as the work progressed.

Q. By the way, Mrs. Reed, referring back to the date of the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, which was April 27th, 1937, do you recall the meeting with any group of employees on the morning of the day the Union was formed, or a few days preceding, having a meeting with these employees in your private office?

A. I don't remember of just before the union was formed.

Q. There has been testimony in the record that before the union was formed that a group of employees—

A. (Interrupting) Came in my office?

[fol. 3253] Q. (Continuing) Came in your office?

A. No, there was no group of employees that came up there a few days before the union was formed.

Q. Or on the morning of the day the union was formed?

A. No, there was not.

Q. Did you discuss the formation of the union with any employee of the plant? A. I did not.

Q. Mrs. Reed, is there a check-off agreement with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at the present time?

A. At the present time the dues are, I believe, collected by the company.

Q. Do you know who authorized the company to pay the dues of the individuals to the union?

A. Well, I know that they brought signed cards to us saying the girls had asked to have that, their dues to be paid taken out of their pay just like their half of the insurance, because they said it was so much trouble to pay their dues to the union, to have the change; and so they asked us to do that, to pay that; but the girls themselves signed cards requesting that we do that.

Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Ingraham refused to agree to a check-off system unless the individual employees requested the company to deduct their dues?

A. I know he did and it was not deducted in the first [fol. 3254] place, and there were two reasons we didn't want to do it, so much work and so much bother, and Mr. Ingraham then did not approve of it, and said we had no right to do it unless the particular person asked them to have it done. I think we didn't do it the first few months. That is my remembrance.

Q. Mrs. Reed, what has been the situation with the Donnelly Garment Company, with respect to permitting employees to use the telephone?

A. They have always used the telephone and still do.

Q. Have you made any changes since the union, the Donnelly Workers' Union, was organized, with respect to the use of the telephone? A. No.

Q. What has been the custom of the company with respect to permitting the employees to use the equipment of the company after working hours?

A. Well, we have always been generous along that line. We have never made any rule that there was no equipment to be used, and it has always been understood, so long as they didn't abuse it, they could use anything that would be convenient to them.

Q. What has occurred with respect to permitting employees to use sewing machines?

A. They used our sewing machines for a great number of years, until this wage and hour law has made it so [fol. 3255] important, that you have to have to pay overtime for someone doing some work on their own; we allowed the girls to stay a little while and sometimes they made dresses for their children, and some of them made dresses for themselves.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You can't do that now?

A. No. You see, now, if your card shows a person has worked any longer hours—

Q. They might punch the card out and come back to the machine?

A. My understanding is it is our responsibility to get them out of the building, and I am just saying what I am told is the law on this, and so we make our girls go down into the lobby and wait for their rides now, because the men that have come to check us up have said that if the girls are in the building it is our responsibility.

Naturally we have, or are now in the last year or so, since we have learned what the attitude of the Wage and Hour people is, about it, we have gotten a little tighter about it. We still allow people to use the telephone. If a girl uses a typewriter, a stenographer uses a typewriter to write her own letters, and she does it in working hours, we don't have any system of finding out whether she does, and we never made it a point to forbid her to do it. See, we have grown from a very small business and a very personal basis, and people doing favors back and forth, and I have been closely associated with that business myself, [fol. 3256] and I have found little imposition from any employees, so they have grown up, sort of, with a feeling that it didn't hurt me any for them to use the machines, and I wouldn't mind if they did.

Q. You feel then, the law has made you change?

A. I feel the law has made it so that I have to be sure I won't have to pay over-time.

Q. For making their own dresses? A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, isn't it true the Wage and Hour people advised you that on rest periods the girls—

A. (Interrupting) I would have to pay over-time.

Q. (Continuing) If they had to work over-time, over the eight hours, even if they weren't working, you would have to pay over-time?

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any issue on that particular point?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

A. I am just saying there has been a change made, and we are just a little more careful that people don't stay in the building after hours now.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, what has been the custom in permitting employees to pass notes through the sections?

A. They have always done it.

Q. That has always been true, carrying notes from one [fol. 3257] section to the other by bundle boys?

A. Yes, if the boy was going that way. Nobody ever said that they shouldn't have done it.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union sending notices through the plant by bundle boys, or through the sections?

A. It didn't come to my attention.

Q. Have you paid any attention, or required the employees to stop using, say, a typewriter, after working hours, writing something personal for themselves?

A. No.

Q. If the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union sent notices by a bundle boy, or used the telephone, was that anything different than the employees had been doing for a number of years? A. It was not.

* * * * * * *

Q. Mrs. Reed, what has been the custom with respect to permitting time workers to take off time?

A. Until the Wage and Hour law forced us to put in time clocks, we didn't have time clocks for week workers. We expected them to do their work, and if a girl wanted to have her hair done early in the morning, and she had a little extra work to do after hours, that delayed her, she did it, and it was understood that it was a privilege, and it [fol. 3258] wasn't done so much that it discommoded anybody. If a girl was going to be off a couple of hours in the morning, she would be sure that no one was being discommoded by her absence, and that she wasn't holding up any work that was expected of her, and to take an extra half hour off at lunch or be off half a day was not anything out of the ordinary. As far as I know, no one was ever docked for it, that is the ordinary term.

Q. Mrs. Reed, have the employees been permitted to use the bulletin board for notices?

A. As long as we have had bulletin boards, at least, the Athletic Association and some groups, they have had a little organization in each section, had a little organization of their own, and they would have dinners and meetings at different times, and they used that bulletin board for that.

Q. Was that prior to the time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

A. Yes, as long as we had had bulletin boards, and I don't know how long we had them, about 15 years, I think.

Q. Mrs. Reed, was Rose Todd an employee who had any authority to speak for the management? A. She did not.

[fol. 3259] Q. Do you recall what work she was doing when she was last employed by the company?

A. Yes. She went into the different sections to see if they had sufficient thread and findings to complete their bundles, if there had been any errors made in sending down the proper amount of findings, so that the merchandise could go out promptly. That was her real job. Anything she found they were wanting in the section, she would go back to the notions department or thread department and send it down.

Q. She is not working for the company now, is she?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall her leaving the company 8 or 10 years ago? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall her coming back to work for the company? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall what position she held when she came back? A. Well, she just did odd jobs.

Q. Was she willing to come back and take any kind of work? A. Yes.

Q. Was there work for her in her old job when she came back?

A. No. Someone had been put in her place.

Q. Was she told she would have to take what was there? A. Yes.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What was her old job?

A. She had assisted in making piecework prices.

[fol. 3260] Q. When she was there the first time?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall how long she was gone?

A. I think two or three years. I am not sure.

Q. Was that approximately back in 1932, or—

A. She came back along in 1932 or 1933.

Q. Did she come back at lower wages?

A. Yes, she did.

Q. Do you recall how much lower?

A. She came back at $25.00 a week. I don't recall what she got when she left; something like $40.00, I believe.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, when Rose came back did she have any ability with respect to hiring or firing or disciplining any employees? A. Absolutely none whatever.

Q. Was there anybody over whom she was boss in any way? A. No.

Q. This work you say she did, findings work, did she have assistance in doing that?

A. She did it herself. She went all through the plant, because here and there the work would be held up because the right colored thread didn't come down, or there should have been 100 yards of pleating and maybe only 90 yards came, and the operators and the instructor would be busy, and they would throw it aside, and sometimes whole cuts of [fol. 3261] work would be held up for some small thing, and it wouldn't always be reported promptly, so her job was to go through and see if there was any work piling up that needed something to put it through, and then she would go back and get that or report it to the girl who sent out the findings. She had no one assisting her. She was in no place of responsibility, except to see that these trimmings and findings would be sent down to the section so that the work could go on through.

Trial Examiner Batten: Who was her boss, Mrs. Reed?

A. Mr. Baty had charge of the factory, so she was under Mr. Baty.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did you ever discuss with Rose Todd the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever have any discussion with Miss Todd with reference to the Loyalty League?

A. I did not.

Q. What position did Hobart Atherton hold with the company in 1937?

A. He was in the maintenance department.

Q. What is that department?

A. Well, it is the maintenance department. They take care of the machinery and repair it, and if there are cutting tables to be cleaned or scraped or put in order, the maintenance department has that.

[fol. 3262] Q. Did he have any authority to speak for the management in connection with anything?

A. He did not. He was actually a worker in the department, doing the work himself, part of it; there were other workers in the department.

Q. Was he a boss in the department? A. He was not.

Q. Did you ever suggest or request Mr. Atherton to form or to become a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever ask him to influence any employees to join that union? A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever suggest or ask that he influence any employee against joining the I. L. G. W. U.? A. I did not.

Q. Mrs. Reed, after you had taken over the management of the business, who was in charge of the production end of the business?

. . . . . .

A. Mrs. Reeves had been my general assistant and eventually took over practically the complete management [fol. 3263] of the plant. She also was assisting me with the merchandising, and when I took over the complete management of the business in 1932, Mrs. Reeves more of the responsibility of the merchandising fell on her.

Q. What do you mean by "merchandising," Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, I mean by "merchandising"—it isn't only buying merchandise. As a matter of fact, she doesn't do so much buying. You plan and see that you have enough merchandise to take care of your orders, and not too much. We have a New York office where the real purchasing is done.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you mean planning?

A. No. The purchasing is done in New York,—

Q. I mean, Mrs. Reeves.

A. Yes, it would be planning of the merchandising and how much we need.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Will you briefly describe the different departments? You have mentioned planning. What did the planning consist of?

A. I don't know what you mean, Mr. Ingraham.

Q. Is there a designing department? A. Oh, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are speaking of now, or as of that time?

Mr. Ingraham: As of that time.

The Witness: As of what time?

[fol. 3264] Mr. Ingraham: When Mrs. Reeves was in charge of production and merchandising both.

A. Well, the business is run with a designing department, and the planning department, as far as the planning of the merchandise, the production of the merchandise—

Q. Let me put it this way, Mrs. Reed: What are the various steps that take place in making a dress from the raw material, up to the finished garment?

A. The merchandise is bought in the New York office and is selected after consultation with the head designer and myself, when I was available, and the head of the New York Office, and also Mrs. Reeves, and then the model is designed in the designing department and the patterns are made. One perfect pattern, supposedly— A perfect pattern is made, size 14, from which the samples are made.

Then, we have a production planning department that takes the garment and works out the best way of producing that in volume, down to the detail of just what operation comes first, and the sequence of the operations, and very often notes of how to do that operation.

Then, in the pattern department the perfect pattern is made for a size 14, from which the samples are made. Then, that pattern is made as a basis to grade up to larger sizes, some of them 44, and some of them down to size 10. Those patterns are made, they are marked in, and the [fol. 3265] perforations, we call it, is made, and that goes to the cutting department.

Now, with Mrs. Reeves, in the merchandising department, the orders are assembled, and each day a report comes as to what particular models are selling, and how many.

We do not cut just the orders. We often start production even before our men go on the road. So, by consultation we decide on which numbers we are going to sell enough quantity of to start production on. That work was originally done by myself, and Mrs. Reeves assisted me in it.

The cutting cards then go from this merchandise planning department—Mrs. Reeve's department—the cutting cards go to the cutting department, showing how many dozens they want cut of a certain number, and of what sizes and what colors, and then that merchandise is divided and bundled right in the cutting department, at least on the same floor. Then it is taken by what we call bundle boys, in big baskets, to the sewing floors.

Q. Are directions sent along, Mrs. Reed, for sewing?

A. From the planning department—that is run in connection with the designing and pattern department, on the same floor—the complete directions are sent to the sewing department, and a factory sample of the garment. These directions are typewritten and sent to the instructor for the models she is going to make in her section.

Q. Do those instructions tell the operator just how the [fol. 3266] garment is to be made?

A. Yes. The instructions have typewritten what is in an operation. Perhaps the pockets are to be made first, and they will come in separate bundles; and perhaps the sleeves will be in separate bundles, because they have some special work on them. This instruction to the instructor is very definite and very complete, as to just how the garment is to be put together, telling her how is the best way to put it together. We have worked that out before it goes to the factory.

Then, if there is anything new, anything that is not the same thing the girl has done before, the instructor sits down at the machine and she sews a few of whatever the operation is. She sews that, for the girls to see how it is done. Of course, there are some operations that the instructor does not sit down and sew, because it is the same thing on every garment—a side seam, for instance; practically every garment that goes through has the same kind of seams in it. Or maybe hemming; if it is the same kind of a hem you use on 99 percent of the garments, the instructor does not sit down and show the operator how to hem, she knows how to do that herself. But on all of the new points on the garment, the instructor sits at the machine and shows the operator how to do it.

Q. When Mrs. Reeves took charge of the factory, how long did she continue in that position?

A. Well, until 1935.

[fol. 3267] Q. What was the reason then for making a change?

A. Well, by 1935 our business had grown and my responsibilities had grown in managing the business, and I felt that Mrs. Reeves's entire time should be given to the merchandising, so I turned over to Mr. Baty the management of the plant—

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. By "the plant," you mean the manufacturing and production? A. Yes.

Q. Does that include the maintenance work also, or—

A. Yes, that included, in a general way, the maintenance.

Q. I mean, it included everything in the so-called plant; is that what you mean? A. Yes.

Q. Where there was any manufacturing done, or shipping—

A. No, not shipping. The shipping is run from the office.

Q. Separately?

A. Yes. The shipping is always managed from the office.

[fol. 3268] Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Reed, when Mr. Baty became production manager, were any changes made in the authority given instructors?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. What was the reason?

[fol. 3269] A. I had sat through all of the testimony in the N. R. A., and if was charged time and again that the instructors had favorites and discriminated, and it occurred to me that if I would put the authority in one person who would not be in such close contact with the operators, it would be better. This was the first time in the history of my business that I had anyone in charge of the plant that didn't have numerous other jobs to do—other responsibilities. Originally, I had been in charge of my plant myself. I had done all of my own buying, designing, and some selling, and a great many other things, and, naturally, only had limited time to spend in the plant. Then, when Mrs. Reeves assisted me and eventually took over the production management, she was in the same position. She had to manage the plant, but she also had this merchandising to do. So when I thought she had too much to do I gave her the merchandising and gave Mr. Baty the plant to run, with nothing else to do, and I expected him to spend his time in the plant. He had already been in there as Mrs. Reeves's assistant for some time. We had a very good system of cards—of keeping records of the operators, their work, and I felt very sure that he could take that over, and we would relieve the instructors of responsibility they had had of settling differences and acting on their own in anything that came up with the operators that they had had in the past. One reason was, Mrs. Reeves didn't have time to settle them herself. And they [fol. 3270] had, naturally, taken on a certain amount of authority, both with my running the plant and Mrs. Reeves's running the plant.

When I talked with Mr. Baty about running it, we discussed these charges that had been made in the N. R. A. about the instructors not being fair to this one and that one, and I felt he could take it over. And as far as the work was concerned, the instructor would still sit down and show a girl how to do her operation, if she needed to. She would still know what kind of work she would give to the different operators. As far as putting the work through, it seemed that that would be a very possible thing to do.

So, when I put Mr. Baty in there, whether it was a wise thing or the right thing, I did give him the whole authority and expected him to take care of any differences that came up about the instructors, and to relieve the instructors of the authority that had caused the discussion in the N. R. A. case.

Q. Mrs. Reed, what authority did an instructor have when Elizabeth Reeves was in charge of the plant?

A. I think Mrs. Reeves consulted with— I think an instructor would say whether or not, if work was low, a girl would be laid off, or whether she would be transferred to another section.

Q. Was she consulted in connection with discharging? [fol. 3271] A. Yes, she was. She was consulted at that time.

Q. Mrs. Reed, was that authority taken away when Mr. Baty was put in charge of the plant?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. How many employees were there in the factory that were under Mr. Baty when he first went in?

A. Well, when he took that over in July—I think he took it over in July, 1935—he had approximately 500 people, maybe a few more.

Q. Were some of those people time-workers?

A. Yes, some of them were time-workers, but the majority of them were pieceworkers.

Q. Is there a substantial number of people that do time-work and assist the pieceworkers?

A. In our plant we have almost as many time-workers as we have pieceworkers. The way we achieve maximum production on style items in dresses is by a great deal of service work being done, a great deal of planning—everything is ready for the operator when she gets it; it is cut properly, and everything is ready. So we only have about half of our operating force.

Q. What did an instructor do after Mr. Baty took over the plant?

A. Well, as far as turning her work out, she still did her instructing. She showed a girl how to do the work. [fol. 3272] She gave the work out to the operator, but when there was any difference of opinion—any operator that wasn't willing to do just what she was told by the instructor, she would wait until Mr. Baty came to settle it, or else she would let the girl pick out what kind of work she did want to do.

Q. Did the instructor have any authority over the girls, to give them orders?

A. No. Mr. Baty took that himself.

Q. Did the instructor under Mr. Baty have anything to do with the hiring, the disciplining, or the discharging of operators?

A. No, nothing whatever.

Q. Did the instructors have any authority to represent or speak for the management in any way?

A. No.

Q. Mrs. Reed, when Mr. Baty went in, how many floors in the building were used for sewing?

A. I believe all of the sewing was done on two floors, perhaps a little on a third floor. When he first went in all of the sewing was done on two floors.

Q. Did the business increase after Mr. Baty went in?

A. Yes. We had an increase in 1936 over 1935 of something like $800,000, and it kept increasing right along, and of course we put on more employees. We put the sewing on more different floors, and later we took over [fol. 3273] more of the building, until we had the entire 10 floors and the basement. We spread out the sewing very much, until the sewing was done—in 1940 the sewing was being done on five different floors.

[fol. 3274] Q. Did the company put in more sewing machines?

A. Yes.

Q. Were more employees hired to do something?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that result in requiring a change to be made in Mr. Baty's duties?

A. Yes. The plan we had for Mr. Baty was more or less to settle every little dispute or settle everything that came up with the operators. In settling most of them, it resulted in the fact that we couldn't get the work in very good shape. Of course, the volume of business and the number of floors increased, and it was a great deal more than when he first took it over, than we had in 1940; when I made a check-up on it we had as manufacturing employees over 300 more.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. 300 more than when?

A. Than when Mr. Baty took over the plant; and those 300 more would naturally be new employees, and would require more supervision than one even who had been there a great many years, and besides that, in a women's organization, there is always quite a little turn-over in a natural way. There were probably another hundred new employees in that time.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, what did you do in 1940, with reference to a change?

A. I had a meeting with the instructors; I first had a discussion with Mr. Baty, because we were having a great [fol. 3275] many complaints from our trade that our merchandise was not being delivered promptly. It was delivered in small amounts, where they didn't even get enough in at once to advertise it, and they were very dissatisfied; and so I had a meeting with the instructors, and before that I had talked to Mr. Baty and he said that the thing had simply gotten to such a point that he couldn't handle it this way, the way I had wanted him to do it. Now, I must explain that during the — practically the entire year of 1939, I was away from my business, ill, most of the time very ill. I had two operations, and I think that at the time in that year, I spent at the plant only a few days at a time, and those few days I worked with my designing department on our models, on the designing, and so I had gotten out of touch with the plant, and the main thing that came to me in 1940 was the complaint about the work not going out. So Mr. Baty simply said it had gotten too big to handle, with all these new floors, and he had to be all over the floors, and when he took this over, a head cutter that had completely ran his cutting department and nobody ever bothered about it, in the meantime that man had died and we had to have an assistant in there that was not experienced and didn't get along with his cutters. That department required some of his time, and he said that the instructors were all discouraged, and they didn't seem to be able to get their work through. I had a meeting then, in my office, of the [fol. 3276] instructors, and I read to them some of the data that had been furnished me by Mr. Bachofer, who has charge of my accounts, and showing where there were certain models that had been in the section for five weeks before they were cut, and some that had been in four weeks. I showed that to these instructors, and I said, "You know, we won't have any trade, people don't come from the east and from the west to buy my goods because they like me. We have to fill these orders promptly, and better, or we can't continue." The reason they gave, one particularly spoke up and said, "Well, Mrs. Reed, you want to hold us to a responsibility, and we no longer have any authority. The girls don't think they have to do anything we tell them to do, and perhaps there will be only one or two girls in a section that will not be willing to do the work that we assign to them to do. That upsets the entire section, and we have work piled up here, and it comes to a certain operation, the girl that ought to do that operation, she won't do it; then I have to call Mr. Baty, or she will say, 'I will see if Mr. Baty says I have to do that,' and Mr. Baty may be any place in the building. If I have to wait for him, I usually end up by letting her go and giving her something else to do. There is work to come through, and perhaps putting someone to do that work that is a little more agreeable, and perhaps can't do it nearly so well, or so much of it; so we can't run our section if we don't [fol. 3277] have the authority to say, 'Now, this work is here, and this is what you have got to get out and get through,' and the person that we think ought to do it should do it."

Well, after all, I was running the business. I might be criticized, but I had to run the business, and I had to get my work out, so I said, "Well, you simply have the authority you need to get this work through," and then someone suggested whether they could have that authority and belong to that union, and I said, "That is between you and the union, but I know that you have got to get your work out, or we simply won't have any trade," and that was in,

I think, in December, 1940. I didn't hear any complaints from the operators, and I think they liked it better. There was less confusion, apparently; I know that I got better work and quicker work, and more of it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. That has been in operation since then?

A. Since December, 1940.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3282] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, the Board in its decision found that certain employees that were members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were supervisory employees. I want to inquire about some of these people.

Will you state what the position was that Mrs. Lena Tyhurst held in 1937?

A. Mrs. Tyhurst was general examiner; that is, she went through the plant and had a general job to do, seeing that the quality of work was up to standard.

Q. Did Mrs. Tyhurst have any authority to represent the management?

[fol. 3283] A. Mrs. Tyhurst had no authority to represent the management.

Q. She had a specific job to do?

A. She had a specific job to do, herself.

Q. Did she have any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge any employee?

A. She did not.

Q. Mrs. Reed, will you state what the position of Marvin Price was in 1937?

A. His work was maintenance—what we call the maintenance man.

Q. What did he do?

A. Well, he helped to keep the machinery in good shape. If we gave a fashion show, he would help to put up the runways, and generally keep the equipment in good shape.

Q. Did he look after any maintenance of the building that was necessary?

A. Yes, what the building company didn't do. We have certain service from the building company.

Q. Did he have any authority to represent the management?

A. None whatever.

Q. Did he have any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge employees?

A. He did not.

Q. Was he head of any department?

A. He was not.

[fol. 3284] Q. Mrs. Reed, will you describe the position occupied by Mrs. Martha Gray?

A. We have a little outlet store where, I think I stated yesterday, we originally disposed of our remnants and odd buttons and trimmings to our own employees, and as the business grew and there was a larger amount of them, we set aside a room for that. Still the employees were able to buy all of them, and eventually the business grew to such an extent that the leftovers became such a volume that I opened a little shop on the first floor to which we admitted the public as well.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. About when was that, Mrs. Reed?

A. When we took over the full building, about 1939. When we eventually opened the shop to the public it was in 1939.

I am getting ahead of my story, but this little shop, the purpose of it was to dispose of remnants and odds and ends. In that we had several women doing the work, and Mrs. Gray was one of these women who disposed of the articles put in there. She did the selling herself, as well as the others. The merchandise that came into the outlet store was all marked at the price at which it was to be sold.

The other employees that did the selling were employed —Mrs. Gray had nothing to say about who was employed, what wages were paid, how many people she had, or anything about it. She was simply there as one of the women who waited on trade and helped to sell the merchandise.

[fol. 3285] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Mrs. Gray have any authority to represent or speak for the management?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Did the company ever hold Mrs. Gray out as a representative of the company?

A. They did not.

Q. Did Mrs. Gray have any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge any employee?

A. She did not.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a minute. What was that question, did the company ever hold Mrs. Gray out—as what?

Mr. Ingraham: As a representative of the company.

The Witness: Now, Mr. Batten, if you will allow me, I would like to explain about Mrs. Gray and that little store and what happened, and it will cover, really, a number of other people there.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, Mrs. Reed, that you follow Mr. Ingraham's line of questioning, rather than ask my consent. I have no objection, when you are through, if you want to make a statement, to your making the statement.

The Witness: When I read the findings I felt that there was quite a misunderstanding of the way my business was run, by the people who made the findings. There are so many things in that, and, really, the way the business is run is certainly misunderstood.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3286] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, will you explain the growth of the store and what changes, if any, were made in the store?

A. As I said yesterday, practically the entire year of 1939 I was away from the business because of illness. In the early part of 1940 I pretty much got back into my old management, and I found that our expenses had increased a great deal, and our trade wasn't very well satisfied; our deliveries were not good, and the management needed a great deal of consideration.

Mr. Bachofer at that time had taken entire charge of all of the records and cost accounting and accounts, and had been getting up data for me so that I could get myself back into the business and understand what was going on. He very strongly recommended a budget system. In fact, he had it all worked out for my approval, and went over with me the expenses—for instance, in this store, how much it cost us to sell our merchandise, and in all of the departments he showed me how much more it was costing than it should, and how the expense had crept up because he felt that there was not enough personal management and personal responsibility.

[fol. 3287] So, after some discussion and planning, and going over this budget, I consented to have the budget system put in our place.

Now, I had been in business for 23 years and I had never had a buget system. Of course, the business had grown very gradually, and I had felt I could take care of the expenditures and watch them, they hadn't gotten away from me. But that year, 1939, was the first time I was really out of my plant entirely since I had started it.

So I adopted that budget system. I started with the store, because it was the least of the departments. It was merchandise we had to dispose of and didn't expect to make any money on.

Mr. Bachofer felt if Mrs. Gray knew how much it cost to sell the goods, and if she would spend less time personally selling and a little more time in managing the people in there, that she could do a very much better job than by just everybody down there selling, with no real head in the store. So he took up with her, as he did with these other departments—showed them how much money they had spent and asked them to consider and see if they couldn't do a better job and take the responsibility that we would give them, and we would get better results and it would be very much better all around.

In that particular instance, I am informed by Mr. Bachofer, they disposed of more merchandise, with fewer people, after they had that system.

[fol. 3288] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Do you recall about when it was that Mr. Bachofer recommended to you that a change be made?

A. I very well recall. We complete our year October 31st, and it was after the figures were all in in November, 1940, that he brought this up with me. I think we put it into effect something like sometime in December, 1940, perhaps; I don't remember the exact week. It was either November or December of 1940.

Q. At that time did you then give Mrs. Gray, or authorize her, that she had authority that she had not had before?

A. We did instruct her to spend the time necessary in planning the work that these other women that were in the store — what work they did, and to try to make an attempt to put some management into the place.

Q. Did Mr. Bachofer recommend at that time changes be made in other departments?

A. He did.

Q. What departments and what changes?

A. Well, we put this same budget system all through our plant. In our advertising and promotion department, and I remember very well, in the mechanical department, when he showed me where the facts were that no one felt the responsibility about parts, and the expense of this mechanical department, it made the company expense; it kept going up, and he didn't feel we were getting the results that we should have; so we put in Mr. Jeters, in [fol. 3289] charge of that. He was told how much his expenses had been, and it was discussed with him, what he could do about reducing those expenses, and increasing the efficiency of the department.

Q. What changes were made — strike that.

Prior to this time, with Mr. Jeters, did he have any authority to represent the management?

A. He had no authority whatever.

Q. And had the company, at any time, to your knowledge, held Mr. Jeters out as a representative of the company?

A. We had not.

Q. Mr. Jeters, did he have any authority to hire, discipline and discharge any employees?

A. No.

Q. Now, at this time, what authority was given Mr. Jeters?

A. Well, he was held responsible for the expenses of his department, which would involve the quality and the work that the men did, and whether they kept on the job, and responsibility for other people besides himself, and anything that came into his department.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, did Mr. Jeters, since this time, have any authority to hire or discharge employees?

A. No. We don't give our department heads authority to discharge or employ people.

[fol. 3290] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. If he wanted to discipline some person, would he have authority to do that?

A. He would have to recommend that perhaps we couldn't use someone.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. To whom would he recommend it?

A. To Mr. Batt particularly, or if I was there he might come to me.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, was there any change in the cutting department?

A. Yes, the same thing was really put into effect in the cutting department. We had a man in the cutting department when Mrs. Reeves was in charge of the plant, that had been there so many years, and was so well liked by his men, and he was such an efficient man, generally that was one department we all forgot. We didn't have anything really — there was practically no management outside of Herb Fountain, what he thought of.

Q. What position did he occupy, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, I would say he was head cutter.

Q. Did he have any authority to hire, discipline or discharge employees?

A. No, he didn't.

Q. Was he held by the management as a representative with authority to speak for its management?

[fol. 3291] A. No.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, he is the person in November or December you made responsible for the department?

A. No, he died and another man took his place, Mr. Batten.

Q. Who, in November or December, took charge of the department?

A. Ted Scoles was put in charge of the cutting department.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, did Mr. Scoles, after he was put in charge of the cutting department, have any authority to speak for the management?

A. He had — the only authority he had was, he had authority to run his department. He had responsibility to run his department, and he had to see that these men did their work, and the cutting department had gotten into a rather — gotten to be a rather expensive department.

Q. When you say he had responsibility, do you mean responsibility to get the work out?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he have any authority to hire or discipline or discharge employees?

A. No, he did not. He could recommend, now, after we put in the budget system, we really tried to hold one person responsible for the expenses of the department, and for the efficient running of the department. There was a general complaint [illegible]t Mr. Baty had taken charge of everything, and the people that were heading the departments had no authority and they couldn't get their [fol. 3292] people to pay any attention to them, and it hurt their getting the work through, and it was a general complaint along that line, and that was one of them, in the cutting department as well as the others.

Q. Mrs. Reed, was any change made in the pattern department?

A. Yes, the same thing held true there. Mrs. Strickland had been making what we call the correct pattern, we make one correct pattern, size 14, and for a number of years that has been Mrs. Strickland's particular job, to make this one correct pattern, and it took practically all of her time to do that. She would make that pattern, and of course it would be shown, the garment would be shown to either Mrs. Spilsbury, my head designer, or myself, or both of us, and she spent almost her entire time on these correct patterns.

Then we had other people who would make the patterns, do the grading, we called it; and sometimes we would bring cutters up from the cutting department in the heavy season, and we needed a great deal of it done, and they take this size 14 pattern, and we had a regular plan that we would make larger sizes or make the smaller sizes, but that size 14 pattern was made entirely by Mrs. Strickland, and it took practically all of her time.

Q. Mrs. Strickland, prior to this change in 1940, had charge of the pattern making?

A. She did not.

[fol. 3293], Q. Did she have any authority to represent the management?

A. She had no authority to represent the management. I never discussed with her the wages paid to anyone in the department, or whether they got a raise, or anything about the management of the department.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Mrs. Strickland who should be employed in that department? A. I did not.

Q. After this change was made in 1940, what responsibility was placed upon Mrs. Strickland?

A. Well, Mr. Bachofer had reports made from her department showing how long it took to make patterns and how long it took to have them graded, and our patterns were not coming through as quickly as we thought they should, or as they should have come through, to keep work going in the plant, and to get our orders out promptly, and so Mr. Bachofer went over with Mrs. Strickland, not only the expense of making the patterns but the fact that the delay in getting those patterns into the plant kept our operators from having work to do, and kept us from filling our orders promptly and made us have a lot of close-outs, and particularly dissatisfied our customers.

Now, we told, and Mr. Bachofer told her that we wanted her to spend less time in making these size 14 perfect patterns and more time in managing the work, and helping the other girls to turn the work out more quickly; and so [fol. 3294] we made it so that Mrs. Strickland only made the very most difficult size 14 patterns, and had other people also make the perfect size 14 patterns.

Q. Mrs. Reed, was—strike that.

Did Pauline Hartman, prior to this change in 1940, have any authority to speak for the management?

A. She did not.

Q. Where did she work, Mrs. Reed?

A. In the accounting department.

Q. Did she, prior to this change, have any authority over any other employees? A. She did not.

Q. Did she have any authority to hire, discipline or discharge any employees? A. She did not.

Q. After this change was made, was any new responsibility placed upon Mrs. Hartman?

A. Yes. Mr. Bachofer gave her a certain group of workers to supervise, and see that the work got out. We got to a point in our office, I think we had 140 people doing office work, and that is a very high figure, and Mr. Bachofer divided the responsibility among a number of several people there to see that we should get our work out with fewer people.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What department did she have?

A. It is the accounting or bookkeeping, all of that work [fol. 3295] to me is bookkeeping; it is something about the books, probably the pay roll. It is something about office work; I don't know the detailed part that she does there.

Q. Mrs. Reed, did Harlan Justice, prior to this time when the change was made, have any authority to represent the management? A. He did not.

Q. Did he have any authority over any other employees? A. No.

Q. Did he have any authority to hire, discipline or discharge employees? A. No.

Q. After this change was made, what did he do?

A. Well, he was in charge with the—

Q. Tabulating?

A. Yes, tabulating department. I couldn't think of the term they used for those machines. We have a great many of these automatic machines that assemble our orders and do a lot of our accounting work, and we formerly had that tabulating department merely to assemble our orders, and it was rather a simple thing for just everyone to do; and when we got into the better managing of the office, we put more work into that tabulating department.

I know that we put some of our accounting to be done in that tabulating department, and it put a great deal more [fol. 3296] work and a much larger amount of management into it. Also, those machines were very expensive, and we wanted to make more use of the number of machines we had; so when Mr. Bachofer and I both thought that if we had someone spending some time planning and thinking about that, the person who was right in the department, that they would be able to do a better job than the whole department answering to one man.

Q. What did you do then, after this change was made?

A. I don't understand what you mean.

Q. What responsibilities were given to Mr. Justice?

A. Well, he took charge of that, assigned the work, and spent some of his time planning and thinking about the work and what should be done.

Q. Has he any authority now to hire, discipline or discharge employees?

A. He does not hire or discharge employees. He can recommend people for raises and he can, on the other hand—it is his responsibility, if he has a person in the place, that isn't doing a good job, to report them. Formerly, I think, he thought that if they didn't, it wasn't any of his business.

Q. Who would he report them to? A. Mr. Bachofer.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, formerly, you think, he thought—do you know what he thought formerly?

A. I know what the actual situation was.

[fol. 3297] Q. Mrs. Reed, I am not asking you what you thought.

A. I am just being polite, Mr. Batten.

Q. I am simply asking you if you know what he thought before.

A. I know the result, I know what the result was.

Q. My question is still, do you know what he thought? Did he ever tell you what he thought? A. Yes.

Q. Then that is the answer. A. All right.

Mr. Ingraham: What did he tell you, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, no one had ever told him that it was his responsibility to see that other people in the department did their work and did it well and promptly, and didn't loaf on the job. I want to say, when I make that statement I have to say this, that I ran a business, personalized business, and I don't expect them to loaf.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question Mr. Ingraham asked you was, what did he tell you?

A. That is what he did tell me. I don't like to have the idea when we are discussing loafing on the job,—I didn't expect people to loaf on the job, and when I think about the business myself, I did run it for a great many years without supervisors in it, and I was always surprised when anybody said anybody loafed on the job. I feel very strongly about that.

[fol. 3298] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, prior to the time that this change was made, had you felt that it was unnecessary to place authority in various depar ments, and create what you might call supervisors or bosses in those departments?

A. I didn't think it was necessary, I hadn't thought it was.

Q. And have you run the business without having bosses, in these various departments? A. I did.

Q. And it was a successful business? A. Yes.

Q. Mrs. Reed, what department is Helen Houser in?

A. She is in the merchandising department.

Q. Is the merchandising department—does it include the planning department?

A. The planning for—the cutting part of the planning.

Q. Well, what do you know—what work did Helen Houser do?

A. In that department, what we call the merchandising department, the orders, or the tabulating department turned over to the merchandising department the list of the sales in sizes, and colors, and quantities; and while we did do a certain amount of manufacturing ahead of any orders, before our salesmen go on the road, after the orders begin to come in, that planning that cutting then is done according to the orders, and that is the department that Mrs. Houser is in, and she has pretty much charge of that part of it.

[fol. 3299] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Something was said, Mrs. Reed, about a planning department. Do you have an over-all planning department, and this is part of that?

A. No. We plan how the garments are to be made and how they go through the plant. The production planning is done on the ninth floor, in a different department. This is the department Mrs. Reeves heads, where the merchandising is done, and the merchandise planning is done.

Of course, all of those departments interlace, to a certain extent, but Miss Houser does not plan how a garment is to be made; she plans as to merchandise.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You mean, getting the orders filled?

A. Yes. Having the proper merchandise cut so that it will be made and ready to fill the order—so that the orders will be ready to be filled.

Q. Now, prior to the change that you mentioned, did Miss Houser have any authority to speak for the management? A. No.

Q. Did she have any authority over any other employees? A. No.

Q. Did she have any authority to hire or recommend someone be hired, or disciplined, or discharge employees?

A. No, she simply had responsibility for her own work.

Q. After this change was made, what responsibility was given to Miss Houser?

[fol. 3300] A. She has responsibility for all of the work that is done in her particular line. She has other people that assist her in doing it, and she is responsble for the whole amount of work going through, and for the efficiency of the people that are assisting her in doing that work. Before that, she was simply one of the workers, and if the work didn't go through properly it wasn't her business to say anything about it. She simply did her own work, and if the girl beside her wasn't doing her work, it was Mrs. Reeves's job to [redacted] that she did it.

I think that is the best way I can explain it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do I understand Miss Houser is now responsible to Mrs. Reeves?

A. She heads up to Mrs. Reeves, yes.

Q. Then, Mrs. Reeves has several sections or departments; is that it?

A. She has her work divided in several sections, yes.

Q. And this Miss Houser is one of the persons in charge of activities, under Mrs. Reeves; is that right? A. Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, what is the work of Betty Belter?

A. She has one of the activities in Mrs. Reeves's department. Just exactly the work she does, I don't know.

Q. Is it in notions?

[fol. 3301] A. Yes, it is. I remember now that it is.

Q. Did she, prior to the time this change was made, have any authority over any other employees?

A. She did not.

Q. Did she have any authority to speak for the management?

A. No.

Q. What is the notions department?

A. Well, it is the thread, snaps, hooks and eyes—all of the little things, extra things, that go into a dress besides the material.

Q. Did Miss Belter ever have any authority prior to the time this change was made to discipline any employees?

A. No.

Q. Has she ever had, up to the present time, authority to hire or discharge employees?

A. No.

Q. Has she had any authority to speak for the management?

A. No.

Q. After the change was made, what responsibility was placed on Miss Belter?

A. The same as in these other groups. We have a business, and one person does a certain job, and it grows, and then you get two people to do that. It grows some more, and you get three or four people. But you always have one— At the time this one person had the job heading up, they didn't have so many people under them, so they could see pretty much what these different people did. But then, when you get several in the same department, you may have two or three good workers, and you may have one or two that probably are not very competent, maybe some of them just are not very industrious, and one worker doesn't tell on another.

[fol. 3302]

If this one worker that has no responsibility of getting that work out is just one of a dozen, or six or eight, that are doing the work, and then they run and tell the boss that so-and-so isn't doing their work, that's something one doesn't expect, and they don't do it. But if that one person has eight or nine people whose responsibility it is to turn out a certain amount of work and they have one or two in the place who are not cooperating, are not efficient, or can't, for any reason, do the work, if they report that to the head of the department, the top person in the department, no one thinks of that as being informing or telling. That is a part of their job, and it is recognized as a part of their job, and they take that responsibility, and very often there is no telling to be done, because if a group knows that this person has the responsibility of that small number of people getting that work out, it usually goes along without any trouble.

Q. Mrs. Reed, who is head of the designing department?

A. Miss Buelah Spilsbury.

Q. Prior to the time this change was made did Hilda Fitzgerald work in that department?

[fol. 3303]

A. Yes.

Q. What was her work?

A. She was a designer.

Q. Did she have any authority to speak for or represent the management?

A. None whatever.

Q. Did she have any authority over any other designers?

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Did she have any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge any other designer?

A. She had nothing to do with that.

Q. Since the change was made what position does Mrs. Fitzgerald occupy?

A. Mrs. Fitzgerald is still a designer. She is now, part of the time, in New York. Mrs. Fitzgerald is a professional woman, a designer, and, really, she has been given more authority to assist Mrs. Spilsbury. She is in New York part of the time, and she does assist Mrs. Spilsbury.

Q. When she is in Kansas City?

A. Yes.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Was her responsibility or authority changed any as a result of this reorganization?

I think that was your question, was it not, Mr. Ingraham?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

[Vol. 3304] A. Not to the extent that some of the others were.

Q. To what extent, if any, Mrs. Reed?

A. She has been made an assistant to Mrs. Spilsbury.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Has she any authority at the present time to discharge, discipline, or hire any employees?

A. No, she hasn't.

Q. In what department does Fred Brown work?

A. In the cutting department.

Q. What is Fred Brown's present position?

A. I would say he is head cutter.

Q. When did he become head cutter?

A. Sometime last fall.

Q. Has he any authority to speak for the management?

A. No, not any more than that he does have the authority—he has the responsibility to see that the men his department do their work and do it efficiently and promptly and well.

Q. Does he have any authority to hire or discharge employees?

A. Our heads of departments do not hire or discharge people. He can recommend people for raises, in that he has the definite responsibility of the expense and getting the work out of the department. He naturally would have the authority to discuss who is in his department and recommend men for an increase in wages, or say that there [fol. 3305] was someone there who wasn't doing his work properly.

Q. Prior to the time he became head cutter, did he have any authority to represent the management in any way?

A. None whatever.

Q. What was his job?

A. Cutter.

Q. Did he have any authority to employ, discipline, or discharge employees?

A. He did not.

Q. Did he have any authority over any employees?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you going to start with some other individual now?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, we will recess for 10 minutes.

(Thereupon a 10-minute recess was taken.)

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, what work does Mrs. Bogart do?

A. She is in the dividing department.

Q. In 1937, did Mrs. Bogart have any authority to speak for the management?

A. She did not.

Q. Has she ever had any authority to speak for the management?

[fol. 3306] A. No.

Q. Has Mrs. Bogart any authority to hire or discharge employees?

Trial Examiner Batten: I assume the last two questions are all inclusive of that?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. I understood Mrs. Reed to testify she was an instructor, or— What was her position?

The Witness: She was in the dividing department. I suppose you would call it instructor in the dividing department.

Trial Examiner Batten: I just didn't want any mistake about your last two questions, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, that is correct.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, when Herbert Mutchler worked at the Donnelly Garment Company, did he have any authority to represent the management?

A. He did not.

Q. Did he have any authority over other employees?

A. He did not.

Q. Did he have any authority to hire, discipline, or discharge employees?

A. No, he did not.

Q. What did he do?

A. Well, he went through the plant checking garments, as they went through, to help have the work go through [fol. 3367] promptly, and to see that there was nothing missing in bundles, and so forth. He did some clerical work.

Q. Has there been any change made with respect to other employees, so that they have been given any authority to speak for the management, or to hire, discipline, or discharge other employees, other than those you have mentioned?

A. Outside of what I call my real executives, no one has any authority to discharge or employ people in our place.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think Mrs. Reed testified yesterady that the instructors in this reorganization— You are including those within the specifically named persons?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

The Witness: I didn't testify they had authority to employ and discharge.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I didn't state, Mrs. Reed, what you testified about. I simply want it understood that they are included in this reorganization plan you discussed.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Reed, in 1937 was Mrs. Nichols in charge of setting piecework rates?

A. Yes. She set them.

Q. Were those rates subject to review?

A. Those rates—in the first place, they were based on rates that had been set after years of experience in the plant, and her rates were all made on this basis rate—they [fol. 3308] were all based on that.

You said, were they subject to review? Any piecework we have is subject to review by every operator in the place, every operator that works on it.

Q. Did Mrs. Nichols consult with other people?

A. Yes, she did consult with other people. She consulted with the instructor. She consulted sometimes with the piecework operators; she would call them up if there was some new change she wasn't absolutely sure about, that we hadn't been making over and over again, on which there was an accepted piecework rate.

After— What time are you talking about?

Q. 1937.

A. Well, after the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, the piece rates were all turned over to Miss Todd to check and see whether they were all right, and she O. K.'d those before they were put in in the factory.

Q. Mrs. Reed, would you briefly explain the method used in setting piecework prices, and state how long you would use that method?

A. Well, over a period of years we arrived at a basic rate on a great many operations.

For a number of years, Mr. Batten, I was in the plant myself, and I had time taken, and I was very intimately associated with the operators who were doing the work; I [fol. 3309] could watch their working. And I sometimes would get very skilled operators who could do the work very fast, and I learned a great deal from them. By certain mutual consent we set up a standard based on the fact that an ordinarily good operator could make $25.00 a week, and that these piece rates would be based on that figure. So when I put new work in the plant, from my experience I would put a price on it that would make this $25.00 a week. I had a number of operators that, under ordinary circumstances, would make $25.00 every week. Under certain little better circumstances they made more, and under other circumstances they might make a little less, but it was generally understood they could make $25.00 a week on anything that was priced all right, unless conditions were very unusual one way or the other. So when I would put new work in the plant, being there myself, I would watch and see how they got along, and if I had to pay a little more—if the operators were not doing so well, either we would work out together, myself with the girl doing the work, a better or easier way of doing it, or I would raise the price.

Now, I was in my plant and in very close association with the pieceworkers for at least 10 years. The first years that I had piecework was during the war, when rates and people's wages were very high. My piece rates, the basis of them, was formed at that time. We were work-[fol. 3310] ing then 46-1/4 hours a week. I have never had any regular working hours more than 46-1/4 hours a week. That was back in 1918, 1919, and 1920.

Now, I was fortunate in being able to sell my merchandise very readily, and I had a very quick growth through the years, so that I didn't ever feel the necessity of reducing those high war-time wages. I didn't go up and down with depressions, because I didn't have any depression.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, what has that to do with setting the rate? That was as I understood your question.

Mr. Ingraham: I asked her to explain what method has been used, and she is explaining what they did do down there, and the reasons for it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that the method of arriving at it? If it is, I am perfectly willing that she should proceed, if that is part of the method.

The Witness: That is part of the method. That is the way those piece rates were founded or made.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may proceed. Pardon me for interrupting you. Do you remember where you stopped?

Read the last part of the answer, please.

(Thereupon the last two sentences of the last answer were read by the reporter.)

A. (Continuing) So we have in our place a basis of [fol. 3311] piece rates that was arrived at by experience and by working with the individual operator who did the work.

Now, as the time went on and I had shorter hours, and had, I felt, improved my management, and bought new, more efficient machinery, that $25.00 a week as a basis remained as the standard from which to work on pieces.

When we went on 40 hours a week, there were a few adjustments to make, and we had to raise prices on certain things to maintain this $25.00-a-week standard.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Were there certain operations that you had a rather stable price for?

A. Yes. Hemming a garment, side-seaming a garment, and many operations that do not change from season to season.

Q. Now, will you explain, Mrs. Reed, just when a piece rate price is put on a garment, and then explain what occurs after that?

A. The piece rate is put on the garment when we make the samples, and I pay double price for having samples made. It is newer work, and it is smaller bundles, and sometimes it is a little "velvet" to the person making it. But it is understood when that sample is made that the piece rate is double on there.

Now, while the samples are being made—and they are made in the factory—we do not have special sample makers, except perhaps with an unusual garment that we figure we will have to do some working out on, we might have [fol. 3312] that done specially. Our regular samples are made in the plant, by the regular operators, and the operators themselves and the instructor, as their samples are being made, consider or think, now, is that going to be the right price? And immediately, if the girl who makes that particular part of the sample thinks that is underpaid, she reports it to the instructor, and sometimes, I think—or I know she does—she goes directly to Mrs. Nichols and says, "I don't think your price is right."

Then, they talk it over, and sometimes the operator will show Mrs. Nichols where Mrs. Nichols' plan to have it made is not the easiest and best way to make it. The operator will say, "Well, if you will let me make it in this manner, your price is right, but if I have to do it just the way you say to do it, it isn't high enough."

And, of course, if it doesn't interfere with the quality of it, we take the suggestion.

Q. Then, what occurs after that? What I mean to say, are the garments then sent in to the factory to be made? [fol. 3313] A. And there were stickers and prices on them.

Q. Sometimes changes were made then?

A. Sometimes changes were made, if the plant is delayed and an operator can't make her way, and she thinks she ought to make changes, or sometimes we may change the operation. We try to keep the operation as efficient as we can.

Q. Are complaints made to Mr. Baty at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And sometimes made to you? A. Yes.

Q. Mrs. Reed, did Mrs. Nichols ever have any authority to speak for the management? A. No.

Q. What was her particular job?

A. Working on piece rates.

Q. Did Mrs. Nichols ever have any authority to employ or discharge or discipline any other employees?

A. No.

Q. Did anybody else work with Mrs. Nichols on piece rates? A. Yes.

Q. And what you have testified about Mrs. Nichols, is that true about Mrs. Spalito? A. Yes.

Q. Who is that?

A. Josephine Spalito helps Mrs. Nichols work on piece [fol. 3314] rates.

Q. Mrs. Reed, I don't know whether I finished my question, in regard to Marvin Price. What is he doing now? A. He is a salesman.

Q. When did he become a salesman, do you recall?

A. I don't remember exactly, but he has done some selling for possibly a year and a half or so. We usually, for a longer time than that, we give the boys a chance to go out and sell for a few weeks where there is an opening.

Q. Mrs. Reed, the Board stated in its Decision and Order found that the company had an anti-union attitude prior to the time of the Wagner Act came into effect in July of 1935. Is that true or not. A. It is not.

Q. Will you state whether or not the company employed union people prior to that time?

A. All through the years I was in business I constantly employed union people belonging to different craft unions. I was on the friendliest terms with union people.

As a matter of fact, two different men at different times had been president of the Carpenter's Union, and had worked for me, and I was on the friendliest terms. This first man, Mr. Kerr, died a number of years ago, and left a family. I took his boy and girl to work for me.

I gave them jobs. They were just out of school, and [fol. 3315] neither one of them skilled in any way, and I helped his family for a long time. I had no obligation other than the fact that he had worked for me, and I felt a very friendly interest and a great sympathy for his family.

He was the president of the Carpenter's Union, and later on I had many different men working for me that belonged to the Painter's Union, and the Carpenter's Union, and I had cutters come to my place that belonged to a union, before they came, through the years.

I have had many operators that come to work for me that worked, had worked in overall factories, and as far as I know, all of the overall factories in Kansas City are organized. Whenever I employed an operator from an overall factory, I would naturally know that she belonged to the union.

I personally employed a number of those years ago, and as a matter of fact, whenever we have an opportunity to employ an operator from an overall factory, we have always done it. They are usually good.

Q. Did you have any opposition to the I.L.G.W.U. as a labor union? A. I did not.

Q. What did you object to?

A. I objected to their spreading falsehoods about me and ruining my reputation.

[fol. 3316] Q. Were there any other reasons you had?

A. I didn't like their method of organizing, with all of the violence they permitted.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, it is Respondent's present position, as it was at the previous hearing, we object to all matters that the Board has charged us with doing, that occurred prior to the Wagner Act. For that reason, we can't be convicted as it was not illegal at the time, and it is too remote in point of time. However, the Board did submit a large amount of testimony from the old N.R.A. labor case.

If we go into that testimony, it is going to take a long time to try this case. The time the N.R.A. case was tried, I think, witnesses were put on the stand for three or four months.

Now, most of the evidence that the Labor Board at that time submitted, has been put in this case, and after the start of the last hearing, I understood you to say that you were not going to let this background, as it was described, as that evidence was described, become the case, and that you felt it was going to be limited to the testimony of one witness, for, say, half an hour. Now, the evidence the Board did submit would require us to produce a large number of witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: What evidence are you referring to?

[fol. 3317] Mr. Ingraham: I am referring to the evidence—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) From the old N.R.A. case?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, the old N.R.A. case. They have submitted testimony of witnesses who testified that "X" said this to them, and "Y" said this to them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Out of the old record?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you present a defense in the old record?

Mr. Ingraham: We did present somewhat of a defense when the case was finally opened.

Trial Examiner Batten: All I can say, if there is anything you think you should do, as attorney for the Respondent, I suggest you do it.

Mr. Ingraham: I would like to know if we are charged with the background, as to whether or not the facts are true or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: All I can say is that I am here to receive any testimony that you have to offer, under the rulings of the Eighth Circuit Court. You may offer any testimony that you have, and when it is offered, if I don't believe that it is within the ruling of the Court, I shall rule upon it. I shall not rule in advance on any testimony.

Mr. Ingraham: It is then your present position that [fol. 3318] testimony involving the matters that occurred prior to the Wagner Act may be gone into, and if you change your mind—

Trial Examiner Batten: That is not my position. If you have any testimony to offer, in line with the ruling of the Eighth Circuit Court, I will suggest that you, as the Respondent's attorney, present it in the testimony as offered here, and the witnesses, and if I am called upon to rule whether it is within the ruling of the Eighth Circuit, I shall do so at that time.

We are here under the ruling of the Eighth Circuit Court, and you know that as well as I do, what the Eighth Circuit includes. Perhaps you know better, because I wasn't present at any of the oral arguments of the Eighth Circuit. Now, I am simply saying that if there is any testimony that you believe should be offered under the ruling of the Eighth Circuit, then it is your duty, as attorney for the Respondent, to present it.

Mr. Ingraham: That, of course, requires that we call the witnesses and present this evidence. I thought that you had announced before that you weren't going to consider the testimony that would consume more than 30 minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective of what I said—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) You are going to do it?

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to rule on the matter at all. I don't intend to rule on any matter in [fol. 3319] advance. The Eighth Circuit has rendered a decision and remanded the case for further testimony.

Now you, as attorney for the Respondent, must decide what you think you want to present under that ruling. Now, when that testimony is offered in Court by witnesses, if there is an objection and I am called upon to rule, I shall rule, but I shall not rule in advance on any matter.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, we will have to prepare to present any further matters in connection with the N.R.A.

Trial Examiner Batten: All I would say, Mr. Ingraham, you are the attorney for the Respondent, and you prepare your case the way you think it should be prepared on any matters you think should be covered in this hearing.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Reed, I hand you Respondent's Exhibit 18, and ask you if you read the articles contained on that page, that is the front page of the Kansas City Journal-Post for Wednesday, March 17th, 1937?

Trial Examiner Batten: What is that date?

Mr. Ingraham: March 17th, 1937, entitled "Kansas City Garment Union Crews Sit in Lobby".

A. Yes, I read that.

[fol. 3320] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, might I ask you this: I notice you have several volumes of newspapers. Was it your intention to ask Mrs. Reed about each one of those articles?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Might I suggest this, if it is agreeable to counsel: Counsel might look over all of those various articles, and they may be willing to stipulate that Mrs. Reed did read those, so it will be unnecessary for Mrs. Reed to read all of them. I would say, Mr. Stottle, you know, that there are perhaps 35 or 40 articles, and it seems to me the attorneys might save some time by proceeding on that basis.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3321] Mr. Hogsett: May I suggest, offhand, a stipulation: That in the year 1937, at the time, certain articles were published in the newspapers. There were two major newspapers in Kansas City. One, the Kansas City Star and Times, the Star an evening paper, the Times a morning paper; and the other the Kansas City Journal-Post, an evening paper; that each was a paper of large circulation, and read generally throughout Kansas City; that in these papers, during the month of March and possibly April, certain articles appeared pertaining to efforts of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, to organize certain garment plants, and those articles are as follows: And let it be introduced, and everybody will [fol. 3322] admit that, I am sure.

Mr. Langsdale: I think if Mrs. Reed is asked that, that her answer will be yes, that she read them.

Mr. Hogsett: These articles were published, and whether they were read is another thing.

Mr. Langsdale: She would answer yes, if she was asked if she read them.

Mr. Hogsett: That hasn't been brought in yet, the question of Mrs. Reed's reading them.

Mr. Langsdale: That statement by itself means nothing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will proceed with the testimony.

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I don't want the Examiner to think—Mr. Hogsett's statement falls short of making it competent in any way. However, I will admit what Mr. Hogsett says, and further, if Mrs. Reed should be asked if she read these articles, her answer would be yes.

Mr. Hogsett: Now, Miss Weyand, do you admit that?

Miss Weyand: I take it, so far as you haven't introduced the articles as exhibits, the statement will be admitted.

Mr. Hogsett: Plus Mr. Langsdale adding to it that if Mrs. Reed is examined especially about each article, she will answer that she had read them.

Miss Weyand: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: How about you, Mr. Tyler?

[fol. 3323] Mr. Tyler: I would like to have the stenographer read your stipulation again.

(Record read by the reporter.)

Mr. Tyler: Yes, I agree.

Mr. Hogsett: You will also agree to what Mr. Langsdale said, that if Mrs. Reed will look at these exhibits, she will testify that she read them?

Mr. Tyler: I agree.

Miss Weyand: As the reporter read that last, about agreeing that they be introduced, I did not agree that they would be introduced as true, but I will agree, for the purpose of Mrs. Reed reading them, and that those articles did appear in those papers, as Mr. Langsdale said.

Mr. Hogsett: And Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Mr. Reed: That is a large circulation, I think you should say Kansas City and throughout the West.

Mr. Hogsett: I think they will admit that too, will you not?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

[fol. 3325] Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

As I understand it, the exhibits have been marked from 18 to 38, inclusive.

(Thereupon the newspaper extracts above referred to were marked for identification "Respondent's Exhibits Nos. 18 to 38, inclusive, Witness Reed.")

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume this is the type of exhibit which, Mr. Ingraham, after it is photostated, you desire to withdraw the originals and substitute the photostats?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any objection?

Miss Weyand: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is there any objection, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: None.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume, under the stipulation, I should indicate that respondent's exhibits Nos. 18 to 38, inclusive, are received—of course, with the stipulation of the parties.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, sir.

[fol. 3326] (Thereupon the newspaper extracts referred to above, previously marked for identification "Respondent's Exhibits Nos. 18 to 38, inclusive, Witness Reed," were received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Reed, it has been stipulated that you read certain newspaper articles that appeared in the Kansas City papers during the months of March and April. I will ask you if you read the article that appeared in the Kansas City Post on March 17, 1937, and what was the effect of that article on you?

A. Well, that article, as I remember it, told about the strike at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri plants, and details about the violence that was going on there, and it was very disturbing—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to the words "details about the violence that was going on there" as hearsay, and purporting to be the ultimate fact, rather than just what she read.

Mr. Hogsett: We will eliminate the word "the."

Mr. Langsdale: Withdraw "violence."

Trial Examiner Batten: It will stand. I think the article will show whether or not it bears out her characterization of it.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3328] By Mr. Ingrahanr:

Q. Mrs. Reed, at the time you made the speech on March 18th to the employees, had you, at that time, read in the papers about the strikes at Gernes's and Gordon's?

A. I had.

Q. In addition to the newspaper articles, respondent's exhibits 18 and 19, did you read other articles in the paper?

A. I read all of the papers that were published in Kansas City, probably not all of the editions, although I read several of the editions. I read everything I could get hold of, every paper that came out, and I read the articles about the strike, because I was very much interested in what was going on.

Q. Mrs. Reed, I understood you to state that you left on the evening of March 18th for Florida?

[fol. 3329] A. I did.

Q. Did you read the Kansas City papers in Florida?

A. I did. The clippings were sent me, and I also had the papers that I read in Florida.

Q. Mrs. Reed, what was the apparent effect of the newspaper articles that were appearing in the paper, that you could observe, on the employees?

Mr. Langsdale: Prior to March 18th, or while she was in Florida?

Mr. Ingraham: Prior to this meeting of March 18th.

A. They were very much excited. They were disturbed, and I would say some of them were frightened. Some of them told me I was to be "taken for a ride"—

Miss Weyand: I object to this, unless she identifies the persons who told her and the instances of what the objective fact was, if there was excitement of certain girls. I think it should be more definite, rather than conclusion as to unidentified persons.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no objection. I think it is proper for her to testify as she has, but when she states that specific persons talked to her about the matter, she should, if possible, name the persons, and what was said. Otherwise, that testimony might not have the weight that it would if the people were identified and the conversation stated by this witness.

[fol. 3330] The Witness: Everybody I came in contact with at the company talked to me about the violence.

By Trail Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, can you name any of these people, or what they said or told you?

A. Right at this instance, I can't specifically remember.

. . . . . .

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you mean Mamie Tubessing told someone who told you?

A. Yes, that they were going to "take me for a ride."

. . . . . .

[fol. 3331] The Witness: I know the name, but it has slipped my mind at the present time.

. . . . . .

Mr. Ingraham: That is all for the present.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3332] Mr. Ingraham: I do want to reserve the right to recall Mrs. Reed if we think there is anything material she should add to what she has testified.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may recall any witness, Mr. Ingraham, if it becomes necessary.

We will proceed with Mr. Tyler, then; and following Mr. Tyler, Miss Weyand and Mr. Langsdale.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Mrs. Reed, did you ever directly or indirectly authorize Rose Todd to give orders to anyone in connection with the operation of the company's business?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever directly or indirectly authorize her to give orders or pass on wishes or preferences of the company to employees as to any labor relations they might have?

A. I did not.

Q. Did any other officer or executive of the company, to your knowledge, ever direct or authorize Rose Todd to pass on such alleged preferences of the company or orders of the company?

A. To my knowledge, they did not.

[fol. 3333] Q. Did any employee of the company ever say or intimate to you that that employee had the understanding that Rose Todd was authorized to express the wishes of the company?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear of any rumor or understanding among the employees that Rose Todd was understood to be authorized to pass on wishes or orders of the company?

A. No.

Q. As far as you know, there was never such rumor or understanding at the plant?

A. Nothing of that kind ever came to me.

Q. Did you ever hear of Rose Todd, without any right, assuming before the employees the right to speak for the management?

A. I did not.

Q. If anything of that kind occurred, it never came to your ears; is that correct?

A. That is true.

Q. I believe you testified this morning that Rose Todd was employed in connection with fixing piecework prices by the company before she left your employ, back in 1930 or 1931?

A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you whether after she came back to your employment in 1933, or thereabouts, she was ever employed by the company to take part in fixing piecework prices?

[fol. 3334] A. No.

Q. If, as a fact, she did take part in fixing piecework prices after her return, she was doing it for somebody else and not for the company; is that correct?

A. After the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, she, representing the union, O. K.'d the prices, or disputed them, with Mrs. Nichols, who made the prices.

Q. But at the time she was doing that, was she being paid by the company for any work in fixing piecework rates?

A. She was not.

Q. Were the employees bound by the system in operation in your plant to abide by piecework prices that were fixed by this committee of which Rose Todd was one member?

A. To my knowledge, the operators in our company have never felt bound to any piecework prices that were set, without any recourse. They always have felt—they not only have felt that, but they have exercised the privilege of discussing it personally with the one who was making the piecework prices, or with Mr. Baty or Mrs. Reeves or myself, whichever one happened to be there and they felt might do the most for them at the time.

Q. Has it been frequently or infrequently that the employees have protested against piecework prices, as fixed by this committee, with you or with Mr. Baty?

A. I would say rather frequently at times. It goes along a long time, and there is really very little done, and probably there are new materials come in, and some un-

[fol. 3335] usual styles come in, and then the operators find the changes upset their earnings, and immediately they start to see people who will do something to change it.

Q. Have they made those protests through committees or chairmen of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. My understanding is that when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was first started, they organized a committee that passed on prices and looked over prices, and that is a very big part of what they look after, is the piecework prices.

Q. Would you say that such a committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union dealt with you or Mr. Baty or Mrs. Reeves frequently during, say, the first year after the organization of the union?

A. Yes. I think probably not as much the very first year, because the scale of wages and prices were pretty much gone into when the union was formed, but, as time went on, they were more and more. I know that in the beginning they didn't come about as frequently, they went to Mr. Baty; and then, as time went along, sometimes they would come to me, and I know that sometimes they went to him. In the last couple of years, since the year I was out of there entirely, 1939, after that they have come to me more frequently, because, I suppose, they have a little more trouble with the prices.

Q. Can you recall any of the subjects that this committee took up with you, say, in the first year or two after the union was formed?

[fol. 3336] A. So far back, it is difficult to place these specific things. I know, in the pressing department and folding department, there were some little dissatisfactions, and I made some changes in the arrangement there, in the way of the work, the way it would be handled.

Then there were piece rates. In a style business, where there are six lines of new styles coming out every year, there is always a certain amount of adjustment that has to be made, and to me it would be a rather routine thing, because those questions had always come up.

Now, they came up in a way that afterwards, where the union would come — Miss Todd, every so often, came to me, and many times we could settle it right there, because both of us understood the manufacturing and the prices, and Miss Todd had worked in the pricing department, and understood making piece rates, and of course, I had managed my factory myself for so many years, and I had worked on it so many years, on establishing piece rates, that we both understood, and very often Miss Todd could settle a thing right there, without going — without having to go any further.

She would say, "I don't think we are paying enough for a certain operation, as the material is hard to handle; it is more sheer than you had in this line before." Well, I would understand that, and I think they did overlook that. On the other hand, she might say that we had a lot of [fol. 3337] zippers, getting the price rates on zippers, and my contention all the time was, our method wasn't so good that I was paying enough on the zippers, if we could ever get them to the girls in the right way, and if they were handled, and the girl learned to do them right, we would raise the price sometimes, and we sometimes went all along the line, up and down, on zippers, and eventually, after several years, we got a very satisfactory price, where the girls could make very good money.

I remember that was one of the things that was constantly brought up, and when you sew a zipper in one kind of material, it is a little harder than it is in another kind, and it took us a long time to get that price adjusted and this, very often, came up.

Q. Did or did not Miss Todd make a definite demand as to certain individual girls who claimed they were underpaid or discriminated against in some way?

A. They made — let me see if I remember. The particular time that the under-arm seamers — they made some changes in the price, because we had some less expensive material, and what seemed easier, an easier kind of material to make.

At that time, Miss Todd brought her whole committee, and I think some of the under-arm seamers, to Mr. Baty's office, and then they didn't seem to be satisfied, so they asked me to come over, and I discussed that in Mr. Baty's [fol. 3338] office, and the proposition of that underarming was presented to me, and I felt the committee was right.

I called for Mrs. Nichols to come up and hear what they had to say, and I instructed her to adjust that work as they suggested that it be done.

Q. Weren't there dozens and perhaps hundreds of girls that, through the committee, presented some sort of grievance about their situation?

A. They did.

Q. And naturally you can't remember all of the individual details there, with an agreement, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, how did these disputes come out? Did you have your way, or did the committee always have its way?

A. Well, when I felt that the price was actually too low, and the girl convinced me it was, and through my experience thought, I pretty well ought to know, and they convinced me it was, that the price was too low, I would raise the price.

There were times when I thought the reason that they weren't making as much as they thought they ought to make, was because of the — either the management, or they weren't handling the work right, and sometimes I felt that the planning department hadn't done a good job as they should, and in those cases I would tell the girls, "Well, I will correct that, and I think you will do all right."

[fol. 3339] I had an attitude of being sensible, and I believe the committee wanted what was right.

Q. The complaints that were had were not decided always in favor of one side or another?

A. No, they were not.

Q. Has that custom of presenting complaints by the committee or certain ones of the committee, continued up until the present time?

A. It has. As a matter of fact, it got to a point where so much of my time was given to that that I simply didn't have the time, with all of my other duties in the business, so I, last fall, appointed a committee to meet with the union committee, with the understanding that if my committee and the union committee couldn't come to an agreement, then I would come in and see what I could do, and that committee—they have worked back and forth, and only in one instance have they called me in.

Q. Do you recall any substantial complaint or demand made by the committee of the union, say within the last year?

A. Well, they asked for an increase in the wages. They asked for a flat 10 percent increase in the wages. I met with the committee and discussed that, and I told them that I thought that a flat 10 percent increase was not a fair thing to do, I felt that there were some people there, perhaps, that ought to have a little more, and I have thought some [fol. 3340] of the other classes of workers shouldn't have as much of an increase, and then there were a few people that I felt really shouldn't have any increase, that I felt their pay was already comparatively higher than the others.

Q. Was there more than one meeting in connection with that demand for increased wages?

A. Yes, there were several meetings on that.

Q. What was the net result of those meetings?

A. Well, the increase was granted, to a few, 5 percent, and an increase of 7-1/2 and an increase of 10 percent. There were a few that did not get an increase, but the representative of the girls that were sewing the shirring, we call them the shirr girls, they admitted that they were well paid, and they said they were not asking for a raise.

Of course, as to the 10 percent, if it went through, it would have been all right.

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Within the last year or year and a half, I am just asking you to state any continuances of these com- [fol. 3341] plaints that occurred during the last year or year and a half?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The incident you are telling about, approximately, when did that occur, the negotiations about the increase?

A. Time goes on for me. That would be very difficult for me, to set a time.

Q. I don't mean the day. Was it this year or last year?

A. Well, it was this year.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. When the demand first came from the union committee, as to increases in wages, when was that?

A. I don't remember the exact date, Mr. Tyler. I am under the impression it was early in the spring. It might have been last fall.

Q. Do you recall any negotiations with committees of the union with regard to adjusting the prices on certain piece-work operations, where the union complained the work had been made harder without the prices being raised in proportion?

A. I remember the collar girls felt their prices were not as high as they ought to be. They said that we were very particular about our collars, and they should be given a raise. As a matter of fact, we had a couple of meetings on these increases, with the collar girls. I believe they had been given a 7-1/2 percent raise, and they wanted 10, and they made a pretty good case for that 10 percent, and it was given to them.

[fol. 3342] Q. And were there or were there not other negotiations by union committees with officials other than yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Baty or Mrs. Reeves or somebody else?

A. Yes, that is my understanding.

Q. Did that occur when you were away from the factory?

A. It was my understanding that it did, often.

Q. Do you recall any reason why the disputes arose with the committee of the union and the executives, as to pay on Decoration Day?

A. Well, that was one time when the committee called me in, because I didn't agree with the union representatives on that. I thought they misinterpreted the line in the contract. We were to pay for holidays, we had always paid for certain holidays, when they came in a working week, but I had never paid for a holiday when it came on a Saturday or Sunday, but someone had read in the contract.

they were to be paid for holidays. I don't remember just exactly how that line goes.

So they asked to be paid for Decoration Day as an extra day, and Decoration Day came on Saturday.

Q. Were there negotiations on that point?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. What was your position on that point?

A. Well, my position was that I thought they were wrong.

[fol. 3343] Q. How was the matter settled?

A. Well, I paid them.

Q. Did the committee take the position of insistence on that demand?

A. Yes, they did.

Q. Did that also apply to other holidays during the same year?

A. They thought—the 4th of July, fell on Saturday and they felt they should be paid for Saturday.

Q. How much did that decision cost the company, Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, the two days—I haven't the figures exactly, but I know not less than $12,000, and probably $14,000.

Q. What representation was made to you, if any representation was made to you, back in 1937, as to the number of your employees who belonged to the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't know what you mean, Mr. Tyler.

Q. Did anybody come to you and say, "We understood, or it is a fact that the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union have such-and-such a number of members in your plant," were you given to understand that the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union had a certain or any number of employees belonging to the International Ladies Garment Workers Union in your plant?

A. I don't remember that I had any direct notice; there [fol. 3344] were a lot of claims about the I.L.G.W.U., they sometimes said they had a hundred.

Q. Did any representative of the I.L.G.W.U. say they had a hundred members or any other number?

A. There were a lot of loose statements, how many I don't know.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, did any representative ever come to you and make a claim as to the number of people in your plant belonged to the union?

A. No representative of the I.L.G.W.U., ever came to me about anything.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did any information ever reach you, either through the International or anyone else, as to the International claiming a substantial membership in your plant?

[fol. 3345] A. I read in the paper that a couple of girls had given out their views, and they were going down to represent the employees in the Donnelly Garment Company at the convention of the I.L.G.W.U.

Q. Mrs. Reed, after the change in the method of administration, I believe in December, 1940, did you know whether any members of the union withdrew from the union? Was any word sent to your office?

A. Oh, yes, the instructors withdrew from the union, and probably some other people who had been given responsibility in their departments.

Q. Do you know of any case where employees withdrew from the union and have ever been promoted to positions of greater authority?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you name any now?

A. Well—

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, don't you think he ought to fix a time as to these withdrawals?

By Trial Examiner Bellman:

Q. You may tell us, if you can, about the withdrawals, and fix the time.

A. I remember Jack McConaughey being promoted, I am sure he would have withdrawn from the union.

Q. Did you know as a matter of fact he did withdraw, or do you know?

[fol. 3346] A. Yes, I know that he did. Yes, I know he did withdraw.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Do you recall any others at the present time?

A. Well, Mr. Jeters withdrew.

Q. And Dewey Atchison? A. Yes.

Q. In the normal course of business, a notice from the union that such-and-such a person had resigned from the union, would that come to your desk or would it go somewhere else, to Mr. Baty or somewhere else?

A. Well, it would eventually come to my desk in all probability.

Q. Now, Mrs. Reed, I can shorten my question without impropriety, I asked you about whether anybody in connection with the company, to your knowledge, ever passed out the word or allowed it to be passed out, that Rose Todd in some way represented the company. I will ask you the same as to Hobart Atherton.

A. To my knowledge they never did.

Q. How about Mrs. Gray? A. The same reply.

Q. How about Fred Brown? A. The same.

Q. And Mrs. Tyhurst?

A. The same reply to Mrs. Tyhurst.

Q. Do you know of any employee in the plant who was a [fol. 3347] member of this union, concerning whom word came out from anybody connected with the management that that employee had some authority to direct the employees or express the wishes of the company to the employees as to their labor connections? A. I do not.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Was there confidential relationship between yourself and Rose Todd? A. There was not.

Q. Or between any officials of the company and Rose Todd, so far as you know?

A. So far as I know, there was not.

Q. Will you state what the duties of Rose Todd were, as she was employed by the company?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean at what time?

Mr. Tyler: In 1937.

A. I have already stated that, what she had to do. Do you want me to restate it?

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Yes, I would like to have you restate it.

A. She went from section to section to see what notions and what would be needed to complete the garments that [fol. 3348] were being held up, that didn't go through in a routine way, and then she would see that whatever was needed would be sent down there. She did that herself personally. She had no department doing it.

As a matter of fact, the department that was responsible for doing it didn't. Also, seeing that it was performed perfectly, or sometimes it might be they were short of a certain material, and sent down what they had, and in the course of the work they didn't always send enough, so the result was the work would pile up in the section, and most of the time there was plenty of work there, new work to come in, and the instructor simply gave the new work to the girls with the idea that they would get those out later.

They would call up and find them, and Rose Todd went through to see that these things were supplied. That was her only duty.

Q. Did you, or any member of the management, so far as your knowledge goes, ever ask for or suggest to Rose Todd that she call a meeting of the employees?

A. I did not, and to my knowledge, no one else of the management did.

Q. In your direct testimony, you said that Mrs. Tyhurst saw that the work was up to standard. I recall words "completely up to standard", I can't recall the rest of the sentence. Will you explain Mrs. Tyhurst's—whether she [fol. 3349] set the standard? A. Oh, no.

Q. Or merely looked to the work, to see if it was done the way it was required?

A. We have a standard quality for our work. We try to turn out a very high class work, and our method of production, it is a mass production, and it is difficult to maintain a standard of quality. There are so many things that can happen to the merchandise as it goes through the plant. Now, Mrs. Tyhurst constantly watches to see that it goes through and is made right. Sometimes work comes down and we cut a hundred dozen at a time, and there would be—a cutter will have made a little error, and there will be a notch out of place, so when the operator goes to sew it up, she has trouble with it. Well, perhaps she just lets it go on through, and sometimes the examiner asks Mrs. Tyhurst to see whether she thinks it is all right, or what they should do about it, and sometimes the instructor will, and sometimes Mrs. Tyhurst will say, well, "We will just have to rip that all out, as it is not right, and I will see that it doesn't come down that way any more again.

She will go up to the pattern department, and say, "You will have to be a little more careful on this pattern. Perhaps we will put some more notches in, or we will furnish a gauge to the operator. She can't put this through with [fol. 3350] out a little more instructions or help in the marking of the garment." Now, she picks up all of those kinds of things.

Q. In regard to the occasion on which the photograph was made of two girls handing you the petition of March 2nd, did I correctly understand your testimony to be that the girls came back a second time for the purpose of having their picture taken? A. Yes, they did.

Q. And that was on account of the suggestions of Mr. Roberts, that it was front-page news?

A. That is true.

Q. Do you recall the girls—did you ask them to come back for the purpose of having their picture taken?

A. I did not.

Q. That was a matter of a few minutes of being in the house, long enough to have their pictures taken?

A. That is all.

Q. Was Mr. Baty present on one of the two occasions when those two girls were out to the house? A. Yes.

Q. But not at the other?

A. I don't remember him being there when the pictures were taken. He was there when they brought the petition to me. We had been working on plans for our new building, and I had been home ill with a cold, and Mr. Baty had been out working with me on these plans [fol. 3351] practically the entire day.

Q. On the occasion of the second conference on May 27th, Mrs. Reed, the day the contract was signed, the contract, the occasion in the afternoon, do you recall whether, at that final meeting, changes in the proposed contract were suggested by either side?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. And thereafter a final draft was drawn? A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember whether it included the changes asked for by both sides? A. It did.

Q. Do you recall what changes those were, at the present time?

A. Well, I think I went into that pretty much yesterday.

Q. Do you recall any argument about the words, "those who are employed" changed to "those who are retained", in connection with the requirement they join the union by a certain date?

A. I wanted to have people work a certain length of time, so that I would know they were satisfied before I would have any union telling me I had to keep somebody because they wanted to belong to the union. I wanted a reasonable length of time for them to be tried out, so we would want to know whether we wanted the employees, before we had any complications with the union.

[fol. 3352] I remember that very well, because I wanted to employ and select my own employees always.

Q. Do you remember whether there was any statement of whether that same provision was common in union contracts?

A. It was. It was discussed, and I said it was.

Q. Do you remember the union representatives made any comment on the desirability, from their standpoint, of having employees familiar with the actual conditions in this plant?

A. Yes, they felt they wanted them to know whether they wanted to work there or not.

[fol. 3353] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What was the first information you had, if you can remember, Mrs. Reed, of demand for $16.50 a minimum for employees of the union? How did that reach you?

A. It reached me through you.

Q. Do you remember when?

A. I do not remember exactly, I do not know just the incident. I know it was in one of your conferences, to get it finished, the wages and other conditions in the contract.

Q. Was there considerable resistance against that, or not?

A. I still think that I shouldn't have been forced to put a $16.50 actual minimum in that contract, but you will remember when we finished writing the contract, we finally settled on all the other things, and I still didn't think that was right; and Mr. Reed said, "Oh, it is late, and you are all set with everything else, and there are not many making less than that anyhow, so why don't you do it?" And I said, "All right," and we finally contracted that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3354] Miss Weyand: Mrs. Reed, I would like to have you state, if you will, just what your actual duties and authorities around the plant were, from January, 1935 down to date.

A. My actual duties and authorities?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3355] Q. Taking the date, January, 1935, who was the person immediately under you? Was there any one person immediately under you?

A. I suppose Mr. Keyes, he was the person immediately under me.

Q. What was Mr. Keyes position?

A. He actually was sales manager, but he had the title of general manager.

Q. And how did you and he divide duties amongst yourselves? A. We didn't divide our duties.

Q. What did you do and what did he do?

A. He had the salesmen, the salesmen came directly under Mr. Keyes, but he had no authority to discharge any of them.

Q. Where was that authority vested? A. In myself.

Q. Who else came directly under Mr. Keyes?

[fol. 3356] A. Well, his secretary.

Q. You mean his personal secretary? A. Yes.

Q. Anyone else? A. Outside of the salesmen.

Q. He had no direct authority over any of the other executives? A. No.

Q. Did he have any indirect authority over them?

A. There was probably a difference of opinion, what authority he did have.

Q. As president of the company, what authority did you intend and express to him that he should have?

A. I expected him to produce the sales for the company.

Q. Did he have any authority over production of the company, or was his field limited to sales?

A. His field was limited to sales, I would say; I don't know how he could have much authority over production, because he knew actually nothing about it.

Q. Were there other persons under you whom you directed, under you besides Mr. Keyes? A. Yes.

Q. Who else was directly under you?

A. Mrs. Reeves.

Q. What was Mrs. Reeves' position?

[fol. 3357] A. Merchandise manager.

Q. We are talking of January, 1935, now?

A. January, 1935?

Q. Yes?

A. She was production manager, and general assistant to me in most of my activities.

Q. Now, did that position of hers continue to date, or has it changed since January, 1935?

A. It changed in July. Mr. Baty took over the management of the p. at.

Q. In July, 1935, you are talking about now?

A. Yes, and Mrs. Reeves took over the general merchandising; some of my duties she took over as her own.

[fol. 3358] Q. Was anyone else immediately under you in January 1935?

A. Mr. Baty.

Q. What was his position in January 1935?

A. Mr. Baty was under Mrs. Reeves, really. I keep thinking of it being after 1935, the change.

Q. What was Mr. Baty's position under Mrs. Reeves?

A. He was assistant to her in the plant.

Q. Was Mr. Baty your nephew?

A. He is the husband of my niece.

Q. What is your niece's name?

A. Catherine Baty.

Q. What were Mrs. Reeves's duties as production manager in January 1935?

A. It was her duty to see that the merchandise was produced.

Q. Who did she have directly under her, what sections of the plant and what supervisory officials?

A. She had under her Mr. Baty and the instructors.

Q. Was there anyone between the instructors and Mrs. Reeves at that time?

A. Not directly between Mrs. Reeves and the instructors. Mrs. Reeves had the instructors up in her office practically daily, discussing—a great many of her orders were directly to the instructors.

Q. Did Mrs. Reeves have under her any other depart-
[fol. 3359] ments of the plant, other than the sewing sections, with which the instructors, I understand, were associated?

Mr. Reed: This is limited to January 1935?

Miss Weyand: Yes.

A. The cutting department—I would say everything that had anything to do with production.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Would that include shipping?

A. No. The shipping department has never been under the production end of the business.

Q. What was it under?

A. It has always been under the sales division.

Q. Would that be under Mr. Keyes?

A. Yes, it would be.

Q. Where was the maintenance department located, with reference to Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Reeves, or someone else?

A. The what?

Q. The maintenance department.

A. Mrs. Reeves.

Q. Where was the accounting and office department?

A. On the 10th floor. And that department at that time was under— Let me see. In 1935, I believe it was under Mrs. Keyes, the accounting department.

Q. Was Mrs. Keyes directly responsible to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mrs. Reeves hire the employees, or have any [fol. 3360] thing to do with the hiring of the employees in the departments which were under her?

A. The clerical employees, I am sure she would advise with Mrs. Hyde on. Mrs. Hyde was our personnel director. She has always done all of the employing.

Q. Would she consult with Mrs. Reeves with reference to the employment of persons in the departments under Mrs. Reeves?

A. I say she would, yes.

Q. Who did the discharging in the departments under Mrs. Reeves?

A. I would say Mrs. Hyde would.

Q. And how would Mrs. Hyde know who to discharge?

A. It would be discussed with Mrs. Reeves. I don't know whether there were ever any discharges made there. We discharge very few people in our place. We change them around a great deal. Mrs. Reeves might say, "I have someone in my department that I don't think can do the work," and then our practice is to change them to some other department.

Q. Who would determine whether she should be given a chance in another department?

A. Whoever was in the other department.

Q. Who would determine that she should have a change made?

A. Mr. Reeves probably would.

Q. Did the instructors play any part in making that decision in January 1935?

[fol. 3361] A. Yes. The instructors would come to Mrs. Reeves and say, "I can't get along with this girl," or something, and suggest a change.

Q. Who determined when girls should have raises in January 1935?

A. Well, most of those raises were brought up with me. Mrs. Reeves would probably bring up some, and Mr. Keyes would— Mr. Keyes might give a stenographer, a $2.50 or $5.00 raise without discussing it with me, but no very large raise without discussing it with me.

Q. Would the instructor be consulted in connection with raises?

A. The instructor would have pieceworkers. She wouldn't have time workers working under her.

Q. I understood you to say in your direct examination that on occasions you made up the amount of the normal average earnings of an employee during a week when their piece rates did not bring them up to the amount that had been their usual average. It that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Who would make the determination that a given girl would be given such a bonus, as I believe you called it?

A. For a good many years I did that myself, and Mrs. Reeves was the person who did that later, and after that Mr. Baty did.

[fol. 3362] Q. Speaking of January 1935, would Mrs. Reeves consult with the instructor in determining that?

A. She would probably ask the instructor why the girl didn't make what was her average.

Q. Was that a regular procedure in your plant?

A. Yes. From the first time that I had any piecework operators, someone—in the early days, for a good many years, myself—would look over the piecework cards every week, because we have always felt a strong responsibility about our pieceworkers making their regular average.

Q. In January 1935, who looked over the cards weekly; or were they looked over weekly?

A. They were looked over weekly. Mrs. Reeves did. Now, she may have had some help with it, but that was her responsibility.

Q. Was it the practice of Mrs. Reeves to consult regularly with the instructors a few days before payday to determine which girl should be given more than her piecework rates indicated?

A. As I said before, she would ask the instructors why this girl had fallen down, with the idea that the instructor would tell her perhaps the mechanic didn't come in time to fix her machine, she had to wait an hour or two hours, or that the work the girl was doing then wasn't her regular kind of work, and she didn't do it so well, she would ask [fol. 3363] the instructor to come and tell her the reason why that girl fell down.

Q. Was that done previous to each payday?

A. Yes. Sometimes, if Mrs. Reeves wouldn't be satisfied with what the instructor said, she would call the individual girl up there herself. I know that was my practice when I looked over the cards and a girl's earnings had varied a great deal; I would want to find out from her, herself.

Q. Did Mrs. Reeves have anyone else to assist her in her work, aside from Mr. Baty, and the instructors?

A. There were other people in the plant. There were the instructors, there were the girls on the floor, and there is a general instructor—she had a general instructor.

Q. Who was the general instructor?

A. Mrs. Wherry.

Q. Was that her title in January 1935?

A. I would say it was. We never were very definite about titles for people. Sometimes they just assumed them, themselves. But that would be what I would say she was.

Q. Did you carry them on your pay roll with given titles?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Where did Mrs. Lena Tyhurst fit into the picture in January 1935?

A. Mrs. Tyhurst originally was an instructor. I don't know whether she was still an instructor then, or whether she was doing the work she is doing now.

[fol. 3364] Q. You would not be able to recall what time she graduated from an instructor to her present position, and whether there were any intervening steps?

A. Well, I don't remember. I've always thought of Mrs. Tyhurst as being a person who knew just how good the work ought to be done, and I don't remember.

Q. You wouldn't know whether she did that in January of 1935?

A. I really wouldn't, Miss Weyand.

Q. What would the earliest period be that you would know that she was doing that work?

A. Well, I know definitely that she was doing it in the fall of 1939, that I charged her with the responsibility of really getting the work through, and told her that she would have the authority that she had to have to get it through.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Was that in the fall of 1939 or 1940?

A. 1940. That's right. In 1939, I wasn't there. It was in the fall of 1940, when I came in and did a great deal of organizing. That was the time Mr. Keyes got out.

Q. Was she doing her present work at the time of the prior hearing? I think that was in the summer of 1939.

A. When Mr. Baty took over the plant, when I gave him complete authority in the plant, he made some changes in his method of manufacture, and I didn't completely follow that through.

[fol. 3365] Q. Then, you couldn't say when, if there was any change?

A. No, I couldn't.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Mr. Bachofer with you at that time, January 1935?

A. I don't remember the year Mr. Bachofer came. It would be easy to find out, but I don't remember.

Q. When he came, what was his first position with the company?

A. Mr. Bachofer is a certified accountant.

Q. You don't have any idea when he first began working for the company?

Mr. Hogsett: Can't we ascertain that—

Mr. Langsdale: I think she is entitled to test her memory now.

Mr. Hogsett: I thought you really wanted to know the date, rather than testing her memory.

Miss Weyand: No, I want to know how closely she was associated with it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Who was Mr. Howard?

A. Mr. Howard is our New York manager—manager of our New York office.

Q. How long has he been with the company?

A. About, I would say, around 15 years.

Q. Was he head of the New York office in January 1935?

A. He was.

[fol. 3366] Q. What was Buelah Spilsbury's position in January 1935?

A. Head of the designing department.

Q. What was Ted Scoles's position at that time?

A. In 1935 he was a cutter.

Q. And the head of the cutting department at that time was who?

A. The head cutter was Herbert Fountain.

Q. Did you call him an instructor?

A. I call him a head cutter.

Q. Was his relation to the cutters under him in any way different from the relationship of the instructors to the girls in the sewing department?

A. Well, a head cutter—

Q. I am speaking of January 1935.

A. Yes. A head cutter has more or less of a defined position in the industry. I have employed a number of experienced cutters, and they, naturally, follow the standard ways of the cutting department.

Now, the instructors, that is an institution that I put into the business myself. I don't believe that outside of Kansas City there are any plants run with instructors.

So, I wouldn't say that a head cutter— He might do about the same thing, but you employ skilled cutters in a cutting department.

Now, in a sewing section, in Kansas City, anyway,— [fol. 3367] we don't have a great many skilled sewers. In the Donnelly Garment Company, particularly, we have trained a great many of our own operators. I set up the system and worked that out in my own plant, to serve my own purpose, and to turn out my merchandise as I wanted it turned out. I started in doing mass production on style merchandise, and that field wasn't very well developed when I started it, so the instructor is a person of more or less my own institution.

Q. Would you, then, state what the duties, responsibility and authority of the head cutter were in January 1935?

A. The work would come down to the cutting department and he would tell what cutters to do which cutting. Some of the very particuar cutting he would do himself, some of the trimmings. He was a very fine cutter.

Q. How many employees did he have under him?

A. I don't know exactly. Perhaps a couple of dozen.

My business has grown so gradually through all of the years that it is very difficult for me to say how many people we had in any one department at a certain time.

Q. Were they on piece-work or time-work?

A. On time-work.

Q. If a raise were given to any of them, what part did he play in the determination of who should receive the raise and the amount of the raise?

A. Very little.

[fol. 3368] Q. Who determined that?

A. Well, probably in 1935 I determined a great deal of it myself.

Q. How would you know which one of the cutters should receive a raise?

A. Most of them had worked under me for a great many years. I had managed the cutting department when I was managing the plant. As a matter of fact, I did my own cutting, with a cutting machine, a year or two, when I first had the plant.

Q. How much of the time were you present around the cutting room to determine who did skillful cutting and how much work he did a day, around January 1935?

A. I wasn't in the cutting department very much, but I had established a general price for cutters, and the general policy in the business was, if people stayed a long time, they were supposed to improve as they stayed. So, every so often we would decide, after we would have a very good year, that we could give some raises, Mrs. Reeves and myself, and we would probably consult with Mr. Fountain. We would say such and such a person had been there a good while and, as far as our experience with that person was concerned, he had been a very good worker. Mrs. Reeves was in and out of the cutting department a lot, and she, in a general way, knew the type of cutting this particular person did. So, if there was no complaint about the person's being indolent, or that sort of thing, in the work, we would decide to give him the raise.

[fol. 3369] Q. Where would the complaint of indolence have come from?

A. Probably from Mr. Fountain. I think that is a regulation thing for a head cutter. I have read some contracts of the I. L. G. W. U.'s, and they say, "Nothing in this contract will prejudice a head cutter in the union by attending to his business"—words to that effect.

Q. Would Mr. Fountain also recommend who would be kept during a slack season and who would be laid off?

A. That would be a matter in which he would be in consultation. We had very few slack seasons.

Q. I failed to ask you, with regard to instructors, if they recommended who would be retained during slack seasons and who laid off?

A. Sometimes it would be that someone would—they would say such and such a woman had a husband who made good wages, and it wouldn't hurt her to take a few weeks off, and say, "Some other person is completely dependent on their wages and I think we should try to keep them, if we can." Sometimes we would have a certain kind of work, and an operator wouldn't be able to do that kind of work at all, so, even though we might want to keep her on, we would have to lay her off, because there wouldn't be anything she could do.

Q. You would know from the instructor which kind of work she could do?

A. There were so many of the people at that time that [fol. 3[illegible]] I knew myself what they could do, and Mrs. Reeves did from our general information, that we didn't depend entirely—

Q. How many girls did you have at that time?

A. I would say—

Q. This is January 1935.

A. In the plant there were probably 500.

Q. And you and Mrs. Reeves knew them well enough that you would know in each given case, as a general rule, whether the girl could do the operation which you intended her to do?

A. Not every one of them.

Q. What percentage of the time would you and Mrs. Reeves know, as to Mary Smith, or any other given girl—

A. There wouldn't be any— There would be a certain group of them there would be no question about, because there was lots of work to be done, and in any of these lay-offs the whole group wouldn't be in question.

Q. When individual names did come in question, how often—half of the time—would you and Mrs. Reeves know who the girl was and what she could do?

A. I couldn't tell you whether it would be half of the time or not.

Q. Have you any general notion as to how often it would be your knowledge, or how often you would call the instructor for that knowledge?

A. No, I haven't, not in a definite sense.

[fol. 3371] Q. You would have to call the instructor in a great many cases?

A. Yes.

Q. What was Marvin Price's position in January 1935?

A. He was in the maintenance department.

Q. How many other persons were in the maintenance department?

A. Oh, I don't know. There were several. Marvin usually bought supplies, janitor supplies, and small things that were used in the maintenance department.

Q. When you say "several," would it be six, or twelve, or twenty—

A. Do you mean janitors?

Q. In your maintenance department, in which Marvin Price worked. A. In 1935, we didn't have these departments so well set out. As I said before, this business grew up sort of like Topsy. When we needed more people, we put them on, and when a bright boy would come out with initiative and be willing to take responsibility, they would help, and that is the way the whole thing grew. It just got to be a big business without any—I didn't consciously departmentize the place to any great extent.

Q. When a machine needed repairing, who was notified?

A. Well, we had a machine shop there and—[fol. 3372] Q. Was that part of the maintenance department which Marvin Price was connected with, or was he in a separate division?

A. That was in the mechanical—just where they had a cage, they call it, where they keep the parts of the sewing machines, and we usually had a boy answer the phone, and if the machine was out of order, they were called, and whoever answered the phone—if the belt was broken, or something had happened to the belt, this boy who answered the phone was supposed to know who to send to have the repairing done.

Q. Was that part of the maintenance department?

A. That would be part of a maintenance department.

Q. Was Marvin Price associated with that machine shop in 1935?

A. Marvin was a mechanic, and originally he had done repairing of machinery, and then he had been there when there were not very many, and he had done a lot of everything. He was a very skilled mechanic. I think there were times when they called on him to help fix the machines.

Q. Was there anyone at that time in this maintenance department who had the position that would be analogous in any way to an instructor or a head cutter?

A. I would say not.

Q. Who determined their lay-offs or raises in pay?

A. Well, the ones that made higher wages, most of them, I gave most of the raises myself. You may think it queer, but I did.

[fol. 3373] Q. Did you know what work they did?

A. I know, for instance, Lyle Jeters was a very clever mechanic, and I came in close contact with him in my designing. There would be a new idea that we wanted to put on a garment, and I would call him in to see if he couldn't make an attachment to put that through so we could sell our garment at a low price. He seemed to be very clever.

I looked over—I think perhaps 1939 was the only year when I haven't ever so often looked over our pay roll cards to see how much people were doing and how they were getting along. I had certain contacts with them, just in the natural running of the business, in the designing and getting up the line, with the mechanics, asking them to do certain things, and sometimes the younger boys would come up and ask for a raise. He might come to Mrs. Reeves, and Mrs. Reeves would think he was a bright boy, and he would tell her what he was doing.

We didn't run our plant like they do the army. Mr. Keyes tried to do that, but it was pretty bad, the effect he got there.

Q. Did he establish anyone as a supervisor in charge of the machine or maintenance department?

A. If he did, he did it without any authority and without my knowledge. The one thing I had an understanding with Mr. Keyes about when he came to work for me was [fol. 3374] that I was running my own business, and I asked Mr. Keyes to not misunderstand me. When I gave him the title of general manager, I thought probably it would be a good thing to have a general manager there, but I didn't want him to misunderstand me, I was going to run my own business; I wanted him to get sales for me, and that was his big job, but he couldn't employ a salesman without my O. K.'ing it, he couldn't discharge a salesman without my O. K.'ing it, or he couldn't discharge anybody without my O. K.'ing it. That was a very definite understanding I had with Mr. Keyes, and it turned out to be very fortunate for me that I had that understanding. With my knowledge, Mr. Keyes never discharged anybody.

Q. Did you later ever hear of his doing it, or was it done without your knowledge at the time it was done?

A. At the present time I don't remember of his ever having discharged anybody.

Q. Did you know of his ever appointing anyone as supervisor of the machine or building maintenance department, or giving them a title?

A. If he did it, he did it without my consent or authority.

Q. Have you heard since that he did such a thing?

A. No, I haven't. You told me today he did, but that is the first I heard of it.

Q. I didn't say he did. I just asked—

A. If he did, I never heard of it.

[fol. 3375] Q. Was Ella Brown working for the Donnelly Garment Company in 1935? A. Yes.

Q. What was her position at that time?

A. Secretary to Mrs. Spilsbury.

Q. What were her duties as secretary to Mrs. Spilsbury? A. Regular secretarial duties, I would say.

Q. She was a personal secretary? A. Yes.

Q. She did not help design? A. No.

Q. What was Florence Strickland's position in 1935?

A. She was a pattern maker. She made the patterns for the size 14's I testified to this morning.

Q. How many other pattern makers were there?

A. Oh, regularly, probably three or four, maybe five, but they were graders, mostly. Then, we had graders come up from the cutting department, but they were not pattern makers. As a regular pattern maker, outside of the designers, I question if there was any other pattern maker.

Q. But there were other people who did assist in making patterns?

A. They did the grading of patterns, of the sizes. After Mrs. Strickland made a correct size 14, then there were other people there that did the grading.

[fol 3376] Q. Besides the four or five who did that regularly, there were a number of others, from time to time, who would do that; is that correct?

A. Not any great number. Probably two or three from the cutting department.

Q. Was there anyone in the pattern department who held a position similar to instructor or head cutter?

A. No.

Q. Who determined if a girl should be laid off for a slack period in the pattern department?

A. We didn't lay off anybody in the pattern department for slack periods.

Q. Who determined whether or not a girl should receive a raise? A. I did.

Q. Would Mrs. Reeves also be involved in that determination?

A. Not to any great extent, not in the pattern department. That pattern department was run in connection with the designing department, and our designers make patterns for their own garments. Our designers also assist in the grading.

Q. Was Rose O'Leary working for the company at that time? A. She was.

Q. What was her position?

A. Keeping track of orders for Mrs. Reeves.

Q. Did she have anyone to assist her?

[fol. 3377] A. I don't believe she did in 1935.

Q. What was Dewey Atchison's position in 1935?

A. Well, Dewey had— Let me see. January, 1935, Dewey, I think, at that time, was working very closely with Mrs. Reeves on the amount of labor that was on garments and how was the best way to put them through the plant.

Q. Was he her assistant? Did he have the title of assistant? A. I didn't give him the title of assistant.

Q. Did he bear that title around the plant, so far as you know?

A. Not as far as I know. He had specific duties to do. Dewey has always worked with the cost of labor and the amount of work that goes on a dress, and that sort of thing.

Q. What was Lena Tyhurst's position in January, 1935?

A. I think I told you I couldn't just place her position right now.

Q. I'm sorry. I didn't realize I had asked you about that.

Did these positions you have described continue in effect until July of 1935, substantially?

A. Yes, I would say so.

Q. You don't remember any one of them changing before July of 1935? A. No.

Q. How many of them were affected by the changes you [fol. 3378] have related occurred in July, 1935?

A. The people that were in the plant that worked under Mr. Baty?

Q. Yes. All of those were affected?

A. Well, I asked Mr. Baty to take over the responsibility of settling things with the workers themselves. I thought perhaps that would be a better way to run the plant. He had had nothing else to do but be in the plant.

Q. What title did he assume in July 1935?

A. I suppose, production manager. I have paid so little attention to what kind of titles people have down there that, to pin me down on it, I really don't know.

Q. You described Mrs. Reeves as production manager in January 1935. Then, as I understand, he took over that position. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. What did Mrs. Reeves's position then become?

A. Merchandise manager.

Q. Did Mr. Baty have under his supervision the departments which you have described as being under Mrs. Reeves's supervision prior to the time he took over?

A. With regard to the plant and production, yes.

Q. That included the cutting department and all of the sewing departments? A. That is right.

[fol. 3379] Q. What other departments, if any, would that include? A. The pressing department.

Q. I have failed to ask you about the pressing department. Did that have an instructor? A. Yes.

Q. And that instructor's authority from January 1, 1935, to July 1, 1935, was similar to the description you have given of the instructors' in the sewing departments?

A. That is right.

Q. I believe on direct you testified that Mr. Baty made a change in the instructors' authority and duties. Would you describe that, if that is true, and what the change was?

A. Well, the change was especially in the authority over the girls that worked under them.

Q. Can you be specific and state what changes were made?

A. Well, it had been— the differences that would come up about whether a girl wanted to do a certain type of work, the operator sometimes wouldn't want to do it, and the instructor didn't feel free to say that that was the thing for her to do, and she would call Mr. Baty, or if she didn't call Mr. Baty, the operator probably would. If there was to be a transferring of one girl from one section to another, Mr. Baty decided that.

Q. Did he confer with the instructor in deciding that?

A. He might, but he didn't have to.

[fol. 3380] Q. Do you know what his practice in that regard was?

A. I think he conferred mostly with the girl and decided what she wanted to do.

Q. Did the practice of the instructor meeting with the production manager weekly prior to pay date to determine the bonus continue after Mr. Baty became production manager?

A. Not generally.

Q. Would you deny that the instructors, after July 1935, continued to meet with the production manager weekly to go over the time cards of the girls' to determine whether they should receive a bonus in the event their piece rate pay for the week did not come up to their average rate of pay?

Do you understand the question?

A. I understand the question. I don't know to what extent that was changed, but it is my understanding that to a great extent that was changed.

Q. What is the extent of your knowledge about it; that is, what is your knowledge based on?

A. My knowledge is based on the authority that I gave Mr. Baty, and also on the information that I have received from the instructors themselves, and some of the operators, that it wasn't working and that they would like to have—even the girls, themselves, would like to have the instructors be able to settle things with them. They thought that, at least after the plant had grown some, Mr. [fol. 3381] Baty was not available enough to understand their problems, and the operators preferred to settle those things with the instructors. And I very definitely know it from the instructors, feeling that they couldn't do their work as efficiently or with as little effort as they could if they had had authority to settle things with the operators as they went along.

Q. Did Mr. Baty or any of the instructors tell you that the instructors did not meet with him when he went over the time cards weekly? A. They did not.

Q. You did continue to give them the same type of bonus when a girl was unable to make her average, did you?

A. They continued to give a bonus, but my belief and information is that Mr. Baty did more just raising the price of the garment.

Q. Was it your understanding that a girl was to be paid only for what she made, if her machine broke down, or she was given a style which she had not previously worked on, or a more difficult style, which resulted in a smaller total amount of pay she would receive?

A. No. My understanding is that the instructors were asked to send in a notice of how much time a girl lost, or Mr. Baty informed himself by constantly going through the plant and seeing what was happening.

Q. Could Mr. Baty be going through the plant on such [fol. 3382] visits to determine as to each of the 500 girls why their total pay as showed on the time cards, figured by piece rates, was less than their average?

A. I am sure there was never a time when the whole 50 girls fell down on their piece rates.

Q. I was referring to any given girl out of the 500.

A. In all probability, he would have heard about it long before the end of the week was up.

Q. Isn't it true in your business that very often a girl makes less than her usual average, due to difficulty in handling a new style, or some machine breaking down?

A. I wouldn't say that they often do, no. I don't think they do often. I think it is an unusual thing.

Q. As I recall, you wanted to put a provision in the contract which was being negotiated, to allow you to continue your practice of pay, with respect to the matters I have been referring to?

A. That was because there wasn't so much of it.

Q. Will you describe the number of instances which would come under that provision you proposed in the contract? A. I wouldn't be able to describe that.

Q. I believe when you were testifying on direct you mentioned the two I have been referring to, that is, the new style which a girl might not be able to make as much money on when it first came through, because she wasn't used to [fol. 3383] dealing with it, or the breaking down of the machine.

A. A number of our styles have many operations that are the same operation, time after time. For instance, we have a little shirring on almost any dress, and in my shirring department rarely any girl makes less than $25.00, and many of them make $40.00 and $50.00 every week. Then, there are the hemmers, the same way, and the girl who sews the sideseams. There are many operations where it doesn't make any difference from one year to the next what happens, but it's just like if you have a child who is thrown out of the window, even if it is only one child out of a million, it is your child, and it is important; and as to the operators, if the other 999 girls in the factory made their amount and that one girl fell down, it might mean a lot to her that week.

Q. My specific question was—which I do not think you have answered yet—what other course of events, other than the new style and the breaking down of a machine, might account for a girl's making less than her average, which would be covered by the provision you wished to put into the contract?

A. Right at this moment I don't think of any other.

Q. Those were the two you had in mind?

A. More particularly, the new style. We have an unusually good set of mechanics, and I have some very high-class equipment, and it has always been my practice to furnish first-class equipment in the plant.

[fol. 3384] Q. You stated, I believe—correct me if I am not correct—that Mr. Baty would take care of a girl's falling down by raising the piecework prices. Would that be correct?

A. Sometimes.

Q. Would that occur when it was a new style and the girl was making a lower amount of pay for the week because she was just getting on to that new style?

A. Yes.

Q. You mean he would then raise the piece rate on it, even though he thought that after she became more experienced at handling it she could make her average with the piece rate originally set?

A. I think he did that sometimes.

Q. What would then occur? Would the piece rate be lowered as she became more skilled at handling that style?

A. Very often not. She just made that much more money.

Q. Would the instructor act as intermediary between the operator and Mr. Baty in informing him if a girl had difficulty with making her normal daily average on a new style?

A. Probably so. Sometimes she would. But he was right there in the section, and probably the easiest thing to do would be to ask the operator.

Q. What were the changes made in December of 1940?

. . . . . .

[fol. 3385] A. In what department do you mean, Miss Weyand?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I understood your testimony on direct was that as the result of a budget plan you made extensive changes in the matter of the organization of your business and the responsibility vested in various persons who it is claimed lacked supervisory authority prior thereto. Is that correct, that you did testify to that?

A. I did, yes.

Q. I want to know the extent and nature of the changes.

[fol. 3386] A. I think I already testified to that in direct examination.

Q. I think you can be more specific, if you will, please. Was there any change in the general set-up between July, 1935, and December, 1940, in regard to the amount of supervisory authority?

A. There was.

Q. What were those changes?

A. We set up the budget system for the first time.

Q. Prior to the setting up of the budget system, were there any changes?

A. I believe that — you mean just the month or two? This didn't happen all in one day.

Q. Was the picture you have given me of the managerial situation as worked out by Mr. Baty in July of 1935, in general, continued in effect until your budget plan came into operation?

A. Yes, in that November or December, I don't remember exactly the date, those changes were made.

Q. You are certain it was in November or December of 1940, though?

A. Yes, I am certain of that.

Q. It was not earlier?

A. No.

Q. Would it be fair to state that your changes in [fol. 3387] November or December of 1940 reinstated, substantially, the situation that existed between January and July of 1935?

A. That is a very broad statement, and I say that would probably not be entirely fair. Mr. Baty was still managing the plant, and I merely instructed the instructors to take enough authority to get their work through more efficiently than they had done in the last few years. They were still under Mr. Baty.

Q. Was that the only change made as a result of the budget?

A. Oh, no. The instructors really had nothing to do with the budget. There are no budgets on individual sections.

Q. I understand, when you were describing it, you attributed the resignation of the instructors from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to the institution of the budget plan?

A. You misunderstood it, then. I don't believe that I put that in the record.

Q. The record will show what you said, but I got that impression, and I would like to have you clear it up, if you could explain it to me.

A. The instructors had nothing to do with the cost of maintaining their sections, and I didn't intend that they should be included in any way as having a responsibility in the budget system. It merely — the general reorganizing of the management of the business was in connection [fol. 3388] with putting in a budget system. The main reason that I changed it, gave the instructors more authority, was that I didn't want the work to pile up in the sections, and the instructors felt that the operaters felt they didn't have to do anything that Mr. Baty didn't tell them to do, when they didn't want to do it.

Of course, if all of them took a notion that they didn't want to do anything that Mr. Baty didn't tell them to do, it is a fact that we couldn't have gone on at all. Naturally, there were a few in a section, but at the same time, the instructors felt that they ought to be able to say to a girl, "Now, this work has to be done, and has to be through, and you must do this particular operation," and then they could have the work through in an orderly fashion, and wouldn't pile up, and stay in the section a long time.

I never heard any complaint from any operator after the instructors were told that they could say that to the girls and they could settle their own small things in the section, without calling Mr. Baty.

Q. Had they been able to do that prior to July, 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. So the authority which you vested in the instructors in November or December of 1940, was the same as the authority they had held prior —

A. I did not say that. That is your own conclusion.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3389] A. No, that same authority was not given back.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What was the difference?

A. Well, one difference was Mr. Baty was running the plant.

Q. What difference did it make if Mr. Baty was running the plant rather than Mrs. Reeves, in reference to the instructors' duties?

A. Mr. Baty felt that there were a number of these things that he could handle himself, and handle them better.

Q. What were those, specifically?

A. Well, one of the things, I think, was the complaint about the piece work prices.

Q. Prior to July, 1935, those were made to instructors, weren't they?

A. The complaints would be made to instructors, yes.

Q. From July, 1935, until November of 1940, they were not made to instructors, is that correct?

A. Well, I can't say no complaint would be made to an instructor, but Mr. Baty did more to settle those complaints, I am sure, than Mrs. Reeves did.

Q. And that manner of settling complaints was not changed in November of 1940.

A. That didn't came up. The instructor didn't say [fol. 3390] that she had to settle the piece work prices to run her section. The main thing that the instructors said to me, several of them did, was that they wanted the authority to say to a girl that she must do the work that the instructor assigned to her.

Q. Is that the only change that was made enlarging the authority and duties of the instructors in November of 1940?

A. The instructors thought that was a great change.

Q. Is that the only one, is my question.

A. I don't know whether there were any others. That was the main change.

Q. Then there were no other changes as far as you know?

A. I don't remember whether there was.

Q. Did that change, in your mind, require that the instructors resign from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I had no opinion on that. I still don't have any opinion on that. I feel that is something between the instructors and the union.

Q. Immediately after you gave those instructors that enlarged authority, you received resignation notices, that all of the instructors had resigned from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, is that correct?

A. The notice was sent to the company, and sometime along the line it came to my attention.

Q. That was subsequent to the time that you vested this enlarged authority in them?

[fol. 3391] A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall how long subsequent to your notice to the instructors they had this authority?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you have any idea whether it was a month or six weeks to two months or more or less time?

A. I don't remember; because I didn't attach any importance to it. The information came to me, just like a lot of things come to my attention or to my desk, that have happened.

Q. Were you given a written notice?

A. I personally was not. I am inclined to think the accounting department got the notice to quit deducting the dues from the instructors' pay.

Q. Do you know whether that notice was in the form of a letter from the instructors individually, or from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I don't remember that. I remember that, of hearing that a notice had come from the union that the instructors had resigned, or perhaps they asked them to resign. I don't know, because I really didn't feel that was anything that I had any responsibility about, and I had so many things to do, I didn't think anything about it.

Q. After you determined to change the authority of the instructors, what manner of notice did you use, in telling the instructors that they had an enlarged authority?

[fol. 3392] A. I had a meeting with the instructors in my office, with Mr. Baty.

Q. Do you remember the date on which that meeting was held?

A. Not the exact date.

Q. Would you know the month?

A. I know that it was in — sometime in November or December.

Q. Of 1940?

A. Of 1940, yes, after I had a number of reports from Mr. Bachofer.

Q. Did the company — the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, take any part in the presentation of a complaint which you said you had received from the girls as to the unsatisfactory nature of the instructors' authority, prior to December of 1940?

A. I don't quite get your question, Miss Weyand.

Q. I understood that your change in the authority of the instructors resulted from complaints from the girls and from the instructors, is that correct?

A. My main reason for making that change was that my complaints were from my customers, that they weren't getting their merchandise on time. They were getting — they were not getting sufficient shipments, and they didn't have enough on hand at one time to advertise the line. That was the main thing that made me think about it. The merchandise was not coming through in time.

[fol. 3393] Q. Didn't you also receive a statement from girls that they preferred to have the instructors' authority enlarged?

A. That was after it happened.

Q. I see. What method was taken of notifying the girls that this change had been made in the authority of the instructors?

A. I don't know. I simply told the instructor that she did have the authority to say what work a girl should do, and I suppose each instructor used h . own way of telling the girls, because I didn't hear about it any more. The main thing I got was much better results. I got no complaints, but immediately got better results in my manufacturing.

Q. Was the authority of your head cutter affected at all by either the change in July, 1935, or the change in November or December of 1940?

A. The head cutter, the change there was based on the budget. He was told that the expenses in the cutting department had grown very high, and he was expected to spend more time and have more authority in directing his work, so we would get better results, and that was based on the budget.

Q. I take it, in that regard, you are speaking of November or December, 1940?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there a change in the head cutter, in July of 1935, analogous to the change in the instructors?

[fol. 3394] A. Yes.

Q. Can you state specifically how that worked out in relation to the head cutter? You have indicated his authority was always somewhat different from the instructors.

A. In that particular instance, I don't think that there was very much change. I don't think that Mr. Fountain had ever held himself up as a real boss. He worked right along with the men. He seemed to get along with them so well. I don't think there was anything in the cutting department that the cutters thought they had a boss.

Q. What authority did the head cutter assume after November or December of 1940?

A. I don't know. He was supposed to do a better job of getting the work out.

Q. Could he recommend the discharge of a person who, he felt, was inefficient?

A. Yes, he could.

Q. Had he been able to do that previously?

A. I hadn't heard of him doing it.

Q. What disciplinary measures could he take after November, 1940, other than recommending discharge?

A. When you use that term, disciplinary or discipline, it is a word that is so seldom used, if ever used, in our place. It is hard for me to answer your question. You have thoroughly skilled cutters, making $10 and $15 a week more than they can make any place else in town, and [fol. 3395] working the year around, and some of them have not lost a day in 20 years, and you can't discipline those men, you can't discipline that kind of man, and mainly that is what it is made up of.

Q. That is the same situation which you have described in the section, that work piled up and was not gotten out, or did that just apply to the cutting department?

A. I think the main thing in the cutting department was the expense had piled up. I hadn't heard anything about the work. I think it was mainly the expense.

Q. What authority did you give the head cutter that would reduce the expenses?

A. Well, I know that I didn't—Mr. Bachofer discussed the expenses always with the different department heads; I didn't discuss it with them in the cutting department. I know one part of the expense was a great deal of overtime. I think it was suggested that they either employ more cutters so they could work at regular time, or manage the work better, so that it wouldn't—the cutting wouldn't be so expensive.

Q. Was the enlarged authority you gave the head cutter related to managing the work more efficiently?

A. He was, I think, to get the work out more efficiently, without so much expense. I don't know—I don't believe I remember the details of how he was to do it. I don't believe the details were discussed. I didn't discuss that with him.

[fol. 3396] Q. Was he given authority to say or do anything in regard to the employees that he felt was necessary, in reference to reducing the expenses or getting the work out more quickly?

A. I didn't talk to Mr. Scoles, so I don't know.

Q. What was his reason for the expense going up so much in the department? When did Mr. Scoles become head cutter?

A. When Mr. Fountain died.

Q. Do you know the date, approximately?

A. No, I don't remember the date.

Q. Do you have any idea what the date was?

A. No, but it could be easily found out. I don't remember, but a few years ago.

Q. And then Mr. Scoles succeeded Mr. Fountain directly?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Scoles, after November of 1940, receive authority to recommend increases in the wages of the cutters?

A. We had a very definite scale of wages set up in our contract for cutters.

Q. Was that scale set up so that a cutter could not, without a change in the contract, receive an increase in pay?

A. No.

Q. Did cutters receive increases in pay from time to time during the period of the contract?

A. Yes, but those were given by Mr. Baty, and usually in consultation with myself.

[fol. 3397] Q. And the enlarged authority which you gave to Mr. Scoles, to be responsible for the expenses and production department, did not include the authority to recommend increases?

A. There would be no reason why he shouldn't have recommended increases if he had wanted to.

Q. Did he?

A. I don't remember that he did.

Q. How many persons were in the cutting department, by November, 1940?

A. I would say from 12 to 14 cutters.

Q. Did the personnel of the cutting department still consist of persons you knew personally?

A. No.

Q. Did you continue to visit the cutting department sufficiently to be acquainted with the activities of the cutters?

A. I discussed their skill and activities with Mr. Baty.

Q. Did you make personal observations in regard to their skill, by noticing the men themselves and seeing them work?

A. No.

Q. I believe you testified that in July of— January of 1935, you did have considerable personal acquaintance through observation and visits to the cutting department?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell me when you ceased to have such visits [fol. 3398] and such personal knowledge?

A. Well, I was in the N.R.A. hearing in the spring of 1935, which took a great deal of my time, and then we had several hearings in this injunction suit in '37, and I was ill in the year of 1939; but I have, in that time—I have been constantly in contact with Mr. Baty, and have discussed with him the personnel of the whole plant, and with Mrs. Reeves, who had been very close to these people, and I haven't felt that I have been completely out of touch with it.

Q. I notice a difference in your testimony as to January, 1935, how close you were, and it seemed you were less close in November of 1940. I wondered if there was a given period when there was a break, or whether it was a gradual lessening, and I want to get straight what your notions are, what your testimony would be, that the change took place and when it took place, and is it correct to state it was a gradual lessening of personal attention to the cutting department, because of the various events of illness and so on, which you have described?

A. As my business has grown, I naturally couldn't give the personal attention to each department that I formerly did, when I had a small business and actually managed it myself.

Q. Did that enlargement of the business reflect itself in any managerial change other than the November or December of 1940 change?

[fol. 3399] A. Well, I don't quite understand your question. I don't know. I don't know what you are getting at.

Q. You stated that this budget was put in because it had grown so large you had to have a readjustment of the business, and it seems to me that is quite a major change, what you have described, and I was wondering if there had been a major change resulting from your inattention of perhaps a smaller nature than this one, any change due to your getting away from your business, as it got larger between 1935 and 1940. Do you understand the question?

A. I still don't know what you are getting at, because I haven't lost track of that business in all of these years; even when I [will] ill a certain amount of it was kept before me.

Q. Did the fact that it grew large result in your establishing more departments and delegating more authority to other people?

A. The fact it grew large, and the fact it seemed to require—for a great many years I ran the business myself, and it got pretty large, and I seemed to have gotten along very well.

Q. I think perhaps you can answer my question by following through from January, 1935, down to 1940, with the specific departments. Who did Mr. Baty have directly under him, in January, 1937?

[fol. 3400] A. He had the sewing department and the cutting department, and the pressing department.

Q. Did he have any other persons to assist him in managing those departments?

A: In those departments they had specific duties of getting work through.

Q. Who did he have to assist him other than the managing personnel?

A. Other than the managing personnel?

Q. Yes.,

A. Mrs. Hyde really has assisted Mr. Baty very considerably since he went into the plant, in managing the personnel.

Q. Was Mr. Baty directly under you in the same manner Mrs. Reeves was directly under you?

A. He was.

Q. Did Mr. Baty continue until the present time to be directly under you?

A. He is.

Q. Has Mrs. Hyde's position changed at all since January, 1935?

A. She was personnel director then, and she is still personnel director. I don't believe it has. I don't know that it changed. She is personnel director, and I know she has assisted Mr. Baty very considerably in the personnel work, more than she had with Mrs. Reeves.

[fol. 3401] Q. Has Beulah Spilsbury's position changed since January, 1935?

A. I believe not.

Q. Does she hold the same position she did in January, 1935?

A. Well, I would say she did.

Q. Does she draw the same salary, or do you know that?

A. I can't remember the exact time I gave the raises. They haven't had very many raises. The executives haven't since the depression. There has been one increase, but I don't remember whether it was before or after 1935. It wasn't very far away, but the increases were given by me.

Q. Do you know what the increase—what her salary was before the increase?

Mr. Reed: We object to that as being immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. I don't have to tell the salary of my head designer.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was it before or was it after—

A. I do know that I employed her myself and made arrangements with her what her salary was to be, and I made all the arrangements on her salary myself. Miss Spilsbury has never been under anybody else's direction but my own.

Q. Has she made over $200 a month continuously?

A. She has.

Q. Has there been any change in Marvin Price's position since January, 1935?

[fol. 3402] A. Yes, he is salesman now.

Q. When did he become a salesman?

A. Well, he has done part-time selling, I would say, for about two years.

Q. What was he before he became salesman?

A. He worked in the maintenance department.

Q. Was his job continuously the same since January, 1935, in the maintenance department?

[fol. 3403] A. I would say he came under the same proposition that the instructors did when I turned the plant over to Mr. Baty to run. I gave Mr. Baty charge of the maintenance, as well as the cutting, and other departments.

Q. Had Mr. Price previous to that time been in charge, in any manner, of the maintenance department?

A. I didn't consider him so.

Q. How did you happen to select him as the supervisor?

A. I didn't say I selected him as a supervisor.

Q. You said when the budget system went into effect he was given charge of the maintenance department.

A. That did happen there. The maintenance department, like some of the others, had gotten at loose ends because they didn't have a person responsible.

Q. And he was then placed in charge of the maintenance department?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he given the title of supervisor of the maintenance department?

A. I suppose you would say that. He was given the responsibility of seeing that the maintenance department was better pulled together and got along better.

Q. Had he done anything in the nature of supervising prior to the institution of your budget plan in November or December of 1940?

[fol. 3404] A. I believe not.

Q. He had never done any supervising before?

A. He had purchased supplies for the janitors and he had done work that he was asked to do.

Q. Had anyone been in charge of the maintenance department prior to the institution of the budget system?

A. No one person had been held accountable for the real management of the department.

Q. Was there any one person who took the lead in saying which man went to which department, or did which work, or—

A. To a great extent, when the call was made it would be made for a painter, or someone to do certain work, and the person getting the call would know that a certain person was to do that. If they wanted some buttons painted, or some painting done, they would call one boy; or if they wanted a runway for the style show set up, they would call somebody else. It was really pretty much a thing of everybody having their own work and going ahead and doing it.

Now, that all happened because we started so small, and it only took one person to do it, and pretty soon it took two or three, and they were just added on.

If one person was there longer, or had more initiative than others, he might lead off in what there was to do, but the responsibility of how much money was spent in the department, and the actual managing of it was not settled [fol. 3405] until this budget system went in in 1940.

Q. Had Marvin Price's activities in the maintenance department been those of gradually growing into a position of being in charge of it?

A. I didn't feel that they had.

Q. There had been no one else who you could say was in any manner in charge of the maintenance department, except Mr. Baty probably, previous to the budget system?

A. There was maintenance in the mechanical department. It was pretty loosely run.

Q. Did Florence Strickland's position change at all between January 1935 and the present time?

A. Yes.

Q. What changes occurred in Florence Strickland's position?

A. When we put in the budget system we had the same situation in the cost of making patterns. Up until that time Mrs. Strickland spent practically her entire time making what we call correct patterns, doing pattern work.

The patterns in our institution, and the designs, are very closely associated. I don't believe that any other plant that I know of has their designers make their patterns, or at least grade them, but that is part of my idea of the way to run a dress business, so I have more designers in my designing department than most people have, but I expect them to make patterns and expect them to help [fol. 3406] grade patterns, also.

Now, originally the designers were able to do practically all of the grading, except what Mrs. Strickland did herself. Mrs. Strickland helped to make the original patterns.

As a matter of fact, originally I made my own patterns and did a lot of that work personally. I still pass on a great many of the patterns and the fitting of our garments.

So, the patterns and designing in the Donnelly Garment Company are very closely related.

Now, Mrs. Spilsbury had charge of the designing department, and Mrs. Strickland came directly under Mrs. Spilsbury's supervision, and anyone else making patterns.

Then, as in all of these other places, we found that, with the increase in business, the increase in the size of our plant, we rather loosely—if we needed some more help, we simply employed some more help, and we didn't feel that they were always being used to the best advantage. Mrs. Spilsbury was always busy with her designing, and, while she was interested in and gave some attention to the patterns, she didn't have time to spend a lot of time in personal direction. So Mr. Bachofer suggested to me, in getting up this budget system, that we separate the designing expense and the pattern expense and hold Mrs. Strickland responsible for the expense of getting out the patterns, particularly the pattern grading and making one correct pattern, and that is what happened.

[fol. 3407] Q. Was there any change in Mrs. Strickland's duties between January of 1935 and November or December of 1940?

A. Yes. She was given charge of the pattern department.

Q. When did that occur?

A. In, I think, December of 1940.

Q. My question was, was there a change in her duties prior to that time?

A. Yes, her duties were changed.

Q. Prior to this—

A. No. Her duties were changed in 1940.

Q. My question was, was there any change in the duties as you described them in 1935, up until the change you have described occurred in November or December, 1940; was there a change in the intervening period, or did her duties remain the same?

A. Mrs. Strickland was making patterns in 1935.

Q. Did she continue to make patterns up until the time the budget system went into effect?

A. She did. I think she did less grading, but she had more patterns to make.

Q. What other changes occurred than that she did less grading and had more patterns to make? Were there any other changes?

A. I don't remember—

Q. What was the growth of the pattern making depart[fol. 3408] ment during that period? Could you describe that?

A. There was a steady growth of the number of people who came into the pattern department.

Q. How many were in it in 1936, approximately?

A. I would say a half dozen, besides the designer.

Q. How many in 1937?

A. I couldn't say exactly each year how many were there. In 1937 I was in the pattern department, and there were just enough people to make the patterns. Mrs. Strickland did some of the grading herself. And then later on we would bring boys up from the cutting department to help grade. The designer would do some grading. It would be according to how quickly we finished the line.

Q. Did Mrs. Strickland have charge or direction of that work in any respect between 1935 and 1940?

A. I didn't expect her to. I didn't give her authority to or expect her to have any responsibility, any more than to make good patterns.

Q. Who directed or told these various people who came from various departments to this department to make or grade patterns what they were to do?

A. Dewey Atchison and myself worked out a plan of grading, and we had that set out in a form so that the person could take it and go along with that line of work.

Q. Who would tell the given persons which of the pat-[fol. 3409] terns they were to do?

A. Well, Mrs. Reeves would send to the department the numbers that she wanted graded first, and Mrs. Spilsbury would tell Mrs. Strickland the certain ones she wanted her to grade that were more difficult. We had more or less of a set rule that the designers would grade their own patterns, and it was pretty well established that certain people would do certain work, and when the men came up from the cutting department to do grading, the work was so ostensibly there to be done that there was very little to say about who should do it.

Q. The men just picked the patterns themselves they wanted to grade, and graded them, without anybody saying, "This is the pattern you are to grade."?

A. Back in 1935, I believe Dewey was helping us some with the grading, and I think Mrs. Spilsbury was really doing a great deal of the managing all of the way through.

Q. Between 1935 and 1940, did anyone other than Mrs. Spilsbury direct these boys who came in which patterns they were to grade?

A. Mrs. Strickland probably would say, "These patterns are here. Mrs. Reeves has sent word down that she wants number so-and-so, and I have the correct pattern made of that." And as soon as she would finish a correct pattern she would give it to somebody who didn't have [fol. 3410] anything else to do; and then, when they had a lot of work ahead, she would give it to somebody else.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3414] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does Miss Spilsbury report direct to you, or is she under Mr. Baty or some other person?

A. Miss Spilsbury, I would say, reports to me.

Q. She is not in any of these divisions you mentioned yesterday?

A. She would not be under Mr. Baty.

Q. Would there be any person she would be under, aside from yourself?

A. I have never thought of her being under anyone besides myself.

Q. Has that been true continuously from January 1935 to the present time?

A. It has.

Q. Is Miss Spilsbury's department or section or group of workers divided into subdivisions today?

A. At the present time it is.

Q. What are those subdivisions?

[fol. 3415] A. The pattern department, at the present time— She has the pattern department and she has a small office that serves the materials that she uses for designing sample pieces and furnishes the merchandise department with specifications for what goes into a garment, the colors that are used, and the trimmings for each individual garment.

Q. Would you have a name to describe Miss Spilsbury's division of the plant by?

A. We have always called it the designing department, but the designing department and the pattern department, as I explained yesterday, have always been run right together. I believe it is called the designing and pattern department—I'm not sure.

Q. Does Miss Spilsbury have direction over the pattern division of that department?

A. She does.

Q. What do you call this section which you have referred to as an office, which has to do with materials, as you were just describing? Do you have a name for that?

A. I have never thought of any special name for it, except it was a little office force that Miss Spilsbury needed to carry on her work.

Q. Does Miss Spilsbury have anyone under her other than designing, patterns, and this office force?

A. I don't recall at present. I can't think of any other [fol. 3416] direction she may have. If you will tell me what you are thinking of, I could tell you whether or not she does have.

Q. I was just wondering if that covered the complete group of workers she had under her. That was all I was interested in finding out.

A. Miss Spilsbury has charge of getting out the line of merchandise, and whatever help she needs to get that out she has.

Q. Is there anyone under Miss Spilsbury who has a supervisory position, in regard to the designing department, today?

A. If you take the designing— We have put Mrs. Strickland in charge of the correct pattern and having the grading done. She is now given responsibility for having that done.

Q. Is her position regarded as supervisory?

A. It is, at the present time.

Q. Does she have any title or name by which you describe her?

A. Well, perhaps you think I am very amiss about bestowing titles, but I have never thought it was necessary for people to have titles to do work.

Q. Well, you have something you call them?

A. I just call Mrs. Strickland, I would say, the head pattern maker. But under our new budget system Mrs. Strickland now is held responsible for the expense of turning out the pattern, for all of the grading, and for the— [fol. 3417] well, for all of the grading, anyhow.

Q. She would not be in charge of the designers, would she?

A. No.

Q. Those remain under Miss Spilsbury directly, do they?

A. They do. And Mrs. Strickland also remains under Miss Spilsbury.

Q. Is there anyone responsible for the designers, speaking in terms of your budget system of responsibility —anyone that is in charge of the designers, besides the group that is under Mrs. Strickland?

A. The designers are a great deal like pieceworkers; they work a great deal on their own.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, is there anyone there, Mrs. Reed, that you consider, for instance, as a head designer under Mrs. Strickland?

A. No.

Q. In other words, the designing section comes directly under Mrs. Strickland; is that it?

A. Yes.

Q. Without any person intervening?

A. There is no one that has any charge of the designers who would discharge or hire or—

Q. Is there anyone else besides Miss Spilsbury who would give them any direction?

A. Miss Spilsbury might use any of a half dozen peo- [fol. 3418] ple to carry messages to the designers, and say, "I want this done." We have two models that constantly work with the designers and with Miss Spilsbury, and of course I work with Miss Spilsbury a great deal of the time, when we are getting up new lines, and I am just as apt to tell a model to say to a designer— The designer sends the new model of the dress in on the live model to have Miss Spilsbury and I look at it to see if we like it. I am apt to say to the model, "Go back and tell the designer she designed that, that she has a very nice model but I think her collar is too wide, or the pockets are too high, and I think the model would be improved by taking the collar off and putting one on. Will you have her do that and then let me see the model?"

Miss Spilsbury might say that to the model, or we might say that to anyone who happened to be in the office at the time. Sometimes we call the designer in, if the change is enough.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Is there anyone whose duties are regarded as including the duty of assigning work among the designers, other than Miss Spilsbury?

A. There is Diana Rutherford, who helps Miss Spilsbury in many ways. If I want to see the models—Miss Spilsbury may have gone over the models with the designers while I was doing other work, and at a certain time in the afternoon she would want me to see all of them [fol. 3419] at the same time. Diana Rutherford does a great deal of that sort of thing in helping Miss Spilsbury.

Q. Is she an assistant to Miss Spilsbury?

A. I would say she does assist Miss Spilsbury.

Q. Is there any person intermediate between Miss Spilsbury and this office force which you have described?

A. At the present time Mrs. Brown is.

Q. How do you describe Mrs. Brown's position? If you don't want to call it title, what is she known as around the place?

A. I know that she directs the work of the little office force that takes care of Miss Spilsbury's merchandise for designing and making the specifications that go to the merchandise department.

Q. Does this office have any name? I am having difficulty when I refer to it of having any short way of expressing what I am talking about.

A. I'm very sorry, but— We do not seem to have any trouble in our place of—

Q. Do you call it the designing department office?

A. It could be called that.

Q. What do you call it?

A. I don't call it anything.

Q. If you send someone from your office over there, where do you tell them to go?

A. To the designing department.

[fol. 3420] Q. And if you wanted to refer, not to the whole designing department, but this office division—

A. If I send them down for a specification on a garment that was made, they would know to go to the office for it. If I send them for a model I want to see, they would go—If I sent for a model and it was a model that a specific designer was working on, I would say, "Go to this designer's booth and get that model for me."

Q. Did this office and the designing and pattern division all exist in January of 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the situation in 1935 as to the management of the persons who worked in Miss Spilsbury's division?

A. My remembrance is that Miss Spilsbury managed it herself. It wasn't as large as it is now.

[fol. 3421] Q. With reference to the spring of 1937, say April, 1937, was Florence Strickland at that time just one of the employees in the designing and pattern department, without any differentiation in her functionings from the other employees in the designing and pattern department?

A. She was—she was an expert pattern maker.

Q. Was she the highest paid pattern maker at that time? A. Yes, and most expert.

Q. But aside from that, her duties were in no way differentiated from those of the other employees in the designing and pattern department?

A. She was considered the real pattern maker, the one that we depended upon to make the correct pattern for our samples, and my remembrance is that anyone else in the pattern department did routine grading work.

Q. Did she direct the work of the persons who did routine grading work?

A. Well, I think there was possibly no directing done. Those graders were trained to do the work, and as I said yesterday, the process of grading, the way to do it, had been something that had been worked out so it was entirely routine work.

Q. Would she assign the work to the persons who did the routine grading?

A. What assignments would be necessary, Mrs. Strick- [fol. 3422] land got a list from Mrs. Reeves, what patterns she wanted, so Mrs. Strickland would be sure to get those correct patterns made first, and as Mrs. Strickland had a correct pattern made, then, the grader who was available, was out of work, would take each of those patterns and grade it.

There was very little direction given.

Q. Who would tell the grader about the pattern he was to do next? A. Mrs. Strickland would.

Q. If the grader was in question as to any details of making the pattern, whom would he inquire of as to the proper method of making the pattern?

A. He probably would to Mrs. Strickland, she was acknowledged as the expert pattern maker.

Q. If a pattern maker made an error in making the pattern, who would tell him of the error and direct him to correct it?

A. Well, in our plant we have a lot of direct contact, and in all probability Mrs. Tyhurst would come up and complain and she would go right to the person that did the grading and say, "You have left off a punch or a notch," or something like that.

Q. Did Mrs. Strickland look over the patterns before they went out to the departments to see if they were correctly made?

[fol. 3423] A. No.

Q. If there was to be a lay-off during a slack season, would Mrs. Strickland determine which of the graders would be laid off?

A. No. We had a certain number of graders that we keep in the department all of the time, and we would borrow from Mr. Baty people from, perhaps, the cutting department or some other place, where a girl had worked in the pattern department, and we never had to have any kind of conferences or any worry about what we would do with a grader.

When the big part of the grading was done, because Mr. Baty was always after us to give back this girl, because by the time we were through grading, the factory was into their big production, and they needed back all of the help they had loaned us.

Q. Who would determine whether the pattern department could spare the girl to go on, the cutter to go back to their other departments?

A. It was determined by whether the work was finished or not.

Q. I suppose it must necessarily have been some girls went back before others? A. Yes.

Q. Who would determine which girls would go back?

A. Mr. Baty would, and very often the girl who would go back first would be the one he wanted first, the one he [fol. 3424] needed first.

Q. Would he consult with Mrs. Strickland as to whether Mrs. Strickland wanted that girl to remain, making patterns, or to have her go back to another job?

A. He probably did. He would come up and say, "I want such and such a girl," and he would—he might—he would be just as apt to go to the girl himself as he would to Mrs. Strickland, and say, "When are you going to finish the pattern, and how are you getting along, and how much work do you think is to be done here," and he would be very apt to look down the list of the patterns, and the list was there.

The girl would finish her pattern and that would be checked off, and he would very probably go to the girl that he wanted back in the plant himself, and say, "Aren't you going to be able to come down pretty soon?" And she would say, "Well, I have two or three more sizes; nearly everything is done, and I am sure I can go as soon as I finish this pattern."

Q. Were these lists made up at the beginning of the season, with the girls' names opposite the pattern she was to grade?

A. No. There were no specific patterns given to the girl in the grading, except the designers; it was understood the designer, each designer would grade her own model, as far as she could, and some designers had more models, and maybe one designer would help with the one that had more models.

Q. How could a grader look at a list, then, and tell [fol. 3425] whether she would be called on to work on any of the patterns left on the list or not?

Mr. Reed: That is objected to as assuming what has not been testified to, there was a list.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think Mrs. Reed referred to a list, the list that Mr. Baty might look at.

A. Yes. Miss Spilsbury—Mrs. Reeves was really the person that checked on how many patterns were coming through the factory, because she was dependent on those patterns coming through to get her cutting done, so Mrs. Reeves would be the person that would have a list, and from that time she would send it down to when she would —as the patterns came through they would be sent to the cutting department, and they would report from there that they had gotten certain patterns, and she would know that she could make cuttings.

Q. I believe you testified that in determining whether a girl was available to return to her department, the girl could go to the list herself, and say to Mr. Baty—

A. (Interrupting) If the list happened to be down there at the time. Mrs. Reeves usually kept that list, and at different times would come down to the department herself to see how they were getting along, and check on what patterns were being made, and how long it would take to get them made.

Q. Assuming there were six girls from other depart-
[fol. 3426] ments working on grading, and Mr. Baty came to one of them and said, "I would like to have you back," could that one girl, by herself, without consulting Mrs. Strickland, determine whether she would be available to go back to the other department?

A. In the first place, we never had six girls, we never had that many girls from other departments.

Q. How many did you have?

A. I would say, sometimes one or two or three.

Q. And assuming you have three, two or three, could you answer the question I stated before, or would you like to have it restated?

A. They would discuss with Mrs. Strickland about the work.

Q. Whether she would be available to go back to the other department, or whether it was done, that is what you mean when you say "about the work"?

A. You can take it that way.

Q. Is that what you meant?

A. I don't know exactly how they would do it. We loaned people back and forth, and I think that it would be a matter of how many patterns were made. It would be based on the fact if there were two or more patterns to be made, and Mr. Baty would give up the idea of having this girl go back, rather than whether Mrs. Strickland wanted her to or not. It was a matter of getting out the work.

Q. Now was the work to be done by the girls that remained, if any of the three girls or two girls should be [fol. 3427] released? A. It probably would.

Q. And this was the situation, as you have described, as I understand it, of April, 1937, is that correct?

A. Mrs. Strickland was the chief pattern maker as of 1937, but she actually had no authority to hire anyone or to discharge anyone. She was not consulted about raises, and she was not consulted about who was to be put in her department. She had no managerial authority whatsoever. She was what I think the union usually called —the I.L.G.W.U. called a head pattern maker, and in the A.F.L. trade, they have head carpenters, and they do a certain amount of directing work; but she had no authority over an individual person in the pattern department.

Q. Were all persons who worked in the pattern department, either permanently or by transfer from other sections, paid on a time basis? A. Yes.

Q. Was the grading of a pattern so entirely routine that anyone who had ever graded patterns could grade one pattern as well as another?

A. Well, we always had a few patterns that were a little more difficult to grade. It was always understood that the designer that designed the garment would grade those herself.

Q. If Mr. Baty, at the beginning of a season, when the [fol. 3428] grading was to be done, had available a group of persons capable of grading larger than the number needed in the pattern department, would he consult with Mrs. Strickland as to which of the available girls should be assigned to the pattern department?

A. I don't know that a case like that would ever come up. I know that he always consulted with Miss Spilsbury about who would do grading.

Q. But he did not consult with Mrs. Strickland about who would do grading?

A. I don't know that he did.

Q. What was Mrs. Strickland's salary in 1935?

A. I don't remember exactly what it was.

Q. Do you know whether it has changed since 1935?

A. I think she has gotten at least one raise.

Q. Do you know what her present salary is now?

A. I believe it is $80.00 a week. That is not unusual for an expert pattern maker. As a matter of fact, I do some of the pattern making myself. I think it is very important in my business. And all of the original patterns were made by myself, the standard ones; that is the valuable part of our good will.

Q. When did Hilda Fitzgerald begin to work for your firm?

A. I employed Hilda Fitzgerald in Paris, first, I think, in 1926; I am not sure.

[fol. 3429] Q. What was her job in January, 1935?

A. She was designer and assistant to Miss Spilsbury.

Q. Did she have supervisory duties in 1935?

A. She was supposed to pass on garments that came back from the factory. I have a system in my plant where

I make my samples, and then, when my merchandise goes through the factory, one size of every model comes back to the designing department, and that is looked over and passed upon, to see if the routine in the factory has been able to carry out our idea, what the dress should look like. That is our system of mass production. I feel that it has to be checked up, to see whether they really can turn out the model that we make.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do these come back?

A. They come back to the designing department, one garment of each size.

Q. Do they come back to — what was this young lady's name, Hilda Fitzgerald?

A. For some time, Hilda Fitzgerald took that duty off of Miss Spilsbury. Of course, it is so important that in most of them, Miss Spilsbury sees them herself, and I see some of them, and if they don't look to suit Miss Spilsbury, she calls me in to look at them, to see what I think of them, and if there is anything that I can do about making them look better.

[fol. 3430] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does Hilda Fitzgerald have any person working under her to whom she gives directions?

A. She does not.

Q. Does she, at the present time, have any supervisory duties?

A. Hilda Fitzgerald at the present time is a professional worker, I would say; designer and stylist, and she had no department.

Q. Does she have any supervisory duties?

A. Not that I know of. I know she does not, but she is a professional woman.

Q. Was Lena Tyhurst directly under you in 1935?

A. No, she was directly — she was under Mrs. Reeves in 1935.

Q. Did she then come under Mr. Baty when he began producing merchandise in July of '35?

A. She did.

Q. And she has been continuously under him to date?

A. She has.

Q. I did not understand just exactly what she did, from your description yesterday, the statement she was to see if work was up to standard. Could you give me an idea what that involved?

[fol. 3431] A. It seems to me the statement speaks for itself.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Mrs. Reed, can you give any better idea of what she did in the plant?

A. In the production of high quality style merchandise, a great deal of care—perhaps watchfulness is a better term—must be used to insure the garment being finished up at a standard that we have set for ourselves. So we have had certain people that constantly check that work, look over that work, and see as it rolls through the plant—If you could see my plant, with the mass of garments going through, and then know the result we finally get, you would know that a great deal of watchfulness and care are exercised in that production.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does she check on the methods of production in each of the various divisions which are under Mr. Baty?

A. I think that would be a very big task.

Q. Does she?

A. No, she doesn't.

Q. What parts of the plant which are under Mr. Baty does she check up on?

A. She doesn't check up on the plant. She does check up on the merchandise.

Q. How does she go about checking up on the merchandise?

A. She looks it over.

[fol. 3432] Q. As it is being done?

A. Yes.

Q. Does she look over the work that is being done in the cutting department as it is being done?

A. No. Just in the sewing department.

Q. Would that include the dividing department?

A. No.

Q. The bundling department?

A. No.

Q. The pressing department?

A. If there was complaint about the pressing coming through badly, she might go into the pressing department and look at the merchandise. She might go into the pressing department. She would go into the pressing department if there was complaint about the general quality of the pressing.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The pressing department, is that where the garments go finally from the sewing?

A. Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you have a separate inspection section?

A. We have had a separate examining—I think is the proper name for that—section.

Q. Have you had that continuously since 1935?

A. I don't remember the exact date that was changed. Formerly we had the examiners on the same floor and near [fol. 3433] the machines, and we have gone back to that system. I don't know whether all of the examiners have been put back to be near the machines, but most of them have, and our purpose is to do that.

Q. In January 1935, were the inspectors distributed three or four to each section of operators?

A. In 1935 the examiners were—my remembrance is that they were three or four to a section.

Q. And that is the present method in general?

A. It has been changed back to that.

Q. There was a period between 1935 and the present time in which the examiners or inspectors were removed from the sewing section and put in a section by themselves?

A. Yes.

Q. While that section was in operation Mrs. Tyhurst checked over the work there done, did she?

A. Mrs. Tyhurst didn't do so much checking over the work when it was finished. She checked the work while it was in progress, to keep these things from happening to it. After the work is finished, then it is each examiner's responsibility as to the quality of the garment she examines.

Q. Would Mrs. Tyhurst have any supervision over the examiners, to see that they examined the garment properly?

A. No.

Q. Did she have any duties at all in relation to the examiners?

[fol. 3434] A. Certainly her work was to see that the garment was going through in such a way that when it got to the examiners there wouldn't be any serious thing the matter with it. The examiner, when they were in the large group together, took the work back herself. That was one reason I changed them back, the examiners complained about having to go so far to carry the work back to the operator. I have always held an examiner very responsible for the work she examined.

Q. What relationship existed between Mrs. Tyhurst and the instructors with reference to Mrs. Tyhurst's checking the manner in which work was done in the various sewing sections?

A. The work Mrs. Tyhurst was supposed to do was to go through the plant constantly and see that the quality of the work as it was moving along was up to our standard. Just what she would say, I don't know, but I do know that she would talk to the girl doing the work herself, and if the girl would say, "Well, that's too hard to make, I can't do it any better."— Mrs. Tyhurst was a very excellent operator; she had worked on a machine for a number of years herself, and did very fine work, and was very clever in how to handle it, and she probably would give the girl an idea of what to do. Then, she might find the sleeves were not being set in right, that the notches or the punches or the guide that was put on the sleeve wouldn't be right, so she would go to the pattern department and say, "Your punches are not right," or she might suggest they put in [fol. 3435] another punch or another mark so that it would be helpful in getting the work through.

Q. What would she do if she found the girl stated she was doing the work in the manner in which the instructor's instructions required the work to be done?

A. She might go up to Mrs. Nichols and discuss with her whether she thought that was the wisest way to have the instructions made, and suggest that they be changed.

Q. Would she check with the instructor to see if the girl's interpretation of the instructions was correct?

A. I don't believe she would spend the time doing that. The thing that would impress her would be the fact of whether the work was being done to the best advantage, and she would be very direct about trying to get the work done right.

You know, there is a tremendous amount of work to be done there, and we do not spend a lot of time, like they do in the army, going from one person to another, and another. We have no rules about having to go to certain superiors in our place, where this person might have her feelings hurt because we said, "You ought to do this," or "You ought to do it some other way."

Mrs. Tyhurst, as I understand her duties, she is to be helpful in getting a good quality of work through the factory promptly. So she would be very direct in trying to help the girl.

[fol. 3436] Q. Could she tell the girl to do the operation in a different manner than the girl had been doing prior thereto?

A. She could suggest that. The girl is on piecework, and what that girl is trying to do is make as much money as possible, and I am sure that if she thought the suggestion was good she would have no hesitancy in doing it.

Q. Would Mrs. Tyhurst tell the instructor of her suggestion to the girl to do the work in a different manner than the girl had been previously doing?

A. She might, but it wouldn't be obligatory for her to do it.

Q. What would happen if she failed to tell the instructor, and the instructor came up to the girl and said, "Here, you are not doing this the way the instructions said to do it and the way I told you to do it."?

Mr. Reed: I object to that as calling for supposition and being clear outside of the issues of the case.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was the question?

Miss Weyand: I will ask the reporter to read it.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Reed: Now, I made an objection and I would like to have a ruling on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection. You may answer the question.

A. The girl would probably say, "I am getting along [fol. 3437] better this way." And the instructor would be so glad that the work was going through, that there would be nothing further about it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. So, the instructor does not have the duty to see that the girl conforms to the instructions, and the girl is free to depart from the instructions if someone advises her she could do it better some other way; is that correct?

A. There is no rigid rule in our place that someone does something just because somebody else tells them to do it that way. We have always had a policy that if an operator can do an operation in an easier, quicker manner, she can do it. Now, who made the suggestion to her to do that isn't important.

Q. She has no duty to follow Mrs. Tyhurst's suggestions if she doesn't think it will improve her work?

A. Well, for a number of years she didn't have.

* * * * * * *

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Mrs. Tyhurst considered as having higher authority than the instructors?

[fol. 3438] A. Mrs. Tyhurst was doing an entirely different job than the instructors.

Q. If a girl did not know whether the instructions she received from the instructor or the instructions she received from Mrs. Tyhurst would be more efficient in handling the work, which was she expected to follow?

A. The fact is, she would follow what she thought was the best way to do it.

Q. And if she was unable to determine in her own mind which was the better way to do it, how would she resolve the difficulty?

A. Well, I never heard of an operator that couldn't make up her mind which would be the best way. She would try it out. It would all get back to the fact that she had already tried out the way the instructor had told her, and if Mrs. Tyhurst would make a suggestion to her, she would try that out, and the result would be fact, so there would be no reason to resolve it in any way.

Q. Would Mrs. Tyhurst's suggestions always be directed only to the more rapid method of achieving an operation, or would they sometimes be directed to achieving a result which would produce a better garment but perhaps not by as rapid a method for the girl to get the operation done?

Mr. Hogsett: I submit the question is so involved as to hardly be intelligible; and even if it were intelligible, [fol. 3439] so that an answer could be made one way or the other, it would not throw any light on the issues.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Reed?

The Witness: Well, it is pretty involved.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you don't understand it, say so. You are the person who has to answer it, and you are the person to determine whether you understand it or not.

The Witness: I don't know whether you said I had to answer it or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I said, you are the person to determine whether you understand the question or not. I don't want you to answer a question which you do not understand.

The Witness: Will you please read it again?

Trial Examiner Batten: I think, in substance, the question is, did Mrs. Tyhurst also make suggestions as to changes in the method? Is that it?

Miss Weyand: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Perhaps I misunderstood the question.

Mr. Hogsett: I certainly lost it.

Miss Weyand: I will restate the question. Perhaps I [fol. 3440] might explain my thought.

Mrs. Reed's previous answers have assumed that the suggestions which Mrs. Tyhurst would make would be directed to achieving a more rapid performance of the operation—

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand her testimony this far to be that Mrs. Tyhurst was to see that the quality of the work, as well, which goes through the plant, was proper.

The Witness: Not only the quality as well, but that was the main object in having Mrs. Tyhurst go through the plant, was to watch the work as it went through the factory, to see that our standard was being maintained.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. You assumed in answering my question before about whether a girl would follow Mrs. Tyhurst's suggestions or the instructor's suggestions, that the girl would necessarily follow that method which she thought was the more rapid method to get the operation done, so she could make a higher amount of pay for the day.

A. But every operator understands that a certain standard of workmanship must be maintained and, naturally, she wants to do it as fast as she can. There is really, with a skilled operator, very little quarrel between speed and quality.

Q. Suppose Mrs. Tyhurst's suggestion to a given girl is that a method should be followed which Mrs. Tyhurst thinks will make a better garment, but which concededly [fol. 3441] will be a slower method for the girl to make the operation she is doing; would the girl then be allowed to make up her own mind as to whether she wishes to follow the suggestion of Mrs. Tyhurst or the suggestion from the instructor?

A. Over a period of years, if the operator felt that a suggestion made to her by Mrs. Tyhurst would slow up her work and she would make less money, I am very sure she would immediately call Mr. Baty and say that an adjustment should be made in the price.

* * * * * *

[fol. 3443] Q. Did the right of a girl to decide whether she would follow the instructor's directions or the directions given by Mrs. Tyhurst, include authority to decide which method would achieve a better garment?

A. The operators know that they are expected to maintain a certain standard of quality.

Q. You are finished with your answer?

A. Will you please read that question?

(Question was read by the reporter.)

A. I will let my answer stand.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume—if I am not correct will you please call my attention to it—but I presume that the question is, if a written instruction or the instructions require a garment to be made a certain way in accordance with the instructions, I presume, a plan which was sent down from your planning department, and then if Mrs. Tyhurst should come into that sewing section and she should suggest a change to the operator not in accordance with your planning department, and it affected quality, if the operator still would have the right to decide which of the methods she would follow in making the garment. I don't know.

A. I don't believe that is exactly the question Miss Weyand asked.

Miss Weyand: That is the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: If that is the question, if you [fol. 3444] understand my question, Mrs. Reed, you may answer.

A. The operators have always understood that the work they turned in had to come up to a certain standard. Now, when Mr. Baty went into the plant and assumed complete authority over the personnel in the sewing division and operators, they did not feel it necessary to do what either Mrs. Tyhurst or the instructors told them to do.

Miss Weyand: Then your answer would be she would decide for herself whether she wanted to follow the method given her by Mrs. Tyhurst, or given to her by someone else, or some other method that she wanted to follow, without regard to the fact that she had other instructions?

A. I don't know what you are getting at.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think what you are trying to get at, when that situation existed in the plant that you just described, that is, Mr. Baty was responsible for the entire production, the sewing section, and the instructions suggested one method, and Mrs. Tyhurst should come through the section and suggest another, the operator then decided for herself which method she would use, is that correct?

Miss Weyand: No, the question was—

A. (Interrupting) Well, I don't know what you mean.

Miss Weyand: Even if that did not occur, would the operator be free to—.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, I don't under- [fol. 3445] stand it then, myself. I am afraid I'd better quit.

Mr. Hogsett: May I make a general observation?

We have sat here for hours, listening to hypothetical questions that are not predicated on any facts. In other words, Miss Weyand is working out questions with geometrical precision, and has spun out of that geometrical precision a psychological vacuum, and has predicated her questions on that theory of hypothetical assumptions; and I submit it doesn't get us any place. That technicality of interrogation, in character, is objectionable, and not founded upon anything that is known to exist, I submit.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't believe I will sustain your objection. As I previously stated, Mrs. Reed is the president of the company, and thus far I have permitted, I think, somewhat more latitude with Mrs. Reed than I perhaps would have with oth witnesses, in view of the fact she is the president of the company. I will permit Miss Weyand to proceed, but I want to be sure that the witness understands the question.

So, Miss Weyand, will you proceed, please?

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Getting away, for a moment, from the situation in which Mrs. Tyhurst comes into the section and suggests a different method of operation, was the girl free to depart from the instructions given her by her instructor, whenever the girl felt like it?

[fol. 3446] A. From the time Mr. Baty took the plant over she was; and I am sure she felt that she was; and while we have tied ends up so in our management problem—we have given more responsibility and more authority to our instructors and to Mrs. Tyhurst, still I want to say that we have a number of skilled operators that have—some of them have been in my place for over 20 years, and the instructors and Mrs. Tyhurst and Mr. Baty, and anyone in the plant would recognize that perhaps they would be able to work out a better way of doing their particular job than anyone else.

So, even though we have tied up ends in our management in the plant, we still have a great many operators who know best how to proceed with their work, although we may have instructors that would have a slightly different idea, and the operators might suggest that certain lines of work be changed, that they could do it better, and more of it.

Q. When you say that you have a great many skilled operators, have you classified them so that both the company and the girls know which operators have that authority and which do not?

A. Well, that expression—I was going to say—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. Do you know, do you have your operators classified within the sewing section as to their skill?

[fol. 3447] A. No, they are classified as to the type of work they do.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. And does that, in turn, have a relation to their skill? The most skillful do certain things, and the less skillful do other things?

A. No, not necessarily. Certain ones are more skilled on certain specific things; particularly a woman that has run a special hemming machine for 10 years would probably be the best judge of how to put a hem in a garment.

Q. Yes, I understand that. In the hemming section—you have a hemming section?

A. No. We formerly had a hemming section, but we now have most of our hemmers in the section with the other workers.

Q. Well, you do not, then, make any classifications of your operators by skill, is that right, which is known to the instructors and to the operators?

A. We have certain operators that do certain parts of the garment, usually.

Q. My question is, do you take all the operators in one section, irrespective of what they do, and do you make any sort of a classification as to their skill, as to whether they are excellent operators, very good, good or unsatisfactory operators?

A. The rate of pay—they are all paid on the same piece [fol. 3448] rate basis, but the amount of pay they are able to draw would show how fast they are.

Q. And how efficient?

A. But the quality of the work—they are all supposed to turn out the same quality of work.

Q. Well, then, to the extent the operator is permitted to use her own judgment on these garments, do you give that authority to all, irrespective of their skill?

A. Well, anyone that—any operator that has been doing the same kind of work for a long time, would be more or less recognized as knowing how to do that kind of work. Now, if there is new work—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a moment. Would she have authority—assuming some of them do, they all have the same amount of authority to use their own judgment in the making of a garment?

A. I think authority is a poor word to use, Mr. Batten.

Q. I admit it is, but I find your testimony—

A. (Interrupting) I don't say they had authority.

Q. Just a moment, please. Let me try to explain myself. If I understood your testimony correctly, some of the operators use their own judgment at times?

A. Yes.

Q. As to the making of a garment? A. Certainly.

[fol. 3449] Q. Now, my question goes to all of the operators that work on the garment. Do they have that right to use their own judgment?

A. It would revolve around the fact of whether they know how to make that garment, and know how to do the operation.

Q. In other words, if you consider their judgment good, is that what you mean?

A. We never had any discussion about a girl wanting to do that in an operation; when she didn't know how to do it she would call the instructor. They are all eager to be shown.

Q. Let's assume they all know how to do it; some are fast and some are slow, which they are, I presume, isn't that right? A. Yes.

Q. Do they all have the authority to use their own judgment as to making that garment within certain limits?

A. I would say, if they all knew how to do every operation that came to them, we wouldn't need any instructors to show them how.

Q. You say all of the operators, except those which are not familiar with the operations, have that privilege?

A. That would be better, yes; I would say that.

Q. That would approximate the situation? A. Yes.

[fol. 3450] Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think there was another part to your question, Miss Weyand, if you want to proceed with it.

Miss Weyand: I would like to take a couple of minutes to think, if you don't mind taking the time. If you don't mind, I would like to follow a bit further the line you have been conducting.

Trial Examiner Batten: I just suggested there was another part to your question that was not answered. I might suggest on your questions, it seems to me that some of them are sort of double-barreled. I mean by that they almost require two answers, and therefore the witness must think of the first question and the second question; I think if you will proceed by asking the question which lays the foundation for the question which you really want to ask, perhaps it would assist the witness.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. If a girl is new in your plant, but becomes familiar with one given operation, can she immediately, after becoming familiar with that operation, change the method of doing it?

A. If she finds a better way to do it, if she thinks of a better way to do it, yes, she can.

Q. Then Mrs. Tyhurst's duties, in reference to seeing that the goods are up to quality, consist entirely of making suggestions to the operator, don't they?

[fol. 3451] A. No.

Q. What else do her duties consist of?

A. I have said several different times that Mrs. Tyhurst goes through the plant, she looks at the garments, and some of them have only one or two or three operations finished on them, and she sees if it looks all right and she passes it on to another as she goes through, and the operators will say to her, "I can't get these collars straight, I don't have enough marking to go by," and the operator will show her the work and that the collar—it is too hard to do the way it is.

Sometimes the operator will say, "If you had just one more notch, Mrs. Tyhurst, I could do this fine," so Mrs. Tyhurst goes up to the pattern section and says that we want another notch in this, or to the cutting department, usually; they put a notch in with their notching machine, and maybe they will say that along toward the finish of a garment, and perhaps eight or ten operators have worked on it, and they say that "The sleeves, the shirring is too tight in these sleeves, and it is too hard for me to put the sleeve in right, and takes too much time," and in that case, Mrs. Tyhurst will look at the ticket and see who did that shirring, and in all probability she will go over to a certain girl that did that shirring and say, "Those sleeves you are sending over to a certain section are too [fol. 3452] tight," and then that operator will check up with her gauge, and she may say, "The gauge I have is too short, that I am not doing them according to the gauge."

She might say, "Well, the tension of my machine is a little too tight; I am sorry, but I will get them better," and Mrs. Tyhurst will depend upon this girl getting them better. Perhaps the one that made the complaint will be allowed a certain amount on the dozen.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Who will make the allowances?

A. That allowance, at the present time, is made by the instructor.

Q. Well, how was it made before?

A. Well, those things, before, were just—I am afraid they would let it go along, and Mr. Baty would see the card at the end of the week.

Q. Suppose the machine you indicated the operator or Mrs. Tyhurst said needed adjusting, and Mrs. Tyhurst can't adjust it, who does?

A. The mechanic would be called.

Q. Who would call him?

A. Well, probably the instructor, maybe Mrs. Tyhurst or the instructor; if the instructor was busy, Mrs. Tyhurst would probably call him.

Q. Either Mrs. Tyhurst or the instructor would call and say, "We have a machine up here, and will you send [fol. 3453] someone up here or come up here and see what is the matter with it"? A. That's right.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Taking the illustration you just gave, with reference to cutting of an extra notch, could the person who Mrs. Tyhurst directed to cut the extra notch decide it should not be cut?

A. Well, that goes back to a question of fact. If it should be cut there would be no argument about it.

Q. Do they have to take Mrs. Tyhurst's word for it, that it should be cut?

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume Mrs. Tyhurst saw there should be a notch, and she would see that the notch would be put in there?

A. That's right.

Miss Weyand: And a person would have to cut it and could not refuse to obey her?

A. The word obey is so foreign.

Q. Mrs. Tyhurst has control of the section?

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume what Mrs. Tyhurst would do would be to call up the section that would put in the extra notch, whether it was the pattern department or the cutters, and say, "We can't make these dresses unless you put another notch in the collar, because the operator can't put the collar in, properly. Now, it is necessary that we have another notch."

[fol. 3454] A. There would be no authority.

Q. Just a moment. As a result, either the cutting department or the pattern department would put another notch, and then the instructions would come down to the instructor properly?

A. We don't do it that close. We just tell them.

Q. If you are going to make a change in a design, everybody along the line would have to know about it?

A. We have a perforated pattern, and that notch is put in that pattern, and thereafter that notch stays in that pattern.

Miss Weyand: So Mrs. Tylurst has the authority to speak for the company in saying the notch should be put in? A. When you talk about authority—

Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting). It seems to me that is carrying this question of authority to an absurdity. Now, a truck driver might be driving a truck, and another assistant on the truck might say, "You have got a flat tire, you'd better stop." Would anybody say the assistant had authority to speak for the company, because he ordered the truck to stop? In other words, we reach a point beyond all reason.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I think the important point is the statement which Miss Weyand made yesterday, I believe, along with other matters, what was actually done in this plant.

[fol. 3455] Mr. Hogsett: I agree.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, it seems to me the way to show what was done would be in the daily and ordinary operation of this plant. Now, you might call a person a foreman, when he is not a foreman, and you might call him a superintendent when he is not a superintendent; I think that is as far as I am concerned, and I think as far as the Board is concerned, with what actually took place in this plant at these various times.

Now, it seems to me some of these questions Miss Weyand has asked are hypothetical, and it seems there is no showing here that many of these things, which have been asked Mrs. Reed and answered, have ever occurred.

Mr. Hogsett: That is exactly the point.

Trial Examiner Batten: But I will say again, I am not going to attempt to tell any of the attorneys how to ask their questions. Thus far, with Mrs. Reed, I feel I have been very lenient with all of counsel, and I intend to pursue that policy until we are through with this witness, because she is the president of the company, and unfortunately was unable to testify in the prior hearing.

Now, on that basis, Miss Weyand, you may proceed. Now, what was the question?

A. Mr. Batten, may I try to throw a little light on this thing we are doing?

[fol. 3456] Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, Mrs. Reed, if you understood the question, that you answer the questions, and then I think we will get along.

A. Well, I will make a note of something then, when I get back.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think when Miss Weyand gets through, if your counsel wants to clarify these points, he can ask you questions regarding them.

I told you yesterday, when you get through with your testimony, if you want to make a statement, you may do so, the witness may do so.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, it is just a matter of her making a note now.

Mr. Reed: I submit if the witness wants, at this time, to make a statement to clarify any answer she has made, she has a right to do it.

Trial Examiner Batten: There is a question pending and I would like to clear that up first.

Will you read the question, Miss Reporter?

(Question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Did she have authority? I presume you are talking about the same period of time, the instructions that she gave about the notches.

A. I would say that Mrs. Tyhurst wouldn't need any authority to ask someone in the cutting department to put [fol. 3457] in a notch on a pattern, that in anybody's opinion would help the work along.

Miss Weyand: What would happen if one of the sewing operators decided that extra notch should be cut; if you want to discuss the facts, what occurred in the plant?

Mr. Reed: We have gone over that a few times.

Trial Examiner Batten: What did you say, Senator?

Mr. Reed: We have gone over that two or three times.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I presume an operator would make a suggestion to her instructor that if there was a notch it would work better.

A. That is exactly the point.

Trial Examiner Batten: And probably that person would suggest to Mrs. Tyhurst, or to the pattern department, "If you put another notch in, we can do a better job"?

A. It is just about as definite as that.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What is done if Mrs. Tyhurst notices that the sequence of operation in a given section in the plant is not the most efficient? What does she do, and what do other people do with it?

A. She would do different things. She might go up to Mrs. Nichols and say, "I think the way your instructions read to have that work go through the plant is not the best way."

Q. What other things must she do?

[fol. 3458] A. She might go to the mechanic and say, the tension on some machine is too tight, and the stitches are too long. Different things could come up.

Q. I was speaking of sequence of operation.

A. If the sequence of operation—she didn't think that the sequence was most efficient, she might discuss it with Mr. Baty, or she might just go to the planning department herself, and I think it would be changed.

Q. Does she ever speak to the instructors to change it?

Mr. Reed: I object to that, if the Examiner please; it is purely hypothetical.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I don't think it is hypothetical.

Trial Examiner Batten: Does she ever speak to the instructor to change the sequence in the section? That is the question, as I understand it.

A. If the sequence was changed, the instructions would have to be changed, so she would go to the planning department to make that suggestion.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does she ever make suggestions which can be carried out without going to the planning department, but which would involve the instructors issuing new directions to the girls?

[fol. 3459] A. That is not the setup that we have. She has no—

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Mrs. Reed, as far as you know, did she ever do that?

A. Not as far as I know has she ever done that, under our setup. The work is planned in the planning department, and the instructor is supposed to carry out those plans.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does the planning department determine the sequence in which a given section works on style or colors?

A. The sequence of working on styles and colors comes from the merchandising division, the instruction as to which styles and which colors to put through first.

Q. Do they issue written instructions specifying the order in which each given style goes through each section?

A. Yes.

Q. And they do the same for color of goods?

A. Yes.

Q. If Mrs. Tyhurst should notice that inefficiency was arising due to the sequence in which styles were given a girl or in which color of materials were given a girl, would she go to the merchandising department, or does she have another method of correcting that inefficiency?

A. Mrs. Tyhurst does not have that particular thing under her management.

Q. Who does?

A. Mr. Baty would be the person that would be called [fol. 3460] upon to say the work sent through, the colors, and so forth, wasn't the efficient way to put it through, unless some one would just go up to the merchandising department, and I question if they would do that. They would go to Mr. Baty.

[fol. 3462] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Turning now to Mrs. Martha Gray, was she just one of the salesladies in the retail store from 1935 until November 1940?

A. She was.

Q. Were her functions or duties differentiated in any respect from the other salesladies' in that retail store during that period?

A. She turned in the cash, I believe, every night.

Q. Was that the only respect in which her duties differed from those of the other salesladies'?

A. As far as I know, it was.

Q. What is the extent of your information on the subject?

A. I have been in the store a number of times, and I employed Mrs. Gray, or suggested the employment.

[fol. 3463] Q. Is the retail store directly under your supervision, or is there some intermediary between you and Mrs. Gray?

A. Originally the retail store was under my direction.

Q. When did it cease to be?

A. Well, when Mrs. Reeves relieved me of many other duties. I can't state the exact month or the exact time, because a number of my duties Mrs. Reeves had been assisting me on she took over, and I don't—

Trial Examiner Batten: Can you tell us the year, Mrs. Reed?

A. I couldn't tell the exact year—possibly 1935. It was quite some time ago.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did the retail store continue to be under Mrs. Reeves's direction after Mr. Baty succeeded Mrs. Reeves in July of 1935?

A. I believe it did. The retail store was run in such an automatic way that there wasn't so much attention paid to it, except simply to send the left-over remnants and materials to the store to be disposed of.

Q. Do you know how many salesladies were employed in the store in April of 1937?

A. Not exactly.

Q. Could you give us an estimate, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Perhaps four or six.

[fol. 3464] Q. Would you say that there were not more than six?

A. I wouldn't say that. There were not many more than that.

Q. And as far as you know, Mrs. Gray was no different from any other [other] salesladies in the plant, except that she turned in the amount of cash?

A. I know that she sold merchandise right along with the others.

Q. You know of no other difference between her and any of the others there employed, except her turning in the cash at night?

A. I do not.

Q. What was Mrs. Gray's salary in 1935?

A. I'm not sure, but I think perhaps $35.00 a week.

Q. Has her salary changed to date?

A. Yes.

Q. What is her present salary?

A. I'm not sure. It is somewhat more. I'm not sure how much it is.

Q. Do you know when the change in salary occurred?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Would you provide that information for us?

A. I will speak to my attorneys at noon and see.

Mr. Hogsett: Is that not in the record?

Trial Examiner Batten: Up to the summer of 1939, I believe all of these rates are in. I believe there is a copy of the pay roll in the record.

[fol. 3465] Mr. Hogsett: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, Miss Weyand, if there is a list of these people and you want their salary status since the summer of 1939, that you make out the list and take it up with Mr. Hogsett or Mr. Ingraham and see whether or not the respondent is willing to furnish it, and under what circumstances, and then I will talk with you attorneys about the matter.

Miss Weyand: I would like to continue to ask Mrs. Reed the questions, and at the end of that questioning provide a complete list of those which I desire.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What was Lulu Nichols's position in January, 1935?

A. She fixed the piece rates.

Q. Has there been any change in her position since 1935 to date?

A. Her activities were included in this budget system, so that she is at the present time held responsible for the expenses of her activities.

Q. Does she have a department?

A. She is in the planning department; she is one of them. At the present time she, as I said, is held responsible, to a certain extent, for the expenses of her activities.

Q. What expenses is she held responsible for?

A. All of the expenses that would be in it.

[fol. 3466] Q. Will you describe what those are?

Trial Examiner Batten: In connection with what, Mrs. Reed? You mean the price setting?

The Witness: In her instance it would be how much help she required to do it. That would be the main expense.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is her section in the planning, is the price setting; is that it?

The Witness: Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. How many persons does she have in that section?

A. Well, from one to three, or perhaps more than that; maybe four.

Q. Speaking of January 1935, were the prices which she set reviewed by any person in the plant prior to their issuance to the girls?

Mr. Reed: You are speaking of prior to 1935?

Miss Weyand: January of 1935.

A. In the fixing of prices Mrs. Nichols has always had the privilege of discussing and getting help from any source she felt could give her help. I know that Mrs. Nichols—I held her to account to not allow the designing department in any way to influence her in making a lower price so that a model could be put into a certain price range that they might want to do.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, I think the question [fol. 3467] implies this—I'm not sure—that after Mrs. Nichols sets the price, does that then automatically go to someone else for their approval before it goes into operation?

Is that correct?

Miss Weyand: That is correct.

The Witness: In January 1935, I don't believe it did.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. In the usual, ordinary routine case in January 1935, did Mrs. Nichols consult with someone else before setting a piece rate price? A. Yes.

Q. Whom did she consult with?

A. Sometimes she consulted with piece rate operators, sometimes with instructors, and sometimes with me.

Q. Could you give us any estimate of the percentage of instances in which she consulted with you?

A. In 1935 I would say she consulted with me rather frequently. Her desk is right on the same floor, within 20 feet of Miss Spilsbury's office, and when I am in the plant, although I have an office on the 10th floor, I spend the greater part of my time in Miss Spilsbury's office, and I would be available and in very close contact.

Q. Would you describe what prices are set on the usual garment?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the different items of price?

[fol. 3468] Miss Weyand: Well, one for the collar, one for the shoulder seam, one for the darts, and one for the under arm seam,—

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, on the ordinary dress, before it goes out to the sewing room, you have a schedule. Tell us what that schedule contains.

The Witness: Mr. Batten, from time to time we change that somewhat. Sometimes we have a theory that we want to have every little operation broken up, and we go so far that way that we decide it is better to have several of them together.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just tell us in general the different operations on a dress you set a price on. I presume for every operator who performs a different operation, there has to be a price on it; is that right?

The Witness: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Tell us, in general, then, the—

The Witness: There is the making pockets, making sleeves, setting pockets, sewing shoulder seams, setting collars, putting in darts, or shirring in the blouse, setting sleeves, sewing seams in skirts, sewing pleats in skirts, if there are pleats in the skirt, putting pockets in the skirts, if there are pockets in the skirts, sewing the skirt and blouse together, hemming skirts, and making belts.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Is a separate price set per dozen for each of the operations you have named?

[fol. 3469] A. Sometimes— For instance, on a collar, a girl may do some other small operation at the same time that seems too small to have a separate operator handle.

Trial Examiner Batten: Whatever number of operations you break it down into, whether it is 5 or 50, on each one of the items you set a price per dozen?

The Witness: That is right.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Do you have a standard price set for most of those operations that go through each style, or do you set for each style a specific price?

A. We have what we call a basic price for each operation. Then if the material is more difficult to handle, there is an increase put on that price. If a skirt has a number of gores in it and is very wide, or a number of pleats, and the hem is a much longer hem and more difficult to put in, naturally there is a higher price paid for that. On every operation there is a variation in price according to the type of material used, that is, whether it is difficult to handle or not, and the complications arising from the new design.

Q. Then, it is the practice for the instructions for each garment to be accompanied by a specific set price for each of the operations on that style and goods of garments?

A. That is true. When a girl starts to work on any garment at the Donnelly Garment Company she knows exactly what she is to be paid for that operation, and she knows it right at the time she starts to operate it, not [fol. 3470] at the end of the week.

Q. How is she notified of that?

A. She has a ticket that has on it the price per dozen.

Q. Mrs. Nichols fixes the price for each one of these operations separately for each style and quality of goods; is that correct?

A. That is true.

Q. I asked you this question before, but I would like to get it clear, in view of what we have gone over now:

How large a percentage of the instances in which Mrs. Nichols sets these prices does she consult with you before setting the price?

A. She does not consult with me very often now, because we have a very good basis of setting the prices. She does sometimes.

Q. How often did she consult with you in 1935?

A. More often.

Q. How often, would you say? Was it still very, very rarely?

A. Not rarely at all. I have always been very interested in the piecework prices that were set.

Q. Would it be when there was a new style that was more difficult?

A. Yes.

Q. But if it was a routine style, she would not consult [fol. 3471] with you on it?

A. Yes.

Q. What are the duties of Josephine Spalito?

A. She helps Mrs. Nichols.

Q. I'm sorry. I meant to ask you Mrs. Nichols's salary in 1935, if you know it.

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know it at the present time?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if there have been changes between?

A. I am sure there have been.

Q. Will you furnish that, please? I will furnish the list.

Is Josephine Spalito just one of numerous girls, or two or three girls, I believe you said, who help Mrs. Nichols, or does she hold a position somewhat as assistant to Mrs. Nichols, above the other girls who assist?

A. I believe she is more experienced than the other girls who help Mrs. Nichols.

Q. Does she ever set prices without consulting Mrs. Nichols?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Does she supervise the other girls who assist Mrs. Nichols?

A. There are so few of them that—

Q. Does she have a supervisory position of any sort?

A. I wouldn't say she has. No, she doesn't have.

Q. Do you know what her salary was in 1935?

[fol. 3472] A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you know her present salary?

A. I don't believe Josephine was with us in 1935.

Q. Do you know when she came with you?

A. I don't remember exactly.

Q. Do you know whether she has had increases in salary since she has been with you?

A. I would think so.

Q. Has she been assistant to Mrs. Nichols ever since she has been with you?

A. I didn't say she was assistant to Mrs. Nichols.

Q. Has she done the duties you have described ever since—

A. She assembles information on the garments that are to be priced.

Q. She has done that continuously since she joined the staff of the company?

A. I don't believe she did immediately.

Q. Do you have any idea when she began doing that?

A. I couldn't say the exact date.

Q. Would it be 1935, 1936, or 1937?

A. I couldn't say exactly which year.

Q. Was it prior to 1938?

A. I would say so.

Q. But you do not know how much prior to 1938?

A. No.

[fol. 3473] Q. Would you say whether it was prior to 1937, or do you know that?

A. I believe it was.

Q. You believe it was prior to 1937?

A. Yes.

Q. When did Fred Brown become head cutter?

A. Last fall.

Q. What was his position before he became head cutter?

A. He was a cutter.

Q. Was he in any way differentiated from the other cutters in the cutting department prior to the time he became head cutter?

A. I believe he helped to lay out patterns, and, having been there for a long time, he was considered an unusually good cutter.

Q. Was he an assistant head cutter?

A. He probably assisted the head cutter.

Q. Do you ordinarily have such a thing as an assistant head cutter, a job known as that?

A. I never created that job.

Q. Do you know whether or not there is a job in the plant known as assistant head cutter?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean now, or at any time?

Miss Weyand: Whether there is now or ever has been.

A. I believe there is now.

[fol. 3474] Q. Do you know when that job began?

A. I believe Fred Brown was made an assistant head cutter at the end of 1940—toward the end of 1940.

Q. Would you be able to fix the date more definitely than that?

A. Well, I would fix the date as sometime early in November.

Q. Was it part of the budget plan you have described?

A. It was.

Q. Did he perform different duties prior to the budget plan from those he performed subsequent to the budget plan?

A. He had more definite duties and responsibilities.

Q. Would you describe the difference that was made in his duties as a result of the budget plan?

A. He was made to share the responsibility with Mr. Scoles as to managing the work, so that there would be less expense in the cutting department.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3475] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Prior to November 1940, did you have an assistant head cutter?

A. I don't remember that we did have.

[fol. 3476] Q. At no time at which you were familiar with the operations of the cutting room prior to November of 1940 did you know of an assistant head cutter?

A. Not definitely, no.

Q. What was Ted Scoles's position in January of 1935?

Mr. Reed: That has been gone into, if Your Honor please, these identical questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am sure I couldn't say, Senator.

Will you answer the question, Mrs. Reed?

A. He was in the cutting department.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was he just one of the cutters in there, with no differentiation in his duties from the other cutters'?

A. I don't remember exactly.

Q. What was Fred Brown's position in January 1935?

A. He was a cutter.

Q. Was there any differentiation in his job from that of any other cutter?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. What was Ted Scoles's position in April 1937?
A. He was a cutter in the cutting department.
Q. Was there any differentiation in his function from that of other cutters' as of that date?
A. I know he did a great deal of cutting.
[fol. 3477] Q. Do you know whether there was any differentiation in his functions? A. I do not.
Q. Was he the highest-paid cutter outside of the head cutter?
A. He was considered the highest-skilled cutter in the cutting department.
Q. Did he receive the highest pay outside of the head cutter? A. Naturally he would.
Q. He did, did he? A. Yes.
Q. What was Fred Brown's position in April 1937?
A. He was a cutter in the cutting department.
Q. Was there any differentiation in his function from the other cutters' in the cutting department?
A. Not that I am familiar with.
Q. Do you know how his salary compared with the salaries of the other cutters' as of April 1937?
A. It was probably somewhat higher, because he had been there a much longer time.
Q. When Ted Scoles became head cutter was Fred Brown the highest paid of the other cutters remaining in the cutting department?
A. My remembrance is that he was.
Q. Did he assist Ted Scoles in managing the cutting department? A. Not to my knowledge.
[fol. 3478] Q. Who was the head cutter at the time Fred Brown became assistant head cutter?
A. I didn't say Fred Brown became assistant head cutter.
Q. He never became assistant head cutter?
A. He may have, but I didn't make him assistant head cutter.
Q. Not even in November of 1940, when your budget system was put in?
A. In 1940 Fred Brown was put in charge of the— Let me see. In 1940— No. Ted Scoles was in charge of the cutting department—he was put in charge of the cutting department in 1940, when the budget system was put in.

Q. And Fred Brown was at that time made assistant head cutter, was he?

A. I didn't have anything to do with it if he was.

Q. Do you know whether he was or not?

A. I really don't know whether he was or not.

Q. Do you know Fred Brown's salary in January of 1935? A. Not exactly.

Q. Do you know his present salary? A. Not exactly.

Q. Do you know whether there has been a change in salary during that period? A. I know there has.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 3479] Miss Weyand: What was Jack McConaughey's position in January 1935?

Mr. Reed: I submit, if Your Honor please, every one of these questions have been asked before.

Trial Examiner Batten: I do not recall any questions, Senator, about this particular individual. I may be mistaken, but I don't recall any.

A. In January 1935, I believe he was in the mechanics department—in the parts department of the machinists' section.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What were his duties in January of 1935?

A. Clerical work in that department.

Q. Will you describe the clerical work which he did in that department?

[fol. 3480] A. As far as I understand it, he gave out parts and took care of them. Of course Mrs. Reeves was managing the plant in 1935 to a great extent, and I didn't have a personal knowledge of what every single person did in the plant, or how they spent their entire time.

Q. Do you have a term or name which describes the job which Jack McConaughey held in January of 1935?

A. I don't remember it. I don't call it to mind.

Q. Was he called a clerk?

A. I still repeat that we do not define people and jobs down there. If we speak of Jack McConaughey, anyone in connection with that department would know what he did. We speak of people down there by their names. We have, perhaps, a rather personal way of talking. I usually, instead of saying "the designing department,"—very often we say "Miss Spilsbury's department," or "where Miss so-and-so works." As soon as a person takes over a position there, they are more or less identified with that particular job, and anyone is much more apt to call their names than to call any specified title or way of speaking of them.

Q. Are you able to state whether or not Jack McConaughey was a clerk in January 1935?

A. My impression is that Jack McConaughey was for some time in what is called "the cage," and that is where the parts are kept for the repairing of machines, and so forth. Now, whether he was exactly in that department [fol. 3481] in 1935, I am not sure.

Q. Was he a mechanic?

A. He may have done a very few mechanical things. I don't believe he was a mechanic. He is not, to my knowledge, a mechanic.

Q. Would his duties consist simply of providing parts to persons when a call was made for a given part?

A. It is my impression that that was at least most of his duties. That would be my impression of what he did.

Q. Did he assign persons who were to install the parts when he provided the part that was called for?

A. In the sense of managing the repair of the equipment or machines, he did not. When a call came to Jack, he would simply relay that a belt was to be fixed on a buttonhole machine, or perhaps an embroidery machine, or a hemstitching machine, or single-needle machine.

The mechanics, to some extent, are like doctors, they specialize on certain kinds of machinery. The man who was especially good at fixing a buttonhole machine would naturally be called to do that particular work.

[fol. 3482] Q. You say he would be called to do that work, who would call him?

A. He would be asked to take the call by Mr. McConaughey, I suppose; that is my impression of what the work was.

Q. What is Jack McConaughey's present position?

A. He is in charge of the maintenance department; we have made a great many changes in the last few months, and have established a regular maintenance department, and Mr. McConaughey is now in charge of that.

Q. When did he become in charge of the maintenance department?

A. It is very recent, very recently.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was it this year? A. Yes.

Miss Weyand: 1942, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Was someone in charge of the maintenance department prior to the time Mr. McConaughey took it over in 1942?

A. No. Our maintenance department has been rather at loose ends for quite some time, and we finally decided that there should be a head to the maintenance department, and we selected Mr. McConaughey, because he had had experience in the parts department, and had understood taking care of them and putting them out, and for some time he has been keeping a record of the parts.

[fol. 3483] Since the warting, those parts have become very valuable, and a great many of them cannot be replaced; they are frozen; and we felt that we haven't probably been as particular about taking care of them as we should, and so we have set up a maintenance department.

Now, Mr. McConaughey is responsible for the parts, and for seeing that none of them are lost, and they are very well taken care of.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Just what do you include in that department, that he has, Mrs. Reed, what does it take in?

A. I haven't gone into the real details of it.

Q. Well, does it take in janitor work, some of this work that Mr. Price used to do, or is it strictly limited to maintenance on machinery, or does it include maintenance of the building, also?

A. Well, part of the maintenance of the building is taken care of by the people who own the building.

Q. The part that they do not take care of?

A. The part we do—my understanding is, all of that maintenance was to be put in one department, and Mr. McConaughey was to take the responsibility for it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Is Mr. McConaughey under or responsible to Mr. Price? A. He is not.

[fol. 3484] Q. Who is Mr. McConaughey under?

A. He would be under Mr. Baty now, but of course he would work in close touch with Mr. Bachofer, because the work he is doing involves a great deal of expense.

Q. Will you state Mr. Bachofer's present position?

A. I would say he was controller. He has complete charge of all of the records and cost accounting.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, is Mr. Bachofer an official of the Donnelly Garment Company, or Donnelly Sales, I don't remember the difference, or is he an officer in both?

A. I don't know whether you call the controller—he is not an officer of the corporation of either one.

Q. Either one? A. No.

Q. He is an employee in this budget, by the Donnelly Garment Company and Donnelly Sales Company?

A. Both of them.

Q. Both of them? A. Yes.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does Jack McConaughey have any persons under him whose work he directs?

A. At the present time I feel that he has.

Q. Do you know how many persons he has at the present time under him?

[fol. 3485] A. I do not.

Q. Prior to 1942 what difference was there between Jack McConaughey's duties and his present duties?

A. Well, for—

Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) I submit that question has been answered and the details given in each instance. It has been asked what were his duties at a certain time, and what they were at another time. Now it is asked, to state the differences.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness may state what the difference is, in her opinion.

Mr. Reed: Well, I object to this interminable repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may tell us what she considers to be the difference.

A. Mr. McConaughey has been in two or three different positions in the last several years, since he first came to our place.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Can you state them chronologically, with approximate dates? A. I can not.

Q. Will you state such positions as you can recall, and indicate, as best you can, the time when he held those positions?

A. I know that he was in the parts department, and [fol. 3486] received calls for parts and calls for mechanics, and I know that he kept track, and kept an inventory of machinery and parts for a while.

Q. Are those the only positions that you recall his having held? A. Yes.

Q. Did he have persons to assist him in his work in any of those positions? A. No.

Q. Did he have persons to whom he gave instructions, or to whom he assigned work, in those other positions?

A. No.

Q. Do you know what his salary was in January of 1935? A. I do not.

Q. Do you know what his present salary is?

A. I do not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3489] By Miss Weyand:

Q. What were the duties of Dewey Atchison, what was his position in 1935?

A. For 1935?

Q. Yes.

A. I believe that Dewey Atchison, in 1935, was assisting in the merchandising plant.

Mr. Hogsett: Mr. Examiner, I heard you say a little bit ago, and I was glad to see you say, you wanted to avoid duplication. Now, I positively know that the subject matter of Dewey Atchison's duties, what he did, was made the subject of the most exhaustive inquiry at the 1939 hearing, and I know that, because for the last two weeks I have spent most of my time reading this record, and it is fresh. The whole thing was gone over again and again, with witness after witness, and surely that ought to be enough, at least up to 1939. I am suggesting, in the interest of saving time on a person of that category, whose duties were fully explored, that counsel consider taking only the changes from '39 to date, and then, by putting the two together, we will have the whole picture as to that person, and it will be fully disclosed. I don't want to forego any rational examination.

If the purpose is merely to test Mrs. Reed's memory, which seems a futile thing to do, if that is proper, all this is [fol. 3490] proper enough. If the purpose is really to get at what duties Atchison had, then I venture to offer the suggestion that the Board's counsel take it from '39 to date, rather than going over the same ground again and again.

Mr. Reed: It has been gone over in this hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Hogsett, one of the things that have been troubling me all of this week, and I don't know how we are going to settle that, and I am afraid is going to raise from time to time, that is, just what did the Eighth Circuit intend, when it suggested further testimony in this case. Now, I might say that I have given that a lot of thought, and I have read the decision over, well, I venture to say 25 times anyway, and underlined various parts of it, and I presume all of counsel have done the same things.

It already has come up in this hearing two or three times, and I feel like suggesting two or three times that all counsel give some thought to that matter, and I am not sure that time won't be saved by all of us, if we were to have a conference of counsel, and see whether or not there is any common ground at all, or any agreement on any one point, as to what the Eighth Circuit intended. Now, I can understand, if we do not arrive at some kind of an understanding, or I do not take the responsibility for placing a limit somewhere [fol. 3491] on it, we are apt to not only try this matter all over again, you might say, from the beginning, but try over several other matters that weren't at issue in the last hearing. I am making these remarks now, because I want all counsel to give some thought to it, and I had in mind, when we finish with Mrs. Reed, conferring with all counsel about that matter.

Mr. Hogsett: That will be very helpful.

Trial Examiner Batten: All I can say about the situation now, Mr. Hogsett, what I believe I said Tuesday, when Mrs. Reed was testifying, and yesterday and this morning, that is, that I don't feel that I should attempt to limit the testimony of Mrs. Reed, because of her position with the company, and because of the fact that she did not testify in the prior hearing.

Now, I don't want counsel to feel that because I have been, at least what I consider to be extremely liberal with Mrs. Reed, that I intend to follow the same practice with witnesses hereafter, unless they are witnesses of importance. I mean by that, officials of the company who did not testify in the prior hearing.

Now, on the basis of that statement, I am not going to limit Miss Weyand, but I will say this: I might be mistaken, but I have a recollection that this morning, Miss Weyand, you went into, to some extent, the matter of [fol. 3492] Dewey Atchison's duties. I may be mistaken, but my recollection is that you did; but you may proceed with your examination.

Miss Weyand: I believe there is a question pending. Read it, please.

(Question read by the reporter.)

A. Miss Weyand, by 1935 Mrs. Reeves had taken over the management of the plant, and I don't pretend to know every single thing that everybody did at that time. From time to time, Mrs. Reeves consulted with me on the policy and people; to some extent, I am familiar with them, but I made no pretense of knowing what everybody did, how much every mechanic made, and how much every cutter made, I make no claim.

If you are trying to say that I am non compos mentis in regard to that plant, maybe I am. I have been able to keep my people working for a good many years, when most other plants have not. You may not think that I have a good memory or good mind, and want to prove it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Can you say what Dewey Atchison's duties were in January, 1935?

A. I say that I can't state exactly what they were.

Q. Will you state, as far as you understand, what they were after he was under Mrs. Reeves' direction?

A. I will state that.

Q. Did he have persons working under him?

[fol. 3498] A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Could you state further the type of work that he did?

A. I stated that I make no pretense of keeping track of what everybody in the plant did.

Q. Was he in charge of timing piece rates, timing work to piece rates, to produce piece rates?

A. He may have done some piece rate timing at different times; I don't know that of my own knowledge, what he did in 1935.

Q. Do you know, to your own knowledge, whether he has done any of that work since 1935?

A. I do not.

Q. What is Dewey Atchison's present position?

[fol. 3494] A. He has ideas about manufacturing and—I don't know what his present title is. If we have a new method of production, we discuss that with him—Mr. Baty discusses it with him, and probably Mrs. Reeves, if it has anything to do with her getting work into the plant.

Q. Does he have persons working under him at the present time?

A. He has at the present time.

Q. Is there some name by which you designate the group that works under him?

A. There is no name by which I designate them.

Q. Can you describe what their duties are?

A. They work on plans of putting the work through the plant more efficiently, trying to devise methods of production, and so forth.

Q. Is the work his group does generally known as industrial engineering work?

A. I never conferred that title upon Mr. Atchison.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know what an industrial engineer is, Mrs. Reed?

A. Yes, I know what an industrial engineer is. I have employed some of them.

Q. The only reason I asked you was, I have heard so many different descriptions of that title—

A. I am under the impression that an industrial en-
[fol. 3495] gineer has certain training, like a certified accountant. While Dewey is a very clever young man and has had a lot of experience, I don't believe he has studied any course of industrial engineering.

Q. Well, to dispose of the matter, you do not call him an industrial engineer, or consider him one?

A. I have employed industrial engineers and—

Q. The question is, Mrs. Reed, do you consider him an industrial engineer?

A. I don't know what difference it makes whether I do or not.

Q. Let's assume it doesn't make any difference.

A. I don't see that it does.

Q. Let's assume it doesn't. Do you consider him an industrial engineer?

A. He and I have never agreed that he is an industrial engineer.

Q. Do you consider him one?

A. I have never thought of it before. I have thought of industrial engineers as people outside who sign up and consider themselves as industrial engineers to—

Q. Do I get it from your answer, then, you do not consider him an industrial engineer?

A. I do not consider him an industrial engineer. That is no reflection on him, however.

[fol. 3496] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Is his work that of establishing efficiency methods within the plant?

A. He makes suggestions, and some of them are taken and some of them are not.

Q. What difference is there between his work and the work which Mrs. Tyhurst does?

A. Well, Mr. Atchison is not held responsible for the quality of the work as it is put through production.

Q. What is he held responsible for?

A. I don't know whether you can say a person is held responsible for ideas or not. He furnishes some ideas about production and makes a study of the efficient way for a garment to go through the plant and makes suggestions about how to handle it.

Q. Is he in the planning department?

A. He is often consulted in the planning department.

Q. But he is not a member of the planning department?

A. I would say he was a member of the planning department, if you put it that way.

Q. Does he work on plans for given styles or dresses regularly, as each style comes up?

A. Very often I call him into the designing room myself, if I have an unusual design or an unusual thing to be done, and ask him if he has any suggestion of a better way to do it than the way it seems we are going to have to do it.

[fol. 3497] Q. Is his job primarily concerned with the manner in which each given style is made in the plant, or is he concerned more with general methods? Is his work directed to each specific style, or does he make plans as to the general mode of operation followed?

A. Well, if you make plans on the general— After all, it is an individual garment that is made. I would say he makes suggestions both ways.

Q. Is his work primarily one or the other?

A. Sometimes it is perhaps one and sometimes perhaps the other. If we are putting a new line into the plant, it is more on the individual garment. Then, if he has a little extra time, he is perhaps working on some idea he might have, or some suggestion he might want to make about our planning generally.

Q. Does his work deal with the organization of the plant as contrasted with the sequence and manner of operations on a given garment?

A. I don't understand your question, Miss Weyand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: The question doesn't make sense to me.

Trial Examiner Batten: What does "organization" have to do with "sequence"? I don't understand the distinction between the words "organization" and "sequence."

[fol. 3498] Miss Weyand: I will go into what I had in mind in asking that that question be answered.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you describe how a section of sewing operators in your plant works?

A. Now, what do you mean, specifically?

Q. Are there two methods, in the garment industry, of making a dress; one, having a skilled operator make substantially a complete dress, and the other, having a section of approximately 40 girls, each specializing on one operation, making a dress?

A. Answering your question, there are two general methods of sewing. One of them is that an operator makes an entire dress, and she is supposed to be a skilled dressmaker. The other is where a section—each operator makes just one section of a garment. Now, that sectional sewing is what is used in my plant.

Q. Does the sectional method of sewing require less skill on the part of an operator than the other method?

A. As a dressmaker, it would. In the other method, a woman would have to be a skilled dressmaker to know how to put a whole garment together. In the sectional plan a woman could be taught to do just a certain part of the garment.

Q. Is there a term which covers the other method? You call yours the sectional method. Is there a name for the other method?

[fol. 3499] A. I would say dressmaking.

Q. One is a dressmaking system and the other a sectional system? Would that be the correct way to refer to it?

A. Yes.

Q. Does your sectional system require a larger degree of planning on the part of the management than the dressmaking system?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you devise the sectional system?

A. No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. You mean, did Mrs. Reed herself originate the idea?

The Witness: Oh, no. The sectional system has been used in the overall, work clothing, and children's clothing industry for several years.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think with Ford's system, and other mass production systems in general, there is the breaking down of a trade into its component parts. I presume it is the same theory, is it not?

The Witness: Yes. The same thing has been done in overall plants and children's garment plants for many years.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. The reason I asked was because you stated yesterday in your statement that the institution of instructor was something new in your plant.

A. You misunderstood me, or probably took in more [fol. 3500] than I intended that you should.

Q. Could you clarify what seems to be my misunderstanding in that regard?

A. I meant that I started the system of having so many machines, with an instructor to show the girls how to do the work. And particularly, I had— In my own specific instance, I just have 40 machines, and in other plants, they may have 30, 50, or any other group, under an instructor.

Q. Does Dewey Atchison's work concern itself with the method of organization, that is, how many girls you have in a section, or whether the examiners, of whom we spoke this morning, shall be in a separate section or in a section together with the sewing girls?

A. I would say that Mr. Baty really has charge of that. He discusses the plans and ideas with Mr. Atchison.

Q. The plans that Mr. Atchison deals with are plans in that field, primarily, are they, rather than plans on each specific dress from day to day, as you plan the instructions for this dress?

A. Miss Weyand, I couldn't tell you just exactly what duties Mr. Atchison has from day to day because he is not under my direct authority. I don't know. I do not feel that it is necessary for me to know just exactly what Dewey does from day to day, whether he spends this much time on this, and that much time on that—I don't pretend to know that.

[fol. 3501] Q. You could not say whether his field is generally planning as to organization and structure of plant operations as opposed to getting up the instructions on a given style?

A. No, I wouldn't say it is. He helps on both.

Q. How many persons does he have assisting him at the present time?

A. I don't know.

Q. What changes have occurred in his work in recent years? Do you know of any?

A. I know that Dewey came in under this budget system, trying to pin down individual people for responsibility to help to get down the expenses and keep them down.

Q. Had he been working in that general field prior to the institution of the budget system?

A. He was working in that field. I would say he was. As I said before, he was working for a number of years with Mrs. Reeves, and for a number of years with Mr. Baty.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3502] By Miss Weyand:

Q. What were Hobart Atherton's duties in January of 1935?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Hasn't that been covered, Miss Weyand?

Miss Weyand: I have not asked about him.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I haven't been making [fol. 3503] notes of these names.

Mr. Reed: Now, Mr. Examiner, if you will permit me,—I made a list of the persons that were inquired about; I have it here before me, and he was inquired about.

Miss Weyand: I will concede I inquired about Mr. Atherton, and I am very sorry.

Mr. Reed: She inquired also about Miss Spilsbury, Mrs. Gray, Jeters, Strickland, Justus, Tyhurst, Scoles, Hartmann, Hauser, Belter, Fitzgerald, Fred Brown, Dewey Atchison, Mutchler, Nichols, and Ely.

Miss Weyand: I have inquired only about certain of those as to 1935, and I wish to bring them up to date. I did make an error about Mr. Atherton. I will watch that and try not to do it again.

. . . . . .

[fol. 3504] By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Cecile Ealy employed by the Donnelly Garment Company, in January of 1935?

A. Yes.

Q. What was her position?

. . . . . .

A. I don't remember what her position was in 1935.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What is her present position?

A. I believe assistant to Mr. Baty.

Q. When did she become assistant to Mr. Baty?

A. In 1940, and toward the end of 1940.

Q. Was that in connection with the reorganizing you have described?

A. It was.

Q. And what were her duties prior to that time?

A. Mr. Baty was in charge of the plant, and I don't know exactly what her duties were.

. . . . . .

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Does Cecile Ealy now hold a supervisory position?

A. I would say that she does not.

Q. Is her position in any way intermediary between the [fol. 3505] instructors and Mr. Baty?

A. I can't say exactly what her duties are. I know she assists Mr. Baty in his work. Now, just what she does do, I don't know.

Q. You can't state anything further about her work, except what you have just stated?

A. No.

Q. What is Mrs. Bogart's present position?

A. She is in the dividing department.

Q. Does she hold a supervisory position?

A. I would say she does not.

Q. Does she — is she instructor of the dividing department?

A. She is the person that directs the way the work is done in that department.

Q. Could you state what the work in that department is?

A. It is dividing. We probably have 100 dozen garments in one cutting, and in the dividing department, they put it into bundles, whatever size bundles are called for on the cutting card; they are separated into bundles, perhaps two dozen.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. And do they route the bundles to the section?

A. Yes, and then the bundles are taken in baskets by what we call bundle boys, to the sections.

[fol. 3506] By Miss Weyand:

Q. How many employees does she have, to whom she gives directions?

A. In that dividing department there, I don't know exactly how many in numbers. Mr. Baty has general charge of that, and he has as many in there as he needs.

Q. Could you approximate, at all, the number?

A. I suppose eight or ten.

Q. And has she been in charge of that department continuously since January, 1935?

A. I wouldn't say that she was in charge of that department; she was considered as instructor, and would have—the same thing would apply to her as all the others, applied to all the other instructors. Mr. Baty took that department over, and that section.

Q. She was an instructor in January, 1935, was she?

A. She was in a similar situation as an instructor.

Q. She has continued in that department without a change except those changes which occurred as to instructors in July, 1935, and then again at the time of reorganization in November of 1940, has she?

A. Will you state that question again? This late in the afternoon it is hard for me to get it.

. . . . . .

A. I am not absolutely sure about Mrs. Bogard, be-[fol. 3507] cause there were so few people required to do the dividing. I don't know exactly what her situation was.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. When Mr. Baty was put in charge of the plant, she was under Mr. Baty? A. Yes.

Q. Were there any changes made at that time in her duties or responsibilities?

A. Mr. Baty was instructed to take over the entire responsibility in the plant.

Q. Well, was this it, the same change?

A. If she had responsibility that he felt—

Q. He should take, he took it? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether he did take any of her responsibility, do you know of your own knowledge?

A. From my understanding with Mr. Baty, he did.

Q. In November or December, when you put in the budget system, did that apply to Mrs. Bogart's section, the dividing section?

A. I would—I don't remember exactly, because I didn't personally interview everybody on this budget system.

Q. You don't know whether the dividing section was put under the budget or not?

A. I know that these sections were not put under the budget; I explained that yesterday. The instructors didn't [fol. 3508] go under a budget.

Q. Do you know whether there was any change made in November or December, in Mrs. Bogart's section?

A. Mrs. Bogart would have had the same responsibility put on her again that the instructors had.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Was Lyle Jeters employed in the company in 1935?

A. He was.

Q. What was his position?

A. I think he was a mechanic.

Q. Did he have any supervisory duties in the mechanical department prior to December of 1940?

Mr. Ingraham: Just a minute. Didn't you inquire about this person, Lyle Jeters, yesterday? I think you did.

Miss Weyand: I don't have any record that I did. I looked over the record, and I don't have any record that I did.

Mr. Reed: Yes, I have it, and also have the answer. Something was said about him being in the notion department.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is a matter of a question or two. Let's proceed. It will take less time, if you are not certain.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Did he have any supervisory duties prior to December, 1940? A. He did not.

[fol. 3509] Q. Was he working in the mechanical department, in any different position from that of any of the other employees of the mechanical department, prior to December, 1940? A. He is an expert mechanic.

Q. Did he direct the work of the other mechanics, if any, in regard to prior to December, 1940?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you have sufficient acquaintance with the mechanical department prior to December, 1940, to know whether or not he did direct the work of the other employees therein?

A. My information and understanding is, and I believe that I was familiar with it enough to know, he did not have.

Q. Have you personally participated in all general decisions pertaining to labor relations matters in your plant during the period of 1935 to the present time?

A. That is a pretty big order.

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you mean whenever a general policy, labor policy, is confronted, she participated?

Miss Weyand: Has she participated in the decisions each time there has been a change in that period?

A. I don't know what you mean, change of labor policy, in that period.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Whenever a problem comes up, do the other persons consult with you, when it affects labor relations?

[fol. 3510] A. Since 1935?

Q. Yes.

A. My understanding is that no one, in my company, would do anything that affected labor relations without discussing it with me.

Q. Are you acquainted with the manner in which the pay roll is kept? A. In a general way.

Q. On Board's Exhibit 28-A, being pay roll for the period of April 16th to April 30th, 1937, I notice that a general heading entitled "Buying Record" is there. Could you tell me what that heading means? I will be glad to show you the exhibit. I direct your attention to Exhibit 28-J and 28-K. Will you explain to me what the term "Buying Record" means.

A. I can't see what relationship that has with labor relations.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, and the only question to you, do you know what that term means?

A. Mrs. Reeves keeps certain buying records.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that what it refers to?

A. It says "Buying Records" and the different—two girls' names.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. It is continued on the next page, and appears to be a subdivision, and there is the Receiving Department, [fol. 3511] and the Buttonhole Department, and the pay roll is broken down?

A. Without examining this further, I don't exactly know what you want. I might say that it may have something to do with cost accounting.

Q. Examine it as much as you wish, to determine what that means. I would suggest that you look through some 10 or 12 pages preceding, and some 30 or 40 pages thereafter, if you want to get a general picture of what that exhibit is. A. I would like to.

Q. Take your time.

A. You said about 12 pages before?

Q. The whole exhibit, I suggested.

A. You don't mean for me to read this whole thing?

Q. Here it is. Take a glance so you will know what you are dealing with. It is right here, and after reading the stipulation, if you will glance through the next 68 pages, it will be very evident to you what they contain.

A. It says they contain the pay roll of the time workers.

Q. That is correct. A. All right.

Q. You will see they are broken down to departments on this first page, 28-A. You have a Cutting Department, and following that are the names of the time employees in the cutting department?

[fol. 3512] A. Yes, I see Ted Scoles and Ben James, and a number of cutters.

Q. And 28-B continues the cutting department, and then you will find the dividing department following that?

A. Yes. In the dividing department is Mary Bogart, Mary Hull and Edna Curry—

Q. I don't think you need to read them.

A. And here are the instructors and floorladies. I think at this time I should make the remark that floorladies in our plant are not the same as a floorlady, generally speaking, in another factory. These are the women that do this work, are merely on the floor, on the section, and give out work, and have nothing to do with the direction of the work.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Reed, you notice the pay roll is divided into departments, is that true? There is a section of pay roll headed up by a name of some kind?

A. That is, I believe, for the purpose of knowing where to charge—

Q. Irrespective of the purpose, you notice that is done?

A. That is done for cost accounting purposes.

Q. Irrespective of that, it shows that on the exhibit?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, the question is, what does the heading mean, that Miss Weyand referred to, what was the name?

Miss Weyand: "Buying Record".

[fol. 3513] Trial Examiner Batten: What does that mean, when that heads a section, when there is a section under that heading?

A. Well, in Mrs. Reeves' department, I don't know why she separated "Buying Record" with two girls working on it.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I think you are mistaken about the two girls. It went over on the next page, and contained more names.

A. Well, the pressing and folding department,—let's see. And the buttonhole department, Stella Willis is listed and Harold Etherton is in the hand sewing department, and Francis Morrison. You can't take this list literally, because I see "Hand Sewing Department, Francis Morrison," and down in the next line was H. J. Etherton, T. G. Boozell, and he is down in the lobby on the first floor, and they have them here in the hand sewing department. I think they would strenuously object to being classified that way.

Q. I wasn't in the case before, and I see a stipulation on the exhibit that is what your pay roll records show.

Mr. Langsdale: The record was prepared by Mr. Ingraham, and I suggest if it is incorrect he take it back and correct it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's get back to the question. The question is, what does "Buying Record" mean to you?

[fol. 3514] A. Did she ask me to look this whole thing over?

Mr. Hogsett: They want the definition of two words.

A. They say this is absolutely correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: No one said it was correct or incorrect. The only question to you is, what does "Buying Record" mean to you. Does it mean anything? If it doesn't mean anything to you, well, that is the answer.

A. I see Jack McConaughey is in the clerical and maintenance department.

Mr. Hogsett: To speed it up, is there any objection to calling the head of the accounting department?

A. The point is, we can clear it up very easily, Mr. Hogsett. The same thing has happened to be put in here about Mr. Etherton and Mr. Boozell, in these departments, that has happened to the buying record, with two girls in here. They have Herb Fountain, and there are a great number of names here.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Those people don't come under that sub-heading, is that your position, on the other page? The only point, Mrs. Reed, if you don't know—

A. Well, I don't know. I didn't make up the pay roll.

Q. If you don't know what it is, Mrs. Reed, that is the answer.

A. Well, I really don't know.

Q. All right, that's the answer.

[fol. 3515] Mr. Reed: We will undertake to have somebody who does know.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Could you tell me who determines how the pay roll is set up, in reference to departments?

A. I believe Mr. Bachofer does that.

Q. You give him no directions whatsoever as to that?

A. I haven't recently.

Q. Did you in 1937?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to examine the pay roll to see how it was kept?

A. The only time I carefully examined the pay roll was in our injunction suit, when I looked over the piece-workers' pay roll. I have no occasion to check pay rolls. I depend on the people who get them up to get them up correctly.

Q. Did you ever give any directions as to whether the head of the department was to be carried on the pay roll in the same department with the other time-workers in that department?

A. Miss Weyand, I have never given any directions about office work. That is one thing I have done very little about.

Q. Do you know what has been the practice as to carrying the head of the department on the same pay roll sheet with the other time-workers in the department?

[fol. 3516] A. No, I really don't know.

Q. If you went to the pay roll to examine the record of the head of the department, where would you look for it?

A. I would never go to a pay roll to examine the record of a head of a department.

Q. What was your remnants department?

A. I didn't know there was a remnants department.

Q. Referring to Board's exhibit No. 28-BBB, will you look at the names of the employees listed under "Remnants Department" and see if you can tell me what those employees do?

A. I really couldn't, Miss Weyand.

Q. Are you acquainted with the names of the girls that appear there?

A. Some of them.

Q. Do you know whether they do, or did on this date (indicating on Board's exhibit No. 28-BBB), which is July 1937?

A. It doesn't say "Remnants Department" here. It says "Dividing Department."

Q. Right here (indicating)—

A. Oh, excuse me. I didn't look at the top there. The remnants have been handled in various ways. At times they were folded in the factory, and my recollection is that very often, if we are a little short of work, we have a certain group of—oh, an operator, or anybody—we would keep them busy by folding remnants. Now, that is done [fol. 3517] either in the plant, or it may be done in the store. I don't know. It's an awfully big job, folding remnants, but I never heard of a remnants department.

Q. Is that what these girls (indicating on exhibit) did at that time?

A. I don't know. I am not acquainted with that. I think different girls folded remnants at times. I don't think there were specialists in remnant folding.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, you do not recall any of those names, Mrs. Reed, in 1937?

A. No.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. This continues on Board's exhibit No. 28-CCC.

A. I am not familiar with those names.

Q. I notice there is also a further name in that department, on Board's exhibit No. 28-DDD, Molly Smith. Are you acquainted with her?

Mr. Hossett: Mr. Examiner, I object to this line of inquiry as absolutely pointless. Now, I make that objection seriously. It doesn't tend, even in the remotest degree, to prove that the Donnelly Garment Company sponsored, dominated, coerced, or otherwise influenced the formation of the employees into a union, or to prove or even bear upon any allegation in the complaint. What a given girl did in folding remnants hasn't a thing in the world to do with anything we are here to try.

[fol. 3518] I think the Board should have just as broad latitude as Your Honor has wisely given us in the direct examination of Mrs. Reed, for the reasons you have stated, but there ought to be a limit here somewhere. If we are going into the picayune matter of a girl folding remnants, what in the world has that to do with anything we are here to try?

I submit, I think Your Honor ought to intervene.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, what have you to say about that?

Miss Weyand: I think the purpose of my examination will become evident as I proceed. I prefer not to state it at this time.

Trial Examiner Batten: If I will excuse the witness, do you care to state your purpose?

Miss Weyand: I would rather you rule on each question as I put it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't care to rule on each question—

Miss Weyand: I might say, there will be no further examination of the type I have just given. I am proceeding to a question which is not of that type.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean this question you have asked?

Miss Weyand: She has completed that question, and I was proceeding to ask another question.

[fol. 3519] Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Miss Weyand: Will you look at Board's exhibit No. 28-KKK, under the heading "Retail Store," and state to me whether those were the saleslaadies in the retail store on the date there specified, being July 1, 1937, to July 15, 1937?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as immaterial and not tending to prove anything in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection. She may tell us if those were the people in that department at that time.

A. I am not entirely familiar with the people in that department in the store. I really couldn't say.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Have you read over the names there appearing?

A. I have. There are some of them I know were in the store.

Q. Will you identify which ones you know were in the store?

A. Rose Murray and Camilla Cochran.

Q. You don't know further than that?

A. No.

Q. Do you see Martha Gray's name there?

A. No.

Q. How do you explain the absence of her name from the pay roll?

A. I didn't have a thing in the world to do with getting [fol. 3520] up the pay roll. They keep the pay rolls down there in order to make it easy to keep the cost accounting, so if they charge a certain percentage or certain people to one set of cost accounting records, they will do so. I am not familiar with how they get up a pay roll. I will have to admit that the ways of cost accounting are complete mysteries to me. I have never attempted to go into it. I have never had anything to do with getting up a pay roll or telling anybody how it should be gotten up, or had anything to do with the cost accounting at our place.

Q. Did Martha Gray's duties from July 1 to July 15, 1937, differ from the salesladies' you identify as having known on this pay roll?

A. I know of one practice. She may have been on vacation and, for some strange reason, at our place when a person is on vacation they are not on the pay roll at that time.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question, Mrs. Reed, is, were Mrs. Gray's duties at that time different than the duties of the girls you have identified here?

The Witness: They get the pay, very often, before they go, or get it before they come back, but at that specific time they wouldn't be on the pay roll.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question, Mrs. Reed, is, were Mrs. Gray's duties at that time any different than the duties of the two girls' you have identified as working in [fol. 3521] the retail store? Whether she was on vacation or whether she wasn't, were her duties any different than these two girls' in the retail store?

The Witness: I don't know that they were. However, I wouldn't be able to say what Mr. Bachofer did in getting up his pay roll.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't ask you anything about the pay roll.

The Witness: I am just saying, the fact that their names are not on the pay roll in this specific place would be something I couldn't explain.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Your best explanation would be that she was probably on vacation?

A. I didn't say that was my best explanation. I said when people were on vacation, I noticed they were not—

Q. Would you expect to find her name amongst those?

Trial Examiner Batten: "Amongst those"?

A. I am telling you, I wouldn't know where to expect to find anybody's name on my pay roll.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean, "amongst those"?

Miss Weyand: Under the heading "Retail Store," with the girls' names she saw there and knew as girls in the retail store.

The Witness: I still say that the getting up of a pay [fol. 3522] roll that is worked out in connection with the cost accounting is something I have never had anything to do with, and I don't know why they put certain names in certain places.

Miss Weyand: Do you know of any reason—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Miss Weyand.

Irrespective of who makes up the pay roll, or where they put names, would you expect to find Mrs. Gray's name on the pay roll in the same place you would find the other girls who were working in the store?

The Witness: Unless there were some reason for its not being there, I would.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. What reason might there be for not placing it there?

A. I don't know. I have explained I don't know anything about how they get up a pay roll or why they put certain names in certain places.

Q. Was there anything in her duties which would lead you to think that a cost accountant might reasonably place her in a department different from which he placed the other girls you noticed there?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as basing speculation upon speculation and nothing at all of any value.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is sustained.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Will you look at Board's exhibit No. 28-NNN and tell me whether or not you notice Martha Gray's name [fol. 3523] there? A. It is.

Q. You will notice, that is the same pay roll period?

A. It is.

Q. Can you explain why Martha Gray's name appears on that page of the pay roll and not with the other saleslgirls'?

A. Now that I see other names there, I can understand that the cost accountant might decide to charge a certain percentage of the cost of selling the goods direct to the buying, because here (indicating on exhibit) is a girl that I know would be directly charged to buying, and that would be my explanation of having her under "Buying Records."

Q. Will you look at the other names under "Buying Records" and explain why they should be charged to "Buying Records"? Herb Fountain is the first name.

A. He was cutting up the material, and in the cost accounting we have a charge that is added on to the cost of material that takes in—I don't know how much or what. The only reason I would say there, they might have put that into the cost of material.

Q. Is there any reason why Herb Fountain should be selected rather than another cutter?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Is there any reason why Martha Gray should have been selected rather than one of the other salesladies?

[fol. 3524] A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Would there be a reason why Florence Strickland's name should appear on there rather than among the other designers'? A. I wouldn't know why.

Q. Would there be a reason why Ella Mae Hyde, the personnel manager, should be charged to the buying records?

A. I said I don't know how they get up the buying records, and I don't know how they get up the pay roll. I don't know how they arrive at what they charge to what.

Q. You will notice this "Buying Records" section from July 1 to July 15, 1937, contains in large measure a collection of the names which we have been talking about. Will you look that over and notice?

A. I can understand why Ella Brown would be charged to the buying records, and Katie Schleicher.

Q. You will notice that the "Buying Records" contains some of the names we have been talking about today. Elizabeth Belter, would that be Betty Belter? A. Yes.

Q. Harlan Justus? Also, Herb Fountain—

A. He works on assembling the orders, doing record work for them.

Q. Anna Wherry?

A. I am saying I don't really know why any names are any place on this record. I am not competent to say, [fol. 3525] because I don't know. I have had nothing to do with telling them where to put what. We have a cost accounting system, and we have a pay roll arrangement, and apparently people are paid. That is one part of the business I haven't gotten into.

Q. You looked over all of the names in that department so you would know—

A. I don't remember all of the names. Maybe you think I am perfectly stupid, but I couldn't remember them 5 minutes.

Q. I want to ask you whether—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, Miss Weyand.

The question is, whether you looked over the names on there, Mrs. Reed?

The Witness: I didn't look over every name.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, then—You want Mrs. Reed to look over all of those names there, do you?

The Witness: If I do, I won't be able to tell you 3 minutes after—

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I want to ask you if you see any reason why that group of people should have been grouped in a department separate from the others; if in looking through them you see any common denominator among those people.

A. Miss Weyand, I am telling you, I don't understand how they get up a pay roll.

Q. Is there any common denominator among those persons, as you look them over—

[fol. 3526] A. I still say I don't understand—

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, the witness has stated she doesn't know why, and unless there is some further question, I would say that that is sufficient.

Miss Weyand: I wanted to have the record show that the witness by looking at the names could not see any common denominator amongst them which would be a clue to her of why they should be grouped together.

The Witness: I still say—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, Mrs. Reed.

Of course, the witness having said she doesn't know why they are there—

Miss Weyand: —and having looked at them, she still doesn't know why they are there. Is that true?

The Witness: I still say I have nothing to do with the pay roll and I wouldn't know why they are there.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. Has your company had occasion to furnish the Wage and Hour Board a statement of the supervisory personnel of your company? A. Yes.

Q. Were you acquainted with the preparation of the material which was submitted to the Wage and Hour Board? A. In a general way.

Q. Do you know the signature of Alex Green when you see it? A. I believe I would.

[fol. 3527] Miss Weyand: I will ask the reporter to mark this as Board's Exhibit No. 32.

(Thereupon the information report above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 32, Witness Reed.")

Trial Examiner Batten: We will take a recess of 10 minutes.

(Thereupon a 10-minute recess was taken.)

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

By Miss Weyand:

Q. I hand you Board's exhibit No. 32 for identification and ask you if you recognize the signature thereon as the true and correct signature of Alex Green? A. Yes.

Q. Is he vice president of the Donnelly Garment Company at the present time? A. Yes.

Q. Was he vice president in 1940? A. Yes.

Q. Will you look at the exhibit and tell me if you are acquainted with that document?

A. The filing of the document was discussed with me. I don't remember that I ever just saw the document after it was completed.

Q. You participated in the preparation of the document through discussion with the persons who actually typed it up, did you?

[fol. 3528] A. I did.

Q. Does it represent a correct statement of the supervisory force of your company in November and December of 1940? A. I would say that it does.

Q. Did the supervisory status there shown exist at your plant prior to November or December of 1940?

A. Will you please ask the question again?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. This is made up as of October 30, 1940. I would say it was very close to November or December of 1940.

[fol. 3529] Miss Weyand: Had that supervisory status changed at your plant at any time prior to November 1, 1940?

A. This document you mentioned is dated October 30th.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the question was, prior to October 30th, the date of the document, prior to October 30th, 1940.

A. I would say that this was the time that we decided that we were going to put in the supervisory arrangement, the budget arrangement, at that time.

Miss Weyand: Did that supervisory status there presented, exist in operation at your plant, prior to October 30th, 1940?

A. It did not.

Miss Weyand: I offer this exhibit in evidence, Exhibit 32.
